to destroy proprio vigore contingent uses. On the contrary, it gave them the legal estate. Any trust good before the statute would after it necessarily be good as a legal use. How this was effected none but antiquaries asked. Was there an estate in the feoffees or a possibility of seisin, or a scintilla juris? It was immaterial in practice to ascertain the modus operandi when the contingent use was admittedly safe. Even Fearn, p. 301, ed. 1844, who was sufficiently attentive to the technical harmony of our real property system, pronounced against the doctrine. "The whole current of decisions since the publication of that celebrated treatise has so studiously treated contingent uses as contingent remainders, that few speculations could be more unnecessary than an inquiry into the nature of what confessedly did not exist, and few enactments more abundant of caution than the statute which overthrows Scintilla Juris. We cannot perceive any distinction except a verbal one between the phrases in nubibus, ingremio legis, or "by relation to the original seisin." The most logical view, it would appear, would have been to consider contingent uses as preserved by the equity of the statute from being defeated by any Act or omission of the feoffees or releasees; while inconvenience may possibly be the result of the recent Act which defines the modus operandi to be in one particular way only.

Although Mr. Chance does not ascend to such sublime heights of juristical contemplation as Lord St. Leonards, nevertheless, he traces the minute but important details of the intricate subject of Powers with an expertness and felicity of arrangement, which, to the practitioner, is of paramount importance. As an authority for moot points, his treatise is certainly inferior to that of Lord St. Leonards', from its comparative inattention to remote principles; but the good sense of the former author, in his application of the views which he adopts, is so abundantly manifest throughout the work, as to compensate for the want of a perfect harmony in its theoretical principles—a defect, from which, as we have shown, Lord St. Leonards' treatise is sufficiently clear. The difference in point of theory and method between the two authors is indicated by their respective comments on the question of the suspension and extinguishment of powers appendant. Lord St. Leonards disapproves of the decision in Ren d. Hall v. Bulkeley, 1 Doug. 291, which was a case relating to the extinguishment of powers appendant—a doctrine, the operation of which Lord St. Leonards appears nowise anxious to limit; although, as a general rule, it is clearly iniquitable, and defeats the intention of the donor as well as of the donee. The reasoning of Lord St. Leonards on this head is very inconclusive and technical. "As a charge," says his lordship, "on the estate, to which the power is appendant, suspends the power during the interest granted; it follows, therefore, on the same principle, that a total alienation of the estate must operate as an extinguishment of the power." The only inference warranted by the premise is, that the power should be suspended during the continuance of the grant. Mr. Chance, in his book, vol. 2, p. 598, shows this very clearly; and his views are supported by the decision of Long v. Rankin, decided by the House of Lords, Sug. Appx. 676, 4th ed. This is a phase of the operation of powers which has not received much illustration from recent cases. In a recent case (Walmesley v. Jowett), the suspension of the power was treated simply as a question of intention. The difference between the views of the two authors is further indicated by their respective comments on the question of the validity of general power in deeds that operate as bargains and sales, or as covenants to stand seised. This question is one of very great importance. For, although conveyances are never intended to operate in those forms, yet, if they cannot otherwise have any effect, they will, ut res magis valeat, be so construed. Thus, if prior to the Act, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 21, the lease for a year had been omitted, the conveyance, nevertheless, might be supported as a bargain and sale, if money had passed between the parties, or as a covenant to stand seised, if it were the case of a marriage settlement. Mr. Chance is of opinion that general powers in both classes of instruments are valid. Lord St. Leonards, on the contrary, considers them to be wholly invalid, even though the actual appointees should render a consideration, or happen to be relations of the donee. Our opinion coincides with neither of those views. We consider that general powers in instruments operating as covenants to stand seised, are bad, because kindred is not a consideration which can be held to extend to any person that is unascertained. If the power be one of revocation simply, without any reference to a new appointment, it should, on principle, be held good; as the covenantor, by revoking the uses of the instrument containing such a power, merely stands seised to his own use. But general powers in deeds of bargain and sale stand on a wholly different footing. A consideration can be advanced in behalf of anyone, whether he be in esse or unborn. Lord St. Leonards admits this, provided a valuable consideration moved from the appointee or on his behalf, at the time of the execution of the deed. But the cases of Parsons v. Mills, 2 Ro. Abr. 786 M., and Mo. 547, cited in support of this view, also prove the validity of such powers in general. Mr. Cruise (Dig.) considers that general powers to lease are good in these classes of instruments, inasmuch as the best rent is generally required to be reserved; but if the deed be a covenant to stand seised, such a consideration is inapplicable to support a use; while, if it be a bargain and sale, it appears to us to be immaterial whether the lessee pay any rent or not, as the original consideration should be deemed to extend to him. Both Lord St. Leonards and Mr. Chance consider that powers in the nature of a trust such as was the power in the case of Harding v. Glyn, 2 W. & T. Lead. Cas., p. 789, cannot be easily discriminated from gifts by implication in default of appointment, such as was the case of The Duke of Marlborough v. Godolphin, 2 Ves. 61. Both these classes of cases have, indeed, the same effect as regards the beneficiaries.

Modern legislation has done little for powers. The Act relating to illusory appointments, 1 Will. 4. c. 46, which was prepared by Lord St. Leonards, has not gone to the root of the evil intended to be obviated by it; inasmuch as an exclusive appointment not authorised by the power is invalid, even since the passing of that enactment. The author considers that the meaning of the Act 20 & 21 Vict. c. 57, which has extended the powers of married women in respect of personal estate, is open to much doubt. He does not, however, state any reasons for this opinion. He gives an abridgment of the provisions of Lord Cranworth's Act, which confers on trustees, mortgagees, and others, the powers usually contained at present in settlements, wills, &c., in a manner that indicates his approbation of that enactment, the merits of which have become the subject of so much debate. The arrangement of the chapters is the same as was observed in the preceding edition. Both are pretty nearly of the same size; the loss of the disquisition upon the scintilla juris being compensated for by the accounts of recent decisions. The present work, however, is not prefixed with so voluminous a table of contents, as is contained in the edition of 1845. Such a syllabus appears to us an unnecessary incumbrance to a book having an adequate index arranged alphabetically, which alone is ever used for reference. We have canvassed the merits of the treatise before us freely, but we hope, fairly. It has long enjoyed the very highest rank in the estimation of the profession, and has been considered to have done for the subject of which it treats, what Mr. Fearn had done for contingent remainders, and what, more recently, Mr. Jarman has accomplished for the law of wills, and Mr. Lewis for the more definite question of perpetuity. Thus endued with authority, it was necessary to show that it did not indicate such a perception of the harmony of first principles on the part of its author as has been considered, and also that it has by no means excluded all necessity of resort to the unpretending, but perhaps more useful, treatise of Mr. Chance.

REGULATIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF ARTICLED CLERKS.

The following are the rules and regulations for conducting the examinations under the Attorneys' and Solicitors' Act of 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 127).

As to Examinations in General Knowledge.

In pursuance of the Act passed in the session of Parliament holden in the 23rd and 24th years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to amend the Laws relating to Attorneys, Solicitors, Proctors, and Certificated Conveyancers:" We, the Right Honorable Sir Alexander James Edmund Cockburn, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench; the Right Honorable Sir John Romilly, Master of the Rolls; the Right Honorable Sir William Erle, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas; and the Right Honorable Sir Frederic Pollock, Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, do hereby, for the purpose of carrying the said Act into effect, order and direct as follows:—

I. In order to carry into effect the 5th section of the said Act, we do hereby order and direct:

That from and after the 1st day of Hilary Term, 1862, every person who before entering into articles of clerkship shall produce to the Registrar of Attorneys a certificate that he has successfully passed the first public examination before Moderators at Oxford, or the previous examination at Cambridge, or the examination in arts for the second year at Durham, or the matriculation examination at the Universities of Dublin or London, and has been placed in the first division on such Matriculation examination, shall be entitled to the benefit of the 5th section of the Attorneys Act, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127.

II. And in order to carry into effect the enactment in the 8th section of the said Act, we do hereby further order and direct:

That from and after the 1st day of Hilary Term, 1862, every person proposing to enter into articles of clerkship, not having been called to the degree of Utter Barrister in England, or not having taken a degree, or passed the examination prescribed under the 5th section of the Act, shall produce to the Registrar of Attorneys a certificate that he has successfully passed an examination by special examiners, appointed by us, and that such last-mentioned examination be held at such times and places as the examiners shall from time to time appoint, and consist of two parts.

PART I.

1. Reading aloud a passage from some English author.
2. Writing from dictation.
3. English grammar.
4. Writing a short English composition.
5. Arithmetic.—A competent knowledge of the first four rules, simple and compound.
6. Geography of Europe and of the British Isles.
7. History.—Questions on English history.
8. Latin.—Elementary knowledge of Latin.

PART II.

Each candidate shall offer himself for examination in one of the following subjects:

1. Latin. 2. Greek, modern or ancient. 3. French.
4. German. 5. Spanish. 6. Italian.

If the examiners conducting such examinations under Part I. be satisfied with the proficiency shown by the candidate, they will sign a certificate to the following effect:

"We certify that A. B. has been examined in general knowledge by us (or under our direction in case the examination shall be conducted in the country), as required by the rules and regulations of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, the Master of the Rolls, the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, and we certify that he has passed a satisfactory examination."

If the examiners conducting the examination under Part II. be satisfied with the proficiency shown by the candidate in the language in which he has been examined, they will sign a certificate to the following effect:—

"We certify that A B has been examined by us in the language (as the case may be), and we certify that he has passed a satisfactory examination."

With respect to candidates residing in the country, their examination may be conducted by the transmission by the examiners of papers to some person or persons to be appointed by them for that purpose, in certain towns to be selected, in England and Wales, who shall call the candidates before them at convenient times, to be fixed by the examiners, and require them to give written answers in the presence of the persons so appointed, who shall then seal up and send to the examiners in London the answers so written. [This direction of course does not apply to reading aloud, as to the proficiency in which of each candidate, the person or persons selected must give a certificate.]

The persons so appointed to be remunerated out of the fees to be paid on receiving their certificates by the candidates examined in the country. [The fees of the examiners will be hereafter fixed, according to the number of candidates.]

Each person examined in London on receiving his certificate to pay the fee of £1, and each person examined in the country on receiving his certificate to pay the fee of £2, to the council of the Incorporated Law Society.

As to Intermediate Examination.

III. And in order to carry the enactment in the 9th section of the said Act into effect, we do hereby further order and direct:

1. That all persons under articles of clerkship executed after the first day of January, 1861, shall be examined, either in one of the two terms next before, or one of the two terms next after, one half of his term of service, in such elementary works on the laws of England as may be appointed by the examiners, and in book-keeping: and that the names of the books selected for examination in each year may be obtained from the secretary of the examiners in the month of July in the previous year.

2. That such intermediate examination shall be conducted in each term, by the examiners appointed under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, the orders of the Master of the Rolls of 13th January, 1844, and the rules of the Common Law Courts of Hilary Term, 1853, at such times and places as the examiners shall from time to time appoint.

3. That the applicant for such examination shall give to the secretary of the examiners one month's notice in writing, and leave with him the articles and assignment (if any) duly stamped and registered, under which the applicant is serving his clerkship, with answers to the questions as to his due service and conduct up to that time.

4. That upon compliance with such regulations, if the major part of the examiners present at and conducting such examination shall be satisfied with the answers of the person so applying in the subjects wherein he shall be so examined, the examiners, or the major part of them, shall certify the same under their hands in the following form:—

"In pursuance of the rules and regulations made by the Lords Chief Justices of the Courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, and the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, jointly with the Master of the Rolls, we, being the major part of the examiners conducting the 'intermediate' examination of A B of _____ do hereby certify that we have examined him as required by the said rules and regulations. And we do certify that his answers to the questions are satisfactory.

"Dated the _____ day of _____."

5. That in case the applicant should fail to pass such intermediate examination to the satisfaction of the examiners, he may attend the examination in the next or any subsequent term; but if he should not have passed such intermediate examination before the expiration of the second term next after one half of his term of service, his examination at the expiration of the term of service under his articles shall be postponed for such length of time, or so many terms, as may intervene between such last-mentioned term and his successfully passing such intermediate examination, or for such shorter time as the examiners shall in each case direct.

6. That each person, on giving the notice and complying with the requisitions in clause 3, shall pay a fee of 5s. and on receiving his certificate for such intermediate examination, shall pay a fee of 15s. to the council of the Incorporated Law Society.

Dated the 26th day of July, 1861.

A. E. COCKBURN, C. J. Q. B.
JOHN ROMILLY, M. R.
W. ERLE, C. J. C. P.
FRED. POLLOCK, C.B. Exch.

Public Companies.

REPORTS AND MEETINGS.

BELFAST AND NORTHERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 5th inst., a dividend at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum was declared for the past eight months ending 30th June.

COCKERMOUTH AND WOKINGTON RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 31st ult., a dividend at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum was declared for the last half-year.

COLCHESTER, STOUR VALLEY, AND SUDBURY RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 31st ult., a dividend was declared of £1 12s. 6d. for the past half-year, free of income-tax, leaving a balance in hand of about £58.

GREAT WESTERN AND BRENTFORD RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 7th inst., dividends of 5 per cent. on the preference shares, and of 2 per cent. on the ordinary shares of the company were declared.

HULL AND HOLDERNESS RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 7th inst., a dividend of 35s. per cent. was declared for the past half-year.

LLANIDLOES AND NEWTOWN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 5th inst., a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

LLANELLY RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 31st ult., a dividend of 10s. per share was declared.

LONDON, BRIGHTON, AND SOUTH COAST RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 26th ult., a dividend at the rate of £2 10s. per cent. for the last half-year was declared, and made payable on the 12th inst. A resolution authorising the consolidation of the paid-up 4½ per cent. preference shares (1861) into 4½ per cent. preference stock of the company was carried at this meeting.

MANCHESTER, BUXTON, MATLOCK, AND MIDLAND JUNCTION.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 7th inst., a dividend of 1s. 4d. per share was declared and made payable on the 17th inst.

NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 8th inst., the following dividends were declared—namely, on the Berwick stock at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum; on the York stock at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum; and on the Leeds stock at the rate of £2 17s. 6d. per cent. per annum.

RHYMNEY RAILWAY.

At a special meeting of this company, held on the 7th inst., a resolution authorising the directors to raise £75,000 by the creation of 7,500 new shares of £10 each to be entitled to a dividend of 6 per cent. per annum in perpetuity, was unanimously carried.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

- CONOLLY—On Aug. 3, the wife of Edward T. Conolly, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a daughter.
HEATH—On Aug. 6, the wife of Samuel Heath, jun., Esq., of Houghton-place, Amptmill-square, Solicitor, prematurely, of a son, who survived his birth but a short time.
SMITH—On Aug. 7, at Somersfield, Reigate, the wife of Charles J. Smith, Esq., Solicitor, of a daughter.
SMITH—On July 30, at Dublin, the wife of H. Westenra Smith, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

- BEDFORD—BROUGHTON—On Aug. 6, Charles St. Clare Bedford, Esq., of Dean's-yard, Westminster, to Harriet Emma, daughter of the late Robert Edward Broughton, Esq., F.R.S., one of the Metropolitan Police Magistrates.
BOWLBY—RIMINGTON—On Aug. 1, Edward Salvin Bowlby, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, to Maria, daughter of the late James Rimington, Esq., of Broomhead Hall, Yorkshire.
LEECH—JONES—On Aug. 1, William Bell Leech, Esq., Solicitor, of Glasgow, to Emma Gwyther, daughter of the Rev. J. Jones, of Rowsley.
MACAULAY—COX—On Aug. 1, William Henry Macaulay, Esq., of Leicester, Solicitor, to Sabina, daughter of Charles Cox, Esq., of Basford.
SMITH—BOCKETT—On Aug. 1, Bruce Neilson Smith, Esq., H.M.'s Indian Army, to Anna Amelia, daughter of Daniel Smith Bockett, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn-fields.
SWANSTON—ROMILLY—On Aug. 1, Clement T. Swanston, jun., Esq., son of Clement T. Swanston, Esq., Q.C., to Anne, daughter of Sir John Romilly, Master of the Rolls.

DEATHS.

- ABBOTT—On June 13, at sea, in the Bay of Bengal, on board the steamer Colombo, Annie Blanche, wife of William Henry Abbott, Jun., Esq., Solicitor, Supreme Court of Calcutta.
DAY—On July 30, at Eaton, near Norwich, aged 62, Caroline Elizabeth, the beloved wife of Peter Day, Esq., Solicitor.
HINDE—On March 30, on board the Lady Melville, Henry Pelly Hinde, Esq., of the Inner Temple and Calcutta Bar.
MATTHEWS—On July 30, at Paris, Emma, widow of the late Henry Matthews, Esq., Puisne Justice of the Supreme Court of Ceylon.
PAYNE—On Aug. 3, aged 37, Matilda, wife of Edward Turner Payne, Esq., of Bath, Solicitor.

London Gazette.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

LIMITED IN BANKRUPTCY.

FRIDAY, Aug. 9, 1861.

- ISLE OF WIGHT (AFFULDERCOMBE PARK) HOTEL COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up presented August 3, will be heard before Com. Fonblanque, August 31, at 11. Taylor and Jaquet, Solicitors, 15, South-street, Finsbury.
LANDED INVESTMENT COMPANY (LIMITED). Com. Fane order to wind up, July 31. Kimber, Solicitor, 1, Lancaster-place, Strand.
PATENT DERRICK COMPANY (LIMITED). Com. Fonblanque will sit on August 30, at 12.30, Basinghall-street, to make a dividend.
UNION DISCOUNT COMPANY (LIMITED), a call of twelve shillings and sixpence per share upon all contributories, to be paid on August 31, at 11, to the official liquidator, at 3 Coleman-street buildings, London.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Aug. 6, 1861.

- AUBIN, FREDERIC GEORGE, Gent., Weston-hill, Norwood, Surrey. Aubin, Solicitor, 38, Moorgate-street, City. Aug. 10.
BOTT, WILLIAM, Tailor, Davyholme, Barton-upon-Irwell, Eccles. Radcliffe, Solicitor, 10, St. George's-crescent, Castle-street, Liverpool. Sept. 13.
DISMORE, JOHN, Gent., Upper Harley-street, Cavendish-square, London, but late of 2, Albert-terrace, Russell-terrace, Reading, Berks. Whatley & Dryland, Solicitors, Reading. Sept. 30.
DUFFETT, JAMES, Gent., Brougham-villa, Hampton Park, Bristol. King & Plummer, Solicitors, 5, Exchange-buildings East, Bristol. Sept. 26.
FARMER, SARAH, Spinster, Windsor Castle, Windsor, Berks. Soames & Cooke, Solicitors, Wokingham, Berks. Aug. 17.
GRANT, WILLIAM, formerly Butler, Calcot-park, Berks, but late Farmer, Stratfieldsaye, Berks and Hants. Mary Grant, Widow, Executrix, 7, Eaton-place, Reading, Berks. Oct. 3.
HAINES, SAMUEL, Gent., Edgbaston, near Birmingham. Anster, Solicitor, 4, Temple-row West, Birmingham. Sept. 29.
HEATON, FRANCIS, Gent., Shillbank-house, Mirfield, Yorkshire. Chadwick, Solicitor, Dewsbury, Yorkshire. Oct. 1.
LEE, JOSEPH, Gent., Shillbank-house, Mirfield, Yorkshire. Chadwick, Solicitor, Dewsbury, Yorkshire. Oct. 1.
MANLEY, SAMUEL, Gent., Somerset Cottages, Bedminster, Bristol. King & Plummer, Solicitors, 5, Exchange-buildings East, Bristol. Sept. 26.
SCARBATT, JAMES, Button and Trimming Seller, Milk-street, Cheapside, London. Lawrance, Plews, & Boyer, Solicitors, 14, Old Jewry-chambers. Aug. 15.
SCOTT, MARTHA, Spinster, formerly of Mile End, Landport, but late of 353, Commercial-road, Landport, Portsea, Hants. Holmes, Solicitor, 7, Staple Inn, Holborn, Middlesex. Oct. 1.
TINKER, ABEL, Gent., formerly of Hepworth, near Holmfirth, but late of Spring-gardens, near Huddersfield, Yorkshire. Clough, Solicitor, Huddersfield, or Kidd & Jessop, Solicitors, Holmfirth. Nov. 25.
TYSON, JOHN, Cooper, Liverpool. Dodge & Wynne, 7, Union-court, Liverpool. Oct. 1.
WILSON, JOHN GRANT, Surgeon, 17, Richmond-terrace, Clifton, and Bridge-street, Bristol. King & Plummer, 5, Exchange-buildings East, Bristol. Sept. 26.
WYATT, WILLIAM, formerly Oilman, King-street, Soho, Middlesex, afterwards of Rickmansworth, Herts, and late of Pinner, Middlesex. Lawrence, Plews, & Boyer, Solicitors, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, or Barlow & Longden, Solicitors, 1, Bennet's-hill, Doctor's-commons. Aug. 15.

FRIDAY, Aug. 9, 1861.

- COLEPEPER, JOHN SPENCER, Gent., formerly of Kundy, in the Island of Ceylon, but late of 4, Darnley-road, Hackney, Middlesex. Futrore, Sawtell, & Lightfoot, Solicitors, 23, John-street, Bedford-row. Sept. 29.
EARL, ABRAHAM, Architect and Surveyor, Billericay, Essex. Woodward, Solicitor, 106, Fenchurch-street, London, and Billericay, Essex. Sept. 29.
ERNES, JOHN, Monkton Hadley, Middlesex. Schmidt, Tailor and Draper, High-street, Chipping Barnet, Herts, Executor. Oct. 10.
GASH, JANE, Widow, 1, Grosvenor-place, Upper Holloway, Middlesex. Bailey, Shaw, Smith, & Bailey, Solicitors, 5, Berners-street, Oxford-street, Middlesex. Sept. 2.
HELT, MICHAEL, Coachmaker, 27, Nutford-place, Edgeware-road, Middlesex. Bailey, Shaw, Smith, & Bailey, Solicitors, 5, Berners-street, Oxford-street, Middlesex. Sept. 5.
HODGKINSON, APOLONIA, Spinster, 38, Margaret-street, Cavendish-square, Middlesex. Lewin & Co., Solicitors, 32, Southampton-street, Strand, Middlesex. Sept. 14.
KEENE, THOMAS, Esq., 3, Stanhope-terrace, Gloucester-gate, Regent's-park, Middlesex. Bailey, Shaw, Smith, & Bailey, Solicitors, 5, Berners-street, Oxford-street, Middlesex. September 2.
MERRY, WILLIAM HENRY, Doctor of Medicine, Broadcliff, Devon. Sanders and Birch, Solicitors, Exeter. October 1.
MOREL, THOMAS ANNET LEWIS, Wine Merchant and Italian Warehouseman, late of 210 & 211, Piccadilly, and 20, Ladbroke-villia, Bayswater, Middlesex. Surman, Solicitor, 11, New-square, Lincoln's-inn. November 24.
PIPER, STEPHEN, Printer, Ipswich. Jackman & Son, Solicitors, Ipswich. Sep. 10.
SAWYER, HARRIET, Widow, Sheffield. Webster, Solicitor, 14, St. James's-row, Sheffield. Sep. 1.
TAYLOR, CHARLES, Beer-house Keeper, Stratford-upon-Avon. Hobbs & Slater, Solicitors, Stratford-upon-Avon. Sep. 29.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

Last Day of Proof.

TUESDAY, Aug. 6, 1861.

- BEAN, EDWARD DARRHILL, Victualler and Veterinary Surgeon, Bear Inn, West Malling, Kent. Bean v. Bean, M. R. Nov. 4.
BOYES, JOHN, Yeoman, Hensting, Owslebury, Hants. Boyes v. Veay, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 15.
CLARKE, CHARLES, Solicitor, Grove-road, St. John's-wood, and 20, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex. Clarke v. Justice, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 13.
CORNWELL, FRANCES, Widow, Saffron Walden, Essex, in the matter of the estate of Frances Cornwell, V.C. Wood. Oct. 30.
HARRISON, GEORGE, 169, High-street, Southwark, Surrey. Howell v. Harrison, M. R. Nov. 1.

HART, MAURICE, Gent., 77, Gloucester-place, Hyde-park, Middlesex. Hart v. Montefiore, M. R. Nov. 2.
 HUTCHINGS, JOHN ATTWOOD, Gent., Dorset-street, Portman-square, Middlesex. Hutchings v. Hutchings, V.C. Wood. Oct. 30.
 JACKSON, JOHN REID, Tailor, Cork-street, Burlington-gardens, Middlesex. Jackson v. Harvey, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 7.
 D'ARCY, The Most Noble FRANCIS GODOLPHIN, Duke of Leeds, Hornby Castle, Yorkshire. Lovat v. The Duchess of Leeds, V.C. Kindersley. Nov. 7.
 MOSTYN, The Honourable THOMAS EDWARD MOSTYN LLOYD, M.P., Glad-daeth, Carnarvonshire. Mostyn v. Mostyn, V.C. Wood. Nov. 10.
 NATHAN, ALEXANDER, Merchant, sometime of Liverpool, but late of Burton-house, Hants. Thwaites v. McIntyre, M.R. Oct. 29.
 PEDDER, EDWARD, Esq., Ashton-park, Lancashire. Price v. Pedder, M. R. Oct. 29.
 PHILLIPS, WILLIAM, China Clay Merchant and Manufacturer, Lee Moor Works, near Plympton, Devonshire. Phillips v. Phillips, M. R. Oct. 29.
 SAVILL, MARIA, Widow, late of 40, Observatory-street, Oxford. Woodman v. Zealey, M. R. Oct. 29.
 SMITH, JOHN, Grocer, Sittingbourne, Kent. Bryson v. Gibbons, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 15.
 WALMSLEY, THOMAS, Corn Merchant, Failsworth, near Manchester. Renshaw v. Walmsley, V.C. Wood. Nov. 8.

FRIDAY, Aug. 9, 1861.

BYGRAVE, JOHN, Sutton, Norfolk. Chapman v. Bygrave, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 20.
 COLWELL, THOMAS, Scale Board and Splint Cutter, Hercules Hall, Hercules-buildings, Lambeth, Surrey. Colwell v. Colwell, M. R. Nov. 5.
 HALL, MARY ANN, 8, Bryan-terrace, Copenhagen-street, Middlesex. Holdstock v. Bird, M. R. Nov. 2.
 HARE, FRANCIS GEORGE, Baker-street, Portman-square, Middlesex. Hare v. Hare, and Paul v. Hare, M. R. Nov. 2.
 HOOPER, WILLIAM, Miller, Aspsdulle, Dudley. Elhott v. Hooper, V.C. Wood. Nov. 5.
 PREBBLE, RICHARD, Wine Merchant, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Prebble v. Trustram, M. R. Nov. 1.
 SHIPMAN, GEORGE, Innkeeper, Whitwell, Derbyshire. Shipman v. Chaloner, M. R. Nov. 2.
 VAN DE WALL, PHILIP, Chapel-street, Curtain-road, Shoreditch, Middlesex. Van De Wall v. Wadson, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 4.
 WAUD, EDWARD, Worsted Spinner & Stuff Manufacturer, Bradford, and of Richmond House, Horton, Bradford, Yorkshire. Waud v. Waud, M.R. Nov. 11.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

TUESDAY, Aug. 6, 1861.

ARNOTT, SAMUEL, Hoder, 86, Goswell-street, Middlesex. Sols. Langford, & Marsden, 59, Friday-street, Cheapside, London. Aug. 2.
 BARROW, JAMES, Malster, Abridge, Essex. Sols. Croaley & Burn, 34, Lombard-street, E.C. July 10.
 BAGSHAW, THOMAS, Grocer, Devonshire-street, Sheffield. Sol. Fretson, Sheffield. July 30.
 BENNETT, EDWARD COLSTON, Stationer, 9, Skinner-street, Snow-hill, London. Sol. Mount, 17A, Stae-lane, London. July 27.
 BENTLEY, WILLIAM, Linen Draper, 78, West-street, Leeds. Sol. Simpson, Leeds. June 24.
 COOLEY, WILLIAM, Hostler and Laceman, Wolverhampton, Staffordshire. Sol. Jagger, Cannon-street, Birmingham. July 8.
 DAVIS, GIDSON THOMAS, Upholsterer and Cabinet Maker, Canterbury. Sols. Sankey & Son, Canterbury. July 26.
 ENTWISTLE, THOMAS, & THOMAS MERCER, Dyers, Radcliffe, Lancashire. Sols. Cooper & Sons, 44, Pall Mall, Manchester. July 30.
 EVANS, JOHN, Builder and Hackney Carriage Proprietor, Wellington-road, Rhyll, Flintshire. Sol. Edwards, Denbigh. July 9.
 FAIRBROTHER, WILLIAM, Draper, Banbury, Oxfordshire. Sol. Aplin, Banbury. July 5.
 HAIGH, DANIEL, & GEORGE CASTLE, Coal Dealers, Huddersfield, Yorkshire. Sol. Drake, Huddersfield. July 17.
 HILL, HENRY, Accountant, 14, York-street, Westminster, Middlesex. Sol. Mardon, 99, Newgate-street, London. July 11.
 HUNT, GEORGE, Grocer, Chester-road, Hulme, Manchester. Sol. Dearden, Fulham-place, Great Clowes-street, Higher Broughton, Salford, and 34, Cooper-street, Manchester. July 31.
 POTTES, RICHARD CRAWLEY, Coal Merchant, Bacton, Suffolk. Sol. Nash, Ipswich. July 30.

FRIDAY, Aug. 9, 1861.

COOPER, JAMES, Miller, Wooton-bridge, Isle of Wight. Sols. Hearn & Mew, Newport, Isle of Wight. July 15.
 EVANS, EMOCH, Baker, 1, Howard-road, Stoke Newington, Middlesex. Sol. Heritage, 1, Wardrobe-place, Doctor's-commons, London. July 23.
 EVANS, FREDERICK JOHN, Cabinet Maker, Totnes, Devon. Sols. Messrs. Kellock, Totnes. July 11.
 GELDART, ROBERT, Shopkeeper, Hope Mansell, Hereford. Sols. Carter & Gould, Newnham. Aug. 2.
 KIDNEY, RICHARD, Tallow Chandler, Bridgwater, Somersetshire. Sol. Reed, Bridgwater. July 10.
 LYDDON, CHARLES, Colliery Proprietor, Taunton, Somersetshire, and Britton Ferry, Glamorganshire. Sols. Trenchard & Harrison, Taunton. July 16.
 MACKLIN, MARTIN, Builder, Staple Garden-lane, Winchester. Sol. Godwin, 4, Essex-court, Temple, London. Aug. 2.
 MARSHALL, JOHN, Draper, Cardiff, Glamorganshire. Sol. Paul, 1, Stae-lane, London. July 20.
 SPARK, CHARLES WILLIAM, JOHN STOREY, WILLIAM THEODORE STOREY, and JOSEPH SAMUEL STOREY, Merchants, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Sols. Hodge & Harle, Wellington-pl. Pilgrim-st. Newcastle-upon-Tyne. July 24.
 WHITEHALL, EDWIN, Watchmaker, Newport, Monmouthshire. Sol. Cathcart, Duck-street, Newport. July 19.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Aug. 6, 1861.

BENNETT, THOMAS HALE, & JOSEPH HALE BENNETT, Builders and House Decorators, Leekhampton, Gloucestershire. Com. Hill: Aug. 19, and Sept. 23, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sol. Williams, Cheltenham. Pet. Aug. 3.
 COATES, THOMAS, Publican and Wine and Spirit Merchant, Sunderland. Com. Ellison: Aug. 15, and Sept. 18, at 11; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. Ranson & Son, and W. J. Young, Sanderland. Pet. Aug. 1.

ELIAM, WILLIAM, & JAMES FRANCIS WALLACE, East India Merchants, 89, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street, London. Com. Fane: Aug. 19, at 1, and Sept. 17, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Mason, Sturt, & Mason, 7, Gresham-street, London. Pet. Aug. 2.
 GIBBS, CHARLES, Baker, Grocer, and Provision Dealer, Droitwich, Worcestershire. Com. Sanders: Aug. 19, and Sept. 9, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sol. Holyoake, Droitwich, or James & Knight, Birmingham. Pet. July 30.
 LYON, EDWARD, & JOSEPH GREENWOOD, Builders, Huyton Quarry, Lancashire. Com. Perry: Aug. 15, and Sept. 9, at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sols. Evans, Son, & Sandys, Liverpool. Pet. July 31.
 MOSE, JOSEPH, Wholesale Clothier, 149, Houndsditch, London. Com. Fane: Aug. 18, at 12.30, and Sept. 20, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 68, Aldermanbury. Pet. Aug. 2.
 PEARCE, JAMES, Chemist, Kidderminster, Worcestershire. Com. Sanders: Aug. 19, and Sept. 9, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Saunders & Son, Kidderminster, or James & Knight, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 2.
 PORTER, JAMES, Boot and Shoe Maker, Moor-street, Birmingham. Com. Sanders: Aug. 16, and Sept. 6, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sol. Mole, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 2.
 SOUTHARD, CHARLES MATTHEW, Plumber and Painter, Exeter. Com. Andrews: Aug. 17, at 11, and Sept. 25, at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sol. Fryer, St. Thomas's, Exeter. Pet. Aug. 2.
 WILSON, GEORGE, & JOHN WILSON, Carpet Manufacturers, Heckmondwike, Yorkshire. Com. Ayrton: Aug. 19, and Sept. 16, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sol. Iveson, Heckmondwike, or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. July 26.

FRIDAY, Aug. 9, 1861.

BARNETT, GEORGE, Butcher, 21, Felix-ter., Liverpool-rd., Islington, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 23, at 1.30, and Sept. 11, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Depree & Austen, 23, Lawrence-lane, Cheapside, London. Pet. Aug. 5.
 ELIAM, WILLIAM, & JAMES FRANCIS WALLACE, East India Merchants, 89, Gresham House, Old Broad-street, London. Com. Goulburn: Aug. 19, at 1, and Sept. 17, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Mason, Sturt, & Mason, 7, Gresham-street, London. Pet. Aug. 2.
 FITT, FREDERICK WARNE, Machinist, Seiborne, near Alton, Hants. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 21, and Sept. 11, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stanfield. Sols. Pownall, Son, & Cross, Staple-inn, London, and Edgecumbe & Cole, Portsea. Pet. Aug. 8.
 FOX, FREDERICK FRANCIS, Tailor, 131, Fenchurch-street, London. Com. Fane: Aug. 23, at 1, and Sept. 20, at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannon. Sol. Few & Cole, 40, Wellington-street, Southwark. Pet. Aug. 8.
 GANTON, JAMES, & DANIEL BROWN, Hardware & Fancy Goods Dealers, Manchester. Aug. 23, and Sept. 13, at 13; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sols. G. & R. W. Marsland, Manchester. Pet. July 31.
 HAIGH, JOHN, Common Brewer, Wakefield, Yorkshire. Com. West: Aug. 20, and Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Brown, Wakefield; or Carlin, Leeds. Pet. Aug. 3.
 HARTLEY, RICHARD HENRY, Merchant, Halifax. Com. West: Aug. 20, and Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Stocks & Franklin, Halifax; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Aug. 3.
 JOSEPH, NATHAN AARON, Importer of Foreign Goods, 19, Vine-street, Minorities, London (N. A. Joseph & Co.) Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 21, at 1; and Sept. 11, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stanfield. Sols. Spyer & Son, 8, Broad-street-buildings, London. Pet. Aug. 6.
 LEX, GEORGE KELLEY, Linen and Woollen Draper, Sunderland. Com. Ellison: Aug. 21, and Sept. 18, at 12; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. J. J. & G. W. Wright, Sunderland. Pet. Aug. 1.
 NICKS, THOMAS JOHN, Provision Merchant, 86, Tower hill, London. Com. Evans: Aug. 23, at 11.30, and Sept. 12, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Peddell, Cheapside. Pet. Aug. 7.
 PAINLEY, WILLIAM, Builder & Cabinet Maker, Martock, Somersetshire. Com. Andrews: Aug. 19, at 11, and Sept. 11, at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sol. Flood, Exeter. Pet. Aug. 8.
 RAGLAN, THOMAS, Stationer, 5 & 7, Milgate-street, Wigan, Lancashire. Aug. 21, and Sept. 11, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. Darlington, Wigan. Pet. Aug. 3.
 WILKINSON, GEORGE, Butcher, Swinton, Wath-upon-Deane, Yorkshire. Com. West: Aug. 24, and Sept. 28, at 10; Sheffield. Off. Ass. Brewin. Sols. Smith & Burdekin, Sheffield. Pet. Aug. 7.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Aug. 6, 1861.

BAGSHAW, JOHN, Lodging-house Keeper, Dovercourt, near Harwich, Essex. Aug. 27, at 12; Basinghall-street.—BATEMAN, BENJAMIN, Tea Dealer and Grocer, Norwich (Bateman & Co.) Aug. 28, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—CUNNEEN, JOHN, Cotton Waste Dealer, Hanover-street, Manchester. Aug. 27, at 12; Manchester.—DAWES, CATHERINE, & CHARLES FIDDIAN, jun., Coffin Furniture and Malleable Nail Manufacturers, Birmingham. Sept. 2, at 11; Birmingham.—FOSTER, DAVID GEORGE, Ironmonger and Metal Dealer, St. John's-square, Clerkenwell, Middlesex. Aug. 27, at 2; Basinghall-street.—HAMMOND, WILLIAM PARKER, Ship Owner and East India Agent, Scott's-yard, Bush-lane, London. Aug. 27, at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—HILLIAR, WILLIAM, Hotel Keeper, Eastham, Cheshire. Sept. 3, at 11; Liverpool.—MELLOR, WILLIAM, Butcher and Cattle Dealer, Alderley, Cheshire. Aug. 30, at 12; Manchester.—MOORE, JOHN, Ironmonger, 86, Chalton-street, Euston-road, Middlesex. Aug. 28, at 10.30; Basinghall-street.—MOTT, THOMAS, Cabinet Maker and Upholsterer, Salisbury, Wilts. Aug. 28, at 12; Basinghall-street.—PRACOCK, RICHARD, Licensed Victualler, Sportsman Tavern, Southwark Bridge-road, Surrey. Aug. 28, at 11; Basinghall-street.—ROTHWELL, JAMES, Manufacturer, Ridge Mill, Ramsbottom, Lancashire. Aug. 30, at 12; Manchester.—ROYLE, GEORGE, Flint Glass Manufacturer, Sutton, near St. Helen's, Lancashire. Sept. 3, at 11; Liverpool.—SIMCOX, GEORGE PRICE, Carpet Manufacturer, Hendham Vale, Collyhurst, Manchester. Aug. 30, at 12; Manchester.—STEWART, JOHN, Ironfounder and Boiler Maker, Preston, Lancashire. Aug. 27, at 12; Manchester.—SYMONS, THOMAS, Leather Seller and Boot Maker, 9, Princes-terrace, Caledonian road, Islington, and 36, St. John-street, Clerkenwell, Middlesex. Aug. 29, at 11; Basinghall-street.—TURNER, JOHN, jun., Licensed Victualler, 8, Little Ormond-street, Middlesex. Aug. 16, at 1; Basinghall-street.—WEBSTER, WILLIAM HUCKS, Corn Merchant and Baker, Chipping Ongar, Essex. Aug. 27, at 1; Basinghall-street.

FRIDAY, AUG. 9, 1861.

BAKER, JOHN, Tanner and Farmer, Heathfield, Sussex. Aug. 31, at 11; Basinghall-st.—BEARD, ROBERT, Wheelwright, Snow's-fields, Bermondsey, Surrey. Aug. 31, at 12.30; Basinghall-st.—COPLAND, JAMES BENJAMIN, Wine & Spirit Merchant, Manchester. Sept. 3, at 12; Manchester.—DAWES, CATHERINE, and CHARLES FIDDIAM, JUN., Coffin Furniture and Malleable Nail Manufacturers, Birmingham. Sept. 2, at 11; Birmingham.—EATON, CHARLES, JUN., Leather Factor, South King-street, Manchester. Sept. 3, at 12; Manchester.—GASKELL, HENRY BROADBENT, Broker, Liverpool. Sept. 3, at 11; Liverpool.—JAMES, ABRAHAM HENRY, and THOMAS ROBERTS, Builders, Newport, Monmouthshire. Oct. 7, at 11; Bristol.—LAIDLER, WILLIAM, Boot and Shoe Manufacturer, Sunderland. Aug. 21, at 12; Newcastle-upon-Tyne.—NZECH, JOHN, Miller & Coal Merchant, Aylsham, Norfolk. Sept. 5, at 11; Basinghall-st.—PENNELL, SPENCER PERCIVAL, Commission Merchant, Liverpool. Aug. 30, at 11; Liverpool.—SHANLEY, PATRICK, Boot and Shoe Maker, Manchester. Aug. 30, at 12; Manchester.—VICKERS, ARCHIBALD, Cotton Spinner, Disley, Cheshire. Aug. 30, at 12; Manchester.—WISEMAN, JOHN, Printer, Bookseller, & Stationer, Luton, Bedfordshire. Aug. 31, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.

LIFE-LIKE PORTRAITS for the album or the stereoscope, are taken daily, by Mr. Chappuis, 69, Fleet-street, photographer and publisher of the best portraits of Lord Palmerston and other celebrities. Album or visiting card likenesses taken at 8s.; copies 1s., or 10 for 10s. Stereoscopes, 7s. 6d.; copies, 2s. N.B. Previous appointment necessary. Children photographed by instantaneous process.—Adv.

THE CHILDREN'S PHOTOGRAPHER.—Mr. Chappuis, 69, Fleet-street, is now working with his new instrument purposely constructed for taking instantaneous portraits of children, &c. N.B. Previous appointment necessary.—Adv.

WINEs for the NOBILITY and GENTRY.

WINEs for the ARMY and NAVY.

WINEs for the CLERICAL, LEGAL, and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS.

WINEs for PRIVATE FAMILIES.

PURE and UNADULTERATED GRAPE WINEs from the SOUTH of FRANCE.

VENDED by the PROPRIETORS of the VINEYARDS.

THE FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION

have taken extensive cellars at the West-end of London, for the purpose of introducing FRENCH WINEs only to the British public at FRENCH TRADE PRICES; and the members of that Association being proprietors of the most esteemed growths in France, the Nobility, Gentry, and Families patronising such WINEs, will become assured of their genuineness.

THE EMPRESS PORT,

20s. per dozen. Sent free, bottles included, to any British Railway Station, on receipt of an Order on Charing-cross Post-office for 22s. 6d., payable to A. Hoppe, Director.

THIS EMPRESS PORT,

is pure grape, of first-class quality, and delicious taste; the very for Wine family consumption.

CHAMPAGNE, equal to Moët's, 42s.

SPARKLING BURGUNDY

("The Glorious Bumper") at 48s. per dozen.

Pure CLARETS from 16s. to 64s. per dozen.

Tariffs of other Wines sent post free.

Cheques requested to be crossed "London and Westminster Bank."

FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION,

32, REGENT CIRCUS, PICCADILLY, LONDON, 1861.

GOOD DOUBLE GLOUCESTER CHEESE.

7d. and 7½d. per lb.

FINE LARGE CHEESE, weighing 1 cwt. each, 8d. per lb.

RIPE STILTON, 10d. and 1s. per lb. The Connoisseur's Delight, 15d.

SMALL BREAKFAST TONGUES, 2s. 6d. the half-dozen.

SMOKED OX TONGUES, 2s. 3d. each, or three for 6s. 6d.

FINE HAMs, 7½d. and 8d. per lb.

OSBORNE'S PEAT-SMOKED BREAKFAST BACON is now in excellent cure.

BUTTER in perfection, at reasonable rates.

A saving of 15 per cent. is effected by the purchaser at this establishment on all first-class provisions. Packages gratis.

OSBORNE'S CHEESE WAREHOUSE.

OSBORNE HOUSE, 30, LUDGATE-HILL,

Near St. Paul's, E.C.

THOSE WHO ARE ABOUT TO FURNISH

should visit G. I. THOMPSON'S extensive Stock of Furnishing Ironmongery. Electro-Silver Plate, Fenders, Fire-Irons, Japan and Paper Matched Trays, Baths, Toilettes Furniture, Gas Chandeliers, Moderator Lamps. All articles marked in plain figures.

THOMPSON'S Electro Silver Spoons, 35s.; Forks, 34s. dozen.

THOMPSON'S Ivory Balance Table Knives, 16s., 22s., 28s. dozen.

25, FINSBURY-PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to Railway Stations. Send for a Furnishing List.

IMPORTER OF PURE COLZA OIL.

TRELOAR'S CORK FLOOR CLOTH, or KAMPTULICON, COCOA NUT MATTING, and DOOR MATS. Best quality and moderate prices.

T. TRELOAR, Manufacturer, 49, Ludgate-hill, London.

KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER AND CORK FLOORCLOTH.

Warm, noiseless, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

F. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Walbrook, London, E.C.
Manufactory—South London Works, Lambeth.

FURNITURE CARRIAGE FREE.—RICHARD

LOADER and Co. have just published a new and elaborate ILLUSTRATED FURNISHING GUIDE, comprising 216 well executed designs of Cabinet and Upholstery Furniture, Iron Bedsteads, &c., which may be had on application, gratis and post free. Every article warranted, and delivered carriage free to any part of the United Kingdom.—Manufactory and Show Rooms, 23 and 24, Flitbury-pavement, London, E.C.

•• An inspection is respectfully invited before purchasing elsewhere.

PICTURE FRAMES.—Cheap and Good Gilt Frames

for Oil Paintings, 3 4 by 24, 4 inches wide, 20s. Ornamental Frames for Drawings, 14 7 10, 4 s. each. The Art Union Prints, framed in a superior style, at the lowest prices. Neat gilt frames, for the Illustrated Portraits, 1s. 6d. each. Gilt Room Bordering at 4s. per yard. Oil paintings cleaned, lined, and restored; old frames re-gilt equal to new. The trade and country dealers supplied with gilt and fancy wood mouldings, print, &c. German Prints 5s. per dozen. Neat Gilt Frames, 17 by 13, with glass complete, 1s. 6d. each. CHARLES REES, Carver, Gilder, Mount Maker, and Print Seller, 36, Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO GUINEA BINOCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS sent carriage free, on receipt of post-office order, to any part of the United Kingdom. The extraordinary power of this instrument renders it adapted to answer the combined purposes of telescope and opera glass. It will define objects distinctly at ten miles distance; is suitable for the theatre, race-course, sportsmen, tourists, and general out-door observations. Only to be obtained of KEYZOR and BENDON (successors to Harris and Son), Opticians, 50, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Illustrated Price List of Optical and Mathematical Instruments free, on receipt of two stamps.

AS GOOD AS GOLD.

WATCH CHAINS and every kind of Jewellery double-coated, with pure gold, and impossible to be told from solid gold Jewellery, though only one-tenth its cost. Made in the newest patterns by workmen used to solid gold work. Unequalled for wear. Illustrated circulars post free for a stamp.

HENRY FACOTT & Co., 1, Fisher-street, Red Lion-square, London, W.C.

ALBION SNELL, Watchmaker and Jeweller, has removed to his New Premises, 114, High Holborn, seven doors east of King-street, where he respectfully solicits an inspection of his new and well-selected stock.

MODELS of SHIPS or BOATS made to Scale or Order. Blocks, dead-eyes, anchors, cannon, flags, figure-heads, &c., and every article used in fitting up models of ships, cutter and schooner yachts, screw and paddle boats. Models cleaned and repaired. Models of any description made for evidence in actions at law. Ensigns, burgees, and signal flags made to order.

W. STEPHENS, the Model Dockyard, No. 23, Trinity-square, Tower-hill, near Barking Churchyard, E.C.

SIR W. BURNETT, Director-General of the Medical

Department of the Navy, recommended BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER in preference to every other, for the use of her Majesty's Navy, because it was more wholesome—more effective—would keep longer—and was in all respects superior to every other manufactured. Pleading testimonials as to its superior excellence have also been received from the Queen's Private Baker; Dr. Hassall, Analyst to the Lancet; Captain Allen Young, of the Arctic yacht "Fox," and other scientific men. Sold everywhere in 1d., 2d., 4d., and 6d. packets; and 1s., 2s. 6d., and 3s. boxes.

When you ask for Borwick's Baking Powder, see that you get it, as complaints have been made of shopkeepers substituting worthless articles, made from inferior and inexpensive ingredients, because they are realising a larger profit by them.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street,

has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from 10 till 5.

BEST SETS OF TEETH.—EDWD. MILES &

SON, Dentists, invite the attention of persons desirous to secure the ECONOMY and DURABILITY of their best and newest work in SEYS or FULL of every description; adapted without pain or extraction, with improvements, the result of 20 years' active practice. Their 2s. work post free, or extracts gratis. Toothache for the most part cured without extraction. Best stopping with gold, &c.

10, Liverpool-street, Bishopsgate Church, City, E.C.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

 Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher*

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, AUGUST 17, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

The Fifth Congress of the Social Science Association was opened at Dublin on Wednesday last. Lord Brougham delivered the inaugural address as President, in the evening of the same day, to a vast assemblage of persons. After a rapid historical review of the progress of the natural sciences, introduced for the purpose of showing that they were all subject to the law of gradual advance and slow development—the noble lord proceeded to point out that the science of social life must be controlled by the same conditions. The different outlines of the subject-matters about to be discussed were then indicated and commented upon successively, in the following order—jurisprudence, education, health, reformation of criminals, temperance, and female employment. Jurisprudence, as being the most important of the departments, was taken first; and in reviewing what had taken place last year, his lordship observed that the suggestions made by the society as to the Patent Law and the reports on Private Bill Legislation had, as yet, produced no fruit. But he was enabled to state that the propositions made by Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood on the subject of charitable trusts had been to a great extent adopted by the Charity Commissioners under the Duke of Newcastle. These proposals, as our readers will recollect, were discussed by the Law Amendment Society in January last, and this approval on the part of the Commissioners may be considered a decisive step in the direction of a future amendment of the law of mortmain. After alluding to the new Bankruptcy Act, the President devoted much consideration to the history of the question of consolidation, congratulating the Association on the passing of five Acts, containing a digest of the main body of the criminal law. This result he attributed mainly to the exertions of the society, associating with those exertions the names of Messrs. Bellenden Ker, Starkie, Greaves, and Lonsdale; and to the labours of Sir Fitzroy Kelly. Lord Kingsdown's Act for amending the law as to the wills of British subjects abroad, and Mr. Villiers's Irremovable Poor Act, next came under review; and with a recommendation of the Marquis of Clanricarde's proposal for extending to Ireland the same system of collecting judicial statistics as that which prevails in England, his Lordship passed to another department. Legal questions were thenceforth more sparingly touched upon. It may be added, however, that the examination of Captain Crofton's system of dealing with criminals, as exhibited in Ireland, was made a leading feature of the programme. "Here," says Lord Brougham, speaking of Ireland, "the problem has been solved how to deal with convicts, and send them forth cured, instead of subject to relapse, infecting others—criminals and the teachers of crime." The international questions which were likely to engage the society's attention were alluded to. Lord Brougham referred to the system of promotion of judges which prevailed in France, and added, "In England there is no law against such promotions, but they are universally discountenanced, and very rarely take place. In seventy years that I have known our courts, I only remember two instances of a puisne being made a chief; for the case of Sir V. Gibbs was that of an Attorney-General promoted, after being, from accidental circumstances, a puisne judge. Parliament would at once interfere were such advancements ever made, except in very peculiar circumstances." We do not observe throughout the address any strong indication of further proposed changes in any important branch of jurisprudence. It was, perhaps, felt by the speaker that the recommendation of practical measures of legal reform was not his appropriate task, and that generally to record and pass approbation on what had been done was all that required of the President of the Association, on the occasion of an opening address. Lord Brougham's reception was most enthusiastic. At the close of his address, he was congratulated in eloquent terms by the Lord Lieutenant, the Right Hon. Mr. Fitzgerald, and the Duke of Wellington. The business of the session commenced on the following day. Abstracts of some of the more important papers on juridical subjects we hope to be able to lay before our readers.

It is not often that the tranquil flow of judicial administration is disturbed by such an incident as that which occurred in the Court of Bankruptcy on Monday. An announcement by Mr. Commissioner Fane not only took the members of the bar who were present by surprise, but afforded no little astonishment to the rest of the profession remaining in London, who found, in the Tuesday-morning papers an invitation to Basinghall-street to hear the judge read a letter which he had addressed to Lord Palmerston, "expressing his feelings as to the manner in which the commissioners had been treated by the new Bankruptcy Bill, now to become law." They were relieved from suspense on the following day, by finding that the commissioner had yielded to the arguments of a gentleman, in whose judgment he placed confidence, and upon his recommendation had resolved to postpone reading the letter until the re-assembly of the legal world after the holidays. The commissioner is reported to have expressed regret at the disappointment he had occasioned, which would not, however, be of long duration, for that, after the vacation, he should certainly read the letter. Whereupon, amidst much laughter, we are informed, the assembly dispersed. We sincerely trust that the learned commissioner will be dissuaded from carrying out his resolution; and that the arguments of the gentleman on whose judgment he relies will be employed to show that if it be unwise to read the letter when the legal world is out of town, it will be no less indiscreet to do so upon its return. We are not surprised that this escapade of the learned commissioner has struck the public mind with a strong sense of its impropriety. A letter addressed in a formal manner to Lord Palmerston, merely as a vehicle for expressing the writer's opinions, and published in the usual way, would have been harmless enough; and we cannot suppose that a representation made to one of the numerous critics of the Bankruptcy Bill during its progress through Parliament would have been neglected. We believe the views of Mr. Commissioner Fane would have met with the attention which is due to his experience and known ability. Indeed, we remember, some three years since, the publication of suggestions by the learned commissioner on this very subject, which were extensively circulated, and one, at least, of which—the abolition of the distinction between bankruptcy and insolvency—has been carried out. The strong objections which, if we recollect right, he there expressed to the system of private arrangements with creditors have been obviated, in a great measure, by the provisions in the new Act for the registration of deeds of composition. But as the address on Monday last seems to point to the personal grievances of the commissioners, we can only guess that Mr. Commissioner Fane's grounds of dissatisfaction with the measure are private rather than public, and conclude that the letter to the Premier is not in very flattering terms. Under any circumstances in the unfortunate demonstration which has been threatened and all but made, we can see nothing but accumulated breach of decorum, if not of duty. That a judge should write a complaint of part of the law which he is bound to administer, after it has passed through Parliament; that he should address himself, not to either branch of the Legislature, not to the Attorney-General, or the Lord Chancellor, who had charge of the Bill, but to the Premier during the recess; and that he should select his own court as the place in which to state his objections, and invite the legal profession to attend and hear him, is a combination of errors, which we should have thought it impossible that any judicial officer of the Crown could have dreamt of committing. The Master of the Rolls is opposed to the Courts of Justice Building Bill, but he has not thought fit to denounce the measure from his seat in the Rolls House. He has been content, with no loss of dignity, and we doubt not with adequate effect, to petition the House of Lords against the removal of his Court. Even the messengers of the Bankruptcy Court took time by the forelock, and did not wait till the Bill had become law before they raised their cry for compensation and sinecures. And why Lord Palmerston should be held answerable any more than any other member of the Legislature for the wrongs inflicted by Parliament, it is difficult to understand. We are glad to know that the indiscretion is at present only half committed; there is still left a locus penitentiae, and the dignity of the bench need not wholly be sacrificed. The outcry of indignation and ridicule that has been raised by the press must warn the learned commissioner that a violation of judicial gravity is keenly felt by the public, and is resented with prompt instinct. We, on behalf of the legal profession, must equally protest against so injurious an error. Exhibitions of want of dignity on the bench though rare, have been endured for the sake of compensating merits; but that the authority of the judgment seat should be employed in assailing the Legislature, on behalf of the private grievance of a judge, is a thing which no community in this country will ever tolerate.

The Bishop of Salisbury, in a recent charge, has announced the commencement of a prosecution against the Rev. Dr. Rowland Williams, vicar of Broad Chalk, Wilts, on account of the article on "Bunsen's Biblical Researches," contributed to "Essays and Reviews." The articles are fifteen in number. They set forth certain passages from the essay, and charge that they express opinions which are antagonistic to certain of the Articles of Religion. They also article and object that in certain specified passages the defendant had advisedly maintained and affirmed certain doctrines, positions, or opinions, which they proceed to describe in other words, and declare that the same are contrary to certain of the Articles of Religion, to one of the Creeds, and to the teaching of the Church. They further article and object that in certain passages the writer has advisedly maintained and affirmed that certain canonical books of the Old Testament are not authentic, and have no authority binding on the Church, and charge that the doctrine thus maintained is contrary to the Articles of Religion, and the teaching of the Church, as shown in the form and manner of making deacons; and after an enumeration of other charges, they are summarized in the following terms by the seventeenth article:—"And we further article and, object to you, the said Rev. Rowland Williams, that the manifest tendency, scope, object, and design of the whole Essay is to inculcate a disbelief in the Divine inspiration and authority of the Holy Scriptures contained in the Old and New Testament, to reduce the said Holy Scriptures to the level of a mere human composition, such as the writings of Luther and of Milton; to deny that the Old Testament contains prophecies or predictions of our Saviour and other persons and events; to deny that the prophets, speaking under the special inspiration of the Holy Spirit, foretold human events; to deny altogether, or greatly discredit the truth and genuineness of the historical portions of the Old Testament, and the truth and genuineness of certain parts of the New Testament, and the truth and reality of the miracles recorded as facts in the Old and New Testament; to deny or interpret by a meaning at variance with that of the Church the doctrines of original sin, of infant baptism, of justification by faith, atonement and propitiation by the death of our Saviour, and of the incarnation of our Saviour." The cause is so far progressed that it will probably be ready for hearing next term.

It is announced that the opening of the New Library at the Middle Temple by the Prince of Wales, will take place shortly before the beginning of next Michaelmas Term. It is proposed that a body of members of the Society, being also volunteers of the Inns of Court regiment, should form a guard of honour on the occasion; and those who desire to be of the number are requested to forward their names to the orderly room, Lincoln's Inn.

Mr. Charles Pearson, the city solicitor, who has for some time been very seriously indisposed, is now considered out of danger; and it is probable that in the course of a few weeks he will be able to resume his professional duties.

PARLIAMENTARY PAPERS OF THE SESSION RELATING TO THE LAW AND LAWYERS.

I.

The means of forming an independent opinion on the legislative measures of the day are neither abundant nor accessible in proportion to the growth of journalism. Advocacy of particular interests or views is sufficiently plentiful. If, for instance, a Bankruptcy Bill be pending, all kinds of articles, official, commercial, territorial, and critical, are daily and weekly poured out through a score of newspapers. The tactics followed add variety to the arguments. Suppressio veri, suggestio falsi, argumentum ad hominem, or ad verecundiam, or ad vim, become recognised divisions of the labour of periodical literature. But will not the truth be brought out at last? Is not the public the ultimate judge to detect, by the aid of unlimited licence of advocacy, the weak and strong points of every one of the parties before it? Doubtless the public might exercise judicial faculties, if it had the advantage of hearing both sides and every side of the question. In one sense, indeed, all sides are heard: divide the public into sections, and every section hears its advocate. Every section may, if it will, be waited upon, flattered, goaded, fooled, or frenzied to the top of its bent. Pinning his faith on leading articles many a man has the editorial finger for the centre of his orbit. Under this reproach lawyers lie less than any other class. Their peculiar experience teaches them that it is better to go to the fountain head than to follow devious and tainted streams. We have thought it well, therefore, to bring before our readers, in an orderly manner, and within a short compass, a view of the papers relating to the law and lawyers; which in some cases have served Parliament as a ground for measures during the past session, in others may probably furnish materials or motives for future measures, and in others again are intended to show the working of past legislation. The papers may be classed under the following heads:—1. Papers relating to legislation itself. 2. To the Crown, courts, and superior and other judges in respect of the administration of the law. 3. The Police and the execution of the criminal law. 4. The public expenditure. 5. Land and conveyancing. 6. Miscellaneous matters. Of these papers the greatest part are returns made to one House or the other on the motion of members. Some are returns made pursuant to Acts of Parliament. Some are papers presented to the Houses by the Queen's command. As one object which we have in view is to give to our readers such information of all the papers which are likely to be especially interesting to the profession as will, at least, acquaint them with the existence of, and enable them to identify every such paper, we shall mention all, with the distinctive numbers of such as are numbered. Our collective notice of the contents of the papers must necessarily be limited.

1. LEGISLATION.

The Report from the Select Committee on Expiring Laws (H. C. 304) shows what temporary laws of a public and general nature are now in force, and what laws of the like nature have expired since the last report upon the subject; and also what laws of the like nature are about to expire at particular periods, or in consequence of any contingent public events; and contains observations of the committee thereupon. The last preceding report was made on the 11th of June, 1860. The present contains a register of the temporary laws now in force; an index of temporary laws under two classes—1, where the duration is certain; 2, where it is uncertain; an index to laws expired since the last report; and an index of the subject matter of the Acts reported. Among the first of the two classes may be mentioned the Episcopal and Capitular Estates Management, Copyhold Inclosure and Tithe Commissions, Turnpike (G. B.), Divorce Court, Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, Poor Law and Incumbered Estates (West Indies) Acts. Among those of the second class, the Extradition, Bank of England, and East India Company's Dividend Acts. This report must not be connected with the Statute Law Revision Act passed last session, which is a measure not dealing with expired or spent Acts, but confined to Acts virtually although not specifically repealed. But for other purposes of consolidation or rather of reduction of the statute book, a comparison of each with its successor of these reports made from year to year will be a valuable index of expired Acts. In the matter of actual consolidation, if Mr. Coode will allow the word on the present occasion, the thirty who, including the principal lawyers in the Commons, were selected to consider the Criminal Law Bills, have reported their proceedings in detail (H. C. 240). The committee sat eight times, the Solicitor-General in the chair, two sittings being deliberative of the course of proceeding, and three devoted to the Offences against the Person Bill. Four of the Bills were disposed of at one and the last sitting. Out of the thirty the names of four, six, or seven only appear in many of the divisions of the committee.

2. ADMINISTRATION.

The papers respecting the international action of the Government hold the first rank. The case of the fugitive slave Anderson, and the United States blockade, have each furnished a correspondence presented by the Queen's command. The Anderson paper has fifty-one pages, containing twenty letters with numerous enclosures. General Cass makes his application to our chargé d'affaires at Washington, who communicates with the Foreign Secretary, who communicates with the Colonial Secretary, who communicates with the Governor of Canada, instructing him to take such measures as are warranted by the law of Canada to deliver up the fugitive. The Colonial Minister, having afterwards received a copy of the Toronto judgments, writes to the governor that the case "is one of the gravest possible importance, and her Majesty's Government are not satisfied that the decision of the court at Toronto is in conformity with the view of the treaty which has hitherto guided the authorities in this country." The governor is to abstain in any case from completing the extradition. He writes for instructions that he may be prepared on the decision of the appeal. The habeas corpus having issued here, the Foreign Minister thinks the only thing now necessary is for the governors to facilitate the action of the Queen's Bench at Westminster. This writ and the local Common Pleas writ are at Toronto at the same time, racing to Brantford. Mr. Dallas sends home from the legation at London slips of leading articles in the Globe and Times, and of Mr. Denman's and Mr. Fowell Buxton's letters in the Times, and remarks in his own letter on "the professional astuteness" invoked to defeat the treaty, on "the pungent and uncompromising hostility to social bondage which prevails throughout this country," and on the "surprising celerity" with which the Lord Chief Justice granted the habeas corpus.

The correspondence respecting the blockade is a shorter affair, running only to thirteen pages, and containing four letters with their inclosures. Our chargé d'affaires is careful to receive the communication of the President's proclamation as an announcement of an intention only. When he presses Mr. Seward for information as to the mode in which the blockade is to be carried into effect, and draws attention to the vagueness of the information given, as compared with the European custom, the reply is that the United States notifies the blockade individually to each vessel approaching the port, inscribing a memorandum on the ship's papers; and further, that there will be an effective blockade of 3,000 miles of coast from Chesapeake Bay to the Rio Grande. Mr. Seward promises a copy of the instructions issued to the blockade officers, and an equitable consideration of any case of a British vessel. A notification is published of the effective blockade of the ports of Virginia and North Carolina. Mr. Seward now finds no precedent for communicating the instructions to foreign governments. The proclamation, he says, is mere notice of an intention. 1. The blockade will be on recognised principles. 2. Armed neutral vessels will have the right to enter and depart. 3. Merchant vessels in port at the time of the blockade will have a reasonable time to depart. Permission is asked to send British vessels in ballast from New York to bring away stores and timber bought, and, in some cases, paid for, by British subjects, and lying at the port of Norfolk in Virginia. Mr. Seward refuses, the like rule having been enforced against Americans having cotton at Norfolk. British vessels arrived in ballast for cargo are blockaded. The consuls at Richmond and Baltimore write for advice and instructions. 4. Neutral vessels in ports for cargo are to be allowed fifteen days from April 27 for lading and clearing out. 5. The date of the commencement of the blockade in each locality will be fixed by the issue of a notice to the blockade officer; but, as appears, will not be officially communicated to neutral nations.

By a letter of June last (H. C. 300) to the Lords of the Admiralty, the Foreign Minister, for the purpose of observing the strictest neutrality between the United States and the "so-styled Confederate States," has proposed to interdict the armed ships and privateers of both parties from carrying prizes into the ports or waters of the United Kingdom, or of the Queen's colonies or possessions.

Taking next in order the House of Lords in its judicial capacity, a paper (H. L. 62) has been furnished, which, by the side of the Divorce Court return to be presently noticed, will afford means for a comparison. The paper specifies the petitions for Divorce Bills, and the introduction of such Bills from 1800 to 1860, distinguishing the Ecclesiastical Court where the earlier proceedings were had, and stating whether the Bill became law. In recent years, the petitions and Bills were in 1850, seven; 1851, five; since, from two to four only in each year. All the Bills in 1850 passed; two failed in the next year; and two out of three in the next. The greatest number of Bills was in 1830—nine, of which eight passed. In many years there were not more than two Bills.

Respecting the Courts, the papers which relate to or bear upon the design of giving to the superior courts in general a local habitation claim the first notice. The return (H. C. 84) respecting the Suitors' Fund, under section 63 of the Act of the 5th of the Queen for making further provisions for the administration of justice, gives a balance on the 1st of October last of stock £4,119,155 1s. 1d., and cash, £20,054 17s. 8d. The total payment thereby for the preceding year to retired and present chancery officers, and for expenses and costs, was £61,338 13s.; and, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, surplus interest, amounting to £51,162 9s. 3d., was carried to the Suitors' Fee Fund Account, making together £112,501 2s. 3d. as the total charge on the income of the Suitors' Fund. The Suitors' Fee Fund Account shows an income from various sources for the year ending November last of £158,213 7s. 10d. to meet payments of certain other chancery salaries and expenses, also salaries and expenses under the Lunacy Regulation Act, and of the Taxing Office, amounting altogether to £156,991 14s. In the Fee Fund there was also a balance of cash at that date of £83,537 13s. 8d., and stock placed out, £201,028 2s. 3d. The account of the superior courts of common law (fee fund), (H. C. 443), under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 73, exhibits at the end of 1860 a sum of £99,740 10s. 5d. to the credit of the fund, the increase of the annual sum having been for each of the last two years about £11,000.

The Treasury Minute of July, of which a return was made to the House of Commons (440), estimates the cost of the new law courts at £2,000,000; the portion of the Suitors' Fund, the stock of the Suitors' Fee Fund, and the accumulation of surplus common law fees (£88,254), which were recommended by the Courts and Offices Commission as available for building the new courts, the minute estimates as of the value of £1,400,000. But the income of the first two funds being, as we have just seen, nearly absorbed by the charges on it, a deficiency estimated at £45,000 a year would arise to be provided for out of the Consolidated Fund; against which deficiency the commissioners proposed to appropriate annual surplus fees of the Common Law, Probate, and Admiralty Courts, £22,000 a-year; but, since in the last two courts the surplus fees are carried to the Exchequer, the deficiency would, in truth, fall upon the general revenue. The accumulated surplus common law fees also are payable into the Exchequer, while Parliament votes the salaries of the common law establishments; therefore, the minute does not admit the argument that the surplus income arising from this fund is disposable for special purposes. So that, instead of £1,400,000, only £1,311,000 (from the Suitors' Funds) would be available, leaving upon £2,000,000 £689,000 as the probable deficiency to be voted by Parliament, and an annual charge of £45,000 also to be voted to meet the deficiency of the income of the Suitors' Funds. The annual charge will abate as life compensations fall in, and is valued at £410,000, making with the £689,000 a total to which the public will be liable, of £1,099,000 (stated at £1,052,000 in the minute.)

The minutes of evidence on the Courts Building Act (Money) Bill (H. C. 441) contain the testimony of Mr. H. R. Abraham (the architect), Mr. Harvey Gem, Mr. J. Young, The Master of the Rolls, Mr. T. Hardy, Mr. C. Roberts, and Mr. J. J. Johnson. The exact site, extending west only as far as Yeates' and Horseshoe-courts, so as not to interfere with Clement's Inn, is 565 feet on the Strand side, 595 in Bell-yard, 735 in Carey-street and further west, and 375 on the remaining side. It is remarkable as having no public building or factory in so large an area. Twenty-one courts are thought necessary by the Lord Chancellor. There is provision also for 710 rooms, and a depository of wills, occupying in all, together with the passages, 617,500 superficial feet. The difference of level (sixteen feet and a half) between Carey-street and the Strand offers advantages in a building with a frontage seventy feet high in the Strand.

A bridge over Fleet-street is not contemplated, as the height of vans would render forty steps necessary.

Among the papers relating to the particular courts is a copy (H. C. 92) of the appointment of the commission to inquire into the constitution of the Accountant-General's department of the Court of Chancery, the forms, business, and the custody and management of the funds. The commissioners are the Duke of Argyll, Lord Kingsdown, Sir George Grey, Mr. R. W. Crawford, Mr. P. W. Rogers, Mr. W. G. Anderson, Mr. W. S. Cookson, and Mr. E. W. Field.

Bankruptcy Court Finance for 1860 occupies two returns (H. C. 80, pursuant to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 108, and H. C. 106). The accounts are kept under four heads. 1. The general account of bankrupts' estates, in which there were paid in by the official assignees and others £868,323 6s. 9d., and by sale of stock from the Bankruptcy Fund Account, £79,643 15s.; paid out by orders, £383,752 1s. 7d.; and as dividend, £560,312 14s. 4d. 2. The Bankruptcy Fund Account, the net balance of which, on the 1st of January, was £1,436,241 6s. 2d. Stock. 3. The Unclaimed Dividend Account. 4. The Chief Registrar's Account. This account states the year's revenue (including £42,510 18s. 9d. interest on the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th accounts) at £90,322 5s. 5d., and the year's charge (including £20,443 18s. 9d. for compensations and retiring annuities) at £81,030 3s. 6d. The total amounts received and paid by the Bank of England, on account of the Accountant in Bankruptcy in 1860, were £1,038,894 4s. 10d., and £1,026,215 1s. 5d. The names of all persons holding office in the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Courts of England and Wales, with the dates of their appointments, and the modes and amounts of their annual payments on an average of seven years, have been also returned (H. C. 124). In London there are five bankruptcy commissioners with £2,000 a-year a-piece; six registrars, £1,000 each; chief registrar and six clerks, £2,500; accountant and nineteen clerks, £7,040; taxing master and two clerks, £2,000; nine official assignees, per centages from £2,681 to £900; five messengers, fees and profit from copying, from £1,500 to £1,054; two under officers, five ushers, six brokers, £427 to £350; the registrar of meetings, and five persons in charge of the buildings. In the country are eight commissioners, £1,800 each; eleven registrars, £800 each; seventeen official assignees, from £1,846 to £746; eleven messengers, £950 to £435; ten ushers and eleven brokers. The total and net remunerations received by the official assignees in 1860 may also be found in a separate return (H. C. 40), with the number of adjudication and other petitions allotted to each. Selecting the highest net remuneration, £2,487 4s. 9d., the adjudication petitions were fifty-eight, and the others, six. A return (H. C. 78) from the messengers of the London and district courts, shows the charges and fees received by them for 1860, their payments thereout and the number of meetings held under each commissioner. The sittings in 1860 (H. C. 76), were, public, 3,812 in bankruptcy and 67 under the Joint Stock Winding-up Acts; private, 2,155 and 13 respectively. The number of appeals to the Vice-Chancellor and Lords Justices, since the abolition of the Court of Review, has been 646, occupying 215 days; in addition the Vice-Chancellor disposed of 470 original petitions (H. L. 96). The report of the law lords and other peers constituting the select committee of twenty-one on the Bill (H. C. 320) gives account of seven sittings, of divided opinion on the retrospective action and the powers to the creditors' assignees, but of unanimous rejection of the chief judge. The quick and pleasant way in which matters were managed in the Divorce Court suggested the propriety of a return of the number of petitions, with the dates of the acts of adultery or other acts which were the foundation of them, the number of undefended cases, and the decrees. In this paper (H. C. 69) we find one dissolution petition in which the alleged adultery was in 1823; 59 in which it took place in 1856—the year before the Act passed; and 85 in which it was in 1858. The total number of dissolution petitions to the 21st August, 1860, was 604. There is also a summary of separation and other petitions, giving the totals—separation, 195; restitution of conjugal rights, 32; nullity, 13; protection of property, 85. The dissolutions decreed are set down at 239; refused, 19; of which 212 were undefended cases.

The salaries of the judges, registrars, and others of the London and Dublin Probate Courts form the subject of a return pursuant to the Probate Court Acts (H. C. 133), with an account of fees and monies received in 1860; fees received by the English and Irish district registrars, and the disbursements; also the compensations. The salaries in London amount to £36,780; the fees in the London Court to £54,636 10s. 6d. For both parts of the kingdom the compensations to proctors and officers amount to £115,987 1s. 6d. in the year, with £9,699 composition for annual sums under £10: the Rev. Robert Moore figures for £7,990 2s. 5d. a year; the Chester registrar for £3,498 8s. 4d.; the joint York registrars for £2,008 2s. 8d.; the Lincoln registrar for £530 2s. 11d.; the Dublin registrar, £2,579 4s.; six proctors for above £1,000 a year each, two of them, apparently a firm, for £2,519 3s. together. In all, there are fifteen columns of English and Irish compensationists, at about fifty to the column, or a total of some 750. The stamp duty paid in 1860 on probates and letters of administration (H. C. 209) is £708,333 for London; for Wakefield, which is the highest of the 40 district registries (English), £46,792.

Passing from the overpaid to the Great Unpaid, among whom the shepherds of the Church are not conspicuous for tenderness to the sheep brought before them, it appears (H. C. 198) that in the counties of England, exclusive of Somersetshire, which made no return, there are or were 1,183 magistrates in holy orders. Some are mentioned as since dead, and others as not acting, including the Archbishops of Canterbury and York and the Bishop of London, who all are both Middlesex and Suffolk magistrates. The clerical magistrates of Wales number 174, giving a total of 1,357.

Lastly, the working of the County Courts is illustrated by a paper (H. C. 335), which states that in the Liverpool Court, during the year ending April, 1861, the fewest number of days between ordinary summons and hearing was seventeen, the number of cases so heard being 150; forty-seven was the greatest number of days, in one case only; the average interval was twenty-seven days; number of unserved summonses, 2,131; proportion of served to unserved, ten to one. In judgment summonses the least and greatest intervals were fourteen and thirty-five days, and the cases for those intervals, thirty-two and twenty-five; unserved summonses, 1,270; proportion of served to unserved, about two to one. A like return for Manchester gives an average interval for ordinary summonses at twenty-one days; unserved summonses, 1,597; proportion about eleven to one; judgment summonses, least and greatest intervals, twenty-one and forty-nine days; unserved summonses, 1,427; proportion, about the same as Liverpool.

The Courts, Appointments, Promotions, Vacancies, &c.

SUMMER ASSIZES.

WESTERN CIRCUIT.—BRISTOL.

Aug. 10.—The commission was opened in this city to-day. There were twenty-one causes entered, five of which were marked for special juries.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.—LIVERPOOL.

Aug. 10.—The commission was opened in this town to-day.

The Queen has conferred the honour of Knighthood upon Roundell Palmer, Esq., her Majesty's Solicitor-General.

Recent Decisions.

EQUITY.

EQUITABLE MERGER.

Brandon v. Brandon, V.C. K., 9 W. R. 825.

This case involved a very difficult question of equitable merger. A. and B. were owners in fee as tenants in common, of certain freehold and leasehold property, whereof A. granted several building leases, containing the usual covenants. In 1807 (B. being then dead), A. and B.'s devisees in trust granted another building lease at a pepper-corn rent to C., which he subsequently assigned to A. only. In 1808, the trustees of B. agreed to grant A. a lease of another portion of the lands of which they and B. were joint owners in fee. But it was not until 1819 that the lease was granted, A. having meantime, in 1816, granted a building lease of the same lands to another party. In 1819 (A. being then dead), his trustees and the trustees of B. granted a lease of some portion of the freeholds not comprised in the lease of 1807 to a party who afterwards assigned it to A.'s trustees. In a suit then instituted to administer the estate of A., it was held that he died intestate as to one-ninth of the fee simple estate, which descended on his heir. From 1788 to 1846, the legal estate in the whole property was outstanding in a mortgagee. In 1785, the owners in fee of the lands held on lease by A. and B. granted what was called a manor building lease to the mortgagee for ninety-nine years. In 1787, he and the owners in fee granted a lease to A. In 1788, the mortgagee assigned all his interest in the lease of 1787 to A. and B. In 1790, the owners in fee, together with A. and B., granted three building leases of three other portions to the lessee of 1807, who, in 1806, also assigned his interest in those three leases to A. and B., to whom a renewal of the manor lease was granted. Upon this state of facts the questions were, first, whether the assignment by the lessee of 1807 operated as a merger of the interest in the lease in A.'s fee simple estate in reversion; secondly, whether there was a merger by reason of the assignment by the lessee of 1819 to A.'s trustees; and thirdly, as a consequence of the other questions, whether A.'s heir-at-law took a portion of the fee simple in possession, or in reversion expectant on the determination of the lease. There was also a question whether the merger, if such took place, were legal or equitable. Mr. Christie, one of the conveyancing counsel before whom the title was laid preliminary to a sale, raised the question of a merger. Kindersley, V.C., held that the parties having always acted upon the assumption that there was no merger, could not now contend that there was, as such a claim would be clearly inequitable.

Although equity, as regards the doctrine of merger, will follow the law in applying that doctrine, and will hold that if the circumstances of any particular case would have caused a merger at law if the interests were legal, then that a merger takes place of the similar equitable interests in equity, yet the Court will not apply this doctrine, if any other circumstance in the case would render such a construction inequitable. The Court also deals, as the Vice-Chancellor observed in this case, with a legal merger on equitable grounds. It has been considered that a court of law would, e converso, deal with a question of merger in some cases upon equitable grounds. We are strongly disposed, however, to impugn the soundness of this opinion, unless the inequitable circumstances connected with the legal merger would have amounted to fraud at law. In the present case the Vice-Chancellor seems to have considered that the complication of rights to which the application of the doctrine would give rise, was sufficient to preclude the assumption of its applicability. The facts certainly are very complicated, as are also the legal questions which they occasioned. No point of pure law, however, existed in the case as the legal estate had been outstanding from 1788 to 1846. If there was a merger of the equitable interest in the leases of 1807 and of 1809, upon their assignment to A. and to A.'s trustees, a question would arise as to the performance of the covenants. If those leases were of the freehold property, the effect of holding that there was a merger would be that there would be a merger only of A.'s undivided moiety, there being a rent reserved, one moiety of which belonged to B.'s trustees. There must be thus a division of the rent, and of the covenants. B.'s trustees might, therefore, have a right of action against A. The Vice-Chancellor supported his view of the case by a reference to the complications that would be introduced by the various manor and building leases, if a merger were to be deemed to have occurred. It may, however, be doubted whether complications as to rights can be allowed to control a general doctrine of equity. Why should the claim of B.'s trustees against A. for a moiety of the rent be deemed sufficient to prevent a merger, and why should complications, however numerous, as they were not necessarily present to the minds of the parties to the assignment, be deemed to have altered the character of the transaction? If, indeed, B.'s trustees would be injuriously affected, (and this was the Vice-Chancellor's opinion), by holding that a merger took place, the lease could be deemed not to have been merged as regards them, but to have been merged as regards A.'s heir-at-law, and the beneficiaries under his will; Danby v. Danby, Finch 220; Charlton v. Low, 3 P. W. 325. The equity of the former cannot be held to apply as between the latter. As to the acquiescence of all parties in the assumption that a merger had not taken place, it is doubtless a material incident in the case, and tends to support the decision of the Vice-Chancellor, although it was not the ground upon which he mainly rested his decision. On the whole, the effect of the Vice-Chancellor's decision is to limit the application of the doctrine of merger whenever it would defeat the intention of the parties, as indicated either by their conduct at the time or subsequently. It appears to us, however, doubtful whether acquiescence in the assumption of a merger, if such did not occur in point of law, does not afford ground rather for a new equity than for holding that a merger actually occurred, so as to alter the rights of the heir at law and of the devisees of one of the parties.

COMMON LAW.

LAW OF BANKS—RULE AS TO FORWARDING CHEQUES.

Hare v. Henty, C. P., 9 W. R. 738.

The proper course of practice with regard to the transmission of a cheque paid into a bank by one of its customers to the bank on which it is drawn was laid down by Lord Ellenborough in the case of Rickford v. Ridge (2 Camp. 537). The rule, as there established, is that the cheque must be sent off the next day after it is received, but that there is no obligation to send it the same day; and that, consequently, if the bank on which it was drawn should have happened to have stopped payment before the cheque arrived there, although, had it been forwarded the same day that the customer paid it in, it would have been honoured, the loss, as between the bankers and the customer, falls on the latter. This is a matter of general convenience which has been since always recognised and acted on; but, it is apprehended, that the practice applies only where the transmission is to be to a bank in a town other than that in which the bank into which the cheque is paid in by the customer is situate. The present case was decided upon the rule as above defined. A customer of a bank at Worthing paid in there on a Friday a cheque on a bank at Lewes. The Worthing bank sent up the cheque on Saturday to London, to be presented at the Lewes bank clearing house, where, on being presented on the Monday, it was refused payment. It was contended that a legal obligation existed on the Worthing bank to have sent it to Lewes direct on the Friday, in which case, arriving on the Saturday, it would have been paid. But the Court, on the authority of Lord Ellenborough's ruling in the above case, denied the existence of such a duty, and gave judgment for the bank, which had been sued by their customer for the money he lost by the dishonoured cheque.

PARTIES TO ACTION—CONSIDERATION MUST MOVE FROM THE PLAINTIFF.

Tweedle v. Atkinson, Q. B., 9 W. R. 781.

The fundamental principle which governs the proper party to sue on a contract is that he must be the person from whom the consideration moved. It is not enough that the promise was in fact made to him, nor even that it was to be performed for his benefit; for the promise, to whomsoever made, follows the consideration, and enures, for the purpose of action, to the party who had the legal interest therein; for with him the contract is, in contemplation of law, deemed to have been made. These considerations make it essential to determine, first, what was the consideration for any contract, the breach of which is complained of, and then in whom was the legal interest therein vested, for the answer to these questions will enable us to determine who shall be the plaintiff. Now at an earlier period of the law the nature of the consideration of natural love and affection was not clearly settled. It was thought that such a consideration would support a promise not under seal, and accordingly in Dutton v. Poole (1 Ventr. 318, 382; 2 Sev. 210), a leading case on this subject, it was held that a daughter who had waived her moral claim to support from her father, in exchange for a promise to her father from her brother to pay her a sum of money, might support an action for such sum, on the ground that the consideration moved from her, though the promise had been made to her father. It has, however, been here determined that such consideration as above mentioned is no support to the action at all; and, therefore, in modern times, the plaintiff in Dutton v. Poole would have failed. The present case was decided against the plaintiff on similar grounds. The action was brought by A. against the executors of B., who had promised A.'s father to pay to A. a certain sum in consideration of his having married B.'s daughter. But this suit was held not to be maintainable, both because there was no privity between A. and B., and also because (as the law is now settled) there was no valid consideration to support the promise made by B. to A.'s father.

WHEN DELIVERY IS REQUIRED IN GIFTS INTER VIVOS.

Winter v. Winter, Q. B., 9 W. R. 747.

This case points out a distinction which exists between a donatio mortis causa (on which species of gift we recently made some observations) and an ordinary gift inter vivos. In the former, there must, it may be remembered, be an actual delivery of the chattel itself, or, if it be a chose in action merely, then of the instrument by which it is secured; but this is so because it constitutes some security against fraud, a protection which is not required when the donor does not die. Hence, on the principle that cessante ratione cesset et ipsa lex, in a gift inter vivos there need be no delivery, actual or constructive. All that is requisite is that the conduct of the parties should show that the ownership has changed. In the present case, the subject of the gift was a barge, which the donee formerly worked as the servant of the donor, and there being evidence that the donor had said he had presented the donee with the barge, and that the latter had subsequently worked it as owner, this was held sufficient to substantiate his claim.

NEW LAW COURTS.

The council of the Incorporated Law Society has issued a paper containing the following remarks on the Treasury Minute of the 16th July, 1861, relating to the provision of funds for the new law courts, with reference to the two Bills lately before Parliament:—

It is much to be regretted that this minute was not issued at an earlier period. The facts and figures on which it purports to be founded have been for many months in the possession of the Treasury. They were well known, or were readily accessible, before authority was given by the Treasury for the preparation and deposit, at the public expense, of the plans and books of reference relative to the proposed site, and the giving of the notices required by the standing orders of Parliament. They were well known while the "Site Bill" was passing, as a Government measure, through the two Houses, and while the Money Bill was under the consideration of the select committee of the House of Commons. And yet it was not until that committee had closed its sittings, and made its report, and until all opportunity of inquiry and explanation might be supposed to have passed away, that a minute is issued under Treasury authority, which if its statements and reasoning be well founded, stultifies the report of a royal commission, and utterly defeats a Government measure professing to be founded thereon. The professed object of the minute is, "that Parliament and the public should be fully apprized of the amount of charge which will be incurred, and the extent of liability for the same to which the public revenues may be subject," if the full scheme recommended by the Royal Commissioners be carried into effect. With this view, the minute proceeds to show, that whilst, on the one hand, the cost of acquiring the site recommended by the Royal Commissioners and of erecting thereon the buildings proposed by them, will exceed their estimate by no less a sum than £500,000; on the other hand, the funds pointed out by the Commissioners as available for the object will fall short of their estimate by not less than £189,000,—the two sums together amounting to £689,000, which the minute represents as the "probable deficiency to be provided by vote of Parliament."

1. With regard to the costs of the site and buildings.

The difference between the two estimates arises as follows:—

COMMISSIONERS' REPORT.

Cost of site	£675,000
Ditto of buildings	675,000
Contingencies	150,000
	<hr/>
	£1,500,000

TREASURY MINUTE.

Cost of site	£750,000
Ditto of buildings	750,000
Contingencies	500,000
	<hr/>
	£2,000,000

The excess of the latter over the former being thus made up as follows:—

Site	£75,000
Buildings	75,000
Allowance for contingencies	350,000
	<hr/>
	£500,000

Now it is to be observed, that the report of the commissioners was founded upon evidence given before them, the accuracy of which has since been confirmed by an eminent architect and surveyor, who was examined before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, to which the Money Bill, now before Parliament, was referred. The Parliamentary plans and notices for the Site Bill were prepared under the immediate personal direction of that gentleman, who has made a minute and careful estimate of every property included therein, house by house. He estimates the value of the whole, including costs of purchase and compensation, at £678,044. He also confirms the estimate that the cost of erecting all the buildings necessary for carrying into effect the entire scheme recommended by the Royal Commissioners, including an ample allowance for contingencies, will not exceed the sum named in their report. On the other hand, the figures set forth in the Treasury Minute are "conjectural" only. The sums there named as the probable cost of the site and buildings are expressly stated to be founded on the "conjectures" of the officers of the Board of Works, while the sum set down for "contingencies" seems to be nothing more than a guess of the Lords of the Treasury themselves, who consider that "it would not be safe to put down the item of contingencies at less than one third of the conjectural estimate, or £500,000." No actual reports or estimates are produced or referred to in support of these "conjectures," and there appears to be no good reason why any other set of figures, of even larger amount, might not with equal propriety have been put forward. The question seems to be, whether reliance is to be placed on mere "conjectures," unsupported by evidence, or on carefully prepared estimates made by competent persons, and which have been open to examination and inquiry? And it may well be asked whether, in a matter admitted to be of the highest public utility and importance, mere "conjectures" are to be allowed to defeat a scheme recommended by commissioners, who were appointed by the Crown under the advice of one set of ministers, and whose report has been adopted and acted upon by their successors in office.

2. With regard to the provision of funds for the proposed new courts.

The Commissioners recommended the appropriation of two funds, one consisting of stock, amounting to £1,492,657 (or in round figures £1,500,000), and the other of cash amounting to £88,254. At the date of their report, the price of Consols was rather more than 93, and the Commissioners estimated the value of the aggregate fund, both stock and cash, at, in round figures, £1,500,000. In making this calculation, they undoubtedly overlooked the fact, that a part of the stock (less, however, than a moiety) consisted of Reduced £3 per Cents, which are of somewhat less value than Consols. The price of Government stock, moreover, has since fallen about £3 per cent., and making due allowance for this depreciation, the produce of the aggregate fund, if the whole of the stock were now sold, would probably not much exceed £1,400,000, as stated in the "Minute." On the other hand, it must be recollected that the scheme does not contemplate or involve an immediate sale of the whole stock. The sales would be made gradually, and from time to time, as the works proceeded, and would probably be spread over a period of from five to seven years; and as it is impossible to say that, during this interval the funds might not again advance in price, so there might thus be a considerable increase in the ultimate produce of the fund. The "Minute," however, alleges that the portion of the fund which consists of cash (being that referred to in the report as Fund E, and which, it seems, has since the date thereof increased to £105,773) is not properly available for the intended purpose, and must therefore be deducted. So deducted, and taking the present prices of Government stock as the basis of calculation, the amount actually available would be reduced to £1,311,000, and this is the only sum which the "Minute" assumes to be now at the disposal of Parliament. The ground on which Fund E is thus proposed to be struck out of the account is this,—that it has arisen from surplus fees of the common law courts,—that these surplus fees are by the Nisi Prius Act (15 & 16 Vict. c. 73) directed to be carried to the Consolidated Fund,—and consequently, that Fund E, which represents the past accumulation of such surplus, belongs by law to the exchequer, and constitutes a portion of the general public revenue.

The Minute states that "for some reason, which is not explained, a former Board of Treasury directed the surplus fees of the common law courts to be retained in the hands of the paymaster-general, and hence the accumulation of the sum described in the report as Fund E." The explanation of the fact here referred to can be very readily supplied. When it was found that the fees taken in the common law courts were far more than sufficient to defray the expenses for which they were avowedly levied, and that there was a considerable surplus, application for their reduction was made to the proper authorities by the Incorporated Law Society, (on behalf of the general body of the profession practising in those Courts). It was represented that, admitting it to be right to exact fees from suitors to meet the expenses, or a part of the expenses, of carrying on the business of the Courts, it was a violation of every sound principle to tax them for the ordinary purposes of the State,—in other words, that the administration of justice was not a legitimate subject of general taxation. The Treasury of that day admitted the justice of these representations, and while they declined to reduce the fees, until it had been ascertained whether, upon an average of years, they were adequate in amount to cover current expenses, they directed the ascertained surplus to be treated as in the nature of a suspense account, and to remain in the hands of the paymaster-general until its ultimate appropriation should be determined on. The accumulation of the surplus thus went on from year to year, until it reached the amount referred to in the report of the commissioners, who were unanimously of opinion that there could not be "a more legitimate application thereof than towards the completion of a scheme from which the suitors at common law will derive the most essential advantage." The argument of the "Minute," that the Fees of Common Law Courts cannot be considered as a "fund properly applicable to providing buildings for the Court of Chancery, or the Court of Probate," is utterly unsound and fallacious, and is completely at variance with the whole tenor of the report. If it were true, it would follow that, by parity of reasoning, the fees of the Court of Chancery could not properly be applied to providing buildings for the courts of law; and in that case, no part of funds B and D,—which have arisen exclusively, the former from the profitable use of the money of suitors in chancery, the latter from fees paid by them,—would be available for the purposes of the proposed scheme. But such a conclusion would strike at the very root of the commissioners' report, and if admitted, would prove, not that the fund is inadequate, but that there is no fund at all. And if this be so, then the report of the commissioners is a farce,—the act of the Government in bringing in the two Bills now before Parliament, which purport on their very face to be founded on that report, was a mockery and a delusion, and the cost incurred in their preparation a waste of the public money.

Assuming, then, that the present accumulation of the fees in question (£105,773) may properly be dealt with for the purposes of the scheme, and adding that sum to the value of the stock, there would be an aggregate fund of more than £1,400,000 immediately available for the proposed object, and the deficiency would be reduced from £500,000 to less than £100,000. Considering the primary importance of the object,—the provision of suitable courts for the administration of justice to all the subjects of the realm—it might have been thought that even the larger of these sums would, after all, have been no more than a reasonable contribution from the funds of the state; more especially as, by the execution of the proposed scheme, a very large sum, which must otherwise be expended in the erection of proper buildings at Doctors' Commons for the Courts of Probate and Divorce, including a fire-proof depository for wills, will be entirely saved. But there are other resources, indicated in the report of the commissioners, although not included in their calculations, which will more than cover the apprehended deficiency, and effectually protect the public revenue from the risk of loss. If the full scheme of the commissioners should be carried into effect (and this is the theory on which the "Treasury Minute" is founded), "large and valuable blocks of buildings" (to borrow the language of the commissioners in the 107th paragraph of their report) belonging to the public, and now used for the purposes of the equity courts and offices, would be set free, and might be brought to sale. The value of these buildings and their sites has been carefully estimated, and it amounts to no less a sum than £265,000, without including the Courts of Bankruptcy and Insolvency, which may or may not be comprehended in the proposed scheme. But further, in addition to the buildings referred to, the freehold of which is vested in the public, other buildings are hired for the use of the different courts and their officers, for which rents are paid to the amount of £5,341 15s. per annum. If the proposed scheme be carried into effect, the whole of these rents will be saved, and the capitalised value of the rental thus saved has been estimated by competent authority at £145,000.

If these sums be added together the result will be as follows:—

Saving in respect of courts and offices in Doctors' Commons, no longer necessary (say)	£100,000
Value of land and buildings set free	265,000
Value of rents saved	145,000
	<hr/> £510,000

There remains to be noticed one additional item of large amount which the "Minute" assumes will form a charge on the public, and which arises in the following manner:

The funds B and D, with which the report proposes to deal for the purposes of the scheme, say £1,500,000 stock, now produce an annual income of £45,000. At the date of the report this income was subject, to its full amount, to annual payments in the shape of compensation annuities,—such charge, however, diminishing at the estimated rate of £2,000 per annum by the gradual falling in of the annuities. If the capital of the stock were taken for the purposes of the scheme, it would follow that the income now derived therefrom would cease, and the commissioners recommended that the public should make good the loss thereby occasioned, by an annual charge on the consolidated fund, subject to a gradual abatement as the life compensations charged on the fund fell in. For the purpose of showing the actual burthen which this arrangement would entail on the public, the "Treasury Minute" treats the charge as an annuity of £45,000 per annum, decreasing by £2,000 a year until it is extinguished in 22½ years, and it estimates the value of such annuity at £410,000. Adding this sum to the deficiency of £689,000 above referred to, the total charge for which the public would become liable is shown to be £1,099,000, or in round figures £1,100,000. The whole statement, however, on which this calculation is based may be shown to be entirely fallacious: for, in the first place, it assumes that the whole amount of stock would be sold at once, and thus that there would be an immediate loss of income, and a consequent charge upon the public of £45,000 per annum, at starting. But the fact is, that the sales of stock would be gradually made as the work proceeded, and would be spread over a period of from five to seven years, during the whole of which time the dropping in of the lives of annuitants would year by year diminish the amount of the charge. But, in the next place, there is no just ground for the assumption that, even if the whole stock were sold at once, the demand on the public would be £45,000 per annum, even for a single year. One year only has elapsed since the date of the commissioners' report, and in that year not £2,000, but £5,000, has been saved to the income of the fund by the falling in of compensation annuities,—thus reducing the charge to £40,000 per annum, being the same sum as that assumed by the commissioners, on grounds somewhat different, but the validity of which, the results being the same, we need not stop to discuss. From this sum of £40,000 the commissioners proposed to deduct the surplus fees received in the courts of common law, the Court of Probate, and the High Court of Admiralty, amounting together to £24,000 per annum, and which, as they were received by the public, they conceived might be fairly and properly set off against the new charge thrown on the public by means of the proposed scheme, and which would thereby be reduced to £16,000 per annum. The propriety of this deduction is challenged by the Treasury Minute on grounds, the validity of which has already been discussed in a former part of this paper, when dealing with the question of the applicability of fund E to the objects of this scheme. There are those who contend that no taxes or fees should be taken from suitors upon any pretext, or for any purposes; and this was the opinion expressed by the Master of the Rolls not many days since, in his evidence before the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the pending Bill. His Honour on that occasion referred to "the very celebrated pamphlet of Mr. Jeremy Bentham on Law Taxes, which produced so great a sensation, and put an end to making the courts of law a source of revenue to the public;" and his Honour added, that the reasoning of the pamphlet "applied precisely to the taxes now levied, though essential to the maintenance of the courts as at present established." Without adopting this opinion to its full extent, and admitting that fees may properly be levied on suitors, in order to aid in maintaining the courts whose aid they invoke, it is conceived that no one can be found at this time of day to assert that suitors, as such, should be taxed, whether by fees or otherwise, for the general purposes of the State. And yet this would be the obvious result if the propositions put forward in the minute were to be carried into practical effect. If, then, the surplus fees, hereafter to be received in the courts of law and of probate are brought in aid of the scheme, the result to the public will be as follows:—It appears from the Treasury minute that the surplus for the last year was—

From courts of law	£17,519
From Probate Court	29,000
	<hr/> £46,519

There is no reason to anticipate any falling off from either source, the probability being the other way. But, assuming that the fees remain stationary, it is manifest that there would be no demand on the public, even on the hypothesis that the whole stock, constituting funds B and D, were immediately sold, and the whole income of £45,000 per annum now arising therefrom were at once to cease.

The Times, in a clever article in favour of the proposed scheme, thus observes upon the recent "Treasury Minute."

"My Lords' of the Treasury, who had been watching the fortunes of the fight from a serene eminence, descended, like the Homeric gods, not indeed to give victory to either side, but to appropriate to themselves all the prizes and spoils of battle. Nothing could be more skillful than the selection of the time for their intervention. There had been a 'Site Bill' and a corresponding 'Money Bill' before Parliament, a commission and a committee had reported in favour of this application of the funds, two governments had virtually committed themselves to it, and public opinion had emphatically recognised its legitimacy, when 'my lords' struck in with a Treasury Minute, warning the nation that the cost of building would be £500,000 more than had been represented, the available funds nearly £200,000 less, the 'probable deficiency to be provided by vote of Parliament £689,000,' besides an annual charge of £45,000, subject to gradual abatement, and the whole principle of the two Government Bills highly questionable.

"The 'Council of the Incorporated Law Society' have commented in terms which we cannot think too severe on the document. They show that the Treasury figures, so far as they relate to the cost of the site and buildings, are quite conjectural and arbitrary. They analyze in detail the arguments whereby it is sought to show that the two main funds upon which the commissioners rely 'are not free to be dealt with for the object in view,' pointing out that the alternative proposed would amount to a diversion of suitors' fees from objects cognate with those for which they were levied to the purposes of general taxation. They reduce the alleged charge of £45,000 on the Consolidated Fund by a series of set offs to nothing at all, and combat successfully the exquisitely pedantic objections that the surplus fees of the common law courts 'belong by law to the Exchequer,' and that, at all events, they 'cannot be considered as a fund properly applicable to providing buildings for the Court of Chancery or the Court of Probate.' It is difficult to conceive anything more perverse or vexatious than this Minute. Whatever may be said as to the merits of the locality—upon which, of course, it does not touch at all—the financial consequences of the scheme had been thoroughly sifted, and the data for the red-tape exceptions now taken by the Treasury had been in their possession for months. Had the case been as bad as is here made out, the public would cheerfully incur, for the sake of an object of supreme value, a liability incalculably smaller than it has to bear for undertakings the most wasteful and the most useless. But the Law Society has done good service in showing that we may enter on the work with prudence and a good conscience, and that no scruples, except those connected with the convenience and healthiness of the site, need delay its execution."

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

- APPACH—On Aug. 13, at 7, Sussex-terrace, Hyde-park, the wife of Francis Hobson Appach, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a daughter.
- CHRISTIAN—On Aug. 13, at Monkstown, the wife of the Hon. Mr. Justice Christian, of a son.
- CRAWFORD—On Aug. 11, at Leeds, the wife of William Crawford, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a daughter.
- FROOM—On Aug. 15, the wife of Charles P. Froom, Esq., of 29, Orsett-terrace, Hyde-park, of a son.
- HAZELAND—On June 25, at Hongkong, the wife of F. J. Hazeland, Esq., Crown Solicitor, of a son.
- HODGKINSON—On Aug. 13, the wife of Edward Hodgkinson, Esq., Solicitor, 17, Little Tower-street, E.C., of a daughter.
- MORRISON—On Aug. 14, at Reigate, the wife of G. Carter Morrison, Esq., Solicitor, of a son.
- PULLEY—On Aug. 10, at Birkenhead, the wife of William Pulley, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

- ATTREE—CALHOUN—On Aug. 14, T. M. Attree, Esq., of 2, New-inn, Solicitor, to Jane, daughter of the late W. H. Calhoun, Esq., of Arundel, Solicitor.
- BROWNE—REEVES—On Aug. 8, at Monkstown, county Dublin, Charles Orde Browne, Esq., Royal Horse Artillery, to Wilhelmina Frances, daughter of Richard Reeves, Esq., of Dublin, Barrister-at-Law.
- DYMOND—FOX—On Aug. 13, William Philip Dymond, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law, to Florence Amelia, daughter to Francis Ker Fox, Esq., M.D., of Brislington House, near Bristol.
- JOHNSTON—PETERSON—On Aug. 10, Charles Johnston, Captain Royal Artillery, to Annie Augusta, only child of A. T. T. Peterson, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Calcutta.
- PIERCE—MILWARD—On Aug. 7, John Timbrell Pierce, Esq., of Gray's-inn, to Mary, daughter of Henry Milward, Esq., of Redditch.
- SMITH—JONES—On Aug. 6, Harry Smith, Esq., Advocate, Edinburgh, to Julia Medina, daughter of the late Colonel Rice Jones, K.H., Royal Engineers.
- WALLER—HONE—On Aug. 13, the Rev. Stephen R. Waller, M.A., to Albinia, surviving daughter of the late Joseph Terry Hone, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

DEATHS.

- GRAY—On Aug. 3, David Gray, Esq., of 20, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Solicitor.
- MILLINGTON—On Aug. 5, at Bristol, suddenly, Henry Millington, Esq., Solicitor, aged 70.
- SCHOALES—On Aug. 11, at Ballynoe, county Carlow, Katherine Brabazon, daughter of the late John Schoales, Esq., Q.C., Dublin.

Next of Kin.

- PEMBERTON, HARRIETTE, deceased, widow of the late Rev. John Butler Pemberton, deceased, formerly of St. Kitt's, West Indies. Heir-at-law to apply to the Hon. Sholto T. Pemberton, Chief justice of Dominica, West Indies; or to W. England & Co., 5, Great Winchester-street, London, E.C.

Unclaimed Stock in the Bank of England.

The Amount of Stock heretofore standing in the following Name will be transferred to the Party claiming the same, unless other Claimants appear within Three Months:—

- FELL, JANE, Spinster, Tavistock-street, Covent-garden, £69 Long Annuities.—Claimed by JOHN FELL, the surviving executor.

WHY BURN GAS IN DAYTIME? Use Chappuis' reflectors; they diffuse day light in dark places. The patentee and manufacturer is Mr. Chappuis 69, Fleet-street.—ADV.

London Gazettes.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

TUESDAY, Aug. 13, 1861.

MARLAND, GEORGE, & J. BROUGHTON EDGE, Attorneys, Solicitors, and Conveyancers, Bolton-le-Moors and Manchester; by mutual consent. May 31.

POOLE, HENRY DAVIS, HENRY JOHNSON, & CHARLES HENRY KIRCAID, Attorneys and Solicitors, 9 & 10, New-square, Lincoln's inn, Middlesex; by mutual consent. Aug. 9.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

TUESDAY, Aug. 13, 1861.

UNLIMITED IN CHANCERY.

HEREFORD AND MERTHYR TYDVIL JUNCTION RAILWAY COMPANY.—V.C. Stuart has ordered a call of £12 10s. per share on all the contributories; to be paid on Aug. 31, at 12, at 4, Sambrook-court, Basinghall-street.

LIFE ASSURANCE TREASURY.—V.C. Wood: order to wind up, made Aug. 2; Robert Palmer Harding, 3, Bank-buildings, London, appointed interim manager.

RISCA COAL AND IRON COMPANY.—Master of the Rolls: call of £75 per share on all contributories on the list, to be paid on Aug. 24, at 11, to James Edward Coleman, the official liquidator, 16, Tokenhouse-yard, London.

LIMITED IN BANKRUPTCY.

LANDED INVESTMENT COMPANY (LIMITED).—Mr. Com. Fomblanque will, on Aug. 30, at 12, proceed to settle the list of contributories of this company.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16, 1861.

UNLIMITED IN CHANCERY.

LIFE ASSURANCE TREASURY.—Creditors to prove their debts before V.C. Wood forthwith.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Aug. 13, 1861.

BOYLE, WILLIAM, Jeweller, 28, Cheapside, London. P. Boyle, 8, Well-court, Queen-street, Cheapside, executor. Sept. 1.

BRYAN, ELIZABETH, Spinster, 14, Lonsdale-terrace, Lower Barnes, Surrey. Schultz, Solicitor, 4, Dyer's-buildings, Holborn, E.C. Sept. 20.

CLARK, MARY, Spinster, 25, Hosier-street, Reading, Berks. Sommes & Cooke, Solicitors, Wokingham, Berks. Aug. 31.

COMMERELL, ELISA CHRISTINA, Spinster, formerly of 5, Lower Berkeley-street, Manchester-square, afterwards 9, Chapel-place, Cavendish-square, and late 18, Acacia-road, St. John's-wood, Middlesex. Sadler, Solicitor and Acting Executor, 28, Golden-square, London. Sept. 10.

DUNCAN, LEONARD, Miller and Maltster, Kidderminster, Worcestershire. Saunders, & Son, Solicitors, Kidderminster. Sept. 20.

GRIFFITHS, THOMAS, Glove Manufacturer, 3, Foster-lane, Cheapside, London, and afterwards of 61, London-road, Croydon, Surrey. Clarke, Solicitor, Saddler's-hall, Cheapside. Nov. 20.

HALE, WILLIAM, Gent., Bristol. Strickland, Solicitor, 3, All Saint's-court, Bristol. Oct. 19.

HALL, Sir JOHN, Knight Commander of the Royal Guelphic Order of Hanover, formerly of the St. Katherine Dock House, East Smithfield, London, and afterwards and late of 6, Lansdown-crescent, Kensington-park, Middlesex. Nixon, Son, & Anton, Solicitors, 38, Cannon-street, London, E.C. Sept. 1.

LOAD, FANNY MARIA, Spinster, 3, Jamaica-street, Bristol. Schultz, Solicitor, 4, Dyer's-buildings, Holborn. Sept. 20.

WOOLCOCK, Rev. CLOBERY SALLY, Clerk, Charlestown, St. Austell, Cornwall. Carlyon, Solicitor, St. Austell. Oct. 1.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16, 1861.

ARMSTRONG, ISAAC, Saddler's Ironmonger, 35 and 36, King-street, Snow-hill, London. Fisher, Solicitor, Merchant Taylors' Hall, London. Oct. 20.

ATLEN, WILLIAM, Bonnet Manufacturer, 2 and 3, New-road, Brighton, Attree, Clarke, & Howlett, Solicitors, 8, Ship-street, Brighton. Sept. 29.

BATEMAN, COLTHURST, Esq., Bertholey-house, near Usk, Monmouthshire, and of Stanley-villa, Weston-park, Bath, Somersetshire. White, Solicitor, 7, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury. Nov. 1.

BAYNTON, CHARLES, Esq., a Major in her Majesty's Army, Clayton, Sussex. Attree, Clarke, & Howlett, Solicitors, 8, Ship-street, Brighton. Sept. 29.

BECKWITH, AUGUSTUS ADOLPHUS HAMILTON, Solicitor, St. Martin-al-Palace, Norwich. Hartcup, Solicitor, Bungay, Suffolk. Nov. 21.

BENNETT, JAMES GEORGE, Licensed Victualer, Wick Inn, Hove, Sussex. Attree, Clarke, & Howlett, Solicitors, 8, Ship-street, Brighton. Sept. 10.

BIRD, JOSEPH, Auctioneer and Maltster, Ledbury, Hereford. Moore, Solicitor, Hereford. Sept. 12.

BLANTER, THOMAS, Farmer, late of Meason, Salop. Pallin, Shrewsbury, Solicitor. Sept. 14.

BRETT, THOMAS, St. Dunstan's, Canterbury. Fielding, Solicitor, Bridge-street, Canterbury. Oct. 11.

DICKIN, GEORGE, Wine Merchant, 47, Finsbury-circus, and 29, Queen-street, Cheapside, London. Williamson, Hill, & Williamson, Solicitors, 10, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Middlesex. Oct. 1.

ESDAILE, GEORGE, Gent., Lothian-terrace, Coal Harbour-lane, Camberwell Surrey. Solicitors, M'Leod, Stenning, & Watney, 16, London-street, Fenchurch-street, London. Sept. 17.

FORSTER, JOSEPH, Wholesale and Retail Grocer & Tea Dealer, Brompton Cumberland. Solicitors, Carrick, Lee, & Foster, Brompton. Aug. 30.

GOOD, WILLIAM, Builder, 14, Terminus-road, Brighton. Solicitors, Attree, Clarke, & Howlett, 8, Ship-street, Brighton. Sept. 29.

HILLS, JOHN, Farmer, Earl's Colne, Essex. Turner & Deane, Solicitors, Colchester. Oct. 1.

HOMFRAY, MARGARET, Widow, Cannon Vale, Kingsland, Shrewsbury, Salop. Pallin, Solicitor, Shrewsbury. Sept. 14.

JONES, JOHN, Flannel Manufacturer and Farmer, Llangollen, Denbigh, and of Tanygrraig, Llangollen, Denbigh. T. & C. Minshall, Solicitors, Oswestry. Nov. 1.

PEDDER, SIR JOHN LEWIS, Knight, 8, Bedford-square, Brighton, Sussex. Attree, Clarke, & Howlett, Solicitors, 8, Ship-street, Brighton. Sept. 29.
SMALL, MARTHA, Canterbury. Fielding, Solicitor, Bridge-street, Canterbury. Oct. 11.
WICKENS, WILLIAM, Gentleman's Servant, formerly of Horsham, Sussex, and late of 12, Essex-street, Brighton, same county. Attree, Clarke, & Howlett, Solicitors, 8, Ship-street, Brighton. Sep. 10.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

Last Day of Proof.

TUESDAY, Aug. 13, 1861.

BROWN, CHARLES, Builder, 8, High-street, Hampstead, Middlesex. Brown & Grey, M. R. Nov. 16.
EWBANK HENRY, Gent., Titefield-terrace, Middlesex, late of Bermondsey, Surrey, Manufacturer of Metallic Casks, but formerly of Rotherhithe, Surrey, Rice Merchant, Franks & Ewbank, V.C. Wood. Nov. 1.
GRAVE, LOYD, Widow, Chelmsford, Essex. Jocelyne & Wade, M. R. Nov. 20.
MINSHULL, GEORGE ROWLAND, Esq., Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire, and Bentinck-street, Cavendish-square, Middlesex. Tuvilliers & Dawson, V.C. Kindersley. Nov. 4.
NEWBERRY, RICHARD NICHOLAS, late a Cornet in the Honourable the East India Company's Service at Numarabad, Bombay. Weeding & Newberry, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 3.
SMITH, THOMAS, Farmer & Dealer, St. Whites, Clonderford, East Dean, Gloucestershire. Smith & Hartland, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 1.
THOMAS, JAMES, House Agent, formerly of 88, Paul-street, St. Leonard, Shoreditch, Middlesex, and late of 19, Bath-street, Tabernacle-square, Middlesex, and of Acacia Lodge, Leyton, Essex. Searl & Thomas, M. R. Nov. 25.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16, 1861.

BAGOTT, ROBERT, Esq., Liverpool. Dobson & Faithwaite, M. R. Nov. 7.
DENNE, RICHARD, Gentleman, Rodmersham, Kent. Solly & Solly, M. R. Nov. 23.
GOODRENER, GEORGE, Ships' Ironmonger, Wellclose-square, and Albert-road, Dalston, Middlesex. M. R. Nov. 2.
IRVING, MARGARET, Widow, Workington, Cumberland. Hales & Graham, M. R. Nov. 1.
TURNER, GEORGE SNAPE, Cowkeeper & Milkman, Brunswick-place, Brompton, Middlesex. Rook & Attorney-General, M. R. Nov. 1.
UBANK, JOSEPH, Yeoman, Rosagill, Ship, Westmoreland. Hindson & Ubank, M. R. Nov. 1.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

TUESDAY, Aug. 13, 1861.

ASHWORTH, EMANUEL, JOHN MOORE BOWEN, & JOHN CATTOW, Manufacturers, Marple, Cheshire (Aqueduct Mill Co.). Sol. Fox & Marland, Manchester. July 16.
HEADWORTH, JOHN WORSALL, Millwright & Machine Maker, West Milton, Yorkshire. Sol. Shepherd, Barnsley. July 30.
GERARD, CHARLES, Printer, Stationer, & Newspaper Publisher, Warrington, Lancashire. Sol. Nicholson, Warrington, Lancashire. Aug. 6.
HARWOOD, WILLIAM NORMAN, Linen Draper, West-street, Great Marlow, Buckinghamshire. Sol. Honey, Humphreys, & Honey, 14, Ironmonger-lane, London. July 18.
MARSHALL, JOHN, Butcher, Horncastle, Lincolnshire. Sol. Clitherow & Dee, Horncastle. July 30.
SPENCER, RALPH, Ironmonger, Whittlesey, Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire. Sol. Wilders, Whittlesey. Aug. 8.
TAYLOR, THOMAS, Tailor, White Rock-place, Hastings, Sussex. Sol. Spyer & Son, 8, Broad-street-buildings, City, E.C. July 13.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16, 1861.

COOPER, JAMES, Rag & Waste Merchant, Manchester. Sol. Heath, 41, Swan-street, Manchester. July 29.
CROWHURST, WALTER, Milliner & Lace-maker, 6, Union-street, Plymouth, Devon. Sol. Beer, Devonport. August 13.
DUMMETT, ROBERT, Shopkeeper & Maltster, Braunton, Devon. Sol. Ben-craft, Barnstaple, Devon. August 5.
FOULD, HENRY, Butcher, Wokingham, Berks. Sol. Roberts, Wokingham. July 25.
MENKES, JAMES, Draper, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sol. Vollans, 3, Osborne-street, Kingston-upon-Hull. July 19.
PARSONS, JOSEPH SAMUEL, Leather Seller, Uxbridge, Middlesex. Sol. Burr, 12, Paternoster-row, London. July 16.
PEPPER, JOHN, Grocer & Flour Dealer, Sheffield, Yorkshire. Sol. Broad-bent, Sheffield. Aug. 2.
WOODS, WILLIAM, Cheesemonger, 37, St. John's-road, Hoxton, Middlesex. Sol. Turner, 69, Aldermanbury, London. July 27.
WRIGHT, ROBERT FREDERICK, Grocer and Provision Dealer, Wath-upon-Deane, Yorkshire. Sol. Saunders, Wath-upon-Deane. July 29.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Aug. 13, 1861.

COGSWELL, EDWARD HENRY, & GEORGE DAY, Builders, Peterborough, Northamptonshire (Cogswell & Day). Com. Fane: Aug. 22, at 12.30; and Sept. 20, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. Kingsford & Dorman, 23, Essex-street, Strand. Pet. July 31.
HOSWELL, SAMUEL, Draper & Grocer, Padstow, Cornwall. Com. Andrews: Aug. 27 and Sept. 25, at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzell. Sol. Mason, Sturt, & Mason, 7, Gresham-street, London; or Turner & Hirtzell, Exeter. Pet. July 29.
HUMPHREY, CHARLES, & CHARLES HUMPHREY, jun., Oil Refiners & Candle Manufacturers, 18, Suffolk-grove, Great Suffolk-street, Southwark, Surrey. Com. Fane: Aug. 24 and Sept. 27, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. Combs, 25, Bucklersbury. Pet. Aug. 12.
MOODY, CHARLES, Edge Tool Manufacturer & Cutler, Queen-street, Portsmouth, Southamptonshire. Com. Evans: Aug. 27, at 1; and Sept. 19, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Pownall & Co., Staple Inn; or Edgcomb & Cole, Portsea, Hants. Pet. Aug. 10.
ROBINSON, CHARLES FORBES, Boarding-house Keeper, 16, Sussex-street, Warwick-square, Piccadilly, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 22, at 10.30; and Sept. 11, at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Smith, 30, Denbigh-street, Piccadilly. Pet. Aug. 13.
WILLS, THOMAS, Licensed Brewer & Beer-shop Keeper, Newtown, Alverstoke, Southampton. Com. Fane: Aug. 24, at 11.30; and Sept. 27, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. Godwin, 4, Essex-court, Temple; or Clark, Bishops Waltham. Pet. July 26.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16, 1861.

BELL, THOMAS, and JOHN WISEMAN, Grocers and Provision Merchants, Sunderland (Bell and Wiseman). Com. Ellison: Aug. 22, at 11.30; and Oct. 4, at 12.30; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sol. Harle & Co., 20, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London, and 2, Butcher-bank, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Aug. 12.
BRITTAIN, CHARLES, Builder and Brick Maker, Dacre-hill, Bebbington, Chester. Com. Perry: Aug. 26, and Sept. 16, at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sol. Etty, Cable-street, Liverpool. Pet. Aug. 13.
ELFORD, JOHN EDWARD, Grocer, 1, Cumberland-place, Bayswater, Paddington, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 26, at 12.30; and Sept. 18, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Prall & Nickinson, 19, Essex-street, Strand. Pet. Aug. 14.
EFFS, WILLIAM JAMES, Nursery and Seedman, and Hotel Keeper, Maidstone. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 28, at 11; and Sept. 18, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Tayloe, 4, Scott's-yard, London. Pet. Aug. 14.
GRIFFITHS, ROBERT, Innkeeper, Llantrissant, Glamorganshire. Com. Hill: Aug. 27, and Sept. 24, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sol. Kent, Mitre-court chambers, Temple, London, or D. H. Gooden, Bristol. Pet. Aug. 5.
HAMERTON, JOSEPH, Worsted Manufacturers, Dam Head Mill, Shibden, Yorkshire. Com. West: Aug. 30, and Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sol. Wavell, Philbrick, & Foster, Halifax, or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Aug. 12.
HOPE, HENRY AUGUSTUS, Hay and Straw Salesman, 25, West Smithfield, London, and of 13, Oxford-road, Downham-road, Islington, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 26, and Sept. 18, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Sydney, 46, Finsbury-circus. Pet. Aug. 16.
MILNICH, JOHN, THOMAS WROE, BENJAMIN TAYLOR, & JOHN HOPKIN, Cotton Spinners, Oldham, Lancashire (Milnich, Wroe, & Co.). Sept. 3, and Oct. 15, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. Richardson & Hinnell, Bolton and Manchester. Pet. Aug. 7.
SCIVENER, GEORGE, Provision Dealer, Wigan. Aug. 26, and Sept. 17, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Herniman. Sol. Heywood, Manchester. Pet. Aug. 1.
SIMONS, EDWARD, Lamp Dealer & Italian Warehouseman, 115, Newgate-street, London, and 36, Bull-street, Birmingham, Warwickshire. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 27, at 12.30; and Sept. 11, at 2.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Linklaters & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London. Pet. Aug. 12.
SPARKE, EDWIN HENRY, Wholesale Jeweller, formerly of 17, Houndsditch, London, but now of 10, Great Cornam-street, Russell-square, Middlesex. Com. Evans: Aug. 29, and Sept. 24, at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Reed, 1, Guildhall-chambers, London. Pet. Aug. 15.
TERRY, DANIEL, Engineer, Queen-street, Dover, Kent. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 2, at 12; and Oct. 1, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Murrugh, 18, Warwick-court, Gray's Inn, London. Pet. July 30.
WELLL, EDWARD, Broker, Commission & Insurance Agents, Talbot-chambers, 1, Fenwick-street, Liverpool. Com. Perry: Aug. 26, and Sept. 16, at 11; Off. Ass. Morgan. Sol. Mason, 30, Castle-street, Liverpool. Pet. Aug. 12.
WILD, JOHN CHRISTIAN BENJAMIN, Licensed Victualler, 55, St. Mary Axe, London. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 28, at 11.30; and Sept. 18, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Begbie, 33, Essex-street, Strand, London. Pet. Aug. 12.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16, 1861.

WALTON, WILLIAM PORTER, Corn and Seed Merchant, Kingston-upon-Hull. Aug. 12.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Aug. 13, 1861.

ABBOTT, GEORGE, Machinist, Constitution-hill, Birmingham. Sept. 26, at 11; Birmingham.—BALLANTYNE, ROBERT, Merchant, Liverpool. Sept. 2, at 11; Liverpool.—BELEY, GEORGE, Innkeeper, Highbridge, Somersetshire. Sept. 23, at 11; Bristol.—BRITTAIN, JOHN, Timber & Coal Dealer, Pendleton, Manchester. Sept. 8, at 12; Manchester.—CALCOVORRESE, ANTONIO, Merchant, Manchester. Sept. 5, at 12; Manchester.—COLEMAN, EDWARD, & THOMAS SWINDLELLS, Brokers, Manchester (Brown, Conliffe, & Co.) Sept. 5, at 12; Manchester.—FOSTER, WILLIAM, Cloth Cap Manufacturer, Manchester. Sept. 5, at 12; Manchester.—GREENHALGH, SAMUEL, Confectioner, Bury, Lancashire. Sept. 4, at 12; Manchester.—KELLAND, GEORGE, jun., Grocer & Tea Dealer, Lancaster. Sept. 4, at 12; Manchester.—M'CLURE, JAMES, jun., Warehouseman, Manchester. Sept. 3, at 12; Manchester.—SILLAR, DAVID, & JOHN CHARLES SILLAR, Merchants, Liverpool, and Shanghai, China. Sept. 3, at 11; Liverpool.

FRIDAY, Aug. 16, 1861.

ARONST, JOHN, Innkeeper, Rainbow Tavern, Fleet-street. Sept. 7, at 12; Basinghall-street.—ASHWORTH, HANDEL, Machine Broker & Cotton Manufacturer, Dukinfield, Chester. Sept. 10, at 12; Manchester.—BLAKE, HENRY, Corn Merchant & Maltster, Shide, near Newport, Isle of Wight, and Brewer, Portsea, Hants. Sept. 7, at 12; Basinghall-st.—BREW, WILLIAM, Tailor & Draper, 11, Tarlton-street, Liverpool, Lancaster. Sept. 9, at 11; Liverpool.—CHALELEY, WILLIAM SEABROOK, Ship Owner and Coal Merchant, Liverpool. Sept. 9, at 11; Liverpool.—DUMPREY, JOHN, Grocer & Flour Dealer, Hockley-hill, Audenshaw, Lancashire. Sept. 11, at 12; Liverpool.—FOWLER, WILLIAM, and THOMAS SANDERSON, Insurance Brokers for the Sale of Ships, and Forwarding Agents, Liverpool (Fowler & Sanderson). Sept. 9, at 11; Liverpool.—LEWIS, THOMAS, Draper, Nantwich, Cheshire. September 24, at 11; Liverpool.—M'NULTY, JAMES, and JOHN M'NULTY, Joiners and Builders, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancashire. September 11, at 12.—SHORT, STEPHEN SAM, Boot & Shoe Manufacturer, 33, Shoreditch, Middlesex. Sept. 9, at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—PARIS, GEORGE JAMES, and PARIS, WILLIAM HENRY THOMAS, Provision Merchants, Liverpool (Paris, Brothers). Sept. 9, at 11; Basinghall-street.—SHERBEN, EDWARD RICHARDS, Builder, 6, Richmond-villas, Westbourne-grove North, Bayswater, Middlesex. Sept. 9, at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—STEVENS, GEORGE, Merchant, 16, Great St. Helens, London. Sept. 9, at 12; Basinghall-street.—STUART, JOHN, Draper, High-street, Portsmouth, Southampton. Sept. 9, at 12; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS, WILLIAM, Tailor & Outfitter, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Aug. 30, at 12; Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

* Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher

ERRATUM.—In the article entitled "Evidence in Criminal Cases," ante, p. 664, in reference to Mr. Worsley's pamphlet on that subject, an error occurs in the fifth sentence. The phrase "The author impugns these propositions, and also Mr. Taylor's application of them," should have been, "The author impugns Mr. Taylor's application of these propositions."

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, AUGUST 24, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

The annual meeting of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association is announced to take place on Tuesday, the 8th, and Wednesday, the 9th, of October next, at Worcester. The programme consists of a meeting at eleven o'clock on Tuesday at the lecture room of the Worcestershire Natural History Society, in Foregate-street; a dinner at the Guildhall at six o'clock on the same day, at which Mr. Torr, the president of the association will preside; and a further meeting in the Natural History Society's room, on the following day at eleven o'clock. The Worcester and Worcestershire Law Society have appointed Mr. Marcy as president, and Mr. John Stallard as secretary of the local committee. It is requested that intimations on the part of members proposing to attend the meetings and join the dinner will be sent to the latter gentleman. The Secretary, Mr. Rickman, again urges on the country members of the Association the importance not only to the society but to the profession at large, of full attendance and active support on their part, and we have no doubt that his representations will meet with a cordial response. Many subjects connected with the conduct of the affairs of the Association require to be illustrated and supported by the aid of local opinion; and in this, as in all similar matters, co-operation can only be effected by contact and comparison of views. The delightful neighbourhood of Worcester will present many attractions to the London members of the Association, and the necessary arrangements for promoting an assemblage from all quarters by railway have been made by the committee. A list of subjects is again submitted, on which papers are invited. The new Bankrupt Act heads the list, which, in other respects, is the same as last year; the remaining headings being as follows:—Professional Remuneration; Criminal Law Consolidation; Chancery Evidence; Legal Education—the Preliminary and Intermediate Examinations; Fusion of Law and Equity; Mining Leases; Appointment of a Minister of Justice; Offices of Executor and Trustee; County Court Jurisdiction; Partnership en commandité—should it be legalized here? Registration of Partnerships; Corrupt Practices at Elections; Joint Stock Companies; Local Tribunals of Commerce and Councils of Prud'hommes; Admiralty Court; Divorce Court; Local Government Legislation; Grand and Petty Juries—the principle of Unanimity; Law of Libel; Judgments—Lord St. Leonards' Act of 1860; Appeal in Criminal Cases; Registration of Titles—Registration of Deeds; Whether a Union of the two branches of the Legal Profession would be advantageous to the Public? To these suggestions we may perhaps venture to add the new question of the Law of Evidence.

It is also announced that on Wednesday, the 9th of October, a meeting of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association will be held at Worcester, at ten o'clock, which will lend additional interest to the proceedings of the Association. It will be remembered that a question as to the investment of the capital of that Association stands adjourned from the meeting in April last, upon which, as well as upon other important matters, the views of the assembled members will have to be ascertained.

A proposal for a further change in the law of evidence has been brought forward. The question has long engaged the attention of law reformers; it now seems likely to be submitted in the shape of a distinct proposition to the profession and the public. The suggestion is, that the competency of parties to be examined as witnesses shall be extended to criminal cases. Lord Brougham, in his opening address at the Social Science Congress, introduces the subject by reference to the Act which he succeeded in carrying in the year 1851, for the examination of parties in civil suits. He says:—

Above twenty years before I had strongly urged the change of the law of evidence in this and other respects. Various improvements had been effected rather by judicial decision than by statute—by what Mr. Bentham used to call "judge-made law." Then in 1843, Lord Denman carried a bill for removing the objection of interest to a witness's competency, which I had in vain proposed fifteen years before. In 1842 the proposal was renewed that, all objection of interest proposed to be removed, the parties should themselves be made competent. But the bill passed confined to witnesses not being made parties. It was foretold by the objectors that perjury would be increased. The Act passed, and there was no increase of perjury. I then brought in the bill for the examination of parties, and it passed without much opposition, though the Chancellor of the day resisted it, and had it referred to a select committee. But I never should have carried it had not the first step been taken by the bill of 1843, and the experience under that Act showed how safely we might go further. The Law Amendment Society, the precursor and the ally of our National Association, examined minutely the working of the County Courts Act in the examination of parties. It circulated queries to all the judges of those courts, and their answers proved wholly favourable to the plan. I had thus for the bill the powerful support of actual experience for several years; and I now have hopes of being able to complete the great change by a further step, extending it to criminal cases, at least so far as giving the defendant an option of being examined if he pleases, and of course submitting himself to the sifting of cross-examination.

The project has already been discussed in one of the daily newspapers, and is likely to attract a larger share of non-professional attention than any legal change which has been proposed of late years. We cannot expect that so great an innovation upon the traditional course of public justice will be permitted to take place without opposition. Rules of law which have been rooted by centuries of uninterrupted usage in the minds of the people, are not likely to yield at the first blow to the stroke of reform, although we have been, to some extent, familiarized with great changes, and have seen, in many cases, the salutary effects of amendment. The universal objection which presents itself to this, as to all former movements in the same direction, is the prospect that temptations will be held out to perjury—a misgiving which we think experience has, on the whole, tended to allay; and which may be expected ultimately to subside altogether. A criminal, it may easily be supposed, will hesitate before he risks his chance of detection by a voluntary statement of what is false, even if he be callous to the additional crime of giving false witness. An innocent man, on the other hand, will, in most cases, come to the conclusion, and rightly, that his own evidence will more clearly establish his innocence than the testimony of others. The consciousness of this universal attribute of innocence will perhaps induce the guilty man in many instances to submit to be examined, for fear that his silence should prejudice him, and be interpreted as a sign of his guilt. So far, however, the relaxation would be favourable to the cause of innocence, whilst it would add to the embarrassments of the criminal by placing before him a choice of evils. We will take, for example, the case of Mr. Hatch. No doubt it was in one respect exceptional. Evidence for the defence was not called, and no one can say, if Mr. Hatch's witnesses had been called, that the jury would not have acquitted him, and that justice would not have been done on the first indictment. But whilst the case does not establish the necessity for the proposed change, it yet furnishes a remarkable instance of a criminal trial, in which the admission of the defendant to become a witness in his own cause would have, in all probability, prevented the perpetration of what we now believe to be a grievous wrong. It is impossible, however, that so vital a change, involving such an entire re-construction of the theory of defence in criminal suits, can be accomplished without the fullest reflection. We invite the attention of our experienced readers to this most important subject, feeling assured that it is one which must before long largely attract public discussion.

PARLIAMENTARY PAPERS OF THE SESSION RELATING TO LAW AND LAWYERS.

II.

3. POLICE AND CRIMINALS.

The good old "crown's quest" might fitly begin a section on the execution of the criminal law; but the return made, upon an address of the House of Commons, of coroners inquests in the metropolis (H. C. 247) was intended to throw light on the practice of murder of a particular kind, rather than on the legal procedure itself. In the early part of the year, when a complaint of the fewness of marriages was rising from a class where they are a luxury, some startling statements were current of the number of bodies of poorer children, recently born, and apparently put to death with violence, that were found in the different parishes of London. The paper is confined to inquests in the metropolitan district on the bodies of infants from the end of 1855 to the end of 1860, with a statement of the parish, age, sex, and verdict in each case. The list for these five years extends to seventy-six pages; the total number of the inquests being 3,901. Taking a page at a venture, which contains seventy cases in the various parishes, we find "wilfully murdered" set down against thirteen; in the next two pages, the same words opposite four and fifteen cases respectively; which would give thirty-two murders out of 210 of the deaths. In many other cases, it is noted that the circumstances of the death are unknown. All these wilfully murdered children are described as newly born. Let England remember these numbers when it thanks Heaven it is not as other countries are, and has no houses of charity at whose wickets mothers, who ought to be maids, can leave their babes at nightfall unharmed.

The Metropolitan Police (H. C. 200) increased from 5,217, in March, 1857, to 5,272, in March, 1859; in the next year the number was 5,188, and in March, 1861, 5,279 together with 462 employed under the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 135, in her Majesty's yards. Of the force in the counties and boroughs the fourth report (H. C. 67), under the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 69, has been made for the year ending September, 1860, by Major Cartwright, inspector for the Eastern Counties, Midland, and North Wales district; Colonel Woodford, for the Northern District; and Captain Willea, for the Southern. The Rutlandshire force is one chief constable and four constables, yet in the year no fewer than 20,132 casual lodgers and vagrants slept at the common lodging houses in Oakham and Uppingham, and 562 vagrants were relieved at the union. In Oxford, the University undertakes the night duties. The extra duties of the constabulary fall under the heads of inspectors of weights and measures, inspectors of common lodging houses, assistant relieving officer for vagrants, inspector of nuisances, high constables, serving summonses for coroners, and deputy surveyors of highways. Major Cartwright advocates throwing prosecution expenses on the local authorities. One prisoner in Northamptonshire had cost the country thirty-two prosecutions. The forces in the respective districts are 4,179, 5,310, and 4,004.

By the 5 and 6 Will. 4, c. 38, power is given to a Secretary of State to appoint a number of persons, not exceeding five, to inspect, either singly or together, every gaol or other place for the confinement of prisoners; also power to authorise any person or persons to inspect any such place upon any occasion. Mr. Sydney Turner, inspector of the certified reformatory schools of Great Britain, in June last reports a continuance of the sensible diminution of juvenile crime since the establishment of these schools—the numbers of young offenders in England and Wales for the years ending September, 1859 and 1860, being 8,913 and 8,029. But as this decrease might be attributed to an earlier preventive education, the numbers of commitments of offenders above sixteen years old are shown to have steadily decreased in four years from 112,322 to 92,585. Taking the increase of population into account, the decrease of the crimes of boys and girls in five years is stated at 40 per cent.; in grown persons, at 12 per cent. It is remarkable that the latter decrease did not show itself until the former had had time to bear on the supply of older criminals. The inmates of the reformatories themselves have increased from 3,222 in December, 1859, to 3,712 in December, 1860. This the inspector attributes to the admission of a great number of children, under twelve, on first conviction—an inconvenience which will, he hopes, be remedied by the industrial schools. He recommends the following three rules:—that no boy be committed to a reformatory on a first conviction, unless an orphan of whom the parish could not, or could not be required, to take charge; that every boy convicted for the second or third time should be committed to the reformatory for at least three years; that the parent, unless a widow or disabled, should contribute something, however small. Girls appear as criminals at a later age than boys. As they ought to be entirely separated from vicious influences, they should be placed in a reformatory on first conviction. The system is successful. It appears by the returns to the inspector from the managers of the schools, that of 1,000 boys discharged in England up to the end of 1859, above 600 are known to be doing well, 120 have been again convicted, and 100 are doubtful characters. Of girls, the proportion known to be doing well is about 40 per cent. only. The majority of relapses take place among those who are returned to their friends or relatives. Placing the boy or girl out on licence (ticket of leave) for a year has succeeded. Contribution from parents in England has increased; it amounted to £2,234 11s. 3d. for 1860. The payment by the Treasury was £46,735 12s. 4d. Cases of ill-usage and improper punishment have occurred at the large reformatory at Redhill. What they were is not stated, though the object of a report should be to enable Parliament to form its own opinion. The number of reformatories in England (including Wales) is 48, with accommodation for above 2,600 boys and 570 girls. With reference to the industrial schools, we may here notice the report (H. C. 460) of the select committee appointed to inquire how the education of destitute children may be most efficiently assisted by any public funds. For children who have acquired criminal or vagrant habits, the committee does not recommend any such provision until the industrial schools measure has been tried. Ordinary ragged schools, if they give industrial training, may have certain allowances from the Privy Council for rent and raw materials.

The decrease which the report on reformatories states to have taken place in the number of prisoners is supported by the statement of Mr. J. G. Perry, in the 26th report of the inspectors of prisons, that in the houses of correction in Middlesex and Surrey the commitments, which underwent reduction to the amounts respectively of 4,802 and 2,106 in the two previous years, have in the last year been further reduced respectively by 1,365 and 479. Notwithstanding that productive labour is found more beneficial as a reforming agent than other labour, and aids the rates by large pecuniary receipts, there are still many large prisons in which it is a matter of difficulty to find work even for those who are sentenced to hard labour. This report embraces the southern district; and exhibits in a separate notice of each prison the number of the prisoners, distinguishing between males and females, committed in the last year, the average daily number, and the greatest number at one time; the annual ordinary charge per prisoner; a classification of the prisoners, whether for trial or committed, &c.; and their employment. Maidstone county gaol, which has the largest daily average, 500, may be selected as an example. The annual charge there per prisoner is £21 10s. Among the number are 136 summary misdemeanants, 207 convicted of felony, and 67 misdemeanants convicted at assizes or sessions. The trades of the commoner kinds are carried on in the prison. There were 75 prisoners at the treadmill, which is used in grinding corn for the county prison and lunatic asylum. In the year ending Michaelmas, 1859, the infirmary cases were 429; the slight cases seen by the surgeon, 11,208; cases of insanity, 9—contradicting, says the report, the common belief that this malady is of more common occurrence in prisons on the separate system than where the prisoners are associated. All persons registered as Roman Catholics are allowed and required to attend Divine Service of their Church on Sundays. Mass is performed for the males in the manufactory in the presence of an officer. The priest converses with the females in their cells, a female officer being in attendance in the corridor, near the cell door, which is kept ajar, so that the prisoner is not in sight of the officer. The report observes that it would be more in accordance with the gaol Act if the officer did not lose sight of the prisoner during the interview. This is effected in some prisons by means of a door of thick glass, which intercepts the sound of the voices. Ten prisoners were in punishment cells on bread and water. There had been eight floggings in the year. On two boys, one sixteen and the other fourteen, the punishment had been inflicted with the cat. Not only was this contrary to custom, but the scars made the persons inadmissible in after life into the army. In several of those awards of punishment it was not stated that the evidence was taken on oath as required by law. One prisoner had been put in irons until further notice, contrary to 2 & 3 Vict. c. 56, s. 6. In the notices of most of the other prisons such points as those observed at Maidstone are not touched upon, and there is in this report generally a want of systematic information as to the religious and moral influences brought to bear upon the prisoners, particularly such as are not of the Established Church, the punishments and rewards, the cases of sickness, the diet of the prisoners, their hours of work and relaxation, and the social position and attainments of the prisoners. If Parliament depends on this little octavo of forty-four pages for its information on such matters as to all the prisons of the southern district, legislative knowledge must be lacking as to some of them, and must be very meagre and perfunctory as to others.

On the particulars of the corporal punishments inflicted in the gaols and houses of correction in the United Kingdom, both the Lords and the Commons have addressed for, and received, returns (H. L. 65; H. C. 3) for the period of the last three years. From the Lords' paper it appears that the total number of floggings in England was 838, the counties of Cumberland, Huntingdon, Monmouth, and Rutland, having an honourable "nil" against them. In Wales, Denbigh and Montgomery are the two only flogging counties, with a total of 16 cases between them. The offence is specified in this return, also the number of lashes, whether public or private, the prisoner's age, by whom the flogging was inflicted; and further, the names of the visiting justices who ordered it, the date of the order, and the names of the justices, surgeons, and other persons present. We find a boy of eight receiving twenty-four lashes with the birch. At Faversham, two boys of nine—let our readers keep their stomachs—are cut with fifteen lashes of the cat, one by the order of J. B. Sharp and E. Garraway, Esqs., the other by that of S. G. Johnson and C. Bryant, Esqs.; the surgeon also being an E. Garraway, Esq. Elsewhere children of ten have forty-eight lashes with the birch, and a boy of eleven, brought out, it seems, to be stripped a second time and re-scarred, has twenty and fourteen with a cat. At Newcastle Gaol a child of eight is flogged with eight lashes of the cat by order of C. E. Ellison, Esq.; it was not thought worth while, apparently, to keep a record of the persons present at this lashing. Such was generally the case at this prison, at which there were nearly 100 cases of flogging out of the whole 838, and all, strange to say, accounted for by the one word "larceny." At Shepton Mallet, in Somersetshire, there is nothing under twenty-four with the cat. Two of the boys there were ten years old, one of whom had thirty lashes. The ages of all were between ten and sixteen. A boy there of fourteen received eight-and-forty lashes with the cat; but then, we are told that these punishments were slightly given, and that no blood was drawn. Actually, a child of seven, at Petworth gaol, of which the Duke of Richmond and the Earls of Chichester, March, Winterton, and Egmont were visiting justices, received thirteen lashes with the cat, but by whose order is not disclosed. Then why talk of doing away with such flogging in the army or navy?—unless, indeed, the strong arm of martial law put aside the cat as childish. At any rate, why send a schoolmaster to prison for two months with hard labour for wealing a young lad with a cane? As another phase of this prison practice, men of forty and fifty years of age are flogged with a birch rod "on the bare breech."

The boys thus, at an age when the flesh as well as the heart is "waxen" to take an impress, having been endorsed for life with the scores of infamy, will in due time rank among the inmates of the convict prisons. In May last (H. C. 278), the number of prisoners at Brixton, Chatham, Dartmoor, Fulham, Millbank, Parkhurst, Pentonville, Portland, Portsmouth, and Woking, was—males, 5,890; females, 1,175. Since the 1st of January there was a decrease of 918 (H. C. 99). As many as 850 took part in the outbreak at Chatham. A paper (H. C. 125) shows the crime, sentence, date of conviction, general prison character, class, and amount of gratuity to 1st of February, of each of them. The very first page of it is sufficiently striking. Out of 82 men 14 had been "exemplary," 31 "very good," and 22 "good" and "moderately good" and only 9 are returned as "very bad" or "bad." Casting our eyes over the other pages, we see exemplary, very good, and good, set against by far the most names. At p. 7, for instance, no less than 62 are very good, and at p. 9, 67. This paper also contains copies of orders issued on the occasion by the directors of convict prisons.

By the returns published a short time since, it appears that in the year 1860, 212 petitions were filed for dissolution of marriage, only one less than in 1859; and there were 62 petitions for judicial separation, 18 less than in the previous year. There were 13 applications for restitution of conjugal rights in 1860. 141 causes were tried. The fees received amounted to £2,490.

The Courts, Appointments, Promotions, Vacancies, &c.

MANSION HOUSE.

Aug. 20.—William Balduino was charged with embezzling the sum of £14 0s. 4d., the property of his employers.

Mr. William R. Turner said,—I am partner in the firm of Preston and Turner, solicitors, of 16, Water-lane, Great Tower-street. The prisoner was our clerk. On the 13th of June last I gave him £11 to pay administration duty at the Probate Office for a client, which he has entered in his book as having been paid by him. My suspicions having been aroused from other circumstances, I made inquiries, and found that he had not done so, and I now produce the papers, which have never been stamped. A £1 stamp should have been on the bond, and one for £11 on the grant. At the time the £11 was given to him he also received £3 10s. from the cashier, and should have paid, in addition to the above duties, 16s. 6d. for court fees, 2s. 6d. for the affidavit, and 1s. for the receipt, none of which have been paid; I spoke to him on the subject last Tuesday, when he told me he had lost the money. I find in the prisoner's book that he has charged £1 for stamping a bond on the 12th of June, which was the day he entered our service. I now produce the bond, which is unstamped. Since the prisoner has been in custody I have received a letter from him, asking us to forego the prosecution and offering to refund the money.

Mr. George Laverick, a clerk in the prosecutors' office, proved the payment of the money to the prisoner for the purposes above stated.

The prisoner, who said he should reserve his defence, was committed to the Old Bailey for trial.

Mr. Baron Wilde, who has been presiding in the Nisi Prius Court at the Liverpool Assizes since they opened on the 12th instant, was compelled on Thursday to adjourn the Court at an early hour in the afternoon, as he was taken exceedingly unwell. At the usual adjournment his lordship was very poorly; and as his indisposition was increasing, Mr. Baron Martin (who was presiding on the Crown side) entered at the resumption of the trial, and announced that his brother Wilde was so much indisposed as to preclude the possibility of his proceeding with the business that day.

James Stephen, Esq., L.L.D., recorder of Poole, has been appointed revising barrister for West Somerset.

Mr. Joseph William Taylor, of Buxton, Derbyshire, has been appointed a commissioner to administer oaths in the High Court of Chancery in England.

Recent Decisions.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

RIGHTS OF MASTER OF A SHIP AGAINST OWNERS—MASTER'S CONTRACTS ABROAD—CHARTERPARTY.

Bristow v. Whitmore, H. of L., 9 W. R. 621.

It is matter of clear law, from the decisions of Hussey v. Christie (9 East. 426) and Smith v. Plummer (1 B. & Ald. 575) downwards, followed by Atkinson v. Cotesworth (3 B. & C. 647), that neither upon a ship, nor upon the freight of a ship, has the master any lien as against the owner in respect of money expended or of obligations incurred by him on account of the ship, either in fitting her out for the voyage, in repairs, in providing stores or necessaries for the voyage, in payment of seamen's wages, or "for other disbursements which he has made during the voyage" (4 De G. & J. 333), however necessary (9 W. R. 622). His assertion of lien on behalf of the owner is another thing, but as against the owner his remedy is a personal one only (Wilkins v. Carmichael, 1 Doug. 101). With regard to the master's own wages, indeed, the rule has been relaxed by the Merchant Shipping Act, and he now has, so far as the case permits, the same rights, liens, and remedies for the recovery of his wages as the ordinary seaman (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 191). There is another case as to which Sir W. P. Wood, V.C., has expressed some hesitation,—the position of a master who has borrowed money to defray the "current expenses" of a ship abroad, and has expended the money for that purpose. The query arises from the absence of authority, and from a passage in the judgment of Lord Ellenborough in Smith v. Plummer; but the doubt appears not to be entertained by either Lord Cranworth or Lord Kingsdown, whose statements on this subject are couched in very general terms (9 W. R. 622); whilst Lord Chelmsford expressly says (4 De G. & J. 336), that it is difficult to consider the question as to "current expenses" to be still undecided.

In Bristow v. Whitmore the application of the above rule would have led to great practical hardship. In this case the master of the ship, on two occasions when at foreign ports, had entered into charter-parties, whereby he agreed to let the ship for the conveyance of troops, undertaking also to make alterations in the vessel, and to provide stores, for which it was expressed that he, the master, was to be paid by Government a certain sum per head for each person so conveyed. One of the charter-parties, in which the master described himself as commander-owner of the ship, was under seal; the other, in which he was described as master of the ship, was not under seal. Having paid money and incurred liability in respect of the cost of altering and victualling the ship, he claimed against the mortgagees of the owner to be reimbursed his expenses as a first payment out of the freight, which had been paid by Government into the Court of Chancery. Now it is evident, that if the master's claim could have been shown by his opponents to have depended on his right to lien on freight, it must, consistently with the above rule, have failed; and, the owner of the ship being bankrupt, the master must have proved for his outlay like an ordinary debtor under the bankruptcy. This view was pressed upon Sir W. P. Wood, but the learned Vice-Chancellor, in language which was afterwards adopted by Lord Chancellor Campbell, treated the master's payments and liabilities as expenses, not on account of the ship, nor even as "current expenses," about which the Vice-Chancellor felt some doubt, but as expenses "entirely and simply in fulfilment of the charter-parties." He considered it a case in which a contract had been entered into by the master for the owner, and performed by the master for the owner; and on the principle of Qui sentit commodum sentire debet et onus, that no one could take the freight without first indemnifying the master. This view was supported by the late Lord Chancellor, who described the plaintiff as not being the master of a ship asking for a lien on freight, but as an agent, who in perfect good faith had entered into a contract on behalf of his principal, which the principal had afterwards ratified. Lord Cranworth also considered it a fallacy to treat this as a question of lien on freight. It was a case, he thought, which was to be regulated, not by shipping law, but by the law of contract as relating to principal and agent. Lord Kingsdown also said that if an agent makes a contract on behalf of his principal, whether with or without authority, the principal cannot both approve and reprobate the contract: he must adopt it altogether or not at all.

From these conclusions Lord Chelmsford, who, when sitting as Chancellor, had overruled the Vice-Chancellor Wood, and also Lord Wensleydale, dissented. The former noble lord, on both occasions, dwelt with earnestness on the circumstance that no dispute had been raised as to the authority of the master to enter into the charter-parties. Lord Wensleydale said, there was no averment in the bill or suggestion in the evidence, that the master had no authority. If there existed any ground for this suggestion, the fact ought to have been averred and proved. Upon the assumption, then, of sufficient authority in the master, the two noble lords proceeded to hold that, the contract being within the authority given by the owner, it was incorrect to talk of the owner adopting it. How could a man adopt his own contract? He was bound by it the moment it was concluded by his authorised agent. That being so, the entering into the charter-party and the loan of the vessel for the transfer of troops was as much part of the regular business of the owner and employment of the ship as the carrying of merchandise. There existed no difference between freight and the fruits of a contract—both were equally ship's earnings; and upon neither ship nor freight could the master, who was the mere servant of the owner, possess any lien. There was no distinction, they held, between an outlay for necessaries on a particular voyage and on an ordinary voyage. The master might have protected himself by entering into a special stipulation with the owner that he should be paid his expenses first out of the freight; but this he had not done.

These being the main arguments of the dissentient minority it is plain that the real difference of opinion among the law lords turned upon quite a new question—viz., whether or not the master was duly authorised to enter into the charter-parties so as to bind the owner. Lords Chelmsford and Wensleydale, who went on the assumption that he was so authorised, distinctly admitted that if the master were to be held to have made the contracts without the authority of the owner, the latter might have sued him for neglect of duty, or might have ratified his unauthorised acts. Lord Kingsdown, whose decision was in favour of the master, was strongly of opinion that the execution of the charter-party was ultra vires; but that, as the owner had adopted it, he could not obtain the benefit of it without first repaying the master his outlay.

The result of Bristow v. Whitmore, therefore, is, in the first place, to confirm the rule of law above stated as to the ship-master's lien against the owner; but, further, to show that a master may, by entering into a charter-party abroad, establish a new relation of principal and agent between the owner and himself, and to the extent of the charterparty put an end to the relation of employer and servant. It is clearly of the highest importance to ascertain what acts on the part of the ship-master will be sufficient to effect this change. In the present case, Lord Kingsdown held (Lords Chelmsford and Wensleydale dissenting), that the contract for conveyance of troops was, under the circumstances, the contract of an unauthorised agent; and the same conclusion must be drawn from the judgments of the other learned authorities; for their reasoning proceeds on the ground that the owners had ratified the contract, and if they were able to ratify the contract, it seems to follow that they might have repudiated it. (See Gibbs v. Charlton, 26 L. J. Ex. 322.) Hitherto it has been laid down that the owners are bound to the performance of any lawful contract made by the master abroad relative to the "usual employment" of the ship (See "Abbott on Shipping," p. 100, MacLachlan, pp. 121—128, and the cases there cited). Bristow v. Whitmore seems to decide that the conveyance of troops at least is not part of the "usual employment" of a vessel, and that the owners may, or may not at their option, ratify the act of their master in undertaking it.

The rights of the master in Bristow v. Whitmore were in a peculiar position. On the charterparty under seal an action or suit could have been brought only in his name. He himself might have brought the action, and recovered the freight. Had he done so, the owner could have sued him only for money had and received; and in such an action he would have been allowed to claim his expenses as a set-off. This also he would have been permitted to do, if he had brought a suit in equity. On the other instrument not under seal the owners might have sued in their own names, and might have recovered the freight without reimbursing the master. Had this been done, Lord Cranworth supposes that in a court of equity the master would have enjoyed the same advantage as he would have had in the former case. Lord Chelmsford, however, appears to think otherwise (4 De. G. & J. 338), and that equity would not go further than the law.

It was further argued by the opponents of the master's claim that he might, if he also wanted money, have hypothecated the ship. But this seems extremely doubtful. The criterion of the right to hypothecate is necessity (MacLachlan, p. 47)—that is to say, absolute failure of personal credit, which did not exist in this case. And why should the parties be put to the expensive process of hypothecation, when the master was in a position to raise the money without paying maritime interest?

It is remarkable that the rule which denies to the master any lien upon the ship or freight for advances is opposed to the provisions of the Roman law, and of the maritime law of most modern nations. Reasons for the existence of this discrepancy were suggested in the course of the litigation in Bristow v. Whitmore. It may have arisen partly from the technical nature of our law of lien, which requires that there shall be possession of the property upon which the lien attaches to enable a party to enforce it. A more powerful reason appears to be, that the rule is intended to preserve the legal provision of the vessel and its earnings at all times in the owner (Green v. Briggs, 6 Haro 395, 404); a result which would be seriously interfered with if the master could detain the ship or its freight on pretence of any claim of his own. In such a case the owner would be deprived of his ship and freight until all accounts were settled with the master.

The simplicity and universality of the general rule is undoubtedly to some extent broken in upon by Bristow v. Whitmore. We have in this case, probably for the first time, an instance of a master of a ship having executed a charter-party abroad, which, whether ultra vires, as Lord Kingsdown supposes, or not, was, at least, not repudiated by the owner, successfully claiming his expenses incurred in the necessary fulfilment of the contract, as a payment out of the freight. The relation of employer and servant has, by acts of the master alone, been put an end to, and a new relation, that of principal and agent, has, to the extent of the contract, been substituted between him and the owner. The decision in Bristow v. Whitmore gives additional security to the rights of the master of a ship, but it does so by an invasion of the doctrine insisted on by Lord Wensleydale—that the ship-master is a mere servant of the owners, acting for their benefit, and it furnishes a remarkable limitation to the principle of law—that the contracts of the master abroad bind the owners. More obvious exceptions to the same rule occur in the cases of Burton v. Sharpe, 2 Campb. 529, and Dewell v. Mozon, 1 Taunt. 391. See also "Story on Agency," sect. 116, and Pickering v. Holt, 6 Greenl. 160.

EQUITY.

RECTIFICATION OF A SETTLEMENT ON THE GROUND OF MISTAKE.

Elwes v. Elwes, L. J., 9 W. R. 307, 820.

By the plaintiff's marriage settlement, executed in 1826, certain manors and lands were settled to the use, inter alia, of the plaintiff for life, remainder to trustees for 2,000 years to secure £20,000 for younger children; remainder to the use of the first and other sons of the plaintiff in tail male; remainder to the use of the plaintiff in tail general; remainder to the use of the plaintiff's father, R. C. Elwes, in fee. In 1852, the plaintiff, having become involved in pecuniary difficulties, applied to his father for assistance, which the father consented to give, provided a re-settlement should be made, under which the estates should descend in the male line. Ultimately, in 1852, the estates were settled, subject to the uses of the settlement of 1826 preceeding plaintiff's estate in tail general, to such uses as the plaintiff's father and himself should jointly appoint, and in default of appointment, to the use of Valentine Elwes, the plaintiff's first son in tail general; remainder to the plaintiff's other sons in tail; remainder to the plaintiff's daughter in tail; remainder as R. C. Elwes should appoint. As R. C. Elwes was anxious that the estates should descend in the male line, and gave the plaintiff a consideration for his concurrence in effecting this, the plaintiff consented that this should be so, provided that the sum of £100,000 should be secured to his daughters. Accordingly, the estates were (subject to the uses precedent to the plaintiff's estate tail) appointed to such uses as R. C. Elwes and himself should appoint, and in default of appointment, to trustees for 1,500 years from the decease of the plaintiff and R. C. Elwes, or on failure of the limitations of 1826, and, subject thereto, to the use of the first and other sons of the plaintiff in tail; remainder as R. C. Elwes should appoint, and, in default of appointment, to R. C. Elwes's other sons successively in tail male; with an ultimate remainder to R. C. Elwes in fee. R. C. Elwes died in 1852. In 1856, Valentine Elwes being about to marry, his estate in tail male in remainder was barred and the estates resettled. The disentailing deed contained a saving of the plaintiff's life estate under the settlement of 1826, and of the trusts of such life estate, as also of the several powers thereto annexed; but neither the disentailing deed nor the settlement contained any mention of the term of 1,500 years which was to secure a sum of £100,000 for the plaintiff's daughters. Previously to the execution of the disentailing deed, the plaintiff and Valentine Elwes signed an agreement (inter alia) to the effect that Valentine Elwes should disentail the reversion of the estates, and limit them (subject to the plaintiff's life interest and powers, and all subsisting charges) to the joint appointment of the father and son, and, subject thereto, to the use of Valentine Elwes for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail, &c. The plaintiff filed his bill, praying that the settlement should be rectified by an insertion of the term of 1,500 years. The plaintiff, as also the agent of both parties, who was consulted as to the terms of the settlement, and the family solicitor, affirmed their belief that the term was omitted by mistake. There was, however, no evidence of any agreement to keep it alive, or even that it had been mentioned while the scheme of re-settlement was being prepared. The decision of Vice-Chancellor Stuart, who dismissed the bill with costs, was accordingly affirmed, on appeal, by the Lords Justices.

That articles are to be more liberally construed even than a will in favour of the beneficiaries was laid down in the case of Trevor v. Trevor, 2 Brown's Parl. Cases, 122, and has never since been contradicted. Thus, limitations in articles giving an estate tail to the husband or the wife, or to both husband and wife if the land be the husband's, are to be executed in strict settlement (vide Fearn's Con. Rem. pp. 93, 94, Ed. 1844), if either the settlement be not prepared until after the marriage, or if it profess to be founded upon the articles. If the settlement, however, precede the marriage, and contain no reference to the articles, its provisions are final, and will be regarded by the Court as rightly declaring the intention of the parties, even though it do not conform to the usual provisions of marriage settlements (Ferne, p. 107). Such a marriage settlement, therefore, is to be construed like any other deed, and will not be altered by the Court in favour of any alleged general intention to provide for the issue. On the other hand, if a mistake have occurred in framing it, so that its terms do not correspond with the intention of the parties declared by them while the settlement was being prepared, it will be rectified, like any other instrument, upon the general ground of mistake. Such a mistake, however, must have been common to both parties. If, as in the principal case, it has been unilateral only, the party who neglected to watch his interests, and to have a stipulation framed to secure the object of his intention, is remediless, vigilantibus non dormientibus subveniunt leges. If, indeed, the precise matter were kept out of his view by the artfulness of the opposite party, such a state of things might give him a locus standi in a court of equity, on the ground of the fraud so practised on him. Fraud, however, is a ground of relief wholly different from that of mistake, and can never be substantiated by the mere fact of an omission of a stipulation not mentioned at the time, and to keep which out of view the other party is not shown to have done any positive act. But a mere mistake, forgetfulness, or negligence, on the part of one party only is, toto calo, different from a case wherein fraud has been practised, or where a mistake has occurred, in not reducing to writing the declared intention of both parties. "No settlement," says the Vice-Chancellor, in the present cases, "has ever been altered or reformed on the ground that a stipulation, which was wished or intended by one of the contracting parties, but never agreed to or even mentioned or brought to the attention of the other of the contracting parties, had been omitted." In such a case the maxim, " caveat emptor," applies. The Court does not make the contracts of its suitors; it merely rectifies the evidences of the terms of those contracts, when these are by mistake imperfectly reduced to writing, and, consequently, differ from the declared intention of the parties.

It may be observed that the daughters of the plaintiff, although they were purchasers under his own settlement as to the sum of £20,000, and even of the sum of £100,000 as regards the plaintiff under the deed of 1846, were not purchasers of the latter sum as against the defendant, because he took an estate tail prior to the limitation to the trustees of the term securing that sum. The circumstances of the case are peculiar, and certainly go far to show that the plaintiff intended to secure this charge for them, although it was nearly one-third of the estimated value of the fee-simple estates. It was carefully bargained for by the plaintiff in 1846, as a compensation to them for his consenting to exclude them from their right to succession under the limitation to him in tail general in the settlement of 1826. But, as it was subsequent to the estate tail of the defendant limited by the settlement of 1826, he should not be presumed to give it priority, especially as the daughters were entitled under their father's settlement to a charge of £20,000 prior to the defendant's estate tail. The prayer of the bill, therefore, should have been, as observed by Turner, L.J., "not to correct the settlement according to the agreement of the parties, but to add to their agreement a provision which had not been determined upon or even agitated between them." The case is a little intricate, owing to the conflicting intentions of the parties; the grandfather, R. C. Elwes, having been anxious that the estates should go in the male line while the father was anxious to provide amply for the daughters, and yet to comply in the main with the wishes of the former. As, however, there was no express stipulation as to the term of 1,500 years and the very considerable sum which it secured throughout the entire negotiation between father and son which led to the settlement of 1857, there is no room to question the soundness of the decision.

COMMON LAW.

PRACTICE—DISCHARGE OF EXECUTION DEBTOR UNDER 48 GEO. 3, c. 123.

Cook v. Beardsall, Exch., 9 W. R. 790.

With reference to this case, it must be remembered that though under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 57, a person cannot be taken in execution for a judgment debt which does not exceed £20 exclusive of the costs, that provision applies only to judgments in action brought for the recovery of a debt, and not for a trespass, assault, and the like. It is to relieve persons in prison who have been taken on such judgments, wherein damages have been awarded under £20, that the statute 48 Geo. 3, c. 123, was passed. The particular point of practice decided in the present case upon this Act has, we believe, been long settled. Indeed, there is an express rule of Court upon the subject, though it does not appear to have been brought before the notice of the Court. We refer to Reg. Gen. H. T. 1853 (Pr.) r. 128, which provides that the rule for the prisoner's discharge under the Act may be made absolute in the first instance, on an affidavit having been filed of notice having been given ten days previously to the application. It has been held that this notice should be served on the plaintiff in the action in which the prisoner is detained, not on the attorney on the record. (See Harris v. Turtle, 8 Mer. & W. 258.) In the present case, it was served on the executor of the plaintiff, the latter having died while the defendant lay in prison.

RESPECTIVE RIGHTS OF PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES AND JUDGMENT CREDITORS.

The Wolverhampton and Staffordshire Banking Co. v. Marston, Exch. 9 W. R. 790.

An important case with reference to the respective rights of judgment and other creditors of a deceased person. A creditor of A. brought an action against his personal representative and obtained judgment therein, whereupon issued a writ of fi. fa. de bonis testatoris. In the interim, however, between the signing of the judgment and the issue of this writ, the defendant had by deed assigned all A.'s property to trustees for the benefit of A.'s creditors generally; and the question then arose upon an interpleader summons, taken out by the sheriff into whose custody the goods came on the execution of the fi. fa., whose title should prevail—that of the trustees, or that of the creditor who had obtained the judgment.

Now, generally speaking, and irrespective of the policy of the bankrupt law (which does not affect the present case, as A. does not appear to have been a trader) a debtor has a right to prefer one creditor to another. Hence, an assignment by deed by a man (not being a trader) of all his effects to one or more of his creditors, or to trustees for their benefit, is good enough, provided, always, that the circumstances of the case do not bring it within the scope of the statute against fraudulent conveyances (13 Eliz. c. 5), which makes void such a deed as against creditors, if made with intent to defraud them. This proposition was discussed and determined as above in the case of Pickstock v. Lyster (3 M. & S. 371), and the doctrine, in fact, governed the present case; for (as observed by the Chief Baron) if a man may make a bona fide assignment of this sort, it follows that his representative may do so also—to which we may add, that the circumstance of one of the creditors having obtained judgment makes no difference, provided he had not levied execution; inasmuch as the property in a defendant's goods and chattels is bound only for the satisfaction of the judgment creditor, from the teste or issuing of the fi. fa. It is to be observed that the Court in deciding in favour of the validity of the assignment intimated that the judgment creditor probably had a remedy against the executor on a devastavit. To explain this, it must be remembered that if an executor or administrator be extravagant in his payment even of necessary expenses incurred after death (as for the interment of the deceased), or misapply the assets coming to him in any particular, it amounts, in technical language, to a devastavit or waste of the substance of the deceased. The mode of proceeding to be adopted by a creditor in such a case is, first of all to sue the executor or administrator, and obtain judgment (as in the present case), and then obtain from the sheriff a return that there are no goods on which a levy can be had; though sufficient goods of the deceased for the purpose came into the hands of the defendant to be administered, which were, before the coming of the writ to the sheriff, by the defendant wasted and converted to his own use. This return will be evidence of a devastavit; and if the execution creditor should afterwards (as he may) commence an action against the executor or administrator on the original judgment, he may have execution thereon against the defendant personally; or else he may sue out a sci. fa. on the judgment in the original action, and then establish the fact of a devastavit by the inquisition of a jury, and require the defendant to show cause to the Court why execution should not issue against him personally.

Correspondence.

ATTESTATION OF WILLS.

Observing a correspondence on this subject in your journal, I trouble you with the following form, which I have used for some years without any objection:—

"Signed by the said A. B., the testator, in the joint presence of us, who jointly in his presence hereto subscribe our names as witnesses."—Yours faithfully,
Plymouth, Aug. 12. GEO. PRIDHAM.

MORTGAGES—DAYS FOR PAYMENT OF INTEREST

I have been largely engaged during the last ten years in the collection of interest monies, and can therefore bear testimony to the great benefit that would result to both solicitor and client by the adoption of a uniform day of payment, as suggested by your correspondent of the 30th ult.

There is much to be said in favour of the 1st of January as pay-day; and the only time, in my opinion, to be preferred is the 20th of March, on which day the income-tax falls due. The calculation of tax being thus simplified, mortgagees would appreciate the new arrangement.

A MANAGING CLERK.

INSURANCE OF TRADE BUILDINGS, &c.

Would any of your readers state what is the practice as to the tenant or landlord insuring buildings—(a manufactory) containing also machinery, turned by water only—which have been agreed, by a memorandum in writing, to be let for a short term, at a net rent for the whole—clear of all deductions, except property tax.

Tenant to keep in repair, and leave premises and machinery in as good condition at the end of term. A schedule and valuation were made and attached, but in the agreement, there is no express mention as to the insurance either by landlord or tenant; but that lease was to be subject to usual covenants in such a case.

J. R.

JUDGMENT DEBT.—INTEREST.

A bill of exchange carrying interest at £5 per cent. should, I think, be considered an agreement within the 76th practice rule of Hilary Term, 1853, so as to entitle the party issuing execution on foot of a judgment entered up thereon to indorse the execution to levy interest at £5 per cent. The agreement, although not express, is implied by law, and is, I think, equally efficacious as an express agreement that the debt should carry £5 per cent. interest.

M.

EXAMINATION OF ARTICLED CLERKS.

Do you think the examiners at the next examination will expect candidates to answer on the recent Bankruptcy Act, which I see comes into operation next October.

As a subscriber, and knowing you are ever willing to render articulated clerks such assistance as lies in your power, I take the liberty of thus troubling you, and by letting me know in your next impression, you will greatly oblige,

AN ARTICLED CLERK.

[We think it in the highest degree probable—a matter almost of certainty—that one or more questions relating to the main provisions of the new Bankrupt Act will be asked at the forthcoming examination. We anticipate, however, that such a question or questions will be confined to the general outlines of the measure, which will at that time, it must be remembered, have come into operation.—ED. S. J.]

Review.

A Treatise on the Law of Inland Carriers. By EDMUND POWELL, Esq., of Lincoln College, Oxford, M.A., and of the Inner Temple and Western Circuit, Barrister-at-Law, author of "A Treatise on the Principles of Evidence." London: Butterworths.

The law of carriers, which is a branch of the law of bailments, has been ably treated of by Story and Angell, as also by Mr.

Smith, under the head of "Coggs v. Bernard," Smith's Lead. Cas., vol. 1, p. 147. In that famous case Holt, C.J., maintained the soundness of the distinction between ordinary and gross negligence; and held that carriers for hire were liable if guilty merely of the former. Mr. Powell seems disposed to concur with Denman, C.J. (Hinton v. Dibbin, 2 Q. B. 646), and with Rolfe, B. (Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 115), in regarding this distinction of cases of negligence as unintelligible, and prefers the use of the word culpable, as it alone, in his opinion, indicates those species of negligence of which the law takes cognizance. We cannot concur in this use, or disuse, of legal terms. Indeed, the use of the word culpable involves a petitio principii, for it cannot be used to designate the conduct of a bailee until his character as a gratuitous or hired agent shall have been first ascertained, the latter being liable to be considered to have acted culpably in many cases in which a gratuitous bailee would have been held innocent. The distinction, in point of law, between carriers for hire and common carriers is, as our readers are aware, that as to the latter the law implies a contract of insurance against all contingencies except tempest or such like natural accidents, and the King's enemies. A common carrier is defined by Story, in his treatise on Bailments, 1495, to be one "who undertakes for hire or reward to transport the goods of such as choose to employ him from place to place." Kent's definition corresponds with this; but Mr. Powell correctly observes that regularity and permanence in the occupation should enter into the definition, inasmuch as even special contracts by hired carriers are less strictly construed than the liabilities of common carriers.

The third chapter of this treatise is an interesting one, as it sets forth the legal liabilities of railway companies, stage-coach proprietors, &c., in respect to the accidents that may befall their passengers. The author distinguishes between booking-office keepers, warehousemen, and common carriers, and illustrates the law applicable to each class by a selection of cases. The seventh chapter, "on the duties of carriers as regulated by special contract and by the Carriers Act (1 Will. 4, c. 68)," traces the law historically, and shows that the Carriers Act was the natural result of the conflict between the common law duties of carriers and their attempts to limit those liabilities by means of special contracts. The Act has rendered a compliance with its conditions by the posting of a notice, &c., an indispensable condition to the limitation of the common law liabilities of carriers; but it still admits of special contracts between the sender and carrier; vide The Belfast and Ballymena Railway Company v. Keys, lately decided by the House of Lords (9 W. R. 793). Mr. Powell notices a seeming conflict of decisions as to the conclusiveness of such contracts; the Court of Queen's Bench, having, in the case of Walker v. York and Midlands Railway Co., held the contract to be special only on the findings of the jury, while the Court of Common Pleas, in the case of York, Newcastle, and Berwick Railway Co. v. Crisp (14 C. B. 527), has treated the contract as manifestly and necessarily special on the terms of the notice used. The author does not state which view he prefers. But, although the effect of the decisions in both courts is the same, yet, as they proceed on different principles, a scientific jurist might naturally be expected to offer some comment tantas componere lites. In the eighth chapter Mr. Powell again declares against the distinction of cases of negligence into ordinary and gross, and yet he inconsistently adds that it is "essential to ascertain and to state clearly to a jury the precise amount of prudence and duty which attach as inseparable incidents to the class of bailees within which the carrier is to be placed." But we cannot see how this classification is to be facilitated in practice by the disuse of established definitions. He admits that there is a distinction between fraud and negligence, the former being characterised by moral, the latter by intellectual, defects. This is a good metaphysical analysis of motives; but the legal effects in a civil point of view between both classes of defects are by no means so distinguishable from each other as are those of ordinary and gross negligence. Mr. Powell notices a numerous class of cases in which it has been held that a carrier is liable for no degree of negligence if it shall have been agreed upon between him and the sender that the conveyance is to be at the risk of the latter. He dissents, justly we think, from the principle on which these cases have proceeded, and which threatens to invert the common law rule as between the sender and the carrier. The eleventh chapter comprises a considerable amount of important matter, too much condensed, perhaps; but it is, nevertheless, stated lucidly and in peripatetic order. It relates to actions against and by carriers; and states the law applicable to the pleadings and evidence, as also to the damages and costs, incident to such cases. The twelfth chapter, on railway carriers, is nearly a summary of the provisions of the various Railway Acts. The author accounts for its comparatively meagre supply of information by the fact that, as railway companies have engrossed the vast proportion of the inland carrying trade of the kingdom, their rights and duties are discussed everywhere throughout the treatise. This reason appears to us rather to indicate an urgent necessity that the various leading Railway Acts should be arranged by practical writers on the law of carriers according to the principles discernible as connecting links in them, in order that a way should "be gradually opened to what the author in the next chapter, on the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, s. 7," points out as a manifest desideratum in this branch of law—a general Consolidation Act, applicable to all carriers, whether by land or by water. The thirteenth chapter treats of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, s. 7, and of the cases that have arisen under it. The policy of that Act was to limit the powers of railway companies to make special contracts, limiting their liabilities as common carriers. It prohibits all undue preference of any particular customers of the company, and also their insisting upon unreasonable stipulations on their own behalf. The effect of the Act, as Mr. Powell justly observes, is to place the whole railway system under the control of the courts. We may add that the general principles of free trade can, on no ground of policy, be held applicable to railway companies, and that if our Government will not directly act upon bureaucratic principles in respect to such bodies, they at all events act wisely in subjecting their contracts to an especial censorship to be exercised by the courts. A general consolidation Act, however, if sufficiently comprehensive in its affirmative as well as in its restrictive provisions, would tend to preclude the formation of special contracts by such companies; and consequently, any litigation as to the meaning of such. These are at present often the subject of a law suit, in which the Court is required by the statute 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, to pronounce upon the reasonableness of charges, while no rule for its guidance is given by that Act—a discretion which the judges are by no means jealous of preserving for themselves, (vide Cresswell, J., in Ransome v. The Eastern Counties Railway, 1 C. B. N. S. 452). In the fourteenth chapter Mr. Powell treats of injunctions under the last-mentioned Act; as also, though somewhat briefly, of the necessary requirements of the affidavit to be used, and of the costs incident to such applications. He notices a class of cases under private Acts, from which he professes to have extracted but little of general principles, with the exception that they disclose a tendency in the courts, even independently of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, s. 2, to discountenance favouritism by railway companies towards particular customers. The principle of these cases appears to us to be sufficiently sound as discouraging frauds on the public.

The last chapter is devoted to the consideration of the duties of inland carriers by water. Mr. Powell notices in it that as the Carriers Act did not apply to this class of bailees, and as the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, applies only to canal companies, the consequence is that river and unincorporated companies may limit their liability even for gross negligence, by means of a special contract, or by affecting a customer with even an implied knowledge of a public notice. So far as the transactions of such companies are concerned, all the evils of the old law of carriers continue unabated. Until the various statutes referred to in this treatise shall be consolidated into a single enactment, just as the numerous Acts relating to traffic by sea were united together in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, the laws relating to inland carriers must necessarily continue disjointed and perplexing to the practitioner. The treatise before us states the law of which it treats ably and clearly; but it does not aim at clearness of definitions, nor does it endeavour to apply first principles to the solution of apparent anomalies or of conflicts in the cases which it sets out. The practical merits of the work, however, tend to compensate, so far as the practitioner is concerned, for those defects. The arrangement of the chapters is sufficiently correct, if we except the separation of the sixth from the fourth chapter, with which it is identical in substance and almost in title, as both relate to the liabilities of carriers at common law. The various carrier, railway, and canal Acts are given in an appendix. The treatise is about the same size as the former edition, and contains a good index.

Public Companies.

REPORTS AND MEETINGS.

BLITHE AND TYNE RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 12th inst., the following dividends were declared for the past half-year, viz., at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on the original preference shares, 9½ per cent. per annum on the ordinary and extension shares, and 5 per cent. per annum on the A and B preference shares.

BRADFORD, WAKEFIELD, AND LEEDS RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 20th inst., a dividend at the rate of 6½ per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

EDINBURGH AND BATHGATE RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 9th instant, a dividend was declared at the rate of 6s. per share, and of 4 per cent. on sums paid in anticipation of calls.

FURNESS RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 16th inst., a dividend of 4 per cent. was declared for the past half-year.

GLOUCESTER AND DEAN FOREST RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 10th inst., a dividend of 12s. 6d. per share (free of income-tax) was declared for the past half-year.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 17th inst., a dividend at the rate of £3 15s. per cent. per annum was declared on the open stock of the company for the past half-year.

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 16th inst., a dividend at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year on the ordinary stock of the company.

HULL AND SELBY RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 14th inst., the following dividends were declared—viz., £2 9s. 6d. on each of the £50 shares, £1 4s. 9d. on each of the £25 or half-shares, and 12s. 4½d. on each of the £12 10s. shares, subject to the deduction of income-tax.

LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 14th inst., a dividend of £2 15s. per cent., less income tax, was declared for the past half-year, payable on the 2nd of September.

LONDON AND BLACKWALL RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 13th inst., a dividend at the rate of £2 15s. per cent. per annum was declared for the half-year ending June 30.

LONDON AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

The directors of this company have resolved to recommend to the proprietors at the half-yearly meeting to be held on the 23rd inst., a dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, carrying forward a balance of about £12,000.

LONDON AND SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 15th inst., a dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. was declared for the past half-year on the consolidated stock of the company.

MID KENT RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 12th inst., a dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

MID KENT (BROMLEY TO ST. MARY CRAY) RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 20th inst., a dividend at the rate of £3 per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

MIDLAND RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 20th inst., the following dividends were declared for the past half-year, payable on the 2nd September next—viz. £3 2s. 6d. upon each £100 consolidated stock, of £2 8s. 9d. upon each £100 consolidated Birmingham and Derby stock, of £3 2s. 6d. upon each £100 consolidated preferential and Erewash Valley stock, £2 5s. per cent. on the 4½ per cent. preferential stock, £2 on the Leicester and Hitchin stock, 2½ per cent. on the 4½ per cent. redeemable stock, 1s. 7d. on the £6 preference shares, and of 9d. on the £6 4s. shares, leaving a balance of £1,985 for the current half-year.

MIDLAND WAGON COMPANY, BIRMINGHAM.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 21st inst., a dividend of £10 per cent. on original shares, with a bonus of £5 per cent. was declared for the past half-year. The £6 per cent. debenture debt of the company has been extinguished, and, with the exception of £900, at £5 10s. per cent., the whole amount now bears interest at £5 per cent.

NORTH AND SOUTH WESTERN JUNCTION RAILWAY

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 16th inst., a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, was declared for the past half-year.

NORTHERN AND EASTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 15th inst., the following dividends were declared for the past half-year, viz., on the shares of £50 guaranteed 5 per cent. per annum, £1 5s. each, and on the shares of £50 guaranteed 6 per cent. per annum, £1 10s. each.

NORTH DEVON RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 21st inst., the following dividends were declared:—Dividend at the rate of 17s. 6d. per cent. per annum on the ordinary stock and of £1 15s. per cent. per annum on the preference stock, for the half-year ending the 30th of June, payable on the 2nd of September.

NORTH LONDON RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 13th inst., a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

ROYSTON AND HITCHIN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 12th inst., a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, less income-tax, was declared for the past half-year.

SALISBURY AND YEovil RAILWAY

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 16th inst., a dividend of 5 per cent. per annum on the preference capital and of 4½ per cent. per annum on the ordinary capital was declared for the past half-year.

SOUTHAMPTON DOCKS COMPANY.

The directors, by their report, recommend that a dividend of £1 10s. per cent. be declared for the past half-year.

SOUTH WESTERN STEAM-PACKET COMPANY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 15th inst., a dividend at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

SOUTH YORKSHIRE RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 10th inst., a dividend at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, less income-tax, was declared on the ordinary stock of the company for the past half-year.

WEST MIDLAND RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 15th inst., the following dividends were declared for the past half-year, viz., a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the first guaranteed stock of the Oxford section; a dividend at the same rate on the second guaranteed stock; a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the redeemable preference shares of the Newport section; a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. on the first preference 6 per cent. shares of the Newport section; and a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. on the second preference shares of the same section.

ULVERSTONE AND LANCASTER RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 10th inst., a dividend at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

DENNY—On Aug. 2, the wife of W. F. Denny, Esq., Hanover-park, Peckham, Surrey, Solicitor, of a son and daughter.
HUGHES—On Aug. 16, at Upper Tulse Hill, Mrs. S. Hughes, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

COMINS—STEVENS—On Aug. 15, William Willoughby Comins, Esq., of Great Portland-street, London, Solicitor, to Mary Anne Comins, daughter of Thomas Howell Stevens, Esq., of Eton College, Bucks.
HUNT—HODSON—On Aug. 10, William Hunt, Esq., Solicitor, of Bristol, to Catherine, daughter of the late Rev. John Hodson, of Shaftesbury.
MOUNSEY—COPE—On Aug. 15, George William Mounsey,

Esq., M.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, and of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, to Agnes, daughter of the late Isaac Cope, Esq., of Castle White, in the county of Cork.

THEARSBY—HAWORTH—On Aug. 13, William Thearsby Poole, Esq., Clerk of the Peace for Carnarvonshire, to Margaret, daughter of the late George Haworth, Esq., of Hawthorn House, Rossendale.

DEATHS.

AUSTEN—On Aug. 20, Benjamin Austen, Esq., Gray's-inn, aged 72.

EARNSHAW—On Aug. 15, Thomas Earnshaw, Esq., in his 48th year, son of the late William Earnshaw, Esq., Solicitor, of H.M.'s Customs, and son-in-law of the late Mr. Alderman Farebrother.

JONES—On July 29, Frederick Jones, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law, aged 49.

MACILWAIN—On Aug. 20, Elizabeth, wife of George Macilwain, of the Court-yard, Albany, and daughter of the late John Daubeny, Esq., D.C.L., of Doctors'-commons.

PARHAM—On Aug. 16, in his 69th year, Benjamin Parham, Esq., late Judge of the Worcestershire County Courts.

SHAW—On June 5, at Newcastle, New South Wales, Rosa Josephine, wife of the Rev. Thomas Head Shaw, B.A., and daughter of the late Frederick Hodgson Clarke, Esq., Barrister, of Lincoln's-inn, aged 23.

Unclaimed Stock in the Bank of England.

The Amount of Stock heretofore standing in the following Names will be transferred to the Party claiming the same, unless other Claimants appear within Three Months:—

BEAMISH, FRANCIS, Gent., Dinan, France, £491 2s. 8d. Consols.—Claimed by JOHN O'MEARA BEAMISH, the person named in the said order.

LEEVEs, REV. HENRY DANIEL, Clerk, Blandford-place, Regent's park, £333 6s. 8d. Three per Cent. Annuities.—Claimed by SOPHIA MARY LEEVEs, Widow, acting surviving executor of the said Henry Daniel Leeeves.

MARSHALL, ELIZABETH, Spinster, Beverley, Yorkshire, £2,300 New £4 per Cents.—Claimed by JOHN HOLLAND, administrator, with will annexed de bonis non of the said Elizabeth Marshall.

WEBB, CHARLOTTE SARAH, Widow, Ross, £6 Consolidated Long Annuities.—Claimed by Rev. WILLIAM WEBB ELLIS, the surviving executor.

Next of Kin.

DODGE, GEORGE, who died in South America in 1861, next of kin to apply to the Solicitor of the Treasury, Whitehall, London.

London Gazettes.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

FRIDAY, Aug. 23, 1861.

PAWLE, JOHN CHRISTOPHER, JOHN HENRY BELFAGE, and FREDERICK ASPREY, Attorneys & Solicitors, 7, New-inn, Strand (Pawle, Belfage, & Asprey). May 22, by mutual consent.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

TUESDAY, Aug. 20, 1861.

UNLIMITED IN CHANCERY.

DISTRICT SAVINGS' BANK (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up, presented August 16, will be heard before V.C. Wood, on August 30, at the Crown Inn, Woodbridge, Suffolk, at half-past twelve.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY OF IRELAND.—The Master of the Rolls has peremptorily ordered a call of fifteen shillings per share on all contributors who have not been compromised with, to be paid on October 1, at twelve, at 3, South-square, Gray's-inn, London.

LIFE ASSURANCE TREASURY.—V.C. Wood has appointed Robert Palmer Harding, 3, Bank-buildings, London, and 5, Serle-street, Lincoln's-inn, Middlesex, interim manager of this company.

LIFE ASSURANCE TREASURY.—Creditors to prove their debts before V.C. Wood forthwith.

UNLIMITED IN CHANCERY.

FRIDAY, Aug. 23, 1861.

BANK OF TURKEY.—Petition for dissolution and winding-up presented August 20, will be heard before V. C. Wood, on the first petition day in November next. R. and C. H. Hodgson, Solicitors for Petitioner, 10, Salisbury-street, Strand.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Aug. 20, 1861.

EAGLES, EDWARD, Farmer & Miller, Staverton, Northamptonshire. Burton & Son, Solicitors, Daventry. Oct. 1.

FAWKES, JOHN, Farmer, Smalmsdown, Kirkandrews-upon-Esk, Cumberland. Nanson, Solicitor, 9, Castle-street, Carlisle. Nov. 1.

FIELD, JAMES, Esq., formerly of 2, Park-terrace, Park-road, Old Kent-road, Surrey, but late of 21, Maismore-square, Park-road, New Peckham, Surrey. Gover, Solicitor, 40, King William-street, London-bridge. Sept. 30.

FRAMPTON, HENRY, Farmer, formerly of Newington, Oxford, and afterwards of Burghclere, Southampton. Tanner, Solicitor, Speenhamland, Newbury, Berks. Sept. 12.
 HOIT, RICHARD, Grocer, Huncoat, Lancashire. Bannister, Solicitor, Accrington, Lancaster. Oct. 23.
 HUGHMOND, ROBERT, Wine & Spirit Merchant, Liverpool. John & Henry Hindle, Solicitors, 41, Lord-street, Liverpool. Dec. 7.
 WATSON, WILLIAM GEORGE, Watch & Case Gilder & Electro Plater & Gilder, 7, James-street, St. Luke's, Middlesex. Stopher, Solicitor, 36, Coleman-street, City. Sept. 1.
 WILLIAMS, MARY, Haulier, Hunt's-lane, Avon-street, St. Philip's, Bristol. King & Plummer, Solicitors, 5, Exchange-bldgs, East Bristol. Sept. 26.

FRIDAY, AUG. 23, 1861.

BRINDEN, WILLIAM, Gent., Elcot-mill, Preshute, Wilts. T. B. & W. Merriman and Gwillim, Solicitors, Marlborough, Wilts. Oct. 1.
 BROWN, DAME MARY, Widow, 1, St. Germain's-terrace, Blackheath, Kent. Chesholme & Gibson, Solicitors, 64, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Nov. 1.
 DAVES, JONATHAN GLENN, Flour Dealer, East Retford, Nottinghamshire. Marshall & Son, Solicitors, East Retford. Oct. 1.
 DOBSON, ROBERT RAGDENEAU COLTHURST, Esq., late of Cape Town, Cape of Good Hope, and previously of 30, Fortess-terrace, Kentish-town, Middlesex. White, Solicitor, 7, Southampton street, Bloomsbury. Nov. 1.
 DU PRE, REV. THOMAS, Clerk, Willoughby Rectory, Lincolnshire. Joseph & T. Lovegrove, Solicitors, Gloucester. Sept. 1.
 GILL, JOHN, Esq., late of Cumrew, Cumberland. Carrick & Lee, Solicitors, Brampton, Cumberland. Sept. 20.
 HINE, MARY ANN, Spinster, 30, Barnes-terrace, Barnes, Surrey. Rivolta, Solicitor, 10, Montague-street, Russell-square. Oct. 10.
 JARMAN, GEORGE FARWELL, Esq., Upper Berkley-street, Middlesex. Dawes & Sons, Solicitors, 9, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street, London. Sept. 28.
 LAMBERT, MRS. ELIZABETH, Widow, late of Walesby, Lincoln. Saffery, Solicitor, Market Rasen. Sept. 23.
 LEWIS, JENKIN, Farmer, late of Aberfeldon, Margam, Glamorgan. Verity & Middleton, Solicitors, Brigid, Glamorgan. Sept. 23.
 REAT, STEPHEN, Clerk, M.A., Sub-Librarian of the Bodleian Library, St. Alban Hall, Oxford. Duncan, Squarey, & Blackmore, Solicitors, 10, Water-street, Liverpool. Sept. 31.
 SMITH, HENRY, Licensed Victualler, Pitt's Head, Grange-road, Bermondsey, Surrey. Tebb & Sons, Solicitors, 21, Great Knight-Rider-street, Doctors' Commons. Oct. 1.
 WHITTINGTON, ELIZABETH, Widow, Wootton Wawon, Warwickshire. Hancock & Hiron, Solicitors, Shipston-on-Stour, Worcestershire. Oct. 1.
 WILLSON, GEORGE, Clothier & Outfitter, Market-street, Faversham, Kent. Johnson, Solicitor, West-street, Faversham, Kent. Dec. 31.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

Last Day of Proof.

TUESDAY, AUG. 20, 1861.

BROUGHTON, GEORGE MICHAEL, Schoolmaster, Mount Pleasant, Accrington. Livesey & Broughton, V.C. Wood. Nov. 7.
 WINTER, THOMAS, Lighterman, Old Brentford, Middlesex. Winter & Winter, V.C. Wood. Nov. 5.

(County Palatine of Lancaster.)

MARWOOD, WILLIAM, Hemp Merchant, Netherfield-road, Everton, near Liverpool. Godwin & Marwood, Registrar of Court, 1, John-street, Liverpool. Sept. 17.
 MENDHAM, JOHN, Gent., Frederick-street, Liverpool. Jones & M'Kenzie, Registrar of Court, 1, North John-street, Liverpool. Sept. 17.
 PRESCOTT, JOHN, Grocer & Flour Dealer, Ormskirk, Lancaster. Worsley & Prescott, Registrar of Court, 1, North John-st., Liverpool. Sept. 16.
 WILLIS, THOMAS, Joiner & Builder, Tessera-place, Liverpool. Cort & Thurston, Registrar of Court, 1, North John-street, Liverpool. Sept. 17.

FRIDAY, AUG. 23, 1861.

CAMERON, NATHANIEL, Esq., formerly of Swansea, Glamorgan, and late of Lewes and Hastings, Sussex. Cameron & Cameron, V.C. Stuart. Nov. 14.

(County Palatine of Lancaster.)

HILL, PETER, Gent., Waverree, near Liverpool. Redish & Hill, office of Registrar, 1, North John-street, Liverpool. Sept. 17.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

TUESDAY, AUG. 20, 1861.

BAILEY, WILLIAM, Draper, New Seaford, Lincolnshire. Sol. Haddock, 18, St. Paul's Church-yard, London. Aug. 1.
 BEVAN, SAMUEL, Whitesmith & Chain Maker, Town-lane, Dukinfield, Chester. Sol. Darnton & Greaves, Ashton-under-Lyne. July 24.
 BOOTHBY, WILLIAM, Coach & Cab Proprietor, Liverpool. Sol. Snowball & Copeman, 16, Castle-street, Liverpool. Aug. 16.
 CAVET, JOHN, Draper, Paul's-town, Llanelli, Carmarthenshire. Sol. Jones, Llanelli. Aug. 10.
 EDBROOKE, ROBERT, General Smith, Frogmore-street, Bristol. Sol. J. & H. Livett, Albion-chambers, Bristol. July 31.
 GUMMERSALL, ALFRED, Cardmaker, Laister Dyke, near Bradford. Sol. Norris & Foster, 1, Westgate, Halifax. Aug. 1.
 JAMES, GEORGE EDWIN, Milliner, Birmingham, and Bilston, Staffordshire. Sol. Jagger, Cannon-street, Birmingham. July 31.
 ROBERTS, THOMAS, Grocer & Provision Dealer, Cambrian-place, Llanelli, Carmarthenshire. Sol. Jones, Llanelli. Aug. 7.
 THOMAS, RICHARD, Farmer, The Craig, Llanfair, Montgomeryshire. Sol. Yearley, Welshpool, Montgomery. July 31.
 WESTLEY, DANIEL, Shoemaker, Road, Northamptonshire. Sol. Shoosmith, Northampton. Aug. 6.

FRIDAY, AUG. 23, 1861.

DRAKE, REUBEN, Draper, 3, Crosby-row, Waltham, Surrey. Sol. Lawrence, Pews, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London. July 14.
 ELLIOTT, WILLIAM HENRY, Clothier, 90, Cheapside, London. Sol. Lepard & Gammoun, 9, Cloak-lane, London. July 26.
 JORDAN, THOMAS, Chair Maker, Woodrow, Amersham, Bucks. Sol. Daniels, Amersham, and 15, Bucklersbury, London. Aug. 3.
 NIGHTINGALE, JAMES, Beerhouse Keeper & Provision Dealer, Norfolk-street, Glossop, Derbyshire. Sol. Hodgson, 15a, St. Ann's square, Manchester. July 5.
 NORTH, JOSEPH, GEORGE NORTH, & JAMES NORTH, Cloth Millers, Leeds. Sol. Langford & Marsden, 59, Friday-street, Cheapside, for J. & H. Richardson & Turner, Leeds. Aug. 16.

STOKES, EMMANUEL, Ironmonger, 5, Market-place, Upper Holloway. Sol. Howell, 15, Bow-lane, London. July 23.
 VOWLES, JAMES, Victualler, Plough and Windmill Tavern, East-street, Bedminster, Bristol. Sol. King & Plummer, 5, Exchange-buildings East, Bristol. July 27.
 WATSON, HORACE, Chemist & Druggist, Laceby, Lincolnshire. Sol. Grange & Winttingham, Great Grimsby. Aug. 18.
 WHATT, GEORGE, Grocer & Coal Merchant, Whitgift, Yorkshire. Sol. England, 14, East Parade, Goole. July 29.
 WIKKE, ROBERT, Tailor & Draper, Holywell, Flintshire. Sol. Quinn, 23 Lord-street, Liverpool. Aug. 12.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, AUG. 20, 1861.

BATCHELOR, WILLIAM HENRY, Builder & Undertaker, Leatherhead, Surrey. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 31, at 12.30; and Sept. 18, at 2.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Young, 6, Serjeant's-inn, Fleet-street, London. Pet. Aug. 17.
 CHAPMAN, JOHN, & GEORGE GRANGER, Ironmasters, Britannia Ironworks, Oldbury, Worcestershire. Com. Sanders: Sept. 13 and Oct. 4, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. James & Knight, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 8.
 FAWCER, WILLIAM, Victualler & Car Proprietor, Kidderminster, Worcestershire. Com. Sanders: Sept. 9 and 20, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. Saunders & Son, Kidderminster; or James & Knight, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 19.
 GARRETT, JOHN WILLIAM, Corn Merchant, Liverpool. Com. Perry: Sept. 4 and 24, at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Bird. Sol. Brabner, North John-street, Liverpool. Pet. Aug. 16.
 HARRISON, WILLIAM, Tailor & Draper, Barnsley. Com. Ayrton: Sept. 2 and 27, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sol. Hamer, Barnsley; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Aug. 16.
 RANDALL, JAMES, Victualler, Byfleet, Cobham, Surrey. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 12.30; and Sept. 24, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Murrough, 18, Warwick-court, Gray's-inn, Holborn. Pet. Aug. 14.
 SIMONS, EDWARD, Lamp Dealer & Italian Warehouseman, 115, Newgate-street, London, and 26, Bull-street, Birmingham. Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 27 and Sept. 25, at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Linklaters & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London. Pet. Aug. 12.
 STEAR, WAKEMAN STEAR, Lace Warehouseman & Commission Agent, 64 & 65, Bread-street, London (Henry Wakeham Stear & Co.). Com. Evans: Aug. 29 and Sept. 24, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Moseley, Taylor, & Moseley, 9, Old Jewry-chambers, City. Pet. Aug. 19.
 TALEN, JOHN AXEL, 4, Whitley-villas, Caledonian-road, Islington, Middlesex, lately carrying on business at 65, Fenchurch-street, London, with Thomas Penlington, as Ship and Insurance Broker (Talen & Co.); also at the same time carrying on business at Blackhorse-bridge, Deptford, Kent, with Thomas Penlington, as Ice Merchant (Norwegian Ice Co.). Com. Fonblanque: Aug. 31, at 12; and Sept. 18, at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Mercer, 9, Mincing-lane, London. Pet. Aug. 18.
 WEBB, CHARLES, General Salesman, Drury-lane, and of Christ-street, Poplar, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 1; and Sept. 23, at 1.30; Basinghall-st. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Stopher, 36, Coleman-street, London. Pet. Aug. 17.

FRIDAY, AUG. 23, 1861.

COLLINS, ROBERT, Dealer in Hops, 15, Mark-lane, London. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 5, at 12; and Oct. 8, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Dalton, 3, Bucklersbury, London. Pet. Aug. 31.
 CONNORAN, JOSEPH JOHN, & MAXIMILIAN LINDT, Merchants, 140, Fenchurch-street, London. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, and 19, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Harrison & Lewis, 6, Old Jewry, London. Pet. Aug. 16.
 DODDINGTON, FREDERICK THOMAS, Manufacturer of Fancy Drapery Goods and Commission Agent, 6, Falcon-square, Aldersgate-street, London, and of New Cottage, Forest-gate, Stratford, Essex. Com. Goulburn: Sept. 2, at 11; and Oct. 7, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Kimberley, 26, Old Broad-street, London. Pet. Aug. 21.
 GREGORY, EDWARD HENRY, and LESLEY ALEXANDER GREGORY, African Merchants & Shipping Brokers, 33, Great Saint Helen's, London (Gregory, Brothers). Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 1.30, and 23, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Wild & Barber, 101, Ironmonger-lane, London. Pet. Aug. 19.
 HETHERINGTON, JOSEPH, Licensed Victualler, Old Oak Public House, Gordon-lane, Kentish Town, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 5, at 11.30; and 20, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Fownall, Son, & Cross, Staple-inn, Holborn, London. Pet. Aug. 16.
 LIVERSIDGE, JOHN, Wheelwright, 61a, Tabernacle-walk, Saint Leonard, Shoreditch, and 6, Devon-villas, Buckingham-road, De Beauvoir Town, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 3, and 30, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Kiss & Son, 3, Feu-court, Fenchurch-street, London. Pet. Aug. 21.
 NEWTON, RAYMOND D'ARCY, Advertising Agent & Dealer in Newspapers, 3, Warwick-square, London. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 12.30, and 20, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Lawrence, Pews, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London. Pet. Aug. 21.
 OWERS, OSCAR FITZALLEN, Bookseller & Stationer, 7, Sussex-terrace, Westbourn Grove, Paddington, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 11.30, and Sept. 27, at 1.30; Basinghall street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Harrison & Lewis, 6, Old Jewry, London. Pet. August 13.
 PARSONS, JOSEPH SAMUEL, Watchmaker & Leather Seller, High-street, Brentford and London-street, Uxbridge. Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 2, and Sept. 26, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Burr, 12, Paternoster-row, London. Pet. Aug. 20.
 PATEU, ROBERT, Grocer, Wine, Ale, & Stout Merchant, Lewisham. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 2.30, and Sept. 26, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Mote, 33, Bucklesbury, London. Pet. Aug. 20.
 REBAUT, SAMUEL, Junkeeper, 59 & 60, St. James's-street, St. George, Hanover-square, Middlesex. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 5, at 2.30, and Sept. 28, at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Combs, 25, Bucklersbury, London. Pet. June 23.
 SMITH, JOHN COLES, Jeweller, 64, King William-street, London. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 2, at 2; and Sept. 26, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. Lewis & Sons, Wilmington-square, London. Pet. Aug. 12.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

TUESDAY, AUG. 20, 1861.

LAW, JOHN, Chemist & Druggist, & Omnibus Proprietor, 9, New Church-street, Marylebone. Aug. 19.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 1861.

BROWN, JOHN HARKNESS, Draper, 125, Field-street, Liverpool. Aug. 20.
HUGH, JOHN, Common Brewer, Wakefield, York. Aug. 20.
PICKERLEY, EDWIN JOHN, Scrivener, Wakefield. Aug. 9.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, AUG. 13, 1861.

ANDREW, WILLIAM PARKER, Wine Merchant, 27, Crutched Friars, London (Andrew & Company). Sept. 12, at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—CHAMMAN, JOHN, Boot & Shoe Maker, Sidney-street, Cambridge. Sept. 10, at 1; Basinghall-st.—DOHERTY, JOHN, Corn & Provision Merchant, Liverpool. Sept. 24, at 11; Liverpool.—EAST, WM., Currier, Sudbury, Suffolk. Sept. 12, at 12.30; Basinghall-st.—ELLYETT, FREDK., Hatter, 125, Queen-st., Portsea, Hants. Sept. 10, at 12; Basinghall-st.—GANDY, GERARD, Ironmaster, Leaswood, near Mold, Flintshire. Sept. 24, at 11; Liverpool.—GRIFFITH, RICHARD, Draper & Grocer, Pwllheli, Penychain, Carnarvon. Sept. 24, at 11; Liverpool.—HARDWICK, JOSEPH, and HENRY JONES, Merchants, Ship & Insurance Brokers, 17, Gracechurch-street-chambers, London (Hardwick, Jones, & Maurice); also at Odessa, Russia (Maurice & Co.). Sept. 11, at 2.30; Basinghall-st.—HARRATT, CHARLES, Iron Merchant & Ship Owner, 2, Royal Exchange-buildings, London, and Canning-town, Bow Creek, West Ham, Essex. Sept. 10, at 12; Basinghall-st.—JAUNCKY, ALFRED, Plumber & Glazier, Forest-hill, Kent. September 12, at 12; Basinghall-st.—JONES, WILLIAM, WILLIAM, Ship Builder, Portmadoc, Carnarvon. September 24, at 11; Liverpool.—MANNION, WILLIAM, Currier & Leather Dealer, Liverpool. September 24, at 11; Liverpool.—PARIS, GEORGE JAMES, & WILLIAM HENRY THOMAS PARIS, Provision Merchants, Liverpool (Paris, Brothers). Aug. 20, at 12; Liverpool.—PIDDING, JOHN RHODES, Merchant, 12, George-yard, Lombard-street, London, and of Bolland-lane, Finchley, Middlesex. Sept. 10, at 2.30; Basinghall-st.—SMITH, JOSEPH, Ironmonger, 3, Creed-place, Mase-hill, Greenwich, Kent, lately carrying on business at 32, Gt. Portland-street, Oxford-street, Middlesex. Aug. 31, at 12.30; Basinghall-st.—STEPANOFF, MICHAEL, Merchant, Liverpool. Sept. 24, at 11; Liverpool.—TOWNSON, WILLIAM M., Licensed Victualler, Liverpool. Sept. 24, at 11; Liverpool.—WATKES, JAMES, Hotel Keeper, Gravesend. Sept. 12, at 2; Basinghall-st.—WATSON, JOHN WILLIAM, Scrivener, Shrewsbury. Sept. 13, at 11; Birmingham.—WEBSTER, JOHN, Joiner & Builder, Wavertree, near Liverpool. Sept. 24, at 11; Liverpool.

FRIDAY, AUG. 23, 1861.

FAYE, WILLIAM, Boot and Shoe Manufacturer, Norwich (W. Fryer & Co.). Sept. 13, at 2.30; Basinghall-st.—LORD, WILLIAM, and THOMAS LUTTON, Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers, Shawforth, near Rochdale. Oct. 9, at 12; Manchester.

UNITED KINGDOM LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 8, WATERLOO PLACE, PALL MALL, LONDON, S.W.

The Hon. FRANCIS SCOTT, CHAIRMAN.

CHARLES BERWICK CURTIS, Esq., DEPUTY CHAIRMAN.

Fourth Division of Profits.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Parties desirous of participating in the fourth division of profits to be declared on policies effected prior to the 31st of December, 1861, should make immediate application. There have already been three divisions of profits, and the bonuses divided have averaged nearly 2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, or from 30 to 100 per cent. on the premiums paid, without the risk of co-partnership.

To show more clearly what these bonuses amount to, the three following cases are given as examples:

Sum Insured.	Bonuses added.	Amount payable up to Dec., 1854.
£5,000	£1,947 10	£6,947 10
1,000	379 10	1,379 10
100	39 15	139 15

Notwithstanding these large additions, the premiums are on the lowest scale compatible with security; in addition to which advantages, one-half of the premiums may, if desired, for the term of five years, remain unpaid at 5 per cent. interest, without security or deposit of the policy.

The assets of the Company at the 31st December, 1860, amounted to £730,665 7s. 10d., all of which had been invested in Government and other approved securities.

No charge for Volunteer Military Corps while serving in the United Kingdom.

Policy stamps paid by the office.

For prospectuses, &c., apply to the Resident Director, No. 8, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall.

By order, E. L. BOYD, Resident Director.

BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT, LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited),

17, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.

Capital, £300,000, in 30,000 shares of £10 each. £3 per share paid.

CHAIRMAN.

METCALF HOPGOOD, Esq., Bishopsgate-street.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. PATTESON & COBOLD, 3, Bedford-row.

MANAGER.

CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Esq., 17, New Bridge-street.

INVESTMENTS.—The present rate of interest on money deposited with the Company for fixed periods, or subject to an agreed notice of withdrawal, is 5 per cent.

LOANS.—Advances are made, in sums from £50 to £1,000, upon approved personal and other security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over any period not exceeding 10 years.

Applications for the new issue of Shares may be made to the Secretary, of whom Prospectuses, the last Annual Report, and every information can be obtained. JOSEPH K. JACKSON, Secretary.

ROMNEY MARSH, KENT.

An Eligible Freehold Estate, consisting of 313a 3r. 18p. of Valuable Land.

TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, in One Lot, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the causes of "Jane Holman and Others v. Thomas Holman and Others," and of "Thomas Holman v. Ann Holman and Others," and of "H. H. Sweetnam and Others v. Ann Holman and Others," with the approbation of the Right Honourable the Master of the Rolls, the Judge to whom these causes are attached, by Mr. JOSEPH TOOTELL (the person appointed for that purpose), at the AUCTION MART, LONDON, on WEDNESDAY, the 18th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at TWELVE for ONE o'Clock precisely, an eligible FREEHOLD ESTATE, known as "Gammon's Farm," consisting of 313a. 3r. 18p. of valuable land, 217 acres of which are exceedingly productive arable land, and the remaining 96 acres are sound fattening land, together with a good farm dwelling house, and all the requisite agricultural buildings well arranged, well placed, and in good repair. This valuable property is situate in the parishes of New Church and Eastbridge, in the County of Kent, four miles distant from New Romney, ten miles from Ashford, and seven miles from Hythe. The estate is held on lease by Messrs. Matthew and Thomas William Butler (highly respectable tenants), for a term of twenty-one years from the 11th October, 1853.

The property may be viewed on application to the tenants. Particulars may be obtained on application to Messrs. BROCKMAN & HARRISON, Solicitors, Folkestone; to Messrs. TALBOT, TALBOT, and TASKER, Solicitors, 47, Bedford-row; to Messrs. DISCHOFF, COX, and BOMPAS, Solicitors, 19, Coleman-street; to Messrs. FLUX and ARGLES, Solicitors, 68, Cheapside; and to Mr. JOHN MURRAY, Solicitor, 7, Whitehall-place, London; also at the Auction Mart, London; at the Royal Fountain Hotel, Canterbury; at the Shakespeare Hotel, Dover; at the Albion Hotel, Hastings; at the New Inn, New Romney; at the Swan Hotel, Hythe; at the Saracen's Head Inn, Ashford; and of Mr. TOOTELL, Land Agent and Valuer, Maidstone.

HANTS, near PETERSFIELD.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL are instructed to SELL, by Private Contract, a desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE; comprising a noble mansion, having three reception rooms, 10 bed rooms, all offices; double coach-house, six and three stall stables, and surrounded by pleasure grounds, garden, shrubberies, and an American garden of rhododendrons; a good kitchen garden walled in, and about 120 acres of prime meadow and other land. For price, &c., apply to BROOKS & BEAL, Land Agents, 209, Piccadilly.

FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT.—FREEHOLD DOMAIN, ADVOWSON, AND MANORS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL are instructed to SELL a splendid MANORIAL ESTATE and noble MANSION, seated in one of the best western counties. The whole estate comprises about 6,000 acres, with excellent farm residences and homesteads, houses and cottages. The property is most compact and valuable, hill and valley, wood and river. Let to highly respectable and responsible tenants at moderate rents; is in a fair state of cultivation; uniting in the possessor considerable county and borough, Parliamentary, and local influence, and yielding an ample income. Estate and Auction Offices, 209, Piccadilly, W.

FINCHLEY.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have for SALE, the LEASE of an elegant VILLA, at a ground rent of £70 per annum. The grounds (three lawns) and gardens are beautifully laid out. For detailed particulars of accommodation apply at their offices, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 281 R.)

HERTS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have to SELL a FREEHOLD ESTATE; comprising a modern-built residence, of handsome elevation, surrounded by 40 acres of land, laid out in pleasure grounds, kitchen garden, orchard, arable and grass fields; it is adapted for immediate occupation, and within two hours' journey from London. It has coach-houses and stables, and farm buildings; the whole in good order. Purchase £3,500.

Estate and Auction Offices, No. 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 280, R 3).

CAVENDISH-PLACE, CAVENDISH-SQUARE.

TO BE LET, unfurnished, or the Lease to be Sold, of an excellent RESIDENCE, in thorough repair, very light and airy, not overlooked in front or rear. It contains four good reception rooms and five bed rooms, convenient offices, well-placed closets.

BROOKS & BEAL, Estate Agents and Auctioneers, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 225).

HANTS.

TO BE SOLD, a desirable FREEHOLD land-tax redeemed PROPERTY, most pleasantly situate, and surrounded by very tasteful pleasure grounds, with ornamental water and well-timbered grass paddocks and capital walled kitchen gardens, elegant conservatory and vinery. House contains hall, two spacious drawing rooms, and dining room, library, and boudoir, two staircases, 13 bed and dressing rooms, and prospect room, capital offices, coach-house, and stables, and other out-buildings. It is one mile from a station, Direct Portsmouth and South Coast Railway, half a mile from church and private sea bathing. Purchase moderate.

BROOKS & BEAL, Estate Agents and Auctioneers, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 196.)

INVESTMENTS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have for SALE, together or separately, FIFTEEN FREEHOLD (or Leasehold) COTTAGE VILLAS, at Wandsworth, on the borders of Wimbledon-park; each let at £30 per annum.

To treat, apply at their offices, 209, Piccadilly, W.

NORTH DEVON.

Upwards of 2,120 acres of Freehold and Leasehold Lands, 6 Policies of Insurance, the Rectorial Rent Charge of the Parish of Bradworthy, and the Manors or reputed Manors of Bradworthy and East Buckish, in the North of Devon.

M. R. E. M. WHITE is instructed to offer for SALE, at the NEW INN, BIDEFORD, on TUESDAY, the 3rd day of SEPTEMBER next, at TWO o'clock in the afternoon, the fee-simple and inheritance of the MANOR of BRADWORTHY, with the tithes and chief rents thereto belonging, and Cleverdon and other farms comprised therein, and the mansion house on Cleverdon; also the Rectorial Tithe Rent Charge of the greater portion of the parish of Bradworthy, commuted at £396 5s., and producing in the present year £428. Also the valuable freehold farms of East Ash and Lower Kismildon (the latter in the parish of West Putford), and Ash Water Grist Mill, the whole constituting a valuable freehold estate extending over upwards of 939 acres, with unlimited rights of common. This property offers peculiar advantages to the purchaser, both as a sportsman and as an investor—to the former, as comprising a capital house suitable for a gentleman's family, with good shooting and fishing, there being an abundance of game, a good rookery, and a portion of the estate being bounded by the river Torridge—to the latter, as affording a scope for the profitable outlay of capital by draining and other agricultural improvements. Bradworthy is situate about 13 miles and West Putford 11 miles by a capital road from the port of Bideford (which is distant about 8 hours by rail from London) and 5 miles from the excellent market of Holsworthy.

Also a valuable Freehold Estate, comprising Clifford and other farms, extending over upwards of 874 acres, and the Manor of East Buckish, in the parish of Woolfordisworthy, distant about 10 miles from Bideford.

The highly valuable Freehold Estate of East Furlong, in the parish of Littleham, about 2 miles from Bideford, containing upwards of 55 acres, on which are some fine building sites, commanding lovely views of the finely wooded Yeo Vale.

The Freehold Estates of West Mead and Welcombe Parks and other tenements, containing about 70 acres in the parish of Welcombe, about 17 miles from Bideford, bounded by the sea, and commanding fine views of the Bristol Channel, having rights of wreck, and offering sites for a marine residence.

A valuable leasehold estate known as Cranam, containing upwards of 111 acres, in the parish of Buckland Brewer, distant about 8 miles from Bideford, and 5 from Torrington, held on the longest of three lives with six Policies of Insurance at various dates for the aggregate sum of £800.

Detailed particulars and plans of the property may be obtained at the New Inn, Bideford; Golden Lion, Barnstaple; White Hart, Holsworthy; Globe Inn, Great Torrington; Queen's Hotel, Exeter; of the Auctioneer; of Mr. J. GROVES COOPER, Wear Gifford, Torrington; of Messrs. JANSON, COBB, & PEARSON, Solicitors, 4, Basinghall-street, London; of Messrs. COODE, KINGDON, & COTTON, Solicitors, 10, King's Arms-yard, Moorgate-street; of W. J. HILL, Esq., Solicitor, Langport, Somerset; or of Mr. ROOKER, Solicitor, Bideford, Devon.

Bideford, 24th July, 1861.

TO BE SOLD, pursuant to an Order of the High

Court of Chancery made in a cause of Gyett against Williams, with the approbation of the Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood, in one lot, by MR. MILNER, the person appointed by the said Judge, at the OXFORD ARMS HOTEL, at KINGTON, in the COUNTY of HEREFORD, on THURSDAY, the 12th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at 12 o'clock precisely, a certain FREEHOLD ESTATE, situate in the parishes of Glascomb and Bettus Diserth, and known as Wern Faur or Wern Danzey, and Cefn Glase, in the county of Radnor, now in the occupation of Mr. Danzey Sheen.

Particulars whereof may be had gratis of Mr. THOMAS WESTALL, of No. 3, South-square, Gray's-Inn, London, Solicitor; of Messrs. BODENHAM & TEMPLE, Solicitors, Kingston, Herefordshire; of Messrs. MERE-DITH & LUCAS, Solicitors, No. 8, New-square, Lincoln's-Inn, London; of Messrs. PATRICK & UNDERWOOD, Solicitors, Rolls Chambers, Chancery-lane, London; of Mr. ARTHUR CHEESE, Solicitor, Kingston; of Mr. PARSONS, Presteign, and of the principal Inns and Hotels in the neighbourhood; and of the Auctioneer at his office, Kingston, Herefordshire.

Dated this 13th day of August, 1861.

(Signed) EDWARD WEATHERALL, Chief Clerk.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO GUINEA BIN-

OCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS sent carriage free, on receipt of post-office order, to any part of the United Kingdom. The extraordinary power of this instrument renders it adapted to answer the combined purposes of telescope and opera glass. It will define objects distinctly at ten miles distance; is suitable for the theatre, race-course, sportsmen, tourists, and general out-door observations. Only to be obtained of KEYZOR and BENDON (successors to Harris and Son), Opticians, 50, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Illustrated Price List of Optical and Mathematical Instruments free, on receipt of two stamps.

THOSE WHO ARE ABOUT TO FURNISH

should visit G. I. THOMPSON'S extensive Stock of Furnishing Ironmongery, Electro-Silver Plate, Fenders, Fire-Irons, Japan and Paper Vase Trays, Baths, Toilettes Furniture, Gas Chandeliers, Moderator Lamps. All articles marked in plain figures.

THOMPSON'S Electro Silver Spoons, 36s.; Forks, 24s. dozen.

THOMPSON'S Ivory Balance Table Knives, 16s., 22s., 28s. dozen.

25, FINSBURY-PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to Railway Stations. Send for a Furnishing List.

IMPORTER OF PURE COLZA OIL.

KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER

AND CORK FLOORCLOTH. Warm, noiseless, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

F. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Walbrook, London, E.C.

Manufactory—South London Works, Lambeth.

COAL.—GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—

COAL DEPARTMENT.—The SILKSTONE and ELSECAR COAL-OWNERS' COMPANY delivered their Coal, under specified, to the consumer direct from their own pits; and this Company have supplied from their collieries fully three-fourths of the late customers of the Great Northern Railway Company. Present prices:—

R. C. Clarke's best old Silkstone, screened	21s. per Ton.
Wharfedale's best Silkstone	ditto 22s. "
Ditto Pileley ditto	ditto 20s. "
Newton, Chambers & Co.'s ditto	ditto 23s. "
Ditto, ditto Park Gate or Brazil	ditto 19s. "
Ditto, No. 2	ditto 18s. "
Ditto, thin seam ditto	ditto 20s. "
Elsecar House	ditto 18s. 6d. "
Wombwell Main ditto	ditto 20s. "

Delivered within five miles of depot.

Deliveries at Hampstead, Highgate, and Finchley, 1s. per ton extra.—Apply to, and to be obtained ONLY of the SILKSTONE and ELSECAR COAL OWNERS' COMPANY, Great Northern Railway, King's-cross, and Holloway.

Sole Agent, JAMES J. MILLER.

Customers are particularly requested to specify the description of coal required; and to notice the recent CHANGE of AGENCY. In the appointment of Mr. JAMES J. MILLER in the place of Mr. HERBERT CLARKE.

WINES for the NOBILITY and GENTRY.

WINES for the ARMY and NAVY.

WINES for the CLERICAL, LEGAL, and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS.

WINES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.

PURE and UNADULTERATED GRAPE WINES from the SOUTH of FRANCE.

VENDED by the PROPRIETORS of the VINEYARDS.

THE FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION

have taken extensive cellars at the West-end of London, for the purpose of introducing FRENCH WINES only to the British public at FRENCH TRADE PRICES; and the members of that Association being proprietors of the most esteemed growths in France, the Nobility, Gentry, and Families patronising such Wines, will become assured of their genuineness.

THE EMPRESS PORT,

20s. per dozen. Sent free, bottles included, to any British Railway Station, on receipt of an Order on Charing-cross Post-office for 22s. 6d., payable to A. Rophe, Director.

THIS EMPRESS PORT,

is pure grape, of first-class quality, and delicious taste; the very for Wine family consumption.

CHAMPAGNE, equal to Moët's, 42s.

SPARKLING BURGUNDY

("The Glorious Bumper") at 48s. per dozen.

Pure CLARETS from 16s. to 54s. per dozen.

Tariffs of other Wines sent post free.

Cheques requested to be crossed "London and Westminster Bank."

FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION,

32, REGENT CIRCUS, PICCADILLY, LONDON, 1861.

GOOD DOUBLE GLOUCESTER CHEESE.

7d. and 7½d. per lb.

FINE LARGE CHEESE, weighing 1 cwt. each, 8d. per lb.

RIPE STILTON, 10d. and 1s. per lb. The Connoisseur's Delight, 15d.

SMALL BREAKFAST TONGUES, 3s. 6d. the half-dozen.

SMOKED OX TONGUES, 2s. 3d. each, or three for 6s. 6d.

FINE HAM, 7½d. and 8d. per lb.

OSBORNE'S PEAT-SMOKED BREAKFAST BACON is now in excellent cure.

BUTTER in perfection, at reasonable rates.

A saving of 15 per cent. is effected by the purchaser at this establishment on all first-class provisions. Packages gratis.

OSBORNE'S CHEESE WAREHOUSE.

OSBORNE HOUSE, 30, LUDGATE-HILL,

Near St. Paul's, E.C.

PICTURE FRAMES.—Cheap and Good Gilt Frames

for Oil Paintings, 24 by 24, 4 inches wide, 20s. Ornamental Frames for Drawings, 14½ by 10, 4 s. each. The Art Union Prints, framed in a superior style, at the lowest prices. Neat gilt frames, for the Illustrated Portraits, 1s. 6d. each. Gilt Room Bordering at 4s. per yard. Oil paintings cleaned, lined, and restored; old frames re-gilt equal to new. The trade and country dealers supplied with gilt and fancy wood mouldings, print, &c. German Prints 8s. per dozen. Neat gilt Frames, 17 by 13, with glass complete, 1s. 6d. each. CHARLES REES, Carver, Gilder, Mount Maker, and Print Seller, 36, Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

BEST SETS OF TEETH.—EDWD. MILES &

SON, Dentists, invite the attention of persons desirous to secure the ECONOMY and DURABILITY of their best and newest work in SETS of TEETH of every description; adapted without pain or extraction, with improvements, the result of 20 years' active practice. Their 2s. work post free, or extracts gratis. Toothache for the most part cured without extraction. Best stopping with gold, &c.

15, Liverpool-street, Bishopsgate Church, City, E.C.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street,

has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from 10 till 8.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

 Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.*

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, AUGUST 31, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

The pressure on our space has compelled us to postpone till now the publication of an important paper, consisting of observations drawn up by a committee of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, in reply to inquiries addressed to them by the commission now sitting on the funds of the Court of Chancery. The subject of inquiry was the constitution and working of the Accountant-General's Office, and the suggestions of the sub-committee on this subject, the agitation of which is mainly due to a series of papers which have appeared in this Journal, will be found to recommend themselves at once to the reader's attention, from their practical treatment of the details of the question. One of the first and most pressing reforms urged by these gentlemen is the establishment of a branch of the Bank of England in Chancery-lane, for the convenience, economy of time, and security alike of those who pay money into court and of those who receive it. They also recommend the abolition of one of the duplicate set of books kept by the Accountant-General and the Bank, as a useless measure of precaution; and then proceed to discuss under separate headings—first, the forms to be gone through by the suitor before reaching the Accountant-General's Office; secondly, the dealings of the suitor with that office; thirdly, the suitor's proceedings after leaving the office; and fourthly, the dealings of the Accountant-General with the Bank. Simplification of the numerous and tedious forms requisite before payment into court is a very obvious improvement; and with respect to the forms of orders, it is suggested that a method may be adopted with advantage, from the system of slave compensation payments, where the principle adopted was, that the Court declared rights with regard to the figures as they stood when the account was opened; thus, leaving it to the Accountant-General to apply that declaration to the funds in their altered and accumulated state. As to dealings between the suitor and the office, it is proposed that affidavits of calculation should be entirely dispensed with. As the case now stands, the solicitor has to make an affidavit of calculation, by which, however, the Accountant-General is not bound. The result is that the practitioner invariably inquires beforehand at the office the amount of the funds and cash then standing in the Accountant-General's name, information which is generally afforded with the least possible convenience to the applicant. The amounts are rapidly read out, and no memorandum whatever is furnished by the office. Delay in obtaining the voucher from the office is truly pointed out as a source of uneasiness to the clients of solicitors, not only in the country, but in town. The counter-signature of the Registrar is remarked upon as being a very insufficient check against fraud, having been established at a time when other machinery was at work in the office, which is now abolished. To the inconveniences pointed out by the sub-committee, we may add this, that the duty must necessarily be an irksome one to the Registrar himself. It is unsatisfactory to any officer to be called upon to affix his signature to a draft, in order to authenticate it and make it payable, when, practically, he cannot either verify the document or identify the person who presents it to him as the proper payee. The concluding remarks of the committee will, perhaps, attract more attention than any other. They point to nothing less than the abolition of the personal office of Accountant-General altogether. They shew that the magnitude of the office is such as to place its details far out of the reach of the supervision of one person, however energetic and experienced; thus leaving matters to the integrity of clerks, who, certainly, have in a remarkable manner, proved their trustworthiness; but whose liability in case of fraud or accident appears to be undecided, whilst the chances of irregularity, of which they may possibly be the victims, are not averted by the adoption of the most approved modern provisions. An institution similar to that of the recent post-office savings banks is recommended, where deposits can be made by suitors who may not have time for investment. It is apparent that much of the cumbrous and antiquated machinery of this department of the court is doomed to destruction; and amongst the suggestions for improvement, none will have more weight than those of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association.

Complaints are again rife with respect to an old grievance—the closing of the Office of the Accountant in Bankruptcy for two entire months during the long vacation. A notice at the office in Basinghall-street informs the public that, "in accordance with the order of the Lord Chancellor," the vacation will commence on the 8th of August and end on the 5th of October, both days inclusive. The order itself, however, is not published, and whether it is a general order dated in some previous year, and extending to the present date, or whether it is an order issued by the Lord Chancellor from year to year, the public are not informed. In the Offices of Records and Writs, and of the registrars in Chancery, a better management prevails, and a copy of the actual order is exhibited for the information of those whom it may concern. If this were done in the bankruptcy offices, we should at least learn when and by whom the two months' vacation of the Accountant in Bankruptcy was sanctioned. The provision regulating the vacations in bankruptcy is the 10th section of the Consolidated Act of 1849, whereby the vacations in several offices of the Court of Bankruptcy are assimilated, though not in stringent terms, to those of the Court of Chancery. By the Chancery Orders (5th Consolidated Order, rule 1) the office of the Accountant-General is excepted from the ordinary fixed rules respecting vacations in other branches of the Court; and we presume that the Accountant in Bankruptcy, in like manner, considers himself exempted from ordinary fixed rules respecting the opening of his office; and to be subject to the special order of the Lord Chancellor. But if the analogy to the corresponding office in chancery is adopted at all by the Accountant in Bankruptcy, why is it not carried out in full? We find that by an order of Lord Campbell, dated the 6th June, 1861, the books of the Accountant-General are to be closed from Monday, 19th August, to Monday, the 28th of October, more than two months, it is true; but there is this important addition, that on the 14th, 15th, and 16th October, the offices are to be open for the delivery of drafts payable in respect of the October dividends. Even with this relaxation, the length of the vacation is complained of. But no such indulgence is conceded by the Accountant in Bankruptcy. A correspondent of the Times states that about the 12th of August he received a dividend warrant from the Liverpool district court on the Accountant in London for a considerable sum, which he finds he will not be able to receive till after the 5th October, a matter not only inconvenient, but involving the loss of two months' interest. We have every reason to believe that this very reasonable subject of complaint will not be of much longer standing, and that it will be remedied in the framing and settlement of the new bankruptcy orders.

PARLIAMENTARY PAPERS OF THE SESSION
RELATING TO LAW AND LAWYERS.

III.

3. POLICE AND CRIMINALS—(continued).

In the early part of the last century, the Queen's mercy was wont to be extended to thieves on condition of transporting themselves to the West Indies. As they often neglected to perform the condition, and there was at the same time a great want of servants in the British colonies and plantations in America, power was given by an Act of the 4 Geo. 1 to the Court before which such offenders were convicted, instead of ordering them to be burnt in the hand, or whipt, to direct that they should be sent to some of those colonies and plantations for seven years, and to convey them to the use of any person who should contract for the transportation. In capital offences, or where any offenders were excluded the benefit of clergy, and the King was pleased to pardon on condition of transportation to America, the court might allow the pardon and direct the transfer and conveyance of the culprit to any person for fourteen years, or any term made part of the condition; and such person was to have a property in the transport's service for the term. Sixty years later, in the 19 Geo. 3, it was made lawful to order the transportation to any parts beyond the seas of persons liable to be transported to America. In 1792 a proposal was made by Jeremy Bentham to contract with the Government for the management of 1,000 male convicts in a national penitentiary to be erected by him. Power was subsequently given to Government, and Bentham became feoffee of land by an Act for the purpose of carrying out the proposal. A sum of £2,000 was advanced to him, which, with other considerable sums, he laid out in preparations with respect to the plan of the building, the employment to be given to the convicts, and the system of management, and certain patented mechanical works, the invention of his brother Brigadier-General Samuel Bentham. The Government withdrew from the scheme; and in 1812 an Act was passed for compensating Jeremy Bentham, and for building the Penitentiary at Millbank. It gave authority to the King to order persons in Newgate under sentence of transportation to be confined in the Penitentiary for certain terms according to the term of the sentence of transportation. By a revising and consolidating Act of the 3 Geo. 4 it was provided, that when an offender was transported in a king's ship, a secretary of state might nominate some person to have the custody of the offender; and the governor or other person to whom the contractor or nominee should deliver such offender might assign him, and so as often as might be thought fit. By this Act, too, the King was empowered to appoint any place in England, either at land or on board a vessel, for the confinement of persons under sentence of transportation, to which a secretary of state might direct the removal of any male offender under sentence of transportation until he should be transported, or become entitled to his liberty, or be ordered by a secretary of state to be taken back to the prison from which he was removed. Having thus briefly indicated the origin of our system of transportation and convict prisons we pass to the year 1853, when the difficulty of transporting offenders beyond sea made it expedient to substitute in certain cases other punishment. By an Act of that year (c. 99), a person who otherwise would have been liable to transportation became liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for a certain relative term mentioned in the Act. This discretion was abolished by the 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, which enacted that a person should not be sentenced to transportation, but should, instead, be liable to penal servitude of the like duration as the term of transportation. At the same time, persons under sentence of penal servitude might be conveyed to any place beyond the seas to which offenders under sentence of transportation might be conveyed, or which might be appointed by the Queen in council. The system of transportation, in its utility, economy, and room for improvement, was inquired into and reported upon last session (286) by a select committee of the Commons. Since the discontinuance of transportation to New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land, and the substitution of penal servitude, the number and duration of the sentences have greatly decreased; the average annual number for transportation in 1850—1852 having been 4,962, all for seven years and upwards; the average for penal servitude in 1858—1860, 2,723, of which only 515 were for periods exceeding six years. In the last-mentioned three years respectively there were transported to Western Australia, 550, 224, and 296; to Bermuda, 640, 281, 0; and to Gibraltar, 0, 140, 0. Of the plan of sending convicts to Bermuda and Gibraltar, employing them on public works there, and bringing them back to this country to be discharged, the committee doubts the advantage. The gross charge for transportation and establishment in 1858-9 was, for Western Australia, £80,000; Bermuda, £65,000; Gibraltar, £35,000. The total number of convicts not being expeirces or conditionally pardoned men, in Western Australia, in June, 1860, was 2,432, of whom 774 were maintained by Government, and 1,658 held tickets of leave. The other Australian colonies desire that transportation to any part of Australia should be abandoned, and some have made laws to keep out from their territories the convicts of Western Australia. But there is no sufficient evidence to show that such convicts have seriously affected any other Australian colony, while it is proved that many of them in Western Australia now lead honest and independent lives. The transportation of women has been abandoned for many years.

From Bermuda, a letter of August, 1860, to the colonial minister from Governor Murray, who had made an unexpected night visit in the hot season to all the convict prisons and hulks, bears witness to good order, regularity, and wholesomeness. The comptroller's report to the governor states that a system of marks, as a test of conduct, had awakened among the prisoners an emulation previously unknown. The prisoners were employed in the naval works, in those of the royal engineers, and in public buildings. The great evil, fatal to discipline, was want of officers' quarters; another evil, the large number of prisoners in the hulks. The average daily number of convicts was 1,206. Of 1,357 in custody in 1860, 10 died; one by his own hand. There were 1,382 punishments, some men being punished ten or twelve times. No more than 26 punishments were for theft. The greater number were for insolence, disobedience, and idleness. In summer, the day is 15 hours—labour 8, meals 2½, prayers ½, in-doors 4. In winter, an hour less in-doors. Each man's food weekly is 10½ pounds of bread, 1½ pounds of biscuit, 4 pounds of fresh beef, 1½ pounds of salt pork, and 7 of vegetables, with the addition of tea, sugar, cocoa, and oatmeal, and 3½ gills of rum. The commoner trades are practised within the prisons. The chaplain and surgeon also make their reports to the governor. From the schoolmaster's return appended to the former it is seen that out of 1,009 convicts, 6 can neither read nor write, 32 can read only, 154 read and write incorrectly, 481 read and write well, while 336 are well instructed.

At Gibraltar, the public works, Governor Codrington considers, are suitable for furnishing labour to the prisoners, and teaching them some occupation by which they may profit on their release; but in the case of convicts for life or long periods, hopelessness nullifies the advantages to the country. For the mere sake of a possible removal to England four prisoners of long sentences had made a murderous assault on the assistant surgeon. The prisoners were employed, as at Bermuda, in public works. Six, in imitation of a course adopted by Sir J. Jebb in the prisons in England, were sent to work in public gardens, without any warder, and had given every satisfaction. There are public works of great importance sufficient to employ a thousand prisoners for many years to come, but if reformation is expected, buildings such as those at Chatham and Portland must be erected. The average daily number in 1860 was 730. Of the total number of 844 in the year 17 died—13 from cholera, which spread from Spain. About half the prisoners were under thirty years of age. The punishments in the year were 950. There are two diet tables there, one for the workers, another for the idlers; the latter having only 7 pounds of bread and 26 ounces of meat weekly, while the former have 8½ pounds and 40 ounces respectively. The establishment of the idlers' scale had caused a riot. There are also allowances as indulgences to prisoners in advanced stages of penal servitude. For the year 1860 the estimated value of the work done is £23,458 19s. 8½d. The average per prisoner of the cost of the whole penal establishment is £31 9s. 3d., while in the prisons in England the average is £34 2s. 2d. Of 563 prisoners in Dec., 1860, the numbers who could read, not at all, imperfectly, fairly, and well, were respectively 6, 43, 145, & 369; and as to writing, the corresponding numbers were 15, 58, 352, and 138. These accounts from Bermuda and Gibraltar form a blue book. Respecting the conflict of opinion in the Australian colonies, and particularly between Tasmania and Western Australia, as to the advantage of the introduction of convict labour, further correspondence between the colonial secretary and the governors of these two colonies has been presented also in a blue book. It contains numerous scattered statistics, but they are of a controversial character, and are not in a shape convenient for reproduction.

Since we completed the head of Police and Criminals, the 26th report of the inspectors of prisons for the Midland district has appeared. We have space only to remark, that the fault of being meagre and perfunctory, which we imputed to the report for the Southern district, does not seem to be chargeable on this blue book. It contains numerous tables, which were wanting in the other, and has three times as many pages.

4. PUBLIC EXPENDITURE.

The 3rd class in the abstract of the Civil Service Estimates (H. C. 131) shows the current year's cost of law and justice, compared with the cost for the year ending March, 1861. Relative to the subject which we have last treated, as regards England and Wales, criminal prosecutions, sheriffs' expenses, &c., are set down at £167,000, being an increase of £67,000 on the year 1860. The expense of the constabulary of Great Britain is £224,575; the salaries and expenses of the police courts of the metropolis, £21,355; those of the metropolitan police, £136,204, being nearly £5,000 more than in 1860. The prison and convict services at home and abroad furnish items of £17,695 for inspection and superintendence in the United Kingdom; £378,879 for the establishments at home, showing a decrease of about £30,000 on the last year; the maintenance of prisoners in county gaols and the removal of convicts, £213,976, in which there is an increase of about £54,000; transportation, £15,776, being about £5,000 less than in the past year; and for the convict establishments in the colonies, £160,590, or more than a decrease of £13,000 on the year 1860. The total of this expenditure in the administration and execution of the criminal law is £1,336,050. The salaries and expenses of the county courts are estimated at £200,320; the Probate Court at £71,980 against £34,280 of the year 1860. The revising barristers cost the country £17,650 a year. The details of these estimates are given in a separate paper (131, III.), and there is a special return (H. C. 442) of the amounts paid to the treasurers of the several counties in England and Wales on account of the expenses of criminal prosecutions and maintenance of prisoners in the year 1860. From the detailed estimates it is seen that the decrease of £30,000 for the prisons and convict establishments at home is principally due to building and fitting operations in the past year at Woking Prison, and at the criminal lunatic asylum near Sandhurst. The increase of £54,000 in maintenance of prisoners and removal of convicts is not borne out by the detailed estimates, the totals there being for the year ending March, 1862, £213,976 1s. 3d., and for the year ending March, 1861, £229,357 5s. 10d., showing a decrease of above £15,000. We must leave the Chancellor of the Exchequer to explain this discrepancy of £69,000, trusting only that it is not a specimen of the degree of accuracy with which such papers are framed.

The public expenditure on law and lawyers in 1860 was not all embraced by the civil service estimates for that year. Contingencies must be met; accordingly, a paper (H. C. 224) with that object sets down £3,071 3s. 4d. as expenses incurred for legal and other professional services. Among these are £500 to each of the two draftsmen, Mr. A. J. Wood and Mr. F. S. Reilly, for services in preparing a new edition of the statutes; £100 to Mr. H. T. Holland for drawing the Common Law Procedure Bill of 1860; and £300 and £200 to Mr. D. R. Pigott and Mr. F. M'Blaine respectively for preparing Bills for the amendment of the criminal law of Ireland. Rewards, compensations, and expenses connected with criminal justice are provided for by a moderate sum under £700, including £279 10s. as fees paid to certain scientific persons for professional services in cases of alleged poisoning at Liverpool; fees of £56 5s. 6d. to Professor Taylor for analyses in two criminal cases; and fifty guineas to Mr. Nunneley for a like analysis.

The Courts, Appointments, Promotions, Vacancies, &c.

The Chief Justice of New South Wales has been pleased to appoint Paul J. Gordon, Esq., of 18, Old Broad-street (of the firm of Sills & Gordon) as permanent commissioner in England for taking evidence and affidavits for that colony.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint William Hackett, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, to be her Majesty's Advocate for her Forts and Settlements on the Gold Coast.

The Lord Chief Justice has appointed Thomas Hull Terrell, Alfred Hanson, and Henry S. Maine, Esqs., of the Chancery Bar, to revise the lists of voters for the metropolitan boroughs, the city of London, and the county of Middlesex.

Recent Decisions.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENT—STATUTE 13 ELIZ. C. 5.

Thompson v. Webster, 9 W. R. 641.

The decision of the House of Lords in Thompson v. Webster is mainly important, on the ground that it declares emphatically, and by way of affirmation of the previous decrees of the Lords Justices and Vice-Chancellor Kindersley, the true principle of construction which is to be applied to the statute of the 13 Eliz. for the protection of creditors against fraudulent conveyances. By the terms of that statute it is enacted that all conveyances of any property "made of malice, fraud, covin, collusion, or guile, to the end, purpose, and intent, to delay, hinder, or defraud creditors or others" of their debts, shall be deemed and taken as against such creditors, &c., their heirs, executors, &c., to be "clearly and utterly void;" but it is provided (sect. 8) that the Act shall not extend to any estate or interest made, conveyed, or assured "upon good consideration and bonâ fide," to any persons not having notice of such covin, fraud, or collusion.

The first leading decision in the statute is that of Twyne's case, 3 Co. Rep. 80 b., where it was laid down that a good consideration is not enough to take the case out of the statute, unless it is bonâ fide also; the consideration must be both good, and also without fraud, covin, collusion, or guile. So that where A., being indebted to B. in £400, and to C. in £200, and being sued by C., pending the writ, by secret deed assigns all his goods and chattels (without excepting even apparel) to B., but continues in possession of the property, consisting of sheep, sells some and puts a mark on others, this is a fraudulent conveyance, because, though good, as being in consideration of B's debt, it is made with intent to delay, hinder, or defraud C.

Although sect. 8 speaks of "good," and not of "valuable," consideration, thereby excepting out of the statute all conveyances for meritorious considerations, such as natural love and affection, and the like, provided they are also bonâ fide, it seems to have been held at first by the Courts that all voluntary conveyances were an evidence of fraud; and if not made for pecuniary or valuable consideration, were void as against actual or future creditors; Apharry v. Bodingham, Cro. Eliz. 350; Stiles v. The Attorney-General, 2 Atk. 152; Ex parte Hall, 1 V. & B. 112. In St. Amand v. Lady Jersey, Comyn, 255, it was held that a voluntary conveyance is bad in equity against bond debts afterwards contracted, there having been other bond debts existing at the time of the settlement. Here also may be mentioned a dictum of Lord Hardwicke, many years later, in 1750, that "there is no case where a person indebted makes a conveyance of a real or chattel interest for the benefit of a child, without the consideration of marriage or other valuable consideration, and dying afterwards indebted, that it shall take place;" (Townshend v. Windham, 2 Ves. Sen. 10), a passage which has been commented on and explained by Sir T. Plumer, in Holloway v. Millard, infra. But it was soon settled that the statute only extended to those voluntary conveyances which were made by a person who was indebted at the time, or where the deed itself was fraudulent; Shaw v. Standish, 2 Vern 327. In Russel v. Hammond, 1 Atk. 15, Lord Hardwicke said expressly that "a settlement being voluntary is not for that reason fraudulent; it is an evidence of fraud only (thus far the old doctrine was retained), though he hardly knew one case where the person conveying was indebted at the time that it had not been deemed fraudulent. But a voluntary settlement is not fraudulent when the person making it is not indebted at the time; nor will subsequent debts shake such settlement." So again, in Walker v. Burrows, 1 Atk. 93, Lord Hardwicke says, "It has been said that all voluntary settlements are void against creditors equally the same as they are against subsequent purchasers, under the statute of the 27th of Eliz. But this will not hold, for there is always a distinction between the two statutes; it is necessary, on the 13th Eliz., to prove at the making of the settlement the person conveying was indebted at the time, or immediately after the execution of the deed."

Upon the decisions in Russel v. Hammond and Walker v. Burrows, two questions arose—one as to what amount or degree of indebtedness on the part of the settlor, at the time of the settlement, would suffice to vitiate the conveyance; the other, under what circumstances, if any, a voluntary deed could be set aside by subsequent creditors. The two questions were, in many instances, as in Russel v. Hammond, discussed and decided together. As to the first, the doctrine of the Courts, having been stretched to its limits in either direction, is now settled; the latter is still left in some degree of uncertainty. In Stillman v. Ashdown, 2 Atk. 481, we find Lord Hardwicke laying it down that "it is not necessary that a man should be actually indebted at the time he makes a voluntary settlement, to make it fraudulent; for if he does it with a view to his being indebted at a future time, it is equally so, and ought to be set aside." This dictum is remarkable as containing the germ of the rule of construction afterwards adopted. In Lush v. Wilkinson, 5 Ves. 387, a somewhat different view is adopted by the Master of the Rolls, Sir R. P. Arden. He says (as to the first question): "I very much doubt whether a subsequent creditor has a right to come without proving an antecedent debt." (As to the second): "A single debt will not do. Every man must be indebted for the common bills of his house, though he pays them every week. It must depend upon this, whether he was in insolvent circumstances at the time." And in Kidney v. Coussmaker, 12 Ves. 150, it is reported as having been admitted by Sir S. Romilly, that Stephens v. Olive, 2 Bro. C. C. 90, and Lush v. Wilkinson establish, that it is not sufficient that the settlor was indebted at the date of the settlement, unless the debts then existing were still unsatisfied, or the man was insolvent at the time.

This apparent contradiction between the authorities—some of which seem to say that a conveyance by a man absolutely unindebted at the time may afterwards be avoided; others, that he must be in insolvent circumstances at the time, in order that such a result may follow—was reconciled by Sir T. Plumer, in Holloway v. Millard, 1 Madd. 414. The plaintiffs there were creditors subsequent to the date of the settlement, which was voluntary, and made by a person not indebted at the time. The Master of the Rolls, after observing that the word "voluntary" was not to be found in either the 13th Eliz. c. 5, or the 27th Eliz. c. 4, thus summed up the law:—"A conveyance is not fraudulent because it is voluntary. A voluntary conveyance may be made of real and personal property without any consideration whatever, and cannot be avoided by subsequent creditors, unless of the description mentioned in the statute. If a person having £1,000 a-year, and not indebted at the time, gives away £600 a-year, the gift is not fraudulent, unless it were made with an intent to defeat subsequent creditors. Its being voluntary is primâ facie evidence, where the party is loaded with debt at the time, of an intention to defeat his creditors; but if unindebted, his disposition is good." And the Court refused an inquiry as to the indebtedness of the grantor, unless some ground were laid for it in the pleadings. In Richardson v. Smallwood, Jac. 552, on the other hand, the same learned judge entertained a suit to set aside a settlement where the plaintiff was a person who became a subsequent creditor by the breach of a covenant previously entered into. The settlor was in embarrassed circumstances. In a case of Shears v. Rogers, 3 B. & Adol. 362, a few years later, in the Queen's Bench, the doctrine as to indebtedness appears to have again receded. The Court, at least, acquiesced in the view that a man must be in insolvent circumstances in order to render a conveyance by him fraudulent within the statute; although even here Littleton, J., says that the question of insolvency must be determined not only by striking a balance between a man's debts and credits, but also by looking to his conduct and the general state of his affairs. A less hesitating approval of the doctrine laid down in Lush v. Wilkinson, on the part of Sugden, L.C., many years later, is to be found in Martyn v. McNamara, 4 Dr. & W. 427; but the expressions of the eminent judge must be taken subject to the qualifications suggested by subsequent cases. In Townsend v. Westacott, 2 Beav. 340, a case where a man, indebted at the time, made a voluntary settlement in April, 1830, on his housekeeper's daughter, soon after married the housekeeper, and in October, 1832, was imprisoned for debt, and took the benefit of the Insolvent Act, Lord Langdale, M.R., directed inquiries, from which it appeared that the settlor's debts at the date of the settlement were about £3,500. He observed—"There has been a little exaggeration in the agreement on both sides as to the principle on which the Court acts in cases like this. On one side it has been assumed that the existence of any debts at the time of the execution of the deed would be such evidence of a fraudulent intention as to induce the Court to set aside the voluntary conveyance, and oblige the Court to do so under the statute of Elizabeth. I cannot think the real and just construction of the statute warrants that proposition, because there is scarcely any man who can avoid being indebted to some amount. He may intend to pay every debt as soon as it is contracted, and conscientiously use his best endeavours to employ means to do so, and yet may frequently, if not always, be indebted in some small sum. There may be a withholding of claims contrary to his intention by which he is kept indebted in spite of himself. It would be idle to allege this as the least foundation for assuming fraud or any bad intention. On the other hand, it was said that something amounting to insolvency must be proved to set aside a voluntary conveyance. That, too, is inconsistent with the principle of the statute, and with the judgments of the most eminent judges." The settlement in this case was set aside as fraudulent. This modern view of construction has been repeatedly followed. Thus, in an instance where only one small debt was alleged against the grantor, and there was no suspicion of fraud, Brady, C.B., refused to allow an inquiry as to indebtedness; Manders v. Manders, 4 Ir. Eq. Rep. 434. The same eminent authority elsewhere expounds the view which is now universally acted upon:—"It appears to me that the solvency of the party affords no infallible rule, but that each case must be judged by its own particular circumstances. On the one hand it is too much to say that the insolvency of the party would, per se, be enough to make the deed fraudulent; while, on the other hand, his solvency will not necessarily exclude the possibility of the deed being fraudulent;" Clements v. Eccles, 11 Ir. Eq. Rep. 229;

where inquiries were directed by the Court, the case appearing prima facie to be within the statute. An instance where a voluntary deed was upheld, though the settlor was largely indebted, is to be found in Re Magawley's Trusts, 5 De G. & Sm. 1; a case which was remarkable on other grounds. One of the last occasions on which the subject in both its branches was discussed is Holmes v. Penney, 3 K. & J. 90, before Vice-Chancellor Wood. His Honour observed—"With respect to voluntary settlements, the result of the authorities is that the mere fact of a settlement being voluntary is not enough to render it void against creditors; but there must be unpaid debts which were existing at the time of making the settlement, and the settlor must have been at the time not necessarily insolvent, but so largely indebted as to induce the Court to believe that the intention of the settlement, taking the whole transaction together, was to defraud the persons who, at the time of making the settlement, were creditors of the settlor. The mere fact of a man making a voluntary settlement, and thereby parting with a large portion of his property, has never been held to make such a settlement fraudulent as against subsequent creditors. I may I do not know that such has ever been held to be the case; and, perhaps, it is a question which still remains to be determined."

The remarks of Vice-Chancellor Kindersley and of Lord Chancellor Campbell in Thompson v. Webster fully confirm the proposition that it is no longer necessary to have absolute insolvency in order to overturn a settlement under the statute; whilst, the further point, whether a voluntary conveyance made by a person absolutely unindebted at the time may be set aside at the suit of future creditors, is still comparatively untouched by authority. In all cases the validity of the settlement depends upon the motive of the settlor. That motive has to be collected from his acts in relation to surrounding circumstances. A past decision can do no more than guide the judge or jury, as the case may be, to a conclusion on a question of this nature—it does not bind them by an inflexible rule so long as any material difference exists between the facts in the reported case and those on which they have to decide.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

RIGHT OF A MORTGAGEE TO RECOVER TWENTY YEARS' ARREARS OF INTEREST—3 & 4 WILL. 4, c. 27, s. 42; 3 & 4 WILL. 4, c. 42, s. 3.

Lewis v. Duncombe, M. R., 9 W. R. 446; Round v. Bell, M. R., 9 W. R. 846.

In the latter case a question has been determined which was long a moot point—viz., whether a covenant in a mortgage deed entitles the mortgagee, in a foreclosure suit to recover arrears of interest for twenty years before the filing of the bill, as against the mortgaged premises. His Honour adhered to the opinion formed by him in Lewis v. Duncombe—a case which his Honour stated he had found, in common with other cases which had come under his observation, very accurately reported in the Weekly Reporter. The difficulty was occasioned by a seeming conflict between two enactments. The 3rd section of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, has provided that actions of debt on specialties may be brought within twenty years after the cause of action shall have accrued; while the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, had previously enacted that no arrears of rent or of interest in respect of any money charged on land should be recoverable for more than six years. His Honour held that where there is only a simple mortgage deed, such as was in the present case, only six years of interest could be recovered against the estate. In the cases which seem to have decided the contrary the relation of cestui que trust and trustee existed between the parties; so that the 42nd section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, did not apply; Young v. Lord Waterpark, 13 Sim. 204; Cox v. Dolman, 2 De G. M. & G. 592. The origin of the doubts concerning this question of law may perhaps be attributed to the decision in Hunter v. Nockolds, 1 M. & G. 640. The abstract question decided in that case was against the validity of a claim for interest on foot of a charge on land for more than six years. But the value of that decision was much lessened by the fact that the instrument creating the charge contained a trust term securing it, and yet that term was never once mentioned in the argument or decision as affecting the rights of the parties. The distinction, however, drawn in Cox v. Dolman, and followed in Lewis v. Duncombe, is, doubtless, the true principle, as observed by his Honour in the present case, which should govern such cases—viz., where there is a simple mortgage deed only six years' interest can be recovered against the estate; but where there is a trust, such as a trust term to secure the mortgage, or, as in

Lewis v. Duncombe, where an estate is vested in trustees to secure an annuity, the full amount of the arrears may be recovered. In the present case there was no trust term, and, therefore, there was nothing to prevent the 42nd section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, from applying, and limiting the mortgagee's right to recover interest to six years before the filing of his bill.

There had been an administration suit of the mortgagor's estate in another branch of the court, and if the plaintiff had come in under that suit, he could of course, as a specialty creditor under the bond and covenant securing the mortgage debt have recovered arrears of interest for twenty years. As he did not do so, he was now precluded from tacking the bond and covenant to the mortgage in a foreclosure suit so as to charge the estate. The right to tack a bond to a mortgage, as against the heir of the debtor, is founded on the ground of its preventing circuity of action. Such a right is not allowed as against mere incumbrancers, because the bond debt is not, except as regards the heir of the mortgagor, a charge on the land; Smith's Man. Eq. Jur. p. 198, ed. 1849. Such a right to tack depends, therefore, upon the right of the mortgagee to sue the heir, and there was no representative of the mortgagor before the Court. The mortgagee was thus precluded both by his own laches, as also by the state of the pleadings in the foreclosure suit, from tacking so as to recover twenty years' arrears of interest.

It is not surprising that doubts existed as to the operation of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, in respect to charges on land which are also secured by the bond or other specialty of the debtor; as these belong to a class of obligations which, even though they should be incurred without any consideration, may nevertheless be enforced within twenty years by force of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3. This enactment was considered by most lawyers to have pro tanto repealed the former Act—to be, as it were, an exception to its general scope and provisions, just as express trusts are excepted from its own purview by the 25th section. The case of Round v. Bell, however, dispels all causes of doubt as to the present state of the law in this respect, and as to the reasons which have led to the construction which has been put upon the Statute of Limitations. The effect of this decision will be to lead conveyancers invariably to insert in every deed of mortgage a trust term, which will preclude any ground for disputing the mortgagee's right to recover arrears for twenty years.

COMMON LAW.

CRIMINAL PLEADING—SEVERAL PLEAS, WHEN ALLOWED.

Reg. v. Charleworth, Q. B., 9 W. R. 805.

In this notorious case a point of criminal pleading was raised, which, though scarcely of a doubtful nature, was seriously discussed by a formidable array of counsel. It is, however, well, that in these days of constant change, the ancient landmarks of the law should be occasionally examined into, and if found to be unobjectionable, adhered to with resolution. Of these landmarks one is that in pleading, a single answer only shall be given to a single charge. In civil cases indeed, this rule has long been broken into; first by the statute of Ann. (4 & 5 Ann. c. 16), and again quite recently by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852; but in criminal cases generally, the common law rule remains intact. The only exception is that in felonies the prisoner is allowed, through the clemency of the law (originally established in favorem vite) to plead a special plea in bar, and if he fail thereon, then to place on the record the general issue of "not guilty." But this practice does not apply to an indictment or information for a misdemeanour (see Reg. v. Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502), and hence the defendant so charged must rely either on a special plea or on his being "not guilty;" and cannot be allowed to retain both on the record, or to substitute one for the other. In the present case, the defendant having originally pleaded "not guilty" to an information for bribery, and having been placed on his trial thereon, the jury were discharged from giving a verdict. On this he sought to place on the record a special plea, amounting to the defence of autrefois acquit (in effect a plea puis darrein continuance), but the Court held that this would be pleading "double," which the criminal law does not permit; and that the proper course for the defendant to adopt would be (in the event of his subsequent conviction), to bring error: for by that method the discharge of the jury, in his first trial, on which he relied, would necessarily appear on the record; and be dealt with by the Court more regularly and more conveniently than if argued by way of plea,—to which there might be a demurrer decided in favour of the prisoner, though the issue raised by the plea of "not guilty" remained undisposed of on the record.

Correspondence.

TITHE RENT CHARGE.

The tithe rent charges for the parish of A. are charged under what is called a field apportionment—that is to say, each field is specifically charged in the apportionment, with a sum of tithe thus:—

Landowner.	Occupier.	No.	Quantity.			Rent charge payable to the Vicar.
			A.	B.	P.	£	s.	d.
Lord Peters	John Smith	276	1	0	24	0	5	0
		278	4	3	9	0	19	6
		340	18	2	30	4	10	0
		608	5	2	12	1	4	6
		720	12	0	4	3	0	4
		904	6	1	1	1	10	0
			48	1	30	11	9	4

Since the apportionment Lord Peters has sold No. 340 to Joseph Taylor, who occupies it himself.

Will some of your readers inform me whether the vicar is entitled to recover from Joseph Taylor, who occupies No. 340, the whole £11 9s. 4d. charged on the 48a. 1r. 30p., making Taylor get back the proportion from the other tenants, or can he only require Taylor to pay the £4 10s. set opposite to his land; and I shall be obliged if a reference to some case or Act of Parliament can be given as an authority.

A CONSTANT READER.

JUDGMENT DEBT—INTEREST.

Your correspondent M. is, I think, clearly wrong in his opinion that a judgment on a bill of exchange carries £5 per cent. interest, because, as he says, it is within the 76th Practice Rule of Hilary Term, 1853. If he and your readers will refer to the 76th Rule, it will be seen that interest at more than £4 per cent. can only be charged on a judgment when "there is an agreement between the parties that more than £4 per cent. interest shall be secured by the judgment." How can it be said that when the bill was given a judgment was ever even contemplated?

B. P. A.

INVESTMENTS BY TRUSTEES—EAST INDIA STOCK

(SEE 22 & 23 VICT. C. 35, s. 32; 23 & 24 VICT. C. 38, ss. 10, 11; ORDER IN CHANCERY, 1st FEBRUARY, 1861).

Will your readers enlighten me as to the course to be pursued by trustees?

The first Act authorises trustees to invest in East India Stock, unless forbidden by the instrument creating the trust. But see Re Colne Valley and Halstead Railway, 8 W. R. 18, as to the East India New Loan.

The second Act and the order seem to authorise investment in the East India New Loan, but yet the Court refuses to authorise it. I have heard of one case in which an order has been made, but I have not been able to find the name, and consequently not the circumstances of the case. If the order of court does not include the East India New Loan, is it not too bad that the judges, after the doubt created by the above-quoted case, should have used the same language as in the first Act, and so have left trustees in doubt.

Is it now the practice to advise trustees to invest in the East India £5 per cent?

B. P. A.

ATTESTATION OF WILLS.

The following form has been used by me, and has answered:—

Signed, published, and declared by the above-named (A.B.), as and for his last will and testament, in the presence of us present at the same time, who at his request, in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses thereto.

B. P. A.

INSURANCE OF TRADE BUILDINGS, &c.

The tenant should insure for his own protection, because the lessee of a house who covenants generally to repair is bound to rebuild it if it be burned by accidental fire; and where the lessee covenants generally to pay rent, he is bound to pay it though the house be burned down. (Woodfall's "Landlord and Tenant," pp. 369 and 385, 7th ed.)

The landlord may deem it expedient to insure because the tenant may fail to insure, or keep up the insurance, and the tenant may not be worth suing. And even if the tenant insures, and the premises are within the weekly bills of mortality, the landlord may deem it expedient to insure, because the tenant may obtain the benefit of his insurance previously to the landlord being able to give notice to the insurance office of his interest in the premises.

An arrangement should be made between the landlord and the tenant for an insurance in their joint names. C.

THE ACCOUNTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY.

The Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association a short time ago published a paper containing observations of the Equity Sub-Committee of that Association in reference to the matters of complaint existing in connexion with the Accountant-General's department of the Court of Chancery, and recommendations and suggestions for remedying the same, drawn up in accordance with the request contained in the printed circular letter received from the Secretary to the Chancery Funds Commissioners. The paper is as follows:—

In our judgment, one of the first steps towards a reform of the present provisions for the custody and management of the funds of the suitors in Chancery should be the opening of a branch office of the Bank of England in Chancery-lane, in, or in immediate connexion with, the Accountant-General's office there, for the payment of Chancery drafts, and for the receipt of monies paid into court.

Very many of the recipients of money out of court are old and infirm; but even where they are younger and more active, the waste of time and the inconvenience of going to the city to get their money (not to mention the risk of loss) are sufficient to constitute a considerable grievance. It is likewise very inconvenient, and attended with risk, for persons paying money into court to be obliged to go first to the Accountant-General's office in Chancery-lane to obtain his directions and authority for the receipt of the money by the Bank, and then a mile and a half to the Bank of England in the city with the cash.

The suitors of the court are, we think, entitled to more consideration and accommodation in these respects than the present system affords.

A branch office of the Bank of England has long been established in the Court of Bankruptcy for the convenience of the suitors of that Court, and we have never heard of any fraud or loss resulting from it.

The next step should be the abolition of one of the duplicate sets of books which are kept by the Accountant-General and the Bank of England respectively, for though the cost of one of them is borne nominally by the Bank, the expense of both falls practically on the suitors. We think the Bank duplicate might with safety, and ought to, be dispensed with, and the Bank left to keep the monies of the Court much as it would those of any other customer; so far as we are aware, there is no other public department in which a duplicate set of books showing the subdivisions of every suitor's or customer's account is kept.

We beg also to submit the following recommendations which we have arranged under the heads suggested in the circular letter.

I.—As to forms to be gone through before the suitor reaches the Accountant-General's office, and, generally, dealings between the Court and the Accountant-General.

1. As regards paying money and transferring stock into court, and the expense and delay involved therein.

We think that money should be allowed to be paid into court without any special order of the Court, and also to be invested, in the same manner as money paid in under the Legacy Act, and that stock should be similarly permitted to be transferred into the name of the Accountant-General without an order, but that in lieu of an order it should be the duty of the solicitor so paying in or transferring to file with the Accountant-General a certificate signed by such solicitor, and in such form as may be directed by any General Order, stating the amount and the account and purpose in respect of which the money or stock is so paid in or transferred.

Under the present system, if the suitor wants to pay in money, he has first to obtain a special order, which it will take from ten days to thirty or more to procure, according to whether it can be made on summons or petition, or on a formal hearing in a cause. Having got his order passed and entered, the suitor lodges it at the Accountant-General's office, and after two clear days gets the "direction" and authority to the Bank to take the money.

In addition to the cost and inconvenience of these preliminary and useless forms, it often happens that a purchaser under the Court has to pay interest during the time thus occupied, which he might save if he could pay in without an order.

It is hardly necessary to remark that there is no risk in the Court receiving money.

We would further suggest that some arrangement ought to be made by the Bank of England for the receipt by its country branches of money going into court from the country, so as to save the risk, commission, and trouble of a remittance to London; and payments to country suitors should also be made, where desired, through such branches.

Sums enormous in the aggregate, remitted by trustees, receivers, and others, are nearly always lying in cash and uninvested in the hands of London agents, waiting to be paid into court until the forms of obtaining the necessary orders, certificates and directions, can be gone through. This subjects the agents as well as the principals to great and unnecessary responsibility from the risk of the failure of their bankers, and other causes, which might be obviated by giving the power of paying into court without any special order or directions, and either in London or through country branch banks at the option of the suitors.

2. As regards the present forms of orders, and in what way they might be simplified.

The plan adopted in making payments out of the Slave Compensation Fund, shows how much the system which at present prevails in the Accountant-General's office is capable of being simplified and improved, and we would recommend that it should be considered whether some such plan might not be usefully introduced there. The principle adopted in the Slave Compensation Orders was, that the Court declared rights with reference to the figures, as they stood when the account was opened, and left the Accountant-General to apply that declaration to the funds in their altered and accumulated state. It appears to us that the Slave Compensation Forms of Orders might safely and beneficially be employed in a large proportion of cases in Chancery, and that they should be adopted in all cases to which they may prove to be applicable. The reports of the old masters, and the certificates of the present chief clerks to the judges, are worked by the Accountant-General by means of schedules, and we cannot see why a large proportion of orders should not also be so worked.

3. Whether it would be desirable that the orders or office copies thereof should be transmitted from the Registrar's office to that of the Accountant-General, and filed there.

We think it would be undesirable that original orders should be filed in the office of the Accountant-General, as it is important, for many purposes of the suit, that every such original order should remain in the hands of the solicitor having the conduct of such suit; but we think that it should either be the duty of such solicitor to file an office copy of every money order in the Accountant-General's office, or that in some way the Accountant-General should be supplied with and keep an official copy or entry of it to work upon.

When an order has been completed or "passed" by the registrar, it is entered in the books of the Report Office, and any office copy is made from these books of original entry. It seems to us that the money orders, i.e., any orders which the Accountant-General has to work, might be entered in separate books from other orders, and these books of original entry might be given into the custody of the Accountant-General to work from. Such orders might be bound or entered in books, subdivided to correspond with the initial letters of the several departments or divisions of the Accountant-General's office, so that each department might retain, and have always accessible for reference, the orders relating to it.

II. As to dealings between the suitor and the Accountant-General's department.

1. As regards the expenses involved in powers of attorney, and in affidavits of calculation, and certificates of apportionment, and in what cases they might be safely dispensed with.

We are of opinion that powers of attorney, affidavits of calculation and certificates of apportionment might be safely dispensed with in all cases. That in lieu of powers of attorney the present system adopted by the Court of Bankruptcy on payment of dividends might be safely and usefully substituted, and that in lieu of affidavits of calculation and certificates of apportionment, the Accountant-General should himself ascertain and work out the results for which they are at present used.

As regards calculations, it appears to us monstrous that a department assumed to be skilled in figures, and having all the accounts to be dealt with in its own books and keeping, should throw the burthen of the calculations on the suitors and their solicitors.

As a matter of fact, no prudent practitioner ever makes an affidavit of calculation, unless of the very simplest character, without first ascertaining whether his figures agree with those in the Accountant-General's books, because the Accountant-General is in no degree bound by the affidavit, and is sure to reject it if it does not correspond with his own books.

2. As regards the complication and multiplicity of forms in use in the Accountant-General's department, and in what manner they might be most advantageously simplified.

See last answer, and No. 2 of part I.

3. As regards office hours and vacation.

We think that attendance similar to that required from the vacation judge and vacation registrar, should be given by the Accountant-General's department, to deal with matters of pressing urgency; any questions which may arise as to the urgency being determined by the vacation judge.

The present office hours are from ten to three, and from four to six, but we think more convenience would be afforded to the public and the profession, if the partial attendance from four to six were discontinued, and the first mentioned period extended to four o'clock.

4. Whether the present staff of the Accountant-General's office, and the subdivisions therein, are found by the profession insufficient at times of pressure, especially just previous to the long vacation.

They are no doubt insufficient at times of pressure. But we think the real fault on this head lies in the want of more subdivisions. It seems to some of our body, who have had the best opportunities of observing, that the junior clerks are often not fully employed at times when the seniors are much over-worked.

At the Bank of England the alphabet is so subdivided that in times of pressure there is only one letter for each clerk to attend to.

If the calculations for sale and purchase of stock should be thrown upon this department, as we suggest they should be, more assistance will probably be required, and it seems to us that under any system of subdivision, times of pressure will be likely to arise, when the ordinary staff will scarcely be equal to affording the facilities which the public have a right to expect.

We think some powers should be given for the employment of accountants and their clerks for the purpose of giving temporary assistance at such times. They need not be employed on the regular books, but for the purpose of calculations, and work of that kind, they might surely be made very useful.

We also suggest that investigation should be made to ascertain whether it is not practicable and safe to purchase in very many instances the stock in which suitors have life interests, in the joint names of the life tenants and of the Accountant-General, and thereby throw the burden of receiving the dividends thereon on such tenants for life, instead of, as at present, engrossing so much of the time of the Accountant-General and his clerks, and multiplying and encumbering his books to the present enormous extent, for no apparently useful purpose; or whether arrangements might not be made for the Bank to recognize and pay dividends under orders to tenants for life direct, even in cases in which the stock is allowed to remain in the sole name of the Accountant-General; the Bank of England, under either system, to notify the fact to the Accountant-General, if two, or say three, consecutive dividends should at any time remain unapplied for.

Either of these measures would relieve the Accountant-General's department of such a mass of work as would possibly render even the present staff fully adequate to the efficient performance of all the other duties of the department, without the necessity or expense of calling in further assistance.

5. Whether any inconvenience is caused from the circumstance that a voucher for the payment in of money is not obtainable immediately after the money is paid in.

There is this inconvenience that clients in the country, who have forwarded money to their solicitors to pay into court, are often surprised and uneasy that, instead of receiving an official acknowledgment by return of post they have to wait about a fortnight for the voucher.

We do not see any necessity for the present practice of compelling the solicitor to file the Bank of England receipt with the Accountant-General, who appears to obtain advice of the payment direct from the Bank; but if that practice is to be continued, we would suggest that the Bank should give to the solicitor either a duplicate of such receipt, or a simple accountable receipt on behalf of the Accountant-General, similar to that given by a private banker on receipt of money to his customer's account, which receipt could be sent to the client.

III. Proceedings of the suitor after leaving the Accountant-General's department.

1. As regards the counter-signature of the Registrar.

We believe the counter-signature to be inadequate to prevent fraud, and next to useless. If it be said that the necessity of obtaining another signature after the draft is issued, is a difficulty in the way of fraud, one answer would be that a third or fourth signature would be a further check, and so checks might be multiplied ad infinitum. But the truth is that this signature is not by any means an effectual check. The Registrar merely signs the draft presented to him, no matter by whom, and never even looks at the order unless in the cases of drafts for "principal" money, or first payment of dividends, and all he can possibly do then is to see that the amount of the draft agrees with that of the order, and that it has not been previously paid. If one of the many signed cheques, now kept in the Accountant-General's clerks' drawers, were improperly abstracted and presented to the Registrar, he would sign and pass it as a matter of course if for interest, and, if for principal, on mere production of the order, which the stealer of the cheque would find in all probability on the Accountant-General's clerk's desk, or in the pigeon hole by its side.

Before the "Clerks of Accounts" office was abolished, all drafts issued by the Accountant-General went to that office to be checked and entered, and for "intratur" to be written thereon.

On the faith of that "intratur," the Registrar counter-signed, in fact he certified the entry of the draft on the account side of the old "Report Office," and when that entry was done away with in 1852, it is difficult to see on what ground the certifying signature was retained.

It is almost needless to point out that anything professing to be a check on fraud, which is in reality no such thing, is likely to be mischievous. The supposed check is depended on, and the watchfulness, which a sense of undivided responsibility always produces, is thereby weakened or destroyed.

The Accountant-General's Office ought to be so constituted as to render any check upon it unnecessary; but if it should be considered expedient still to have one, a more complete and effectual one than that of the Registrar's counter-signature, under the present imperfect practice respecting it, ought to be adopted.

2. As regards the distance the suitor has to go for his money.

This would be obviated by establishing a branch of the Bank of England in Chancery-lane, as recommended at the commencement of these observations, and we cannot insist too strongly on the necessity of such a change, and on the suitor's right to such an accommodation.

IV. As to dealings between the Accountant-General and the Bank of England.

1. As regards the present method of buying and selling stock.

No reason has been discovered for doubting the perfect fairness with which the sales and purchases are conducted. Still we are not aware of any existing security to prevent undue advantage being taken of the fluctuation of the price of stock during the day, or of the power of influencing the market. And it is important that the minds of the suitors and public should be relieved from all feeling of unsensiveness or suspicion on such an important point. It should be shown that unfairness is impossible.

The following plan will, we think, be found free from all the objections which have been raised to the other modes, viz:—

That the office of broker to the Court of Chancery should be abolished, and that, instead of buying and selling the balance of stock required on each particular day, the necessary amounts should be provided by carrying over a proper sum, ascertained on the daily average price of stock, from the stock amounting to nearly three millions, which has been purchased on account of the fund, which is termed "Fund A.," in the report of the Concentration of Courts Commission.

It is needless to do more here than indicate the method we suggest, which is simply in principle that of a "jobbing account," to and from which sales and purchases would have to be debited and credited to meet the demands of the separate accounts of the suitors.

There is a steady increase of the stock in court year by year, and to meet this increase (which of course represents a surplus of purchases over sales), stock would have to be bought for the "jobbing accounts," at periods and in sums which could readily be arranged.

We observe that Mr. Parkinson makes out that the double one-eighth is not really paid. If so, we do not see that the individual suitor has any right to this saving, and if the Court were its own jobber it would get the profit.

The jobbers under the present system must make their usual profit, and we do not see why the Court should not make it instead. If suitors must be taxed towards the maintenance of the Court, this tax (if it can be so-called) is surely a most unobjectionable way of getting the money.

There cannot, we conceive, be any difficulty in calculating each purchase and sale at the average price of the day when the sale is bespoken, or of the day before the calculation for it is made, and debiting or crediting the separate account of the suitor and the "jobbing account" of the Court accordingly.

Strictly speaking, it seems to us that the day when the order is made for sale or investment is the day when the price of the stock should be ascertained. At any rate, there can be no reason why the actual day when the broker happens to sell or buy should be the one to regulate the price.

2. As regards the necessity for keeping a duplicate set of accounts at the Bank.

This is, or ought to be, unnecessary. It is not an effectual check against fraud, and is a great impediment and annoyance to the suitors. [See our first suggestions and the "General Remarks" immediately below.]

GENERAL REMARKS.

There is one other question which strikes us as of considerable importance, and deserving of very careful consideration. It is as to the office of the Accountant-General himself.

When the department was first constituted in 1725, and down to 1764, it appears to have contained only two clerks.

With a business of the contracted character existing at that time, and for many subsequent years, the natural and wise thing, no doubt, was to have one head. It was quite possible for one person to supervise thoroughly the whole work of the department. But with a business of the present magnitude, it is plainly out of all question for any gentleman, be his diligence and business aptitude what they may, to exercise anything like an effective control or supervision of the work. It is nearly as much as he can do to sign his name to the vast number of drafts and other documents which under the present system require his signature, and he must trust almost entirely to his clerks for the accuracy of the documents put before him for that purpose.

This has been the case for very many years, and the fact that only one case of fraud, or even of serious error has occurred, is a proof of the care and trustworthiness of these officers.

Drafts in great numbers, and amounting in the aggregate to enormous sums, are kept by these gentlemen in their drawers, with the signature of the Accountant-General already affixed, and there is nothing to prevent the abstracting by any of the clerks (and not much by the public) of such drafts, and obtaining payment of them by endorsing the names of the parties to whom they are payable. The Bank has no means of knowing the signatures of the payees, and, as a proof of the inadequacy of the system to stop such a fraud, the only case of the kind that did occur, took place when the old "Clerks of the Accounts Office" was in existence, and their "intratur" was required to the draft, as well as the registrar's countersignature. In spite of the supposed obstacles, including the check of the bank duplicate books, the money was got for the draft.

In cases where drafts are handed out to third persons under powers of attorney, the clerk who gives out the draft, by putting the attorney's name with his own initials on the back of it, is enabled to authorize the Bank to cash the draft on the indorsement of the attorney instead of the original payee, so that in all such cases (which are very numerous, and involve immense sums of money) the mere initials of the clerk entirely change the destination of the draft, and supersede the signature of the Accountant-General himself.

The clerks also look to the correctness of the evidence that the party to receive is alive, and also to a proper identification of the recipients, where they receive in person, and of the "attorneys," where they do not.

We think this proves clearly that the real responsibility of seeing that the draft is given to the right person rests with the clerk issuing it, and we think also that such clerk is the right person to sign the draft, and that he should sign at the time of issuing it, but not before. The effect would be, that a lost or stolen draft could not be cashed without the signature of the clerk being forged, a signature, be it observed, which the Bank would know, as bankers know that of a customer.

This, in fact, is the system adopted at the Dividend Office at the Bank of England; the warrant (or draft) there is signed by the party receiving, and attested by the clerk of the Bank, who issues the warrant, and on such attestation the Pay Office cashes the warrant.

The result of these remarks is, that it appears to us the personal office of the Accountant-General might be abolished with advantage to the suitors, and that such abolition would expedite the business of the department.

Such an arrangement would tend also much to facilitate and secure the keeping open the office for a sufficient period of the long vacation.

We would also suggest that the principle laid down by the Post Office Savings Bank Act of this session should be adopted, and a deposit account instituted, where money likely to remain under the control of the Court for too short a period to make a request by the suitor for an investment in stock prudent, might at his option be deposited. On such deposits a low rate of interest (say £2 per cent.) might be allowed, and the principal would be preserved to the suitors at its full amount, free from the effects of any fluctuation in the value of stock.

We have only to add that it should be made the duty of some competent and efficient officer to compare periodically and check the bank pass or account book with the books of the Accountant-General's department, and to take care that too much money is not allowed to lie uninvested and unproductive in the hands of the Bank, but that interest for the benefit of the suitors is duly made of all surplus monies that can be spared for investment.

Signed on behalf of the Equity Sub-Committee of the Association.

J. S. TORR, Chairman,
PHILIP RICKMAN, Secretary.

Public Companies.

REPORTS AND MEETINGS.

BRISTOL AND EXETER RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 29th inst., a dividend at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

CHARING CROSS BRIDGE.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 21st instant, a dividend of 10s. per share on the original shares, free of income-tax, was declared for the past half-year.

EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 29th inst., a dividend of 16s. 3d. per cent., being at the rate of £1 12s. 6d. per cent. per annum, was declared for the past half-year.

LEOMINSTER AND KINGTON RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 27th instant, a dividend at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year, payable on the 16th September.

LLYNY VALLEY RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 22nd inst., a dividend of 5 per cent. on the preference, and of 4 per cent. on the ordinary capital, was declared for the past half-year.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 23rd instant, a dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

MARYPORT AND CARLISLE RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 21st inst., the following dividends for the past half-year (less income tax) were declared:—viz., £1 15s. on each original £50 share, 8s. 9d. on each original £12 10s. share, 8s. 9d. on each preference 4 per cent. share, 8s. 9d. on each preference 4½ per cent. share, and 6s. 3d. on each preference 5 per cent. share, payable on the 2nd September.

NOTTINGHAM AND GRANTHAM RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 22nd instant, a resolution was carried confirming an agreement for leasing this railway and the canals belonging to the company to the Great Northern Railway for 999 years, at the clear annual rent of £4 2s. 6d. per cent. per annum on the share capital of the company.

SOUTHAMPTON DOCK.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 21st instant, a dividend of £1 10s. per cent. for the past half-year was declared.

SOUTH DEVON RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 27th instant, a dividend at the rate of £1 7s. 6d. per cent. per annum was declared on the consolidated stock of the company.

SOUTH EASTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 29th inst., a dividend of 12s. 6d. per £30 share, being at the rate of £4 3s. 4d. per cent. per annum, was declared for the past half-year, payable on the 5th of September.

SOUTH WALES RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 23rd instant, the usual dividend on the preference stock, and a dividend of £2 15s. per cent. per annum on the ordinary stock was declared for the past half-year.

VALE OF NEATH RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 27th instant, a dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

WHITEHAVEN, CLEATOR, AND EGREMONT RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 22nd instant, a dividend at the rate of £10 per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

Births and Marriages.

BIRTHS.

BEAUMONT—On Aug. 27, at Great Coggeshall, Essex, the wife of Joseph Beaumont, Esq., Solicitor, of a son.

CLARKSON—On Aug. 24, at Woodridings, Pinner, the wife of Eugene C. Clarkson, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a son.

GARDINER—On Aug. 13, at Woodridings, Pinner, the wife of John Gardiner, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of twins, son and daughter, stillborn.

STRONG—On Aug. 27, at 17, Hanley-road, the wife of Chas. E. Strong, Esq., of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

COURTNEY—VOULES—On Aug. 27, Edward Moulas Courtney, to Isabella Elizabeth, daughter of the late William J. Voules, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of Lincoln's-inn.

GRIGG—MILLS—On Aug. 28, J. N. Grigg, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, to Charlotte Katherine, daughter of E. B. Mills, Esq., Bombay Civil Service, of Weston Lodge, Mannamend, near Plymouth.

MORRIS—KNOX—On Aug. 27, Frederick Philip Morris, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister-at-law, to Mary, daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Knox, of Tunbridge, Kent, D.D.

MUSSON—ROBINSON—On Aug. 28, William Edward Musson, Esq., of Clitheroe, to Susanna Catherine, daughter of Dixon Robinson, Esq., of Clitheroe Castle.

ORME—BARLOW—On Aug. 22, Frederick Orme, Esq., Solicitor, late of Madras, in the East Indies, to Elizabeth, daughter of the late George Barlow, Esq., of Salford.

SULLIVAN—BELL—On Aug. 17, at Gibraltar, Francis William Sullivan, Esq., Commander of H.M.S. Greyhound, to Agnes, daughter of the Hon. Mr. Sydney Bell, one of her Majesty's Judges at the Cape of Good Hope.

VAIZEY—REYNOLDS—On Aug. 28, John Savill Vaizey, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, to Harriette, daughter of the Rev. John Reynolds, formerly of Halstead.

WARE—HALLETT—On Aug. 22, Charles Tayler, son of Martin Ware, Esq., of Russell-square, and Tilford, Surrey, to Zillah, daughter of T. P. L. Hallett, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn.

WILDE—MONEY—On Aug. 27, Rev. Richard Wilde, son of S. F. T. Wilde, Esq., of Monken Hadley, Barrister-at-Law, to Charlotte Eugenia, daughter of the Rev. J. D. Money, Rector of Sternfield, Suffolk.

Unclaimed Stock in the Bank of England.

The Amount of Stock heretofore standing in the following Names will be transferred to the Party claiming the same, unless other Claimants appear within Three Months:—

BURNETT, JOHN TASSETT, Esq., May-place, Crayford, Kent, and WILLIAM SHELTON BURNETT, Esq., of the city of Lisbon, £804 3s. 9d. Consols.—Claimed by FRANCIS FREDERICK SHORE and CHARLES ALEXANDER MUNRO, surviving executors of William Shelton Burnett, who was the survivor.

ROSS, MARY ANN, Spinster, East-street, Marylebone, £65, annuity for a term of years ending 10th October, 1859, and also £14 19s. 6d. Consolidated Long Annuity, expired 5th January, 1860, standing in the name of MARY ANN ROSS, Spinster, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.—Claimed by GEORGE LIBBIS, the sole executor of the said Mary Ann Ross, Spinster.

London Gazettes.Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

TUESDAY, Aug. 27, 1861.

HOOKE, EDWARD, & ROBERT STANWARD FOREMAN, Attorneys & Solicitors, Sheerness, Kent (Hooker & Foreman); by mutual consent. Aug. 20.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

UNLIMITED IN CHANCERY.

TUESDAY, Aug. 27, 1861.

MEAKIN'S JOINT STOCK BREWERY COMPANY.—The Master of the Rolls has appointed William Turquand, 16, Tokenhouse-yard, London, Accountant, official manager of this company.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Aug. 27, 1861.

CASSON, ROBERT, Esq., formerly of Waterloo, Hants, but late of Field Assarts, Arshal, Oxfordshire. Smith, Alliston, & Smith, Solicitors, 4, Warrford-court, Throgmorton-street, London. Oct. 1.

COTTON, WILLIAM, Esq., formerly of Bryanstone-square, Middlesex, and Lewes, Sussex. Lindsay & Mason, Solicitors, 84, Basinghall-street, City. Oct. 10.

FOX, ISABELLA, Widow, Heath House, Brislington, Somersetshire. Mead & Daubeny, Solicitors, King's Bench-walk, Temple. Oct. 1.

MYER, SAMUEL, Merchant, Manchester, and Withington-cottage, Withington. Sale, Worthington, Shipman, & Seddon, Solicitors, 29, Booth-street, Manchester. Nov. 1.

REED, JANE, Widow, Teignmouth, Devonshire. Mackenzie, Solicitor, 3, Johnson's-buildings, Temple, London. Dec. 2.

RICHARDSON, GEORGE, Gent., Bridge House, Buckland, Surrey. Cutler & Weall, Solicitors, 5, Bell-yard, Doctors' Commons. Oct. 10.

SMYTH, ROY, BENJAMIN STAPLES TRAPAUD, West Pinchbeck, near Spalding, Lincolnshire. Lacy & Bridges, Solicitors, 19, King's Arms-yard. Oct. 1.

STERIKER, MARTHA, Spinster, Dover, Kent. Watson, Solicitor, 14, Snar-gate-street, Dover. Oct. 9.

FRIDAY, Aug. 30, 1861.

ALCOCK, ANN, Widow, Atherstone, Warwickshire. Dewes & Norton, Solicitors, Nuneaton. Sept. 7.

BEDBOURGH, HENRY, Esquire, Nelson, New Zealand. Darvill, Son, & Poulton, Solicitors, Windsor, Berks. Sept. 30.

COCKREAVE, MARIA, Widow, 34, Norfolk-street, Strand, Middlesex. Ford, Solicitor, 43, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Oct. 1.

DIXON, MATTHEW, Silver Plater, formerly of Edgbaston and Snow Hill, Birmingham, and late of Hunter's-lane, Handsworth, Stafford. Walford, Solicitor, 38, Bennet's-hill, Birmingham. Oct. 12.

GILBERT, WILLIAM, Gent., Finchley, Middlesex. Donne, Solicitor, 1, Princes-street, Spitalfields. Oct. 14.

GRIFFITHS, THOMAS, General Fancy Dealer, Brompton terrace, Brompton, Middlesex. Kemp, Solicitor, 4, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, Middlesex. March 1.

GUTTERIDGE, RICHARD, Gent., Dunstable, Bedfordshire. Willis, Solicitor, Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire. Nov. 1.

HATCH, WILLIAM, Farmer, Low Farm, Hanworth, Middlesex. Executors, W. Hatch, Manor Farm, Ham, Surrey; and N. B. Nyles, 1, Hope-cottages, Twickenham-green, Middlesex. Nov. 1.

HEMSLEY, CHARLES, Clifton, Bristol. Sols. Warry, Robins, & Burges, 70, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex. Oct. 1.

PAVON, JOHN, Farmer, Bentley Farm, near Ansley, Warwickshire. Sols. Dewes & Norton, Nuneaton, Warwickshire. Sept. 28.

POULTNEY, JOHN, Labourer, Camberwell, Surrey. Dewes & Norton, Solicitors, Nuneaton, Warwickshire. Sept. 7.

ROUTLEDGE, ROBERT, Gent., 7, Wellington-terrace, Rochdale-road, Manchester. Storer, Solicitor, 89, Fountain-street, Manchester. Oct. 14.

SCOTT, FRANCIS EDWARD, Wine Merchant, 22, St. Swithin's lane, London. J. & T. Gole, Solicitors, 49, Lime-street, Leadenhall-street, London. Oct. 31.

SEACKELL, MARY ANN, Widow, formerly of 7, Gloucester-villas, Warwick-road, Maida-hill, Middlesex, but late 2, Randolph-road, Maida-hill. Sols. Evans & Phillips, 72, Coleman street, City, E.C. Oct. 1.

SLANEY, THOMAS, Attorney & Solicitor, Birmingham. Sols. Slaney & Co., 2, Newhall-street, Birmingham. Sept. 29.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

Last Day of Proof.

TUESDAY, Aug. 27, 1861.

ARCHER, WILLIAM, Cabinet Maker, Birkenhead. Raine v. Archer, V. C. Kindersley. Nov. 8.

FRIDAY, Aug. 30, 1861.

JONSON, ANN, St. Mary, Islington, Middlesex. Ellmers v. Barnett, V. C. Stuart. Nov. 12.

WILLIAMS, THOMAS, Jan., Joiner, Llanbadarnfawr, Cardiganshire. Williams v. Williams, V. C. Stuart. Oct. 30.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

TUESDAY, Aug. 27, 1861.

BALL, THOMAS, Grocer, Chester. Sol. Evans, Liverpool. Aug. 8.

BARGH, WILLIAM HENRY, Joiner & Wheelwright, Newbold, Chesterfield Sol. Cuts, Chesterfield. Aug. 13.

CLARK, WILLIAM, Farmer, East Linkholl, Northumberland. Crosby, 3, Church court, Old Jewry, London, Agent for W. & B. Woodman, Solicitors, Morpeth. Aug. 20.

FARROW, WILLIAM, Miller & Farmer, Horncastle, Lincolnshire. Sol. Tweed, Horncastle. Aug. 16.

KEY, GEORGE, Grocer & Tea Dealer, Lincoln. Sols. Tweed & Hughes, Lincoln. Aug. 21.

DE LIGUORO, FREDERICK WILLIAM, 66, New Bond-street, Middlesex, and JANE his wife (late Jane Soper, Spinster.) Sol. Jones, 15, Sise-lane, London. Aug. 8.

RAUCH, GUSTAVUS FREDERICK, Warehouseman, 3, Huggin-lane, Wood-street, London. Sol. Mardon, Christ Church-chambers, 99, Newgate-street, London. July 29.

ROBERTS, ISHMAEL, Farmer, Saith Taron, Llanarmon Yu Yale, Denbighshire. Sol. Hughes, Wrexham. Aug. 5.

SCRAGGS, JAMES, Draper, High-street, Watford, Hertfordshire. Sols. Lumley & Lumley, 2, Moorgate-street, London. Aug. 7.

SHAW, JOHN COX, Wine & Spirit Merchant, Bruton, Somersetshire. Sol. Wood, Bristol. July 29.

THORNTON, HENRY, Farmer, Millington, Chester. Sol. Barratt, 24, Princess-street, Manchester. Aug. 24.

FRIDAY, Aug. 30, 1861.

BROTHALL, GEORGE, Key Stamper, Union-street, Willenhall, Staffordshire. Sol. Whitehouse, Wolverhampton. Aug. 17.

DRYDER, BENJAMIN, Timber Merchant, Blyth, Northumberland. Sols. Hodge & Harle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Aug. 1.

FIELDING, AARON, Grocer and Corn Dealer, Glossop, Derbyshire. Sol. Reddish, 52, Prince's-street, Manchester. Aug. 13.

FLEMING, JAMES, Tea Dealer, Liverpool. Sol. Remington, Ulverston, Lancaster. Aug. 24.

NORWOOD, MICHAEL THOMAS, Upholsterer, 48, High-street, Birmingham (M. T. Norwood & Co.) Sol. Bridges, Birmingham. Aug. 5.

SCHOFIELD, WILLIAM, JAMES SCHOFIELD, JOSEPH SCHOFIELD, MARK RYDER, & WHITAKER SCHOFIELD, Cotton Manufacturers, Middleton, Lancashire. Sols. Bunting & Uingham, Manchester. Aug. 23.

SMITH, CHRISTOPHER WEBB, Dyer, Dudbridge, Gloucester (Christopher Smith & Co.) Sol. Heelas, Stroud. Aug. 9.

WALKER, JAMES, Bookseller & Stationer, Leeds. Sols. Christie, Daniel, & Christie, 4, Albion-place, Leeds. Aug. 22.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

TUESDAY, Aug. 27, 1861.

FLEET, SAMUEL, Mercer & Draper, Audlem, Chester. Aug. 22.

GEDDES, THOMAS, Draper, 48, Stafford-street, Liverpool. Aug. 12.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Aug. 20, 1861.

BURGIN, THOMAS, & WILLIAM BURGIN, Upholsterers & Cabinet Makers, 26, Great Winchester-street, London (Burgin Brothers). Com. Fane: Sept. 6, at 2; and Oct. 5, at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. Hampton, 6, New Boswell-court, Lincoln's-inn. Pet. July 19.

CORBETT, THOMAS, Licensed Victualler, Birmingham. Com. Sanders: Sept. 6, and Oct. 4, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. East & Parry, 45, Ann-street, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 24.

COOMAN, JOSEPH JOHN (not COMMAN), as advertised in last Friday's Gazette), and MAXIMILIAN LINDT, Merchants, 140, Fenchurch-street. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 4, at 12; and Sept. 27, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfield. Sols. Harrison & Lewis, 6, Old Jewry, London. Pet. Aug. 16.

CULLETON, THOMAS, Engraver & Stationer, 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 9, at 11; and Oct. 9, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Peckham, 40, Ludgate-street, London. Pet. Aug. 26.

HENSON, HENRY HENSON, Contractor & Builder, Watford, Hertfordshire. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 5, at 1.30; and Oct. 30, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Jenkinson & Sweeting, 7, Clement's-lane, London. Pet. Aug. 23.

KEIGHTLEY, WILLIAM, Glass Manufacturer, Birmingham. Com. Sanders: Sept. 13 and Oct. 4, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sol. Walford, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 12.

KRETSCHMAR, LUDWIG WOLDENAR, Manufacturing Jeweller, 9, Duke-street, Bloomsbury, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 11, at 11; and Oct. 9, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfield. Sol. Bryan, 33, Bedford-square, London. Pet. Aug. 24.

PATTERSON, JOHN, Licensed Victualler, Coombe, Bissett, Wilts. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 11, at 2.30; and Oct. 9, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Gregory & Co., 1, Bedford-row, London. Pet. Aug. 23.

TAYLOR, WILLIAM BROWN, Tobaccoist & Tea Dealer, Norwich. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 5, at 12; and Oct. 9, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfield. Sols. Lawrence, Flews, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London. Pet. Aug. 26.

WHITTARD, JOSEPH, Draper, Bristol. Com. Hill: Sept. 9 and Oct. 5, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sol. Salmon, Bristol. Pet. Aug. 20.

WILKES, SAMUEL, Wine Merchant, Cardiff, Glamorganshire. Com. Hill: Sept. 8 and Oct. 10, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sols. Clifton & Benson, Bristol; or Pigeon, Bristol. Pet. Aug. 21.

FRIDAY, Aug. 30, 1861.

BEARDMORE, HAMLET, Joiner & Builder, Burslem, Staffordshire. Com. Sanders: Sept. 13 and Oct. 4, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. Tomkinson, Burslem; or James & Knight, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 28.

EMEX, JOHN, Watch Manufacturer & Licensed Victualler, Coventry, Warwickshire. Com. Sanders: Sept. 9 and Sept. 30, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Minster & Son, Coventry; or Rees, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 28.

EVERETT, JOHN, Carpenter, late of Rainham, and now of Green-hill Grove, Little Ilford, Essex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 9 at 1; and Oct. 9, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Young & Flews, 29, Mark-lane, London. Pet. Aug. 27.

FELTHAM, MARK, Miller, West Winch, Norfolk. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 12 and Oct. 10, at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Wilkins, 3, Fumival's-inn, London, and King's Lyn, Norfolk. Pat. Aug. 30.

FERRIS, THOMAS, Tailor & Draper, Ashburton, Devonshire. Com. Andrews: Sept. 11 and Oct. 9, at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sols. Tucker & Son, Ashburton, or Flood, Exeter. Pat. Aug. 29.

HARRISON, THOMAS ROBERTSON, & WILLIAM WATERS, Sunderland, (Harrison & Waters). Com. Ellison: Sept. 10 and Oct. 16, at 11.30; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sol. Dixon, Sunderland. Pat. July 23.

HOPKINS, GEORGE HENRY, Auctioneer, Belper. Com. Sanders: Sept. 12 and Oct. 3, at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sol. Lees, Nottingham. Pat. Aug. 27.

KIRBY, THOMAS, Baker, Flour Dealer, & Brewer, Honiton, Devonshire. Com. Andrews: Sept. 11 and Oct. 9, at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sol. Flood, Exeter. Pat. Aug. 24.

LEETE, CHARLES WILLIAM, Furniture Dealer, 16, Pitt-street, Liverpool. Com. Perry: Sept. 9, at 12, and Oct. 10, at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sol. Solomon, 22, Flinsbury-place, London; or Yates, Jun., 22, Fenwick-street, Liverpool. Pat. Aug. 16.

ODDEN, GEORGE HENRY, Toy Dealer & Ale and Porter Dealer, Bangor, Carnarvonshire. Com. Perry: Sept. 13 and 20, at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Morgan. Sols. Evans, Son, & Sandys, Commerce-court, Lord-street, Liverpool. Pat. Oct. 24.

ROBINSON, MATTHEW DIXON, Grocer & Confectioner, Oldbury, Worcester-shire. Com. Sanders: Sept. 13 and Oct. 4, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. Shakespeare, Oldbury, or Smith, Birmingham. Pat. Aug. 20.

SANDFORD, JAMES, Contractor, Accrington, Lancashire. Com. Jemmett: Sept. 10 and Oct. 9, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sol. Boteler. Liverpool. Pat. Aug. 21.

SHATTOCK, JOHN, Farmer, Hay Dealer, Innkeeper, & Letter out of a Steam Threshing Machine, Long Ashton, Somersetshire. Com. Hill: Sept. 10 and Oct. 8, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sol. Dix, Bristol. Pat. Aug. 23.

SPINK, ELISHA, Eating House Keeper, 14 and 36, High-street, White-chapel, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 9, at 12; and Oct. 9, at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sols. Smith & Son, 6, Bernard's-inn, Holborn, London. Pat. Aug. 27.

THICKBOOM, JOSEPH, Bookseller & Publisher, 13, Paternoster-row, London. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 9, at 1.30; and Oct. 9, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Lawrence, Smith, & Fawdon, 12, Bread-street, London. Pat. Aug. 19.

THORP, GEORGE, Woollen Cloth Manufacturer, Holmfirth, Yorkshire. Com. Ayrton: Sept. 10 and Oct. 4, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sols. Booth, Holmfirth; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pat. Aug. 27.

WELLS, BENJAMIN WESTON, Floor Cloth Manufacturer, Avenue-road, Camberwell, Surrey. Com. Fane: Sept. 14, at 11; and Oct. 11, at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. George, 3, Sicelano. Pat. Aug. 28.

WHITE, WILLIAM, Builder, 18, Wolsey-terrace, Kentish-town, Middlesex. Com. Fane: Sept. 13, at 3; and Oct. 11, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Roche & Gover, 33, Old Jewry. Pat. Aug. 28.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Aug. 27, 1861.

FERGUSON, JAMES, Draper, Stonehouse, Devonshire. Oct. 7, at 11.30; Plymouth.—GELDER, HENRY VAN, Merchant, 24, Crutched-friars, London. Sept. 6, at 12; Basinghall-street.—STANDUINO, ALEXANDER PETERIE, & CHARLES PETHIE STANDUINO, Iron and Brass Founders, Rochdale, Lancashire (A. P. Standing & Brother); separate estate of each. Oct. 8, at 12; Manchester.

FRIDAY, Aug. 30, 1861.

NYREN, JOHN WILLIAM, & ADAM WILSON, Colour Manufacturers, Battersea, Surrey. Oct. 28, at 12; Basinghall-street.—BELL, ALEXANDER DAINYMPLE, & EMIL BRAWERT, Silk Fringe and Trimming Manufacturers, 7, Goldsmith-street, London. Sept. 24, at 12; Basinghall-street.—PEREIRA, SILVANO FRANCISCO LUIS, & JOHN GRANT, Wine Merchants, 91, Great Tower-street, London (Pereira & Grant). Sept. 25, at 11; Basinghall-street. Same time, separate estate of S. F. Luis Pereira.—WOOLDRIDGE, JAMES WILLIAM, Tanner, Wickham, Southampton. Sept. 24, at 11; Basinghall-street.—BROCKWELL, JOSIAH, Merchant, Old Broad-street, London. Sept. 23, at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—KEMP, EDWARD, Linen Draper, 7, Beckford-row, Walworth-road, Surrey. Sept. 23, at 2; Basinghall-street.—HILLS, WILLIAM, Grocer, Tea Dealer, and Cheesemonger, 6, Harmer-street, Milton-next-Gravesend, Kent. Sept. 24, at 12; Basinghall-street.—BASSETT, DAVID, Corn Merchant, Uxbridge, Middlesex. Sept. 25, at 2; Basinghall-street.—BALDWIN, HENRY, and JOHN BALDWIN, Tailors, 21, Cornhill, and of Tom's Coffee House, Croyder's-court, Cornhill, Tavern Keepers. Sept. 24, at 12; Basinghall-street.—ASTELL, HENRY, Ale and Porter Merchant, Oil and Colourman, and Brush Dealer, Loughborough, Leicestershire. Sept. 26, at 11; Nottingham.—FERGUSON, JOHN STURTON, Builder, Nottingham. Oct. 3, at 11; Nottingham.—WARBURTON, JOHN SLACK, and WILLIAM STEVENSON, Timber Merchants, Joiners, and Builders, Manchester (Warburton & Stevenson). Oct. 8, at 12; Manchester.—BROWN, HENRY, & BROOK HODGSON, Velvet Manufacturers, Halifax, Yorkshire (Brown & Co.). Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds. Sep. Oct. H. Brown.—LOED, JOHN, SIDNEY AQUILA BUTTERWORTH, & HORATIO BUTTERWORTH, Dyers, Shelf, near Halifax, Yorkshire (Lord & Co.). Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—ROBINSON, EDWARD, Woollen Manufacturer, Sheepridge, Huddersfield. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—ATACK, SAMUEL, Builder, Leeds. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—EDMISTON, ROBERT, & THOMAS HIGHAM, Stuff Manufacturers, Bailiff Bridge, Birstal, Yorkshire, (Edmiston & Higham). Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—PARKER, HUGH, OFFLEY SHORE, JOHN BREWIN, & JOHN RODGERS, Bankers, Sheffield. Sept. 21, at 10; Sheffield.—MARTIN, WILLIAM, ALFRED PHILLIPS YOUNG, & WILLIAM RICHARDSON ROBERTS, Iron Manufacturers, Doncaster. September 21, at 10; Sheffield; same time the separate estate of ALFRED PHILLIPS YOUNG.—GREGG, GEORGE, Currier & Leather Seller, Sheffield, and Wath-upon-Deane, Yorkshire. Sept. 21, at 10; Sheffield.—TURNER, JAMES, Miller & Farmer, Warsop, Nottinghamshire. Sept. 21, at 10; Sheffield.—WORRALL, WILLIAM, Grocer, West Melton, near Wath, Yorkshire. Sept. 21, at 10; Sheffield.—BOOTH, JOHN STOKES, Piano Forte Dealer & Music Seller, Sheffield. Sept. 21, at 10; Sheffield.—LEEMING, SAMUEL, & JAMES HILL, Woollen Manufacturers, Batley Carr, Yorkshire. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—CALVERT, DEAN, Scribbler, Holbeck, Leeds. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—CLAYTON, W., JOS. WILKINSON CLAYTON, CHRIS BILLINGTON, Contractors & Builders, Manningham, Bradford (Clayton & Billington).

ton). Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—LAINO, ROBT, Farmer, Agricultural Implement Maker, Dealer in Manures & Cattle Dealer, Forest Farm, Scorton. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—BARTON, BEN, Grocer, Wortley, Leeds, Yorks. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—TEALE, JOHN RICHARD, Cabinet Maker & Upholsterer, Leeds. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—MARTIN, JAMES, Boot & Shoe Maker, Dewsbury, York. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—MARKHAM, RICHARD WOOD, Haberdasher, Bradford. Sept. 20, at 11; Leeds.—HOLDKNESS, JOHN WILLIAM, Timber Merchant, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sept. 25, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull.—SPICER, WILLIAM SANDON, Tobaccoist & Brewer, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sept. 25, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull.—ALLEN, GEORGE, Grocer & Draper, Bardney, Lincolnshire. Sept. 25, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull.—ATKINSON, JOHN, Seed Crusher, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sept. 25, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull.—DAVIES, EDWARD CLEMENT, Chemist & Druggist, Wine & Spirit Merchant, & Dealer in Ale and Porter, Gainsborough. Sept. 24, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull.—DAVIES, EDWARD CLEMENT, & GEORGE COOPER, Chemists & Druggists, Wine & Spirit Merchants, & Dealers in Ale and Porter, Gainsborough (Davies & Cooper). Sept. 25, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull.

WHY BURN GAS IN DAYTIME? Use Chappuis' reflectors; they diffuse daylight in dark places. The patentee and manufacturer is Mr. Chappuis, 69, Fleet-street.—ADV.

BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT, LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited),

17, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.

Capital, £200,000, in 20,000 shares of £10 each. £3 per share paid.

CHAIRMAN.

METCALF HOPGOOD, Esq., Bishopsgate-street.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. PATTESON & COBBOLD, 3, Bedford-row.

MANAGER.

CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Esq., 17, New Bridge-street.

INVESTMENTS.—The present rate of interest on money deposited with the Company for fixed periods, or subject to an agreed notice of withdrawal, is 5 per cent.

LOANS.—Advances are made, in sums from £50 to £1,000, upon approved personal and other security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over any period not exceeding 10 years.

Applications for the new issue of Shares may be made to the Secretary, of whom Prospectuses, the last Annual Report, and every information can be obtained.

JOSEPH K. JACKSON, Secretary.

ROMNEY MARSH, KENT.

An Eligible Freehold Estate, consisting of 313a. 3r. 18p. of Valuable Land.

TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, in One Lot, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the causes of "Jane Holman and Others v. Thomas Holman and Others," and of "Thomas Holman v. Ann Holman and Others," and of "H. H. Sweetnam and Others v. Ann Holman and Others," with the approbation of the Right Honourable the Master of the Rolls, the judge to whom these causes are attached, by Mr. JOSEPH TOOTELL (the person appointed for that purpose), at the AUCTION MART, LONDON, on WEDNESDAY, the 18th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at TWELVE for ONE o'clock precisely, an eligible FREEHOLD ESTATE, known as "Gammon's Farm," consisting of 313a. 3r. 18p. of valuable land, 217 acres of which are exceedingly productive arable land, and the remaining 96 acres are sound fatting land, together with a good farm dwelling house, and all the requisite agricultural buildings well arranged, well placed, and in good repair. This valuable property is situate in the parishes of New Church and Eastbridge, in the County of Kent, four miles distant from New Romney, ten miles from Ashford, and seven miles from Hythe. The estate is held on lease by Messrs. Matthew and Thomas William Butler (highly respectable tenants), for a term of twenty-one years from the 11th October, 1853.

The property may be viewed on application to the tenants. Particulars may be obtained on application to Messrs. BROCKMAN & HARRISON, Solicitors, Folkestone; to Messrs. TALBOT, TALBOT, and TASKER, Solicitors, 47, Bedford-row; to Messrs. BISCHOFF, COX, and BOMPAS, Solicitors, 19, Coleman-street; to Messrs. FLUX and ARGLES, Solicitors, 68, Cheapside; and to Mr. JOHN MURRAY, Solicitor, 7, Whitehall-place, London; also at the Auction Mart, London; at the Royal Fountain Hotel, Canterbury; at the Shakespeare Hotel, Dover; at the Albion Hotel, Hastings; at the New Inn, New Romney; at the Swan Hotel, Hythe; at the Saracen's Head Inn, Ashford; and of Mr. TOOTELL, Land Agent and Valuer, Maidstone.

TO BE SOLD, pursuant to an Order of the High

Court of Chancery made in a cause of Gyett against Williams, with the approbation of the Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood, in one lot, by MR. MILNER, the person appointed by the said Judge, at the OXFORD ARMS HOTEL, at KINGTON, in the COUNTY of HEREFORD, on THURSDAY, the 13th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at 12 o'clock precisely, a certain FREEHOLD ESTATE, situate in the parishes of Glascomb and Bettus Disserth, and known as Wern Faur or Wern Dansey, and Cefu Glaso, in the county of Radnor, now in the occupation of Mr. Danzey Sheen.

Particulars whereof may be had gratis of Mr. THOMAS WESTALL, of No. 3, South-square, Gray's-inn, London, Solicitor; of Messrs. BODENHAM & TEMPLE, Solicitors, Kingston, Herefordshire; of Messrs. MEREDITH & LUCAS, Solicitors, No. 8, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, London; of Messrs. PATRICK & UNDERWOOD, Solicitors, Rolls Chambers, Chancery-lane, London; of Mr. ARTHUR CHEESE, Solicitor, Kingston; of Mr. PARSONS, Presteign; and of the principal Inns and Hotels in the neighbourhood; and of the Auctioneer at his office, Kingston, Herefordshire.

Dated this 13th day of August, 1861.

(Signed) EDWARD WEATHERALL, Chief Clerk.

FREEHOLDS—LEICESTERSHIRE AND NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.

TO BE SOLD, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery, made in a cause "Rogers v. Appleby," with the approbation of Vice-Chancellor Sir Richard Torin Kindersley, in Two Lots, by Messrs. WHITE & SON, the persons appointed by the judge for the purpose—Lot 1, at the ANGEL HOTEL, in GRANTHAM, in the county of LINCOLN, on SATURDAY, the 7th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at FIVE o'clock in the afternoon precisely; Lot 2, at the WHITE HART HOTEL, in EAST RETFORD, in the county of NOTTINGHAM, on SATURDAY, the 14th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at FIVE o'clock in the afternoon precisely—certain FREEHOLD ESTATES, situate at Hoose and Long Clawson, in the County of Leicester, and at South Leverton, in the county of Nottingham, late the property of Francis Blagg, of South Leverton, in the county of Nottingham, surgeon, deceased.

Particulars whereof may be had gratis of Messrs. NEWTON & JONES, and Messrs. SHEE, BURNABY, & DENMAN, Solicitors, East Retford, Nottinghamshire; of Messrs. C. & I. ALLEN & SON, Solicitors, 17, Carliisle-street, Soho-square; of Messrs. REECE, WILKINS & BLYTH, 10, St. Swithin-lane, London; at the Hotels above mentioned; and of Messrs. WHITE & SON, Auctioneers, East Retford, Nottinghamshire.

Dated 17th August, 1861.

CHAS. PUGH, Chief Clerk.

HANTS, near PETERSFIELD.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL are instructed to SELL, by Private Contract, a desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE; comprising a noble mansion, having three reception rooms, 10 bed rooms, all offices; double coach-house, six and three stall stables, and surrounded by pleasure grounds, garden, shrubberies, and an American garden of rhododendrons; a good kitchen garden walled in, and about 120 acres of prime meadow and other land.

For price, &c., apply to BROOKS & BEAL, Land Agents, 209, Piccadilly.

FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT.—FREEHOLD DOMAIN, ADVOWSON, AND MANORS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL are instructed to SELL a splendid MANORIAL ESTATE and noble MANSION, seated in one of the best western counties. The whole estate comprises about 6,000 acres, with excellent farm residences and homesteads, houses and cottages. The property is most compact and valuable, hill and valley, wood and river. Let to highly respectable and responsible tenants at moderate rents; is in a fair state of cultivation; uniting in the possessor considerable county and borough, Parliamentary, and local influence, and yielding an ample income.

Estate and Auction Offices, 209, Piccadilly, W.

FINCHLEY.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have for SALE, the LEASE of an elegant VILLA, at a ground rent of £70 per annum. The grounds (three lawns) and gardens are beautifully laid out.

For detailed particulars of accommodation apply at their offices, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 281 R.)

HERTS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have to SELL a FREEHOLD ESTATE; comprising a modern-built residence, of handsome elevation, surrounded by 40 acres of land, laid out in pleasure grounds, kitchen garden, orchard, arable and grass fields; it is adapted for immediate occupation, and within two hours' journey from London. It has coach-houses and stables, and farm buildings; the whole in good order. Purchase £3,500.

Estate and Auction Offices, No. 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 260, R 3).

CAVENDISH-PLACE, CAVENDISH-SQUARE.

TO BE LET, unfurnished, or the Lease to be Sold, of an excellent RESIDENCE, in thorough repair, very light and airy, not overlooked in front or rear. It contains four good reception rooms and five bed rooms, convenient offices, well-placed closets.

BROOKS & BEAL, Estate Agents and Auctioneers, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 225).

HANTS.

TO BE SOLD, a desirable FREEHOLD land-tax redeemed PROPERTY, most pleasantly situated, and surrounded by very tasteful pleasure grounds, with ornamental water and well-timbered grass paddocks and capital walled kitchen gardens, elegant conservatory and vinery. House contains hall, two spacious drawing rooms, and dining room, library, and boudoir, two staircases, 13 bed and dressing rooms, and prospect room, capital offices, coach-house, and stables, and other out-buildings. It is one mile from a station, Direct Portsmouth and South Coast Railway, half a mile from church and private sea bathing. Purchase moderate.

BROOKS & BEAL, Estate Agents and Auctioneers, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 196.)

INVESTMENTS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have for SALE, together or separately, FIFTEEN FREEHOLD (or Leasehold) COTTAGE VILLAS, at Wandsworth, on the borders of Wimbledon-park; each let at £30 per annum.

To treat, apply at their offices, 209, Piccadilly, W.

KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER AND CORK FLOORCLOTH. Warm, noiseless, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

F. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Walbrook, London, E.C.

Manufactory—South London Works, Lambeth.

WINES for the NOBILITY and GENTRY.
WINES for the ARMY and NAVY.
WINES for the CLERICAL, LEGAL, and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS.
WINES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.
PURE and UNADULTERATED GRAPE WINES from the SOUTH of FRANCE.

VENDED by the PROPRIETORS of the VINEYARDS.

THE FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION

have taken extensive cellarage at the West-end of London, for the purpose of introducing FRANCE WINES only to the British public at FAVOURABLE PRICES; and the members of that Association being proprietors of the most esteemed growths in France, the Nobility, Gentry, and Families patronising such Wines, will become assured of their genuineness.

THE EMPRESS PORT,

20s. per dozen. Sent free, bottles included, to any British Railway Station, on receipt of an Order on Charing-cross Post-office for 22s. 6d., payable to A. Boppe, Director.

THIS EMPRESS PORT,

is pure grape, of first-class quality, and delicious taste; the very for Wine family consumption.

CHAMPAGNE, equal to Moët's, 42s.

SPARKLING BURGUNDY

("The Glorious Bumper") at 49s. per dozen.

Pure CLARETS from 16s. to 84s. per dozen.

Tariffs of other Wines sent post free.

Cheques requested to be crossed "London and Westminster Bank."

FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION,

32, REGENT CIRCUS, PICCADILLY, LONDON, 1861.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO GUINEA BIN-

OCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS sent carriage free, on receipt of post-office order, to any part of the United Kingdom. The extraordinary power of this instrument renders it adapted to answer the combined purposes of telescope and opera glass. It will define objects distinctly at ten miles distance; is suitable for the theatre, race-course, sportsmen, tourists, and general out-door observations. Only to be obtained of KEYZOR and BENDON (successors to Harris and Son), Opticians, 50, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Illustrated Price List of Optical and Mathematical Instruments free, on receipt of two stamps.

THOSE WHO ARE ABOUT TO FURNISH

should visit G. I. THOMPSON'S extensive Stock of Furnishing Ironmongery, Electro-Silver Plate, Fenders, Fire-Irons, Japan and Paper Maché Trays, Baths, Toilette Furniture, Gas Chandeliers, Moderator Lamps. All articles marked in plain figures.

THOMPSON'S Electro Silver Spoons, 36s.; Forks, 24s. dozen.THOMPSON'S Ivory Balance Table Knives, 16s., 22s., 28s. dozen.

25, FINSBURY-PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to Railway Stations. Send for a Furnishing List.

IMPORTER OF PURE COLZA OIL.

PICTURE FRAMES.—Cheap and Good Gilt Frames

for Oil Paintings, 4 by 24, 4 inches wide, 20s. Ornamental Frames for Drawings, 14 by 16, 4 s. each. The Art Union Prints, framed in a superior style, at the lowest prices. Neat gilt frames, for the Illustrated Portraits, 1s. 6d. each. Gilt Room Bordering at 4s. per yard. Oil paintings cleaned, lined, and restored; old frames re-gilt equal to new. The trade and country dealers supplied with gilt and fancy wood mouldings, print, &c. German Prints 3s. per dozen. Neat Gilt Frames, 17 by 13, with glass complete, 1s. 6d. each. CHARLES REES, Carver, Gilder, Mount Maker, and Print Seller, 36, Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

SIR W. BURNETT, Director-General of the Medical

Department of the Navy, recommended BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER in preference to every other, for the use of her Majesty's Navy, because it was more wholesome—more effective—would keep longer—and was in all respects superior to every other manufactured. Pleading testimonials as to its superior excellence have also been received from the Queen's Private Baker; Dr. Hassall, Analyst to the Lancet; Captain Allen Young, of the Arctic yacht "Fox," and other scientific men. Sold everywhere in 1d., 2d., 4d., and 6d. packets; and 1s., 2s. 6d., and 5s. boxes.

When you ask for Borwick's Baking Powder, see that you get it, as complaints have been made of shopkeepers substituting worthless articles, made from inferior and inexpensive ingredients, because they are realising a larger profit by them.

BEST SETS OF TEETH.—EDWD. MILES &

SON, Dentists, invite the attention of persons desirous to secure the ECONOMY and DURABILITY of their best and newest work in SETS OF TEETH of every description; adapted without pain or extraction, with improvements, the result of 20 years' active practice. Their 2s. work just free, or extracts gratis. Toothache for the most part cured without extraction. Best stopping with gold, &c.

15, Liverpool-street, Bishopgate Church, City, E.C.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street,

has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from 10 till 5.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 7, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

We lay before our readers this week an abridgment of the address of the Right Hon. Joseph Napier at the Social Science Congress, retaining in extenso the remarks of the learned writer whenever they touch upon practical questions of law reform. In studying these views every attentive observer will be struck with the love of scientific method which they display. Mr. Napier takes up, for example, the question of the assimilation of legislation for England to that of Ireland. He argues that until the most complete community of rights is obtained for both countries, the Union cannot be said to have realized its purpose. He observes that there is now in Ireland a commission for inquiring into the procedure of the law courts. Why, he asks, should there have been any difference in the two modes of procedure? The learned author, we conceive, is not to be understood as seriously inquiring for a cause of the difference between the procedure in the courts of England and Ireland: he is complaining that any such distinction has ever been permitted. It is only another form of telling us, in the a priori mode, that from the first the forms of legal procedure ought to have been the same for the two kingdoms, although they were not the same, for reasons on which it is now needless to speculate. From this aspect of the question many experienced and sincere law reformers will turn aside. They will contend that laws and the administration of laws, like constitutions, grow, and are not made; and that their practical utility depends upon their origin. If they spring from time to time from the wishes of a nation, if they vary with its wants, and follow faithfully its changes in social life, politics, and religion, they will be honoured and obeyed; and to that extent and in that degree only. But the system of a theorist, enforced by unsympathising power, will be practically a dead letter. A formula, however symmetrical, which embodies no vital principle, will be as odious in practice as it is exact in theory. The question of the Irish marriage law, is one of those delicate topics, which cannot be approached without the risk of awakening old animosities. Here, as before, the causes of the diversity in the law of Ireland, are apparent, or at least ascertainable; and how, we ask, could conflicting circumstances of race and religion, to say no more, have led to any other than an incongruous result. It is in vain to lament over a state of things which at least has the merit of faithfully reflecting the political and religious history of the nation. To remove these blemishes is no doubt the worthy task of the scientific jurist, but we cannot forget that reform, to be valid, must be based, not upon an abstract ideal of uniformity, but upon the express will of a majority in intelligence of the people of Ireland. Mr. Napier's arguments in favour of a department of justice, must necessarily be submitted to the same ordeal of public opinion. The experience of the last session of Parliament has shown that the Legislature, at any rate, are not so juristical in their views as to consent to the establishment of a chief judge in bankruptcy, an office which they deemed useless, merely for the sake of uniformity. Modern demands for reform come from a public not yet enlightened enough to insist upon a legal system which shall be gracefully uniform and logically consistent, as well as practically useful. But why are we led into these reflections? Not to point out to the admirable reformers of our legal systems what they well know already, that theoretical legislation for the United Kingdom, is impracticable; but to show that their endeavours must be mainly directed to prepare the public mind for the improved system which they advocate. In this country, the first desideratum in law is convenience; the second is cheapness; the third and last are precision and uniformity. The efforts of the social science lawyers, therefore, in spreading a taste for scientific improvement, are most praiseworthy; and Mr. Napier's views, so far as they tend in the same direction, deserve our warmest support, as members of a profession, to which the science of method has hitherto been so sparingly applied. No lawyer could more appropriately fill the chair in a department of jurisprudence than Mr. Napier, and his language is distinguished alike by scholarship and by eloquence. An appropriate sequel to the president's address is to be found in the paper by Mr. J. N. Higgins, pointing out the abundant failures of the last Session of Parliament, and the apparent inefficiency of our existing legislative processes. Of this paper we have been compelled to give only a brief summary. In future numbers we hope to continue the series thus begun by giving some of the more interesting papers in full.

THE LANDED ESTATES COURT—TRANSFER OF TITLE IN LAND.

No. 1.

The compilation of a bankruptcy code under which the expenses of winding up insolvent estates subject to the control of the Court might be diminished, and the discovery of a cheap system of effecting the transfer of title to land, have been for several years past the two most prominent topics of discussion amongst the legal public. The former was the desideratum of commerce, just as the latter is regarded as a sort of philosopher's stone by most of those who take an interest in our real property code. There are natural ills, however, inherent in our social condition, of which kings or laws can cure but a small portion. It is unreasonable to expect that the scattered liabilities due to a speculating and imprudent establishment can be as cheaply collected as the good debts of a cautious firm. Nevertheless, a remedy was sought for in a change of the bankrupt law; and it is only to be hoped that, if the new code fails to satisfy the mercantile world, it will not introduce, as it threatens to do, further complications in the law of creditor and debtor. The discussions of the proposed mercantile law have for some time past absorbed almost the whole attention of law reformers, and have thus diverted public notice from the state of our real property system, which now bids fair in its turn to be the subject of legislative amendment. We do not think, indeed, that we shall ever see commissioners sitting in London invested with powers to bind the rights of persons not parties to the suit before them. Nevertheless, it must be remembered that Sir Hugh Cairns, when in office in 1859, introduced two bills which were intended to have such an operation. That the experiment is perfectly feasible is shown by the system of land transfer at present established by law in South Australia, of which we gave an account (ante pp. 176, 196), as also by the statistics of the Irish Landed Estates Court. That judicature was established in the year 1859, and during the first decade of its existence was called upon to adjudicate upon 4,413 petitions, of which 1,363 were presented by the owners of landed estates themselves. Of the first hundred petitions only six were presented by the owners; of the last hundred, 47, within the period mentioned—viz., from 1849 to 1859. The Court pronounced 3,517 orders for sale, and ordered the execution of 8,364 conveyances. The gross proceeds of sales amounted to £23,160,000, a sum which was realised at a cost of about £3 10s. per cent. The number of Chancery suits stopped by the proceedings in this court was 1,298. Over 3,200,000 acres, or about one-sixth of the area of Ireland, has been disposed of by this tribunal, which has, at the same time, distributed the sum of £28,000,000. The first conception of the principle of the Act has been variously ascribed to Mr. Christie, Sir John Romilly, Lord St. Leonards, and Sir Robert Peel. It is unnecessary, however, to investigate its parentage. It was established because it coincided with the views of a large and influential class in both countries, and was considered to be eminently suited to the peculiar condition of Ireland in 1849.

The Incumbered Estates Court was first set on foot by the Act of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 48. The essential difference between the jurisdiction conferred by this Act and the powers exercised by the Court of Chancery was that a conveyance by the Incumbered Estates Court conferred a parliamentary title—in other words, a conveyance executed by a commissioner of the Court was as valid in each particular case as if a special Act of Parliament had been passed declaring such conveyance indefeasible and indisputable. No purchaser could object to the title on the ground of want of parties to the suit, or of an outstanding legal or beneficial estate. The conveyance of the Court bound all alike, whether parties or not, and passed the fee simple or such other interest as it might profess to convey despite of any claim or title, legal or equitable. Although the principle of the Act had been long before the public in the shape of an abstract proposition, yet the arbitrary powers entrusted to the commissioners of the Court were such a novelty in our jurisprudence that the judicature was regarded with a jealous eye, and the triumvirate of assessors were invested with their dictatorial powers at first only for five years. Four Acts were passed subsequently, renewing successively the periods of their tenure of office, until finally, in 1858, the Court was constituted a permanent tribunal. Its jurisdiction was then also greatly enlarged. According to the original Act the Court merely pronounced upon the title, ordered a sale, and adjusted the priorities of incumbrances. It was even then, indeed, a court of equity as well as of law, as regarded equitable estates or incumbrances. But it administered only a small portion of executive, as distinguished from regulative and declaratory, powers in equity. Thus, it could not enforce a specific performance, even in cases where the parties had agreed to have the sale of an estate transacted under the Court. The inefficiency of the Incumbered Estates Court in this respect has been in a great measure remedied by the Act by which the present Court is regulated; so that its existing powers with respect to real estate are almost as extensive as those of the Court of Chancery, whilst they are necessarily more efficacious. A sale could not have been had under the original Act, unless the incumbrance in respect of which the petition was presented affected a term of not less than fifty years, and unless it had also been created by the owner of an estate of inheritance. The rights of lessees or occupiers in possession, and of persons entitled to commons and easements, as also rent-charges in lieu of tithes, crown rent, and quit rent, were also excepted out of the operation of the Act.

The Court is at present regulated by the Act 21 & 22 Vict. c. 72. The former title of the Court was changed by this Act to that of the "Landed Estates Court." The commissioners were appointed permanent judges, and the Court was established on a durable basis, and with enlarged powers. The judges may receive affidavits in evidence, examine witnesses, or take evidence either by commission or otherwise, in any manner in which the Court of Chancery might then or subsequently be empowered to receive evidence. The Court has all the powers of a court of equity for investigating title and determining the priorities of incumbrances, as also for enforcing the specific performance of contracts, if these are entered into expressly under the Act. This tribunal may also direct issues of fact to be tried by a jury before itself. Originally, an appeal could not be brought from a decision of the commissioners without their consent, and the period for appeal was limited to a month. This period has been extended to three months; and an appeal may now be brought without the previous sanction of the commissioners. Appeals lie first to the Court of Appeal in Chancery, and may afterwards, within twelve months, be prosecuted before the House of Lords. The owner of an unincumbered estate, not being a trustee, other than a trustee for sale, may, as he might before, apply for a sale of his land under an order of the Court; or he may have his title investigated, and if it be found satisfactory, may obtain a judicial declaration of indefeasible title, and have such title registered without proceeding to a sale. An incumbrancer within the meaning of the term, as defined by the Act, may also apply for a sale; and it is now no longer necessary that his charge should have been created by an owner of an estate of inheritance; for if a charge be secured by a term of not less than ninety-nine years, of which at least sixty are unexpired, provided only it was created by a person who was owner of a larger estate, that also is an incumbrance within the meaning of the Act. The Court has, in addition to its normal Parliamentary powers, the jurisdiction possessed by the Court of Chancery for the sale of settled estates under the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120.

After a contract has been made for the sale of any estate in Ireland, it is lawful for the vendor and purchaser jointly, or, if the contract shall so provide, for the vendor or purchaser individually to apply for a conveyance with indefeasible title; and the Court, as incidental to the application, is ordered to exercise the powers now exercised by the Court of Chancery in respect to specific performance. Whenever a decree for sale is pronounced by the Court of Chancery, or by any judge of the Court of Bankruptcy and Insolvency in Ireland, it is to be carried into effect by the Landed Estates Court exclusively, unless the former Courts, upon the representation of the parties, or on account of the small value of the land in question, should deem it expedient to retain the conduct of the sale. The Court may order the conversion of renewable leaseholds in perpetuity into fee farm grants, according to the principles of the Irish Renewable Leasehold Conversion Act. This provision is likely to have a very salutary effect, as a considerable portion of Irish soil is held under reversible leases—a mode of tenure that corresponds in some respects with that of English customary estates, but is productive of litigation, by reason of the necessity which exists for renewal of the leases from time to time, and the consequent frequent applications which are made to the Court of Chancery to order a renewal, even though the legal period, within which a renewal should have been made, has elapsed.

Recent Decisions.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

ENTRY ON COURT ROLL OF A DISENTAILING DEED OF COPYHOLDS.

Honeywood v. Foster, M. R., 9 W. R. 855.

In the absence of any special equity the Court is not only governed by legislative enactments and rules of law as regards legal interests, but it even moulds the subjects of its peculiar jurisdiction by analogy to the rules of law. Thus it has always observed the rules of law as to the nature of trust estates, their descent, the administration of legal assets, and the Statutes of Limitation. Even prior to the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, the Court would not entertain stale claims, on the ground that, even though the petitioner's claim were purely equitable, and, consequently, not affected by the old Statute of Limitations (21 Jac. 1, c. 16), nevertheless it was necessary, on grounds of public policy, that long possession should not be disquieted by a party who had slept on his rights; Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 1 Bl. 1. It is, perhaps, not going too far to assert that, if courts of law had allowed full scope to the plea of fraud, and admitted in evidence every matter calculated to prove fraud on the part of the opposite party, the Court of Chancery would have ceased to be required to administer its peculiar jurisdiction. For almost every single ground of that jurisdiction is based upon fraud. Thus, when it enforces a trust, or compels a specific performance, it does nothing but what a court of law should do, if it were as astute as it ought to be in recognising every phase of fraud. The rules of jurisprudence which courts of law and of equity respectively adopt for their guidance as to the interpretation of Acts of Parliament, private instruments, the devolution of property, &c., are almost identical. Notwithstanding this striking resemblance in the main features of our law and equity systems, the distinctness of their respective tribunals sometimes leads a litigant to suppose that an element of chance is introduced into his case either by reason of the supposed discretion of a court of equity, if his case is before such a court, or by reason of the technical tendencies of a court of law, if his suit is brought there. The present case goes far to show that, in the absence of those special circumstances which are appropriate to the peculiar cognizance of a court of equity, the equitable and the legal merits of a case are not likely to be very different from each other.

The Master of the Rolls has decided, in the present case, that disentailing assurances of copyhold should be entered on the court rolls of the manor of which the lands thereby disposed of are parcel, within six months after the execution of the deed. The Act for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, requires (sect. 41) that a disentailing deed of freehold land should be enrolled in the Court of Chancery within six months. The 50th section of that Act provides "that all the previous clauses in this Act, so far as circumstances and the different tenures will admit, shall apply to lands held by copy of court roll," &c. This section clearly directs that whatever is done with respect to copyholds is to be regulated by the previous clauses. Iest, however, the 50th section should be held to direct that disentailing assurances of copyholds should be enrolled in Chancery the 54th section negatives such an assumption by enacting that enrolment is not to be required in respect of copyholds otherwise than by entry on the court rolls. The Act makes a distinction between legal and equitable estates tail in copyholds; but this did not touch the present question, although the entail in the case was of an equitable estate. There is no express direction in the Act as to the time within which a disentailing deed of such lands should be entered on the court rolls. The Court, therefore, had to pronounce, in the absence of any distinct provision on the matter, whether such enrolment might be made within a reasonable time, or should be made within six months, in analogy to the rule regarding freeholds. His Honour considered that the 41st section was extended by the 50th to deeds relating to copyholds as to the time limited for enrolment. Copyholds, indeed, cannot be entailed unless where there is a special custom of the manor to that effect; 3 Rep. 8. As custom is so much of the essence of copyhold tenure, it may be supposed that this decision involves an extension of a legal enactment by implication to a class of tenures to which it should not be held to apply except so far as its express terms rigidly demand. But we think that since the Legislature provided by special provisions for the disentailing of copyhold lands, it has become the duty of courts of law and of equity alike to effectuate the intent of the Fines and Recoveries Abolition Act. The disentailing deed in the present case had been enrolled in Chancery, but was not entered on the court rolls until fourteen years after its execution, at a time when the disentailer was dead. It has been decided that enrolment of a disentailing deed must be made within the lifetime of the disentailer; Hawkins v. Kemp, 3 East. 410. It was not necessary to have decided in the present case that a like rule should be observed as to the entry of copyholds on the court rolls. But there is little doubt that the decision in Hawkins v. Kemp would be held to apply to lands of this tenure. The 47th section of the Fines and Recoveries Abolition Act has so carefully excluded all discretion on the part of a court of equity in respect to assurances under the Act, that it can seldom if ever apply its peculiar rules to the determination of such cases. As to these assurances, therefore, equity does not so much follow the law voluntarily, as it is compelled strictly to obey legal rules.

Mr. Thomas Price, of the Town House, Mile End, and 24, Abchurch-lane, London, has been appointed a London commissioner to administer oaths in chancery.

Correspondence.

TITHE RENT CHARGE.*

The £4 10s. set opposite to No. 340 is the sum charged upon that land, and the sum which the tithe owner is entitled to recover by distress and entry thereon. (See 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 71, ss. 55, 81, 82.) C.

INVESTMENTS BY TRUSTEES.—EAST INDIA STOCK.

Trustees ought not to invest in East India £5 per cent. Stock. That stock has not the security of any imperial guarantee like the old East India Stock; but the debt thereby created and the dividends thereon are simply charged upon the revenues of India.

Trustees acting bonâ fide to the best of their discretion will be protected in making an investment in the old East India Stock; but the Full Court of Appeal, in the exercise of its discretion, has refused to order such an investment, the income of the tenant for life being ample without it (Cockburn v. Peel, 9 W. R. 725); and the Master of the Rolls has refused to allow an investment to be made in that stock (Ungless v. Tuff, 9 W. R. 729). C.

The views of the Court of Chancery upon this matter (by which trustees must be guided) are fully set forth in the case of Cockburn v. Peel (L. C. & LLJ., 9 W. R. 725), decided June 12th, 1861. And although in the more recent case of Equitable Assurance Company v. Fuller (V.C.W., 9 W. R. 400; confirmed on appeal, see Standard, 18th of July, 1861), decided 2nd March and 17th July, 1861, in favour of the applicant, the settlor, with the agent of the trustees, but without costs, yet the Court above seems to have been influenced by the circumstance that the changed investment had been already made, and the two learned judges (in the court above) do not seem to have been agreed. They both, moreover, intimated that the course pursued in Cockburn v. Peel would be in general adhered to.

It will be seen on reference to these cases that the interests of those in remainder are especially to be regarded. The difficulty in the Colne Valley case is put out of the way by the more recent statute. G. C.

ATTESTATION OF WILLS.

The following form of attestation is sufficient:—

"Signed by the above-named A. B., the testator, as his last will and testament, in our presence, both being present at the same time, and subscribing this attestation in the presence of each other and of the testator." C.

I beg to recommend the following form (which is something similar to the one signed by "B. P. A.," except the omission of the word "published" (which I believe 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 13, renders unnecessary), it having been used for a considerable period and passed without question:—

"Signed and declared by the said A. B., the testator, as and for his last will and testament, in the presence of us (present at the same time), and who, in his presence and in the presence of each other, subscribe our names as witnesses." G. A. J.

PRICE OF LAW BOOKS.—DUTY OFF PAPER.

Will you kindly allow me to call the attention of the profession to the high price we are compelled to pay for our law books, and see if something cannot be done by us to bring down those high prices.

I have recently been favoured with a letter from an eminent author of several very valuable legal works, and in reply to a letter from me, asking him if he intends to bring out another volume of his work, he says as follows:—

"I do not intend to continue it. The truth is, my publisher, who had an interest in it, would insist upon affixing so monstrous a price to it that it met with a most limited and unremunerative sale. I told him at the outset that 3s. or 3s. 6d. would be ample for it, and that 7s. 6d. would operate as a complete bar to its sale. However, he would insist upon 7s. 6d.;

* Ante, p. 728.

and the consequence was as I foretold. . . . The price charged (7s. 6d.) was really extortionate."

You will see from the above that the author thought 3s. or 3s. 6d. was ample for his little work. The publisher would insist on 7s. 6d. The consequence was no one scarcely bought it; and the work—a very useful one—did not pay.

I would suggest to the authors of legal works to keep the copyright themselves, and be their own publishers, and not allow them to fix the price, and such a price that completely retards their sale.

I do hope and trust that authors will take this hint; and as the duty will be very shortly taken off paper, we shall be enabled to purchase law books at a moderate price.

AVOCAT.

ESTATE OF WIDOWS IN FREEHOLDS.

A. having contracted for purchase of a freehold estate, and paid part of the purchase-money, died, leaving a widow and also a daughter under age, before the conveyance was made. What estate has the widow, and how is the contract to be completed.
W.

NEW GENERAL ORDERS IN BANKRUPTCY.

By the 45th section of the new Bankrupt and Insolvent Act, the Lord Chancellor, with the assistance of two Commissioners, is to frame general orders "for regulating the practice and procedure of the Courts of Bankruptcy and the several forms of petitions, orders, and other proceedings to be used in the said courts in all matters under the Act," and by the 46th section like general orders are to be framed for regulating the practice and procedure of the County Courts.

As the schedules to the Act are very few and of very limited application, the whole or nearly so, working part of the Act is left subject to "such forms as general orders shall direct," and until they are issued it is of little practical use to read the Act itself.

Now it is as to the preparation of these general rules and orders that I wish to call the attention of the profession, as it is by them that they will have to work in their every day application of the Act to the twelve or fifteen thousand bankruptcies and insolvencies annually coming before them, to say nothing of trust deeds and assignments for benefit of creditors.

What I want to see, is some of the leading practising attorneys and solicitors consulted on the matter, and not for the preparation of these rules and orders to be left to some chancery draughtsman; so that we may escape such arbitrary rules as (for instance) the 41st of the present existing ones, whereby the size of the paper on which the proceedings are written is fixed at the size of 16×10 inches—a size larger than foolscap, and smaller than draft paper as commonly used by solicitors; it requiring the special leave of the Court to receive any proceedings on any other sized paper. Understand, pray, that I do not object to a uniform size being generally used, but why not adopt the usual and common draft or foolscap size, and not an unusual, intermediate, and uncommon size? I merely mention this as one of those practical matters which a barrister, or other functionary unaccustomed to the practical working of the Act, would overlook. I could give dozens of other instances of ill-judged spaces given in the different forms used, all which, however slight and unimportant they may seem, yet are of more importance to the practitioner than would at first appear.

I therefore suggest that the Incorporated Law Society, and the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, communicate with the Lord Chancellor, offering their assistance in settling the forms, &c.; and I would further suggest that a draft of the orders and forms be printed and sent to the registrars of all the bankruptcy and county courts, for their remarks and suggestions thereon, with a sufficient number of spare copies for distribution to the leading practitioners in their respective courts, who might be willing to assist in the matter.

As the Act comes in force in less than six weeks' time, and at a most inconvenient time too—during the long vacation, when many are away—there is no time to be lost.

No book of practice will be of any good till the rules and orders are issued; therefore no editor can dare to go to print on "The New Bankruptcy Law" before he gets them to incorporate into his book, as no one would buy half a thing, which the Act without the rules and orders at present is.

A PRACTICAL SOLICITOR.

Reviews.

A Handy Book of the Game and Fishery Laws. By GEORGE C. OKE, author of "The Magisterial Synopsis" and "Formulist," "The Laws of Turnpike-roads," &c. London: Butterworths. 1861.

This treatise appears to leave nothing to be desired by the reader of this branch of law. Although entitled a Handy-book, it is in reality a comprehensive, though succinct, work. This title, therefore, as the author informs us in the preface, has been used by him "rather to denote the portability of the work than as implying its contents to be a mere superficial, and, therefore, incomplete, statement of the laws upon which it treats." It gives in extenso the several enactments relating to its subject matter, as also the decisions and other authorities; and contains forms of the various proceedings. These are appended to the chapters, which treat respectively of the different offences in respect of the seasons and days of shooting, gamekeepers, licenses, landlords' and tenants' rights and liabilities with respect to game, trespasses, &c., &c. There are not less than forty-one statutes relating to the subject-matter of this treatise referred to by the author. Of this conglomeration of enactments twenty-seven were passed in the present reign. One of these statutes, however, redeems in a great degree the character of our recent legislators as to the reproach of officious incompetency, to which such random compilations justly lay them open—we refer to the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 109, which is to come into operation on the 1st of next October, and which consolidates the laws relating to the salmon fisheries. Would that the game laws were alike united together in a single enactment, and that the Legislature would not be reminding country gentlemen of their early mathematical studies, by the difficulties attendant upon a search after a point of game law. This is a species of information that may, on account of the trouble of acquiring it, be denominated, in Lord Bacon's words, "a venatio Panis." Pending this consummation, Mr. Oke's Handy-book will doubtless be found to be of the utmost use. The chapters are arranged in a good order, and exhaust the branches of which they treat respectively. The last adopts the method observed in the criminal consolidation statutes of last session (which are duly noticed as to their provisions regarding the subject matter of this work), as it comprises a "Tabular List of Penalties." This treatise deserves unqualified praise; it digests in order a branch of law that has been complicated, rather than rendered difficult of ascertainment, by a reckless accumulation of isolated enactments. It required the author of the "Synopsis" and "Formulist" to write the tenth and fourteenth chapters of the book before us. These deserve especial notice, as they treat of proceedings for penalties, and comprise in a very small compass the varied laws relating to such proceedings. We have no doubt that the Handy-book will become the vade mecum of every one desirous of consulting a reliable oracle upon questions of game law, which are, at present, affected by such a multitude of enactments. This treatise is carefully composed, and contains a full index.

An observation is suggested to us by a perusal of this work as to the feasibility of a consolidation of our criminal law—a proposition which Mr. Coode, in his recent pamphlet, upon which we have offered some comments (ante pp. 598, 686), has very ably, though, we think, not successfully, combated. The treatise before us would, doubtless, be very incomplete if it wanted the last chapter, or, to use Mr. Coode's words, if it was "truncated of its penal element." Nevertheless, penalties are so distinct in their nature from rights and duties, that any particular class of penalties belongs rather to the general class of criminal offences than to the branch of law upon a breach of the duties specified in which they are to be imposed. We think, therefore, that a treatise of a particular branch of law must, as hitherto, describe the criminal, as well as the civil, provisions of our code applicable to its subject matter, but that a consolidation statute need not be similarly comprehensive. Such a statute would, we think, be complete if it comprised all the civil enactments bearing upon the matter to which it related, and left the penal element to be provided for by a section of the general criminal code.

The game laws are a subject of interest to the sportsman, and of importance to the agriculturalist. The harvest of the present year in France is said to be sadly deficient, by reason of the devastations of certain insects, the swarms of which are attributed by the imperial commissioners who have reported on the subject to the paucity of birds who prey on such—a want which, again, is occasioned by the gastronomic partialities of our allies for birds and their eggs. The Times of the 21st

August contains a leading article upon this matter, which is as important as the subject is novel. It is not, however, necessary for agricultural interests that the game laws should be extended in these islands to the protection of all British birds and their domiciles, as well to those underbred species not entitled to the denomination of game, as to the classes already protected.

The Bankruptcy Manual; being a complete Summary of the present Statute Law of Bankruptcy, Arrangement, and Composition between Debtors and Creditors. By CHARLES EDWARD LEWIS, Solicitor. Richardson & Co.

On the 11th of October the new Bankruptcy Act will come into operation; and thousands of persons, traders and non-traders, lawyers and students, officials and non-officials, are, or will be, compelled, as soon as the fast-flying hours of their vacation are over, to make themselves more or less acquainted with the new law, which for good or evil must materially effect either their pecuniary or their social interests, or possibly both. To this vast class of persons Mr. Charles Edward Lewis most opportunely offers the resources of his diligence and experience in the manual before us. In sixteen chapters he lays before the reader the different branches of the subject, confining himself, as he informs us, to the law as it is written, and avoiding all reference to disputed questions, doubts, and anticipated conflicts of legislation. We are introduced, first of all, to the four methods whereby a voluntary or enforced liquidation of a debtor's estate will henceforth be carried out. The treatise then proceeds to explain in familiar language the nature, requisites, aspects and incidents of these four courses. Preliminary chapters are devoted to the constitution and powers of the new court. It is shown that the distinction between traders and non-traders will be as important as ever, whilst the difficulty of deciding who are and who are not traders will be in no way diminished. The requisite steps are pointed out to obtain an adjudication—(1) by and against a trader, and (2) by and against a non-trader, including, under the latter head, a description of the new process by means of a judgment debtor summons. In dealing with the consequences of an adjudication in bankruptcy as regards the bankrupt himself and others, the various clauses of the act of 1849 are interwoven with those of the new statute, so as to constitute a digest of the two enactments in a clear and compact form. We have here only one suggestion to offer, whereby the utility of Mr. Lewis's arrangement may be increased—which is, that the chapters should be divided into sections, numbered to correspond with the enumerated contents at the head of each chapter, as in Lord St. Leonards' "Vendors and Purchasers," and other works. Thus, a greater facility of reference will be attained. We may also observe, in passing, that mention of the "accountant" in bankruptcy appears to have been omitted from page 19. The procedure after adjudication, preferential payments, proof of debts, and declarations of dividends are next considered. A chapter then follows on the duties and liabilities of the official and creditors' assignees, as declared by the new Act. And here a new blot seems to have been hit in this unhappy specimen of modern legislation. A clause directing and providing for a discharge to be given to the creditors' assignees was inserted in the original draft of the Bill. The clause was afterwards struck out; but notwithstanding this, in sections 180 and 181, the "order for discharge" is spoken of and referred to as if it was still subsisting. This is not the only instance of obscurity in the Act complained of by the writer. In dealing with the discharge of bankrupts, Mr. Lewis comments on the doubtful policy which inspired the abolition of class certificates. Into this question, however, it is now too late to enter. It remains only to observe that the criminal law relating to bankrupts has been digested in the manner before mentioned; and the new and important legislation with respect to trust and composition deeds contained in sections 192 to 200 of the new Act is laid before the readers. Finally, the provisions of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 70, the "Gentleman's Act," as it is popularly called, are fully explained; this being a measure which is likely to come into general request, in order to afford to non-traders a mode of escaping from the new ordeal of bankruptcy. We cordially recommend this excellent treatise, coming from a practised lawyer, to the notice of the profession and the public, feeling satisfied that no better arrangement can be suggested for dealing with an extensive subject, and that Mr. Lewis's accuracy and ability will be found to have conveyed to the reader the supposed intentions of the Legislature in the most intelligible form that is possible.

The National Association for the Promotion of Social Science.

FIRST DEPARTMENT.—JURISPRUDENCE.

Thursday, Aug. 15.

The chair was taken in this department, on the motion of Mr. G. W. Hastings (the honorary general secretary), by the Lord Justice of Appeal, one of the Vice-Presidents of the society; and subsequently by Lord Brougham, the President.

The Right Hon. JOSEPH NAPIER delivered the following opening address as president of the department:—"The limits of an opening address will not permit me to enlarge on the great theme of Jurisprudence; my present duty is to clear the ground for the discussions which are expected to take place in this section; and I have also to prepare the way for giving to the results at which we may arrive their proper effect in the systematic amendment of the law. 'In reality' (says our great countryman, Edmund Burke), 'there are two, and only two, foundations of law, and they are both of them conditions without which nothing can give it any force—I mean equity and utility. With respect to the former, it grows out of the great rule of equality, which is grounded on our common nature, and which Philo, with propriety and beauty, calls the mother of justice. All human laws are, properly speaking, only declaratory; they may alter the mode of application, but they have no power over the substance of original justice. The other foundation of law, which is utility, must be understood, not of partial or limited, but of general and public utility, connected in the same manner with and derived directly from our rational nature.' This is not merely speculative; it is the wise exposition of one who has taught us that 'nothing is desirable that is not practicable'; it is a general sketch of the law as it ought to be. Let us glance at our law as it actually exists—the incongruous heap of enactments which have been huddled together during centuries—some obsolete, some effete, some which have never effected their professional purpose; new laws thrust in to meet some special emergency, without regard to those already in force, still less to general or remote consequences; impolitic in their conception, defective in their structure and expression; text law diffused and uncertain, and too often of mere private interpretation; adjudged cases, accumulated in a confused heap; authority impaired by conflicting and discredited decisions, which help to perpetuate the evils that have been brought into the very bowels of our jurisprudence. Two centuries and a half have elapsed since the amendment of the law engaged the attention of Lord Bacon, and in succeeding times Hale and Prynne, Bentham and Mackintosh, Romilly and Brougham, have kept on foot a standing protest against the complexity, the incoherence, the still graver defects of a system of laws which ought to be a model of jurisprudence for the civilized world. Lord Bacon's elevated and comprehensive mind sketched the outline of a great reform; the statute law to be expurgated, classified, and consolidated; the common law to be digested and methodized; a standing commission to be set up in aid of current legislation. In latter times commissions for the occasion have been impulsively appointed, and have been used rather (as I may say) to stop some troublesome leak than for sufficient repair. This palliative policy has but postponed the demand for an adequate remedy. Notwithstanding all that has been done since our noble president entered upon the warfare of law amendment, there remains a wide waste to be reclaimed. The weeds increase and multiply; dust and defilement accumulate: when will the good work of clearance and cultivation be taken up with the spirit and in the way which can insure success? The remedy which has been approved by our president, and which he has so often and so ably advocated—which the late Lord Langdale pressed upon the attention of Parliament—which in 1846 was brought under the notice of the late Sir Robert Peel, and was afterwards adopted by that able and provident statesman as a part of the comprehensive plan which he suggested for reconstructing the Executive Government of Ireland—this remedy was ultimately approved by the House of Commons. In the session of 1857 an address to the Queen was presented by the House, to which a gracious answer was promptly sent by her Majesty, which led us to expect that a department of administration for the affairs of public justice would soon be constituted. The importance of such a department has grown into a necessity; and after the repeated conferences which I have had with statesmen and jurists, and the suggestions which I have received from those who have given to the subject the thought which it deserves, I feel myself warranted in saying that such a department might be constructed at any time, in complete consistency with the prerogative of the Crown; the precedence of the Lord Chancellor, the independence of the judges, and the privileges of Parliament. It is competent to the Crown to appoint a committee of council for the affairs of public justice. There is a committee for trade, another for education, and a judicial committee. Over the new committee, the Lord Chancellor, as the great minister of justice, would properly preside, in the absence of the president of the council. The chancellorship of the Duchy of Lancaster might remunerate a vice-president of the committee, whose undivided attention might be given to jurisprudence and the amendment of the law. By an order in council, business relating to the affairs of public justice might be referred to this committee. It is now generally allowed that it is needful to collect, register, and digest the results of experience as to the working of the law, and, therefore, judicial statistics should be periodically collected by and recorded in this department. These would be obtained from the several courts of justice, and might be accompanied by such remedial or other suggestions as the judges or officers of these courts might think fit to add. Defects in the law would thus be disclosed, remedies would be discovered, obscurities arising from imperfect legislation (which, under the present system, rather provoke satirical exposure than induce remedial comment) might hereafter be noticed for the plain purpose of prompt amendment. The course of judicial decision might be followed, and when its authority might seem questionable, either from a conflict of judicial opinion, or the disapproval of the profession, or when it would be found at variance with the known intention of the Legislature, or the current opinions of some class whose interests were specially involved—in these and like cases, the attention of the committee would be directed to the subject. It would, also, from time to time, be directed to the digested results of the statistics obtained from the courts, and would be enabled, at stated intervals, to make a report to the Crown on the state of the law, as administered by the courts, and lay the foundation for such remedial measures as the Government would then feel it to be their duty to submit to Parliament."

Passing to the subject of law reports, the speaker continued: "It is a public necessity, I think, that the present system of irresponsible reporting, and the reviewing of decisions which from the time when they are published have the sanction and force of positive law, should undergo a searching scrutiny. Definitions, principles, and rulings should not be added to the stock of our jurisprudence unless they be supplied by accredited authority. I speak as to the future, but cannot overlook the past. A book has been published in New York by Professor Greenleaf; the fourth edition appeared in 1856, and it contains 548 octavo pages, being, as it is entitled, a 'Collection of overruled, denied, and doubted decisions, both American and English.' The Department of Justice would have to exercise a vigilant supervision over, and perhaps to report frequently on the administration of the criminal law. With reference to the exercise of the prerogative of mercy, advice which would be the result of responsible inquiry might be suitably tendered to the sovereign. Indeed, it is difficult to reconcile with sound principle that the verdict of a jury, founded on evidence given on oath in open court, should be superseded by secret inquiry or by any private influence. If in any case it is alleged or suggested that there are reasons which ought to satisfy the public conscience that the sentence of the law should either be remitted or reduced, is it not desirable that these should be put forward openly, and considered in a judicial proceeding? This would, in general, have a good effect on the public mind, and would give to punishment a greater certainty and a higher sanction."

The probable influence of a Department of Justice upon the machinery of legislation was thus glanced at:—"The help to be given to current legislation would probably be one of the most delicate of the duties of this department of justice. The clearance and consolidation of the statute law, the digesting and arranging of the dogmatic and judicial law, would naturally fall within the province, and come under the supervision, of this department; but it may be considered, perhaps, as of more pressing importance to get the current legislation into approved working order. It was observed by a great jurist, Lord Chancellor Hardwicke, when speaking on the subject in the House of Lords, more than a century ago, that the introduction of a new law should be the result of reason and deliberation. 'In every such case,' he says, 'we ought to consider whether a new law be necessary for the purpose intended; for no new law ought ever to be made unless it appears to be absolutely necessary, as a multitude of useless laws is one of the greatest plagues a people can be exposed to. In the next place, we ought to consider whether the inconvenience or grievance intended to be removed be of such a nature as to admit of being cured by any human law; for, if it be not, we render ourselves ridiculous by the attempt. In the third place, we ought to consider whether, by endeavouring to remove the grievance complained of, we may not probably introduce a much greater; and, in the fourth place, we ought to examine very strictly whether the law be conceived in such terms as may be effectual for the end intended, and the several clauses so clearly expressed as can admit of no doubt.' Pace tanti viri, I would so far alter his wise and comprehensive speech as to conclude it thus—'So carefully framed as not to admit of any reasonable doubt of what was intended.' The Houses of Lords and Commons have provided by their standing orders that, in certain cases, Bills intended to be referred to Parliament should, before they are introduced, be submitted to certain public departments. These departments may therefore report their views and make their suggestions which may assist though not control the Legislature. . . . I feel myself justified, on the present occasion, in pressing on your attention the importance of having such a department as I have suggested. I have had the cordial and consistent support of Earl Russell, both in the House of Commons and in this Association; and the very eminent jurist, the present Lord Chancellor of England, in the address which he delivered on vacating the office of President of the Juridical Society, on the 21st of February, 1859, has pronounced the establishment of a Department of Justice to be the very foundation of an improved system of jurisprudence. If, indeed, jurisprudence have a moral aspect; if it be an inductive science; we must have recourse to the method by which other branches of inductive science have been advanced since the time of Lord Bacon. We must, by reason and reflection, derive general results from particulars collected diligently by observation and experience, and by a graduated work of induction make safe and steady progress. In the celebrated report of the select committee of the House of Commons, with reference to the proceedings in the case of Warren Hastings (a report of which was drawn up by Edmund Burke), it is said of the House of Commons that 'one of its principal functions and duties is to be observant of the courts of justice, and to take due care that none of them shall pursue new courses unknown to the law and constitution of this kingdom, or to equity, sound legal policy, or substantial justice.' This is the constitutional duty of the representatives of the people. In discharging it, or rather in the honest endeavour to discharge it, how desirable it must be to have the aid of a department such as I have suggested I confidently submit to the plain good sense of the public. The agency of commissions might be thus profitably superseded, and even select committees might find their labours usefully abridged. On the score of economy, I would add, that if we calculate the expense of commissions for the last thirty years, and contrast this with what a department would have cost the country, and then consider what would have been the probable balance on the side of law amendment, under a department, instead of these commissions, we might find another illustration of the wise maxim, that the best security for a wise economy is efficiency."

The history of legislation for Ireland was thus commented on:—"It was with reference to Ireland that the late Sir Robert Peel advised that the affairs of public justice should be placed under an imperial department. His policy was sound. For this I maintain, that until there be obtained for both countries the most complete community of rights and laws that is compatible with whatever is indelibly peculiar to each, the Union cannot be said to have realised its proper purpose. Seven centuries have elapsed since England assumed the office of giving laws to Ireland; sixty years have elapsed since the Legislative Union was formally concluded. Sensitive to insult in whatever form, the Irish people are proverbially accessible to justice. Sir John Davis has reported, and Sir Edward Coke has recorded, that no nation under the sun has a greater love of justice. What a basis was this for legislative union! Have, then, the interests of all been united; or has it been the policy to unite them in the attainment of a common and improved system of just laws? Far from it. We persevere until this day—doggedly persevere—in a vicious separate system of legislation, which encumbers the statute-book and weakens the union. There are lucid intervals when we seem to understand our position, but even then we resort to some impulsive and unwise remedy. A commission is now in course of gestation for inquiring into the procedure of the courts here, with a view to assimilation with that of the courts of England. Why should there have been any difference? Moreover, it would seem to have been supposed or assumed in England that our existing procedure had been, if not as primitive as the Breton law, at least that it was as unreformed. It was forgotten that our chancery reform preceded that of England (experimentum in corpore vili). In some respects it is more sweeping—in others less satisfactory. In the common law courts the reform which was completed by the labours of my right hon. friend, Mr. Whiteside, is more liberal than that in England. It is to be regretted that there should be any difference; the two systems should be compared, with a view to substitute for both what might be better than either. I have always advocated such assimilation. When a commission was issued in 1859, with a view to improve procedure in equity, under the sanction of the late Lord Chancellor Campbell, I urged (but without success) that Ireland should share in the benefit. Indeed, it was the deliberate opinion of the influential members of the late Statute Law Commission, that it was not practicable to have even the same criminal law for Ireland as for England. Mr. Whiteside, Mr. Justice Hayes, and myself thought otherwise. We had Bills prepared in conformity with our view, and these were approved by the Cabinet in 1848; they were taken up by the succeeding Cabinet, and to a great extent, though not altogether in the form which was chosen by us, they have now become imperial law, and so far solved the problem of an assimilation which was supposed to be impracticable. The question of procedure, however, is, I regret to say, still left open, even in the criminal law, and yet it is the question the most urgent to be settled. Imperfect procedure works injustice daily, and amendment would come at once into operation. To delay remedial amendment is, in fact, a denial of justice. With reference to professional promotion, I am heartily desirous to see it placed on a common basis for both countries, and I think that this would be more likely to be accomplished, and promotion made, as it ought to be, the reward of merit, if subject to the recommendation of an imperial department, withdrawn from the pressure of party, though responsible to Parliamentary, professional, and public opinion. This would work a beneficial change in the affairs of justice for Ireland. The early policy of England was to divide Ireland against itself; it is now the interest of both to cement their union as firmly as can be effected by assimilating the laws, the equal administration of justice, and full participation of every right and every privilege. In the reconstruction of the existing law, all the Irish statutes, from first to last, should be subjected to the same process as the English, and a selection from both embodied in an imperial edition of imperial statutes for England and Ireland united. But it may be asked, can our future legislation be fashioned on an imperial model? We have assimilated our criminal law—we hope to assimilate our procedure. Why should there be a difference in our laws of property? Why should there be any conflict of commercial law? And above all, why should the marriage law be not only separate but sectarian? Look, moreover, at our scattered Ecclesiastical Courts, with three distinct courts of appeal for the United Church."

On the marriage law of Ireland, Mr. Napier observed:—"Look at what we call our marriage law. You may search for it in the lumber-room amongst the rubbish of Acts of Parliament—Irish, English, and imperial. Thoughtful men ask themselves at last—is marriage, indeed, to remain an institution of God, or has it become the creature and convention of human law? It is, doubtless, of Divine appointment; as Lord Stowell has said, in language eloquent as it is exact—"It is the parent, not the child, of civil society." The relation of husband and wife is constituted—completely and irrevocably constituted—by the free consent of parties competent to contract, and intending by such consent to constitute the relation. The positive law of man cannot make more or less perfect the appointment and institution of God. It has been said, but loosely said, by great authority, that society is a party to the contract; it would be more accurate to say that society may have an interest in its completion. In this day of religious liberty, parties competent to contract and constitute a marriage ought to have the free choice of having that marriage solemnized by such religious sanction as they may think fit to select and superadd. Marriage is publici quia Divini juris—it is valid everywhere if valid anywhere. Why is this? Because it depends not on the positive or local law of man, but on the appointment of God for the whole human family. In a Christian State it is acknowledged to be the symbol of a great mystery—the union that is at once indissoluble and divine. It was reasonable to require publicity in the title to dower or to the inheritance of landed property, and in other like cases the interference of positive law is at least intelligible, and, when rightly understood, is found to belong to the law of property, not to the law of marriage. If, indeed, our laws of property were cleared of all obsolete feudalism, simplified and consolidated, then what is called the marriage question would solve itself. The State may regulate the enjoyment of property in whatever way and upon whatever condition the general interests of the community may reasonably require; but when it proceeds to annul a marriage because some conventional rule has not been observed, I am bound to declare that it exceeds its jurisdiction. Irregular and clandestine marriages, as they are called, deserve to be denounced, and ought to be discouraged by every branch of the Christian Church, and the more so as human law cannot directly deal with them. We must look to a moral remedy for moral evils—to the preventive influence of parental and pastoral care, religious training, and the restraint of improved public opinion. Where the State moulds the laws of property for the convenience of the community, it may justly require—as a matter of sound policy—that every marriage which can claim to be recognized for proprietary or other civil privileges shall have had such sanctions superadded, and been publicly recorded in such form as the interest of society may demand for its common convenience. Nothing more than this should be required. But this, be it observed, would be a part of the law of property; it leaves the law of marriage as God has left it—sacred and universal. This view is, I think, in harmony with the spirit of our ancient law. The Saxon laws of England, which have been exhumed by antiquarian research, and from which has been extracted the law which is said to require the intervention of a minister in holy orders, episcopally ordained, as necessary to the validity of marriage—this has been extended to Ireland as a part of our ancient common law, not in a question of property, but in a case of bigamy. It has given a shock to our social system, which has not yet been quieted by any rational legislation. It is the opinion of the younger generation of the judges, and of all the civilians and jurists with whom I have spoken on the subject, that this decision can only be supported by its own authority as a decision of the House of Lords. The direction of the Saxon law that a mass priest should be present at the nuptials, to pronounce the benediction, may have been very proper at that time; but how can this necessarily imply that marriage then as a sacrament, which the parties could minister to each other, would be null and void without such benediction? Indeed, in the same volume of the Saxon laws will be found a canon (p. 443), which directs that a priest should not be present at a marriage where a man marries a second wife or a woman marries a second husband. He is forbidden in such a case to give the benediction. There is a penance prescribed for the party who so marries; the intervention of the priest is prohibited, but the marriage is left with the inherent validity which is irrevocably conferred by the sacramental completion. If it can be inferred from the one Saxon law which enjoys the intervention of 'the mass priest,' that a deacon who has not received priests' orders may celebrate a valid marriage, the inference from the other laws is at least not less obvious, that their injunction was but directory, and the intervention enjoined was not essential to the validity of the marriage. The great and general interest of the question has induced me to dwell upon it, and to suggest the principles on which, as I conceive, the law should be now settled."

On the admission of defendants to give evidence in criminal suits:—"In the report of the select committee, to which I have already alluded, it has been well observed that 'the trial of a cause is not in the arguments or disputations of the prosecutors and the counsel, but in the evidence, and that to refuse evidence is to refuse to hear the cause.' 'Nothing, therefore,' it is added, 'but the most clear and weighty reasons ought to preclude its production.' Ought oral testimony to be excluded in any case, where it is the best that at the time of the inquiry can be produced? Can this prevent fraud or perjury? Man, indeed, is both frail and fallible; he may deceive and be deceived; but still it is a law of our nature to act on testimony, which may be depreciated but not destroyed by our liability to deception. This consideration has led to the removal of some arbitrary restrictions, which have been taken away by the statutes which were passed at the instance and with the aid of our noble president. Although in both countries the parties in a civil suit are now competent and compellable to give evidence in that suit, in neither country can an accused man be examined as a witness on his own behalf in a criminal proceeding. An accomplice in a murder who becomes an approver, interested in earning a free pardon, is admitted as a competent witness. The party accused is, indeed, permitted to make a statement, but he cannot sustain it by his oath, nor submit it to the test of a cross-examination; so that, if it be true, its value is unjustly depreciated. There is no case, I am confident, in which an innocent man is put on his trial in which he does not feel the injustice of his existing law. There are cases in which no one but the accused could expose the falsity of the accusation; and there are cases, also, in which the accusation would not have been made, perhaps not even contemplated, but for the very rule which may screen it from exposure. The accusation, indeed, should always be sustained by independent evidence; but, for this very reason, it should be open to the accused to meet such evidence by his account of what he alone may be able to testify; and, moreover, as whatever the accused may state will naturally be received with jealous suspicion, he should be allowed to submit his testimony to cross-examination, that its true value may be tested. It is said that where the option would not be exercised, it would generally be presumed that the accused was guilty; and that where it would be exercised, it would subject the accused to personal interrogation. But what would be the extent of such interrogation? It would be confined within the strict limits of cross-examination, without which any evidence may be imperfect. After all, it is a question as to the probable balance of justice or injustice. An accused man, conscious of his guilt, might hesitate to use the privilege; but no man, conscious of his innocence, would forbear to claim and use the right. Why should an accused man have the option of making a statement at all? Might it not be said that an unfavourable inference would be drawn from his silence? But if he made a statement which, if believed, would be, and nothing else would be, a complete exculpation, is it just to refuse him the opportunity of giving to this statement its true value as evidence, and to remit him to the imperfect and inconsistent remedy of a counter-prosecution for perjury, after the injury has been already inflicted? The spirit of our constitution strives to protect the innocent rather than to clear the guilty. Such should be the effect of our law."

On the Statute of Frauds:—"I have glanced at the Statute of Frauds, under which oral testimony is excluded in cases where its admission as the best evidence at the time available, might help the search for truth. But observe how inconsistent, if not impolitic, are the provisions of this statute. Why should oral evidence of all the particulars be sufficient where the subject of the contract is of small value, or even where a sixpence has been paid to bind the bargain, or a fragment or the bulk has been accepted as a part of the whole? Why should an admission of the fact of such part payment, or part acceptance, be proveable by oral testimony? Why should oral evidence be admissible when the written contract has been lost, though this may have occurred by mere negligence? Why should the rescinding of the contract be proveable by oral testimony? Or why should part performance make oral evidence sufficient to establish and enforce the contract in a court of equity? How many honest contracts have been evaded by this arbitrary legislation? It may be proper to protect, in certain cases, the weak against the strong; but when the parties deal on equal terms, why should they not have been left free to make their bargains in such form, and with such safeguards, as their own interests might require, or their own prudence might suggest? If this simple and sound policy had been consistently adhered to, then the testimony of the parties would have been available according to their own free choice, according to its intrinsic value, and, what is of greater consequence, also according to the general course of commercial law? If our tribunals are equal to the duty of sifting testimony, detecting falsehood, and discovering truth, the sources of evidence should be freely opened."

On the law of bankruptcy, the patent law, and the assimilation of procedure in law and equity:—"The bankruptcy law is still on crutches. I cannot be satisfied until I see an imperial law of bankruptcy for the United Kingdom. The elaborate report which has been prepared by the committee to whom the patent law was referred I will not anticipate; nor shall I further refer to any topics on which I have enlarged in the address of 1858. There is a subject of grave importance which deserves a special notice—I allude to the question of legal and equitable jurisdiction. The tendency of recent legislation has been to remove the impediments which had made the courts of law and equity rather antagonistic than ancillary to each other. The early history of our courts of equity shows that the courts of law had limited their own jurisdiction by a narrow and technical procedure, which was inadequate to afford the judicial remedies that were required by the growing requirements of society. Why, it may well be asked, should not the resources of either be made available to both? . . . Every court of justice, whether it be a court of law or of equity, should be enabled to do complete justice between the same parties in respect of the same subject matter, either by the convenient interchange of powers and duties each with the other, or by enabling the same court to exercise the entire jurisdiction, so far as is necessary in the pending suit, for the administration of complete justice. Our judicial system ought to be harmonious in itself. The suitor should never be subjected to the unjust penalty still imposed on a mere mistake of jurisdiction, nor to the contingency of an inquiry turning out abortive, in consequence of the inability of the court to give remedial effect to its own decision. In one view this may be regarded as a question of procedure, and the convenient division of judicial labour; but it involves the higher policy of restoring the unity of justice itself."

Adverting to the aid which could be brought by social science to the cause of judicial improvement—"It must never be forgotten that our system is bound up with free institutions which are the inheritance of a free people. Our laws, therefore, have a historic life, a customary and a traditional influence. Adjudged cases and judicial reasons, publicly accepted, are incorporated into our judicial system—a system which requires a reflecting mind to appreciate it as it deserves—

There needs, forsooth, deep salutary thought;
The eye that, like the diver, sees its way
To the pool's depth with vision undisturbed.

It is not worthy of social science to give a greater efficiency to this system, to secure a greater reverence for the law itself, a higher position for the legal profession. Nor is it a light matter whether this profession should sink to a vulgar level, or be raised to a higher elevation. Public justice must have its ministers, and public policy requires that these should be men of refined feeling and cultivated minds. It is not enough to have a supply of rough-and-ready justice. However useful this lower currency may be, we must seek to maintain a great and goodly system of jurisprudence, under which public order, civil and religious freedom, protection of life and property, may be adequately secured—a system which will nurture advocacy of the highest order, and encourage the learning, the wisdom, and the love of justice, which are not less the ornament than the support of judicial authority."

The right hon. gentleman concluded with an elaborate and eloquent peroration.

Mr. WILKINSON laid before the section the following resolutions of "The Patent Law Committee":—1st. That all applications for grants of letters patent should be subjected to a preliminary investigation before a special tribunal. 2nd. That such tribunal should have power to decide on the granting of patents, but it should be open to inventors to renew their application notwithstanding previous refusal. 3rd. That the said tribunal should be formed by a permanent and salaried judge, assisted, when necessary, by the advice of scientific assessors, and that its sittings should be public. 4th. That the same tribunal should have extensive jurisdiction to try patent causes, subject to a right of appeal. 5th. That the jurisdiction of such tribunal should be extended to the trial of all questions of copyright and regulations of designs. 6th. That the scientific assessors for the trial of patent causes should be five in number, to be chosen from a panel to be nominated by the Commissioners of Patents for the adjudication upon facts, when deemed necessary by the judge, or demanded by either of the parties. 7th. That the right of appeal should be to either of the Courts of Exchequer Chamber, with a final appeal to the House of Lords. 8th. That for the preliminary examinations the assessors, if the judge require their assistance, should be two in number, named by the Commissioners of Patents from the existing panel; the decision to rest with the judge. 9th. That the committee should approve of the principles of compelling patentees to grant licenses, on terms to be fixed by arbitration; or, in case the parties should not agree to such arbitration, then by the proposed tribunal, or by an arbitrator or arbitrators appointed by the said tribunal. 10th. That a report be drawn up, in conformity with the resolutions passed by this committee, and that the council, if such report be approved of by them, be requested to allow it to be read at the meeting of the British Association to be held at Manchester this year.

Mr. ARTHUR RYLAND read a paper by Mr. J. NAPIER HIGGINS on "The Machinery of Legislation." The paper discussed the present very faulty method of draughting and enacting Acts of Parliament. Matters were left to private parties in the first instance, and were brought hastily and inconsiderately into the Legislature. The recent discussion on the law of bankruptcy was a flagrant example of this. No proper attempt had yet been made to consolidate the law, and all the commissions for its consolidation had been failures. The principles of the Bankruptcy Bill, although approved of by the mercantile community, had been defeated by individual members of the Houses of Lords and Commons. The "Trades Marks Bill" had been rejected by similar means, and Bills for the Palace of Justice had also been lost. No Bill should be allowed to be brought into the House of Lords or Commons by private parties, and at least all Government Bills should be prepared by a separate department.

Public Companies.

REPORTS AND MEETINGS.

EDINBURGH AND GLASGOW RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 2nd inst., a dividend at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, was declared for the past half-year.

HEREFORD, ROSS, AND GLOUCESTER RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 31st ult., a dividend of £5 per cent. per annum, on the preference shares, and of 5s. 9d. per £20 share on the ordinary share capital was declared for the past half-year.

LEEDS, BRADFORD, AND HALIFAX JUNCTION RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 30th ult., a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, was declared for the past half-year.

NEWPORT, WARRENPOINT, AND ROSTREVOR RAILWAY.

At the ordinary meeting of this company held on the 31st ult., a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. on the preference shares, and of 2s. per ordinary share was declared for the past half-year.

NORFOLK RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 29th ult., a dividend at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, was declared for the past half-year.

NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 28th ult., a dividend at the rate of 2½ per cent., was declared for the past half-year.

WEST DURHAM RAILWAY.

At the annual meeting of this company held on the 28th ult., a dividend at the rate of £7 per cent. per annum, less income tax, was declared for the past half-year.

WHITEHAVEN JUNCTION RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 29th ult., a dividend of 12s. per share, less income tax, was declared, for the past half-year.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

DICKINS—On Sept. 3, the wife of William Park Dickins, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, of a daughter.

HOLGATE—On Sept. 3, the wife of Wyndham Holgate, Esq., Barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

BATHER—BLONFIELD—On Aug. 29, Arthur Henry, son of the late John Bather, Esq., Recorder of Shrewsbury, to Lucy Elizabeth, daughter of the late Right Rev. C. J. Blomfield, D.D., Lord Bishop of London.

DENT—COLLINSON—On Sept. 3, Thomas Wilkinson John Dent, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-law, to Sophia Amelia, daughter of the Rev. George John Collinson, incumbent of St. James's, Clapham.

ROGERS—HERRING—On Sept. 3, Benjamin Bickley Rogers, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-law, to Ellen Susanna, daughter of Robert Herring, Esq., of Cromer.

WILLIAMS—HAMILTON—On Aug. 31, Thomas Williams, jun., Esq., Solicitor, Cheltenham, to Elizabeth Mary, daughter of the late Thomas Hamilton, Esq., of Sanquhar, Dumfriesshire.

WILSON—MACLEAN—On July 6, at King William's-town, Stephen Henry Kenneth Wilson, Esq., son of the late hon. James Wilson, Chief Justice of Mauritius, to Anne Emma Matilda, daughter of Colonel Maclean, C.B., Lieutenant-Governor of British Kaffraria.

WINTER—HART—On Aug. 27, William Henry Winter, Esq., to Fanny Cheney, daughter of the late Robert Hart, Esq., Barrister-at-law, of Driphill House, Worcestershire.

DEATHS.

DOWDING—On Sept. 2, at Bath, Frederick Dowding, Esq., Solicitor, and one of the aldermen of that city.

POCOCK—On Aug. 31, Geo. Pocock, Esq., Solicitor, Southampton, aged 45.

SEELEY—On Aug. 31, in his 55th year, John Seeley, Esq., Solicitor, of Surrey Villa, Lower Streatham.

Unclaimed Stock in the Bank of England.

The Amount of Stock heretofore standing in the following Names will be transferred to the Party claiming the same, unless other Claimants appear within Three Months:—

ESDAILE, HENRY, Esq., Cothelstone, Taunton, Somerset, £1,699 8s., Consols.—Claimed by EDWARD JEFFRIES ESDAILE, jun., the acting surviving executor.

GOULD, JOHN, Esq., Ambend House, Petminster, Somersetshire. £31 6s. 9d. Consols.—Claimed by the Rev. ROBERT JOHN GOULD, the surviving executor.

MANNERS, Rev. EDWARD, and ROGER MANNERS, Esq., both of Rutland-house, Knightsbridge, £20 7s. 8d. Reduced Three per Cent.—Claimed by ANN JOHNSON, wife of Samuel Johnson, heretofore Ann Manners, Spinster, the sole executrix of Rev. Edward Manners, who was the survivor.

The Toronto Globe of August 20th states that it is reported that the proposed changes in the Upper Canada judiciary will take place in a week. Chief Justice Robinson retires on a pension of two-thirds his salary, and it is reported that he will be appointed to the post of President of the Court of Appeal, with £500 a year additional. The other changes are not yet announced, but it is nearly certain that Mr. Draper becomes Chief of the Queen's bench, and Mr. McLean Chief of the Common Pleas. It is said that Mr. Vankoughnet does not go on the bench at present.

London Gazettes.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

FRIDAY, Sept. 6, 1861.

GISSING, SAMUEL NEWSON, and HENRY DENT HENRICH, [Attorneys & Solicitors; by mutual consent. Aug. 28.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Sept. 3, 1861.

ATKINSON, GEORGE, Whitesmith, 20, Bingley-street, Leeds. Sol. Hider, 15, Park-row, Leeds. Oct. 1.

BALLS, MATTHEW, sen, Gent., Brixton-hill, Surrey. Sols. Clarke & Morice, 29, Coleman-street, London. Oct. 15.

BLENCOWE, WILLIAM, Husbandman, Marton, Warwickshire. Sols. Dewes & Norton, Nuneaton. Sept. 28.

BROWN, WILLIAM, Farmer, Houghton-in-the-Dale, Walsingham, Norfolk. Sols. Mitchell & Clarke, Wymondham. Oct. 14.

COTTELL, JAMES WILLIAM, a Captain in the Bombay Army, Tufnell-terrace, Upper Holloway, Middlesex. Sols. Lewis, Wood, & Street, 6, Raymond-buildings, Gray's-inn. Oct. 10.

LEIGH, JOSEPH MANUEL, Iron Founder, Haverstock-hill, Hampstead, and Limehouse, Middlesex, and George-yard, London. Sol. Strong, 44, Jewin-street, London. Jan. 1.

NEWCOMB, ELIZABETH, Gresford, Denbighshire. Sols. Warry, Robins, & Burgess, 70, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Oct. 2.

PARKER, LYSIMACHUS, Esq., formerly of Manor House, Little Cawthorpe, Lincolnshire, but late of Prescott House, Prescott, Gloucestershire. Sols. Ingakby & Bell, Town Hall, Louth, Lincolnshire. Oct. 1.

RICHARDSON, EDMOND, Grocer & Provision Dealer, Pavement, York. Sol. Mann, 1, New-street, York. Oct. 22.

FRIDAY, Sept. 6, 1861.

BEDSON, ANN, Spinster, Childer Thornton, Cheshire. Sol. Ford, 2, Grosvenor-street, Chester. Oct. 31.

KIRKMAN, SAMUEL, Gent., Lindridge House, Desford, Leicestershire. Sols. Berridge & Morris, Friar-lane, Leicester. Nov. 30.

LEE, STEPHEN HENRY, Vitriol Manufacturer, Norwood and Henton, Middlesex. Sol. Peachey, 17, Salisbury-square, London. Nov. 2.

MEAD, MARY ANN, Widow, 1, Mayfield-terrace West, Dalston, Hackney, Middlesex. Sols. Pearce, Phillips, Winckworth, & Pearce, 66, Gresham House, Old Broad-street, London. Dec. 5.

POWELL, THOMAS WALTER, Attorney-at-law, Neath, Glamorganshire. Sol. Randall, Neath. Oct. 31.

TWEDDELL, GEORGE, Gent., Westerton, Durham. Sol. Smith, 40, Sadler-street, Durham. Oct. 1.

WHITWORTH, WILLIAM SHEPHERD BRIDENELL, Esq., formerly of Earl's

Barton, Northamptonshire, but late of 12, Hamilton-terrace, Leamington Priors, Warwickshire. Sol. Haynes, 9, Hamilton-terrace, Leamington. Sept. 30.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

Last Day of Proof.

TUESDAY, Sept. 3, 1861.

(County Palatine of Lancaster.)

Oakey, Caleb, Upholsterer, Preston, Lancashire. Burrow v. Oakey, Registrar of Court, 10, Camden-place, Preston. Sept. 30.

FRIDAY, Sept. 6, 1861.

Gott, Joseph, Coal Steward, Whitwood, Featherstone, Yorkshire. Hepinstall v. Gott, V. C. Wood. Oct. 29.

(County Palatine of Lancaster.)

Ellison, Robert, Gent., Neston, Chester. Gorst v. Gorst, Registrar of Court, 1, North John-street, Liverpool. Oct. 1.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

TUESDAY, Sept. 3, 1861.

Edmundson, Edward, Scribbling Miller, Healey-in-Batley, Yorkshire. Sol. Scholesfield, Batley. Aug. 9.

Mellor, William, & Joseph Kershaw, Cotton Spinners, Rakewood, Higher Mill, Butterworth, Hollingworth, Lancashire (Mellor & Kershaw). Sol. Sutton, 28, Brown-street, Manchester. Aug. 17.

Nelham, Edward, James Hucks, & Thomas William Murley, Manchester Warehousemen, 4, Bow Church-yard, London. Sols. Lawrence, Smith, & Fawdon, 12, Broad-street, Cheapside. Aug. 23.

Nottingham, Henry, John Clougo, & Frederick Charles George, Mantle Manufacturers & Warehousemen, 65, Cannon-street West, London. Sol. Mardon, Christchurch Chambers, 99, Newgate-street, London. Aug. 13.

Rose, Thomas, Linen Draper, Notting-hill, Middlesex. Sols. Van Sandau & Cumming, 13, King-street, Cheapside, London. Aug. 17.

Scholes, Richard, Corn & Provision Dealer, 26, Kirkgate, Huddersfield. Sol. Fernandes, Wakefield. Aug. 7.

Smart, Elizabeth, Milliner & Dress Maker, 6, Promenade-villas, Cheltenham. Sols. Wild & Barber, 104, Ironmonger-lane, Cheapside. Aug. 3.

FRIDAY, Sept. 6, 1861.

Ains, John, sen., & John Ains, jun., Tailors & Outfitters, Newport, Isle of Wight. Sol. Griffiths, Newport, Isle of Wight. Aug. 15.

Barry, John, Corn Factor, Rye, Sussex. Sols. Ellman & Whitmarsh, Rye, Isle of Wight. Sept. 3.

Bell, George, Grocer, 9, Scotland-road, Liverpool. Sol. Conway, 4, Harrington-street, Liverpool. Sept. 4.

Cooper, William Henry, & John Hayward, Brewers, Bexley, Kent (Cooper & Hayward). Sol. Gibson, Dartford, Kent. Aug. 23.

May, Thomas Baker, Coal Merchant, Hawarden, Flintshire, and of Tryd-dyn, Flintshire. Sols. Walker & Smith, Chester. Aug. 7.

Tranter, Joseph, Brewer, Sandy, Bedfordshire. Sol. Hooper, Biggles-wade, Bedford. Aug. 24.

Vauley, John, Farmer, Spark Hagg, Selby, Yorkshire. Sols. Weddall & Parker, Selby. Aug. 31.

Walton, William Pontier, Corn & Seed Merchant, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sols. Lightfoot, Earnshaw, Frankish, & C. R. Codd, Hull. Aug. 12.

Wattam, Thomas, Farmer, Wartle's Park Farm, Waltham Abbey, Essex. Sol. Clapham, 14, Liverpool-street, Bishopsgate. Aug. 15.

Wilkins, William, Cloth Dealer, Trowbridge, Wilts. Sol. Wood, 19, Clare-street, Bristol. Aug. 12.

Whittington, Jeremiah, Miller & Brewer, Calbourne Lower Mill, Isle of Wight. Sols. Hearn & Mew, Newport, Isle of Wight. Aug. 26.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Sept. 3, 1861.

Alston, Ebenezer, Grocer & Tea Dealer, Ashton-under-Lyne, Accrington. Com. Jemmett: Sept. 13, and Oct. 16, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Herniman. Sol. Richardson, Manchester. Pet. Aug. 20.

Beck, Samuel Henry, Milliner, Broad-street, Birmingham. Com. Sanders: Sept. 13, and Oct. 4, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Southall & Nelson, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 30.

Carter, John, Builder & Timber Merchant, West Hartlepool, Durham. Com. Ellison: Sept. 10, at 11.30; and Oct. 23, at 1; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. Turnbull & Bell, West Hartlepool. Pet. Aug. 24.

Clark, Sampson Estill, Ship Chandler & Provision Dealer, West Hartlepool. Com. Ellison: Sept. 12, at 11; and Oct. 23, at 12; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. Turnbull & Bell, West Hartlepool. Pet. Aug. 24.

Cox, Henry Benson, Tavern Keeper, Tom's Coffee-house, Cowper's-court, Cornhill. Com. Goulburn: Sept. 10, at 11; and Oct. 14, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Lawrence, Smith, & Fawdon, 12, Broad-street, London. Pet. Sept. 2.

Fantarella, Enrico, Merchant, 11, Lime-street, London. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 14, at 11; and Oct. 22, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Marten, Thomas, & Hollams, Mincing-lane, London. Pet. Sept. 2.

Hall, Henry John, Farrier & Shoeing Smith, Chapel Close, Berkshire, and of Oxford. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 14, at 11.30; and Oct. 8, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Parker, Rooke, & Parkers, 17, Bedford-row, London. Pet. Sept. 2.

Hird, Thomas, Timber Merchant & Builder, Burnley, Lancashire. Com. Jemmett: Sept. 17, and Oct. 17, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. Hughes, Liverpool. Pet. Aug. 26.

Jardine, Francis North Clerk, Licensed Victualler & Wine and Spirit Merchant, 22, Tottenham-court-road, and 2, Winchester-place, Fern-bridge-villas, Bayswater, Middlesex. Com. Fontblanque: Sept. 16, at 11, and Oct. 16, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stanfield. Sols. Harrison & Lewis, 6, Old Jewry, London. Pet. Aug. 30.

Lees, Samuel, Grocer & Draper, Meltham, Almondbury, Yorkshire. Com. West: Sept. 13, and Oct. 4, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Jes-son, Huddersfield, or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Aug. 23.

McIntosh, William, Travelling Draper, 7, Dumfries-place, Newport, Monmouthshire. Com. Hill: Sept. 17, and Oct. 15, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Actman. Sol. Henderson, Bristol. Pet. Aug. 20.

Oswald, Thomas Ridley, Ship Builder, Sunderland. Com. Ellison: Sept. 12 and Oct. 30, at 11; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. Hanson & Son, Sunderland. Pet. Aug. 22.

Reader, John, Galvanized Iron Roof Manufacturer, Birmingham. Com. Sanders: Sept. 13 and Oct. 4, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. East & Parry, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 30.

Selig, Gabriel, Dealer in Watches and Jewellery, 2, North-buildings, Finsbury-circus, London. Com. Fane: Sept. 12, at 11.30; and Oct. 18, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Solomon, 22, Finsbury-place, Finsbury, London. Pet. July 25.

Sheldrick, James Thomas, Timber Merchant, 14, Stainsby-terrace, Stainsby-road, Poplar, and 1, Woodbridge-street, Clerkenwell, Middlesex. Com. Fontblanque: Sept. 16, at 2; and Oct. 16, at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stanfield. Sol. Norton, 10, Clifford's-inn, Fleet-street, London. Pet. Aug. 29.

Spark, Alfred, Watchmaker & Jeweller, 10, Great Coram-street, Russell-square, Middlesex. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 14 and Oct. 22, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Boydell, 41, Queen's-square, Bloomsbury, Middlesex. Pet. Sept. 2.

Terry, William, Plater & Spur Manufacturer, Birmingham. Com. Sanders: Sept. 16 and Oct. 7, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Southall & Nelson, Birmingham. Pet. Aug. 29.

Thorn, William, Innkeeper, Lyme Regis, Dorsetshire. Com. Andrews: Sept. 11 and Oct. 9, at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sol. Willesford Exeter. Pet. Sept. 2.

Turneau, Charles, Tobaccoist, Liverpool. Com. Perry: Sept. 13, at 11; and Oct. 4, at 2; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sols. Forshaw & Goodman, Sweeting-street, Liverpool. Pet. Aug. 23.

FRIDAY, Sept. 6, 1861.

Cameron, William, Dry Salter, Redcliff-street, Bristol. Com. Hill: Sept. 17 and Oct. 21, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sols. Marsland, Manchester; or Bevan, Gilling & Press, Bristol. Pet. Aug. 27.

Cannon, Edward William, Auctioneer, 3, London road, Croydon, Surrey. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 17, at 11.30; and Oct. 18, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Peverley, 19, Coleman-street, London. Pet. Sept. 3.

Cooper, James, Rag & Waste Merchant, Foundry-street, Manchester. Com. Jemmett: Sept. 25 and Oct. 25, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Herniman. Sols. Cobbett & Wheeler, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 2.

Fuggle, James Lansdell, Neck Tie Manufacturer, Gutter-lane, Cheapside. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 17, at 12; and Oct. 18, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Lepard & Gammon, 9, Cloak-lane, London. Pet. Sept. 4.

Radloff, Henry Martin, Seed Crusher, Oil Refiner, & Soap Maker, 32, Chickland-street, Whitechapel, and Copenhagen-place, Limehouse, Middlesex (Meek & Co.). Com. Holroyd: Sept. 17, at 11; and Oct. 18, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Marten, Thomas, & Hollams, Mincing-lane, London. Pet. Sept. 2.

Ruddard, Edward William Ruddard, Maltster & Brewer, Lincoln. Com. Ayrton: Sept. 25 and Oct. 23, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull. Off. Ass. Carrick. Sol. Chambers, Lincoln. Pet. Sept. 2.

Smith, Thomas, Milk Finisher & Hot Presser, Sackville-street, Manchester. (Smith & Company). Com. Jemmett: Sept. 23 and Oct. 25, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sols. G. & R. W. Marsland, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 3.

Taylor, Daniel William, Victualler, Swansea, Glamorgan. Com. Hill: Sept. 17, at 11; and Oct. 18, at 12; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sol. Taddy, Shannon-court, Bristol. Pet. Sept. 5.

Turneau, Charles, Tobaccoist, Liverpool. Com. Perry: Sept. 13, at 11; and Oct. 4, at 2; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sols. Forshaw & Goodman, Sweeting-lane, Liverpool; or Dimmock, 2, Suffolk-lane, Cannon-street, London. Pet. Aug. 23.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Sept. 3, 1861.

Henry Boreham, Painter, & Glazier, 26, Wilmot-street, Russell-square, Middlesex. Sept. 14, at 12; Basinghall-street.—John Slater Marshall, Boot and Shoe Factor, Billeter-street, London. Sept. 26, at 11; Basinghall-street.—William Sharp, jun., Underwriter, 11, New Broad-street, London. Sept. 26, at 2; Basinghall-street.—John Julian, Wholesale Milliner & Fancy Manufacturer, 9, Noble-street, Falcon-square, London. Sept. 26, at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—Thomas Taylor & Richard Banks, Cotton Manufacturers, Arlington-street Mills, Salford. (Richard Jackson & Co.) Oct. 9, at 11; Manchester.—Charles Smith Harrison, Grocer, Glossop, Derbyshire. Oct. 8, at 12; Manchester.—Thomas Taylor & Richard Banks, Cotton Manufacturers, Arlington-street Mills, Salford. (Richard Jackson & Co.) Oct. 9, at 11; Manchester; separate estate of Thomas Taylor.—William Routh Burrell, Merchant & Warehousemen, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sept. 23, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull.—Dunington, Henry, Glove Cloth Manufacturer, Nottingham. Sept. 26, at 11; Nottingham. Henderson, James, Draper, Nottingham. Sept. 26, at 11; Nottingham.

FRIDAY, Sept. 6, 1861.

Henry Broadbent Gaskell, Broker, Liverpool. Sept. 17, at 11; Liverpool.—Daniel Gamon, Coal Merchant, Colney Hatch Station, and Builder, Hornsey, Middlesex. Sept. 30, at 3; Basinghall-street.—James Heyday, Bookbinder, 31, Little Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex. Sept. 30, at 12; Basinghall-street.—Richard Green, Ironmonger, Brighton. Sept. 28, at 12; Basinghall-street.—Anwa Maria Owen, Dealer in China & India Goods, 95, New Bond-street, Middlesex. Sept. 28, at 12; Basinghall-street.—Henry Martin, Tailor, Hanover-buildings, Southampton. Sept. 28, at 11; Basinghall-street.—James White, Miller & Farmer, Ivy-house-farm, Cheddington, Kent. Sept. 28, at 11; Basinghall-street.—Robert Watson Sheppard, Coal Merchant & Auctioneer, Charlbury, near Woodstock, Oxfordshire. Sept. 27, at 11; Basinghall-street.—John Jukes, jun., Manufacturer of Patent Furnaces, Standard Factory, Wharf-road, City-road, Middlesex. Sept. 30, at 2; Basinghall-street.—Harry Cook, Navy Agent & Money Scrivener, Lancaster-place, Strand, Middlesex, and Clement's-inn. Sept. 27, at 1; Basinghall-street.—James Stevens, Jeweller & Silversmith, Derby. Oct. 3, at 11; Nottingham.—Charles Cairns, Bonded Store & Provision Merchant, Newport, Monmouthshire. Sept. 27, at 11; Bristol.—William Randle, Miller, Mealman, & Baker, Arle Mills, and High-st., Winchcombe-street, and Bath-road, Cheltenham. Sept. 27, at 11; Bristol.—Thomas Turner-Ville, Grocer, Worcester. Sept. 27, at 11; Bristol.—John Bound, Draper, Hay, Breconshire. Oct. 4, at 11; Bristol.—THOMAS DEWICK HUNT, Innkeeper, Bootle, near Liverpool. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—HENRY STURMENG & WILLIAM GOLDENTEDT, Ship Brokers & Commission and General Forwarding Agents, Liverpool. Same time, sep. est. of Henry Sturmenburg.—WILLIAM RAINFORD, Upholsterer, Liverpool. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—JOSEPH MORROW & ROBERT THOMAS MORROW, Ship Brokers, Liverpool. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—GEORGE PATRICK ROONEY, Licensed Victualler, Liverpool. September 27, at 11; Liverpool.—MICHAEL NEVILLE, Brass Founder & Coppersmith, Liverpool. September 27, at 11; Liverpool.—JAMES MANNIN, Leather Dealer, Liverpool. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—JOSEPH WHITTINGHAM, Boot & Shoe Maker, Liverpool. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—MATTHEW SOMERVILLE, Joiner & Packing-case Manufacturer, Liverpool. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—THOMAS THOMPSON, Cabinet Maker, Pocklington, Yorkshire. Sept. 27, at 11; Leeds.—JOSEPH GOMERSALL & JOSEPH BEARY, Carpet Manufacturers, Heckmondwike, Yorkshire. Sept. 27, at 11; Leeds.—RICHARD HARGRAVE, Worsted Stuff Merchant, Leeds and Bradford. Sept. 27, at 11; Leeds.—THOMAS THOMPSON, Stuff Manufacturer, Halifax. Sept. 27, at 11; Leeds.—WILLIAM WILSON, Currier & Leather Cutter, Thirsk and Northallerton, Yorkshire. Sept. 27, at 11; Leeds.—RICHARD HENRY HARTLEY, Merchant, Halifax. Sept. 27, at 11; Leeds.—JOSEPH THOMPSON, Yarn & Worsted Spinner, Wakefield. Sept. 27, at 11; Leeds.—GEORGE HEATH, Builder & Contractor, Chesterfield. Sept. 28, at 10; Sheffield.—HERBERT BIRKS, Grocer & Flour Dealer, Sheffield. Sept. 28, at 10; Sheffield.—JOHN HICKSON, Builder & Contractor, Sheffield. Sept. 28, at 10; Sheffield.—JOSEPH BURROWS, Cabinet Maker, Chesterfield. Sept. 28, at 10; Sheffield.—THOMAS HOBSON, Grocer & Tea Dealer, Sheffield. Sept. 28, at 10; Sheffield.

BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT, LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited).

17, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.
Capital, £300,000, in 30,000 shares of £10 each. £3 per share paid.

CHAIRMAN.

METCALF HOPGOOD, Esq., Bishopsgate-street.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. PATTESON & COBOLD, 3, Bedford-row.

MANAGER.

CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Esq., 17, New Bridge-street.

INVESTMENTS.—The present rate of interest on money deposited with the Company for fixed periods, or subject to an agreed notice of withdrawal, is 5 per cent.

LOANS.—Advances are made, in sums from £50 to £1,000, upon approved personal and other security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over any period not exceeding 10 years.

Applications for the new issue of Shares may be made to the Secretary, of whom Prospectuses, the last Annual Report, and every information can be obtained.

JOSEPH K. JACKSON, Secretary.

To Landowners, the Clergy, Solicitors, Estate Agents, Surveyors, &c.

THE LANDS IMPROVEMENT COMPANY is incorporated by special Act of Parliament for England, Wales, and Scotland. Under the Company's Acts, tenants for life, trustees, mortgagees in possession, incumbents of livings, bodies corporate, certain leaseholders, and other landowners, are empowered to charge the inheritance with the cost of improvements, whether the money be borrowed from the Company or advanced by the landowner out of his own funds.

The Company advance money, unlimited in amount, for works of improvement, the loans and incidental expenses being liquidated by a rent-charge for a specified term of years.

No investigation of title is required, and the Company, being of a strictly commercial character, do not interfere with the plans and execution of the works, which are controlled only by the Enclosure Commissioners.

The improvements authorised comprise drainage, irrigation, warping, embanking, enclosing, clearing, reclaiming, planting, erecting, and improving farm-houses, and buildings for farm purposes, farm roads, jetties, steam-engines, water-wheels, tanks, pipes, &c.

Owners in fee may effect improvements on their estates without incurring the expense and personal responsibilities incident to mortgages, and with out regard to the amount of existing incumbrances. Proprietors may apply jointly for the execution of improvements mutually beneficial, such as a common outfall, road through the district, water-power, &c.

For further information, and for forms of application, apply to the Hon. WILLIAM NAPIER, Managing Director, 2, Old Palace-yard, Westminster.

FREEHOLDS—LEICESTERSHIRE AND NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.

TO BE SOLD, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery, made in a cause "Hogers v. Appleby," with the approbation of Vice-Chancellor Sir Richard Torin Kindersley, in Two Lots, by Messrs. WHITE & SON, the persons appointed by the Judge for the purpose—Lot 1, at the ANGEL HOTEL, in GRANTHAM, in the county of LINCOLN, on SATURDAY, the 7th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at FIVE o'clock in the afternoon precisely; Lot 2, at the WHITE HART HOTEL, in EAST RETFORD, in the county of NOTTINGHAM, on SATURDAY, the 14th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at FIVE o'clock in the afternoon precisely—certain FREEHOLD ESTATES, situate at Hosc and Long Clawson, in the County of Leicester, and at South Leverton, in the county of Nottingham, late the property of Francis Blagg, of South Leverton, in the county of Nottingham, surgeon, deceased.

Particulars whereof may be had gratis of Messrs. NEWTON & JONES, and Messrs. SHEEL, BURNABY, & DENMAN, Solicitors, East Retford, Nottinghamshire; of Messrs. C. & I. ALLEN & SON, Solicitors, 17, Carliole-street, Soho-square; of Messrs. REECE, WILKINS & BLYTH, 10, St. Swithin-lane, London; at the Hotels above mentioned; and of Messrs. WHITE & SON, Auctioneers, East Retford, Nottinghamshire.

Dated 17th August, 1861.

CHAS. FUGH, Chief Clerk.

ROMNEY MARSH, KENT.

An Eligible Freehold Estate, consisting of 313a. 3r. 18p. of Valuable Land.

TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, in One Lot, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the causes of "Jane Holman and Others v. Thomas Holman and Others," and of "Thomas Holman v. Ann Holman and Others," and of "H. H. Sweetnam and Others v. Ann Holman and Others," with the approbation of the Right Honourable the Master of the Rolls, the Judge to whom these causes are attached, by Mr. JOSEPH TOOTELL (the person appointed for that purpose), at the AUCTION MART, LONDON, on WEDNESDAY, the 18th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at TWELVE for ONE o'clock precisely, an eligible FREEHOLD ESTATE, known as "Gammon's Farm," consisting of 313a. 3r. 18p. of valuable land, 217 acres of which are exceedingly productive arable land, and the remaining 96 acres are sound fatting land, together with a good farm dwelling house, and all the requisite agricultural buildings well arranged, well placed, and in good repair. This valuable property is situate in the parishes of New Church and Eastbridge, in the County of Kent, four miles distant from New Romney, ten miles from Ashford, and seven miles from Hythe. The estate is held on lease by Messrs. Matthew and Thomas William Butler (highly respectable tenants), for a term of twenty-one years from the 11th October, 1853.

The property may be viewed on application to the tenants. Particulars may be obtained on application to Messrs. BROCKMAN & HARRISON, Solicitors, Folkestone; to Messrs. TALBOT, TALBOT, and TASKER, Solicitors, 47, Bedford-row; to Messrs. BISCHOFF, COX, and BOMPAS, Solicitors, 19, Coleman-street; to Messrs. FLUX and ARGLES, Solicitors, 68, Cheapside; and to Mr. JOHN MURRAY, Solicitor, 7, Whitehall-place, London; also at the Auction Mart, London; at the Royal Fountain Hotel, Canterbury; at the Shakespeare Hotel, Dover; at the Albion Hotel, Hastings; at the New Inn, New Romney; at the Swan Hotel, Hythe; at the Saracen's Head Inn, Ashford; and of Mr. TOOTELL, Land Agent and Valuer, Maidstone.

HANTS, near PETERSFIELD.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL are instructed to SELL, by Private Contract, a desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE; comprising a noble mansion, having three reception rooms, 10 bed rooms, all offices; double coach-house, six and three stall stables, and surrounded by pleasure grounds, garden, shrubberies, and an American garden of rhododendrons; a good kitchen garden walled in, and about 120 acres of prime meadow and other land.

For price, &c., apply to BROOKS & BEAL, Land Agents, 209, Piccadilly.

FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT.—FREEHOLD DOMAIN, ADVOWSON, AND MANORS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL are instructed to SELL a splendid MANORIAL ESTATE and noble MANSION, seated in one of the best western counties. The whole estate comprises about 6,000 acres, with excellent farm residences and homesteads, houses and cottages. The property is most compact and valuable, hill and valley, wood and river. Let to highly respectable and responsible tenants at moderate rents; is in a fair state of cultivation; uniting in the possessor considerable county and borough, Parliamentary, and local influence, and yielding an ample income.

Estate and Auction Offices, 209, Piccadilly, W.

FINCHLEY.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have for SALE, the LEASE of an elegant VILLA, at a ground rent of £70 per annum. The grounds (three lawns) and gardens are beautifully laid out. For detailed particulars of accommodation apply at their offices, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 281 R.)

HERTS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have to SELL a FREEHOLD ESTATE; comprising a modern-built residence, of handsome elevation, surrounded by 40 acres of land, laid out in pleasure grounds, kitchen garden, orchard, arable and grass fields; it is adapted for immediate occupation, and within two hours' journey from London. It has coach-houses and stables, and farm buildings; the whole in good order. Purchase £1,500.

Estate and Auction Offices, No. 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 260, R 3).

CAVENDISH-PLACE, CAVENDISH-SQUARE.

TO BE LET, unfurnished, or the Lease to be Sold, of an excellent RESIDENCE, in thorough repair, very light and airy, not overlooked in front or rear. It contains four good reception rooms and five bed rooms, convenient offices, well-placed closets.

BR OOKS & BEAL, Estate Agents and Auctioneers, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 225).

HANTS.

TO BE SOLD, a desirable FREEHOLD land-tax redeemed PROPERTY, most pleasantly situate, and surrounded by very tasteful pleasure grounds, with ornamental water and well-timbered grass paddocks and capital walled kitchen gardens, elegant conservatory and vinery. House contains hall, two spacious drawing rooms, and dining room, library, and boudoir, two staircases, 13 bed and dressing rooms, and prospect room, capital offices, coach-house, and stables, and other out-buildings. It is one mile from a station, Direct Portsmouth and South Coast Railway, half a mile from church and private sea bathing. Purchase moderate.

BROOKS & BEAL, Estate Agents and Auctioneers, 209, Piccadilly, W. (Fo. 196.)

INVESTMENTS.

MESSRS. BROOKS & BEAL have for SALE, together or separately, FIFTEEN FREEHOLD (or Leasehold) COTTAGE VILLAS, at Wandsworth, on the borders of Wimbledon-park; each let at £30 per annum.

To treat, apply at their offices, 209, Piccadilly, W.

FREEHOLD FOR SALE, near SLOUGH, a Comfortable Residence, and 26 acres of Land adjoining.
Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road.

SOMERSET.—Freehold Gentleman's Residence and 8 acres of Rich Pasture Land, FOR SALE. Price £2,200.
Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

BUCKINGHAM.—FOR SALE, Freehold Estate of 450 acres, lying in a ring fence.
Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.—FOR SALE, Freehold Estate of about 200 acres, lying in a ring fence.
Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

TO BE SOLD, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery made in a cause of Gyett against Williams, with the approbation of the Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood, in one lot, by MR. MILNER, the person appointed by the said Judge, at the OXFORD ARMS HOTEL, at KINGTON, in the COUNTY of HEREFORD, on THURSDAY, the 12th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at 12 o'clock precisely, a certain FREEHOLD ESTATE, situate in the parishes of Glascomb and Bettus Diawerth, and known as Wern Faur or Wern Danzey, and Cefu Glase, in the county of Radnor, now in the occupation of Mr. Danzey Sheen.

Particulars whereof may be had gratis of Mr. THOMAS WESTALL, of No. 3, South-square, Gray's-inn, London, Solicitor; of Messrs. BODENHAM & TEMPLE, Solicitors, Kingston, Herefordshire; of Messrs. MEREDITH & LUCAS, Solicitors, No. 8, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, London; of Messrs. PATRICK & UNDERWOOD, Solicitors, Rolls Chambers, Chancery-lane, London; of Mr. ARTHUR CHEESE, Solicitor, Kingston; of Mr. PARSONS, Presteign; and of the principal Inns and Hotels in the neighbourhood; and of the Auctioneer at his office, Kingston, Herefordshire.

Dated this 13th day of August, 1861.

(Signed) EDWARD WEATHERALL, Chief Clerk.

COAL.—GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—COAL DEPARTMENT.—The SILKSTONE and ELSECAR COAL-OWNERS' COMPANY delivered their Coal, under specified, to the consumer direct from their own pits; and this Company have supplied from their collieries fully three-fourths of the late customers of the Great Northern Railway Company. Present prices:—

R. C. Clarke's best old Silkstone	ditto	21s. per Ton.
Wharfedale's best Silkstone	ditto	22s. "
Ditto Pilley ditto	ditto	20s. "
Newton, Chambers & Co.'s ditto	ditto	22s. "
Ditto, ditto Park Gate or Brazil	ditto	19s. "
Ditto, No. 2	ditto	18s. "
Ditto, thin seam ditto	ditto	20s. "
Elsecar House	ditto	18s. 6d. "
Wombwell Main ditto	ditto	20s. "

Delivered within five miles of depôt.

Deliveries at Hampstead, Highgate, and Finchley, 1s. per ton extra.—Apply to, and to be obtained ONLY of the SILKSTONE and ELSECAR COAL OWNERS' COMPANY, Great Northern Railway, King's-cross, and Holloway.

Sole Agent, JAMES J. MILLER.

. Customers are particularly requested to specify the description of coal required; and to notice the recent CHANGE of AGENCY, in the appointment of Mr. JAMES J. MILLER in the place of Mr. HERBERT CLARKE.

FURNITURE CARRIAGE FREE.—RICHARD LOADER and Co. have just published a new and elaborate ILLUSTRATED FURNISHING GUIDE, comprising 216 well executed designs of Cabinet and Upholstery Furniture, Iron Bedsteads, &c., which may be had on application, gratis and post free. Every article warranted, and delivered carriage free to any part of the United Kingdom.—Manufactory and Show Rooms, 23 and 24, Finsbury-pavement, London, E.C.

. An inspection is respectfully invited before purchasing elsewhere.

MODELS of SHIPS or BOATS made to Scale or Order. Blocks, deadweights, anchors, cannon, flags, figure-heads, &c. and every article used in fitting up models of ships, cutter and schooner yachts, screw and paddle boats. Models cleaned and repaired. Models of any description made for evidence in actions at law. Ensigns, burgees, and signal flags made to order.

W. STEPHENS, the Model Dockyard, No. 23, Trinity-square, Tower-hill, near Barking Churchyard, E.C.

KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER AND CORK FLOORCLOTH. Warm, noiseless, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

P. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Walbrook, London, E.C.

Manufactory—South London Works, Lambeth.

TRELOAR'S CORK FLOOR CLOTH, or KAMPTULICON, COCOA NUT MATTING, and DOOR MATS. Best quality and moderate prices.

T. TRELOAR, Manufacturer, 42, Ludgate-hill, London.

ALBION SNEEL, Watchmaker and Jeweller, has removed to his New Premises, 114, High Holborn, seven doors east of King-street, where he respectfully solicits an inspection of his new and well-selected stock.

WINES for the NOBILITY and GENTRY.
WINES for the ARMY and NAVY.
WINES for the CLERICAL, LEGAL, and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS.
WINES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.
PURE and UNADULTERATED GRAPE WINES from the SOUTH of FRANCE.

VENDED by the PROPRIETORS of the VINEYARDS.

THE FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION have taken extensive cellarage at the West-end of London, for the purpose of introducing FRENCH WINES only to the British public at FRENCH TRADE PRICES; and the members of that Association being proprietors of the most esteemed growths in France, the Nobility, Gentry, and Families patronising such Wines, will become assured of their genuineness.

THE EMPRESS PORT, 30s. per dozen. Sent free, bottles included, to any British Railway Station, on receipt of an Order on Charing-cross Post-office for 22s. 6d., payable to A. Rophe, Director.

THIS EMPRESS PORT, is pure grape, of first-class quality, and delicious taste; the very for Wine family consumption.

CHAMPAGNE, equal to Moët's, 42s.

SPARKLING BURGUNDY

("The Glorious Bumper") at 42s. per dozen.

Pure CLARETS from 16s. to 84s. per dozen.

Tariffs of other Wines sent post free.

Cheques requested to be crossed "London and Westminster Bank."

FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION,
32, REGENT CIRCUS, PICCADILLY, LONDON, 1861.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO GUINEA BINOCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS sent carriage free, on receipt of post-office order, to any part of the United Kingdom. The extraordinary power of this instrument renders it adapted to answer the combined purposes of telescope and opera glass. It will define objects distinctly at ten miles distance; is suitable for the theatre, race-course, sportsmen, tourists, and general out-door observations. Only to be obtained of KEYZOR and BENDON (successors to Harris and Son), Opticians, 30, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Illustrated Price List of Optical and Mathematical Instruments free, on receipt of two stamps.

THOSE WHO ARE ABOUT TO FURNISH should visit G. I. THOMPSON'S extensive Stock of Furnishing Ironmongery, Electro-Silver Plate, Fenders, Fire-Irons, Japan and Paper Maché Trays, Baths, Toilette Furniture, Gas Chandeliers, Moderator Lamps. All articles marked in plain figures.

THOMPSON'S Electro Silver Spoons, 36s.; Forks, 34s. dozen.

THOMPSON'S Ivory Balance Table Knives, 16s., 22s., 28s. dozen.

25, FINSBURY-PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to Railway Stations. Send for a Furnishing List.

IMPORTER OF PURE COLEA OIL.

PICTURE FRAMES.—Cheap and Good Gilt Frames for Oil Paintings, 2 1/2 by 2 1/2 inches wide, 20s. Ornamental Frames for Drawings, 14; 7 1/2 by 10, 4s. each. The Art Union Prints, framed in a superior style, at the lowest prices. Neat gilt frames, for the Illustrated Portraits, 1s. 6d. each. Gilt Room Bordering at 4s. per yard. Oil paintings cleaned, lined, and restored; old frames re-gilt equal to new. The trade and country dealers supplied with gilt and fancy wood mouldings, print, &c. German Prints 5s. per dozen. Neat Gilt Frames, 17 by 13, with glass complete, 1s. 6d. each. CHARLES REES, Carver, Gilder, Mount Maker, and Print Seller, 36, Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

SIR W. BURNETT, Director-General of the Medical Department of the Navy, recommended BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER in preference to every other, for the use of her Majesty's Navy, because it was more wholesome—more effective—would keep longer—and was in all respects superior to every other manufactured. Pleading testimonials as to its superior excellence have also been received from the Queen's Private Baker; Dr. Hassall, Analyst to the Lancet; Captain Allen Young, of the Arctic yacht "Fox," and other scientific men. Sold everywhere in 1d., 2d., 4d., and 6d. packets; and 1s., 2s. 6d., and 5s. boxes.

When you ask for Borwick's Baking Powder, see that you get it, as complaints have been made of shopkeepers substituting worthless articles, made from inferior and inexpensive ingredients, because they are realising a larger profit by them.

BEST SETS OF TEETH.—EDWD. MILES & SON, Dentists, invite the attention of persons desirous to secure the ECONOMY and DURABILITY of their best and newest work in SETS OF TEETH of every description; adapted without pain or extraction, with improvements, the result of 20 years' active practice. Their 2s. work post free, or extracts gratis. Toothache for the most part cured without extraction. Best stopping with gold, &c.

15, Liverpool-street, Bishopsgate Church, City, E.C.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from 10 till 5.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

 Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.*

"I.ex."—The advertisement had not escaped our notice. We fear there is no probability of its having been inserted without the alleged writer's knowledge. But the announcement is not worthy of further exposure, and carries its own condemnation with it.

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 14, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

We are glad to give insertion to the following communication from the Mayor of Faversham with respect to a statement of ours on corporal punishments in gaols, occurring ante, p. 713. Relying upon the returns which have been furnished to the Houses of Parliament, we stated that at Faversham, in the course of the last three years, two boys of nine were cut with fifteen lashes of the cat, giving from the same authority the names of the magistrates who made the order, and of the surgeon in attendance. Upon this the mayor writes:—

Allow me to correct an error into which you have been led by the returns (H. L. 65 & H. C. 3). There never has been a boy flogged in Faversham gaol with the cat. The two cases to which you refer (Solicitor's Journal, vol. 5, p. 713), and in one of which I was a committing magistrate, were simply "birchings," such as we were accustomed to see in the village school, before the introduction of the "cane." A few twigs are taken from an ordinary birch broom, and tied together, and the juvenile offenders (in the present instance depredators of orchards) are corrected with it. I am certain that the infliction is not half so painful as the "leathering" often administered at home; but the calling in of the doctor, the presence of the police, and the formal administration of the "twigs," has a far greater influence than the most severe beating by the parent. The urchins are more frightened than hurt. In proof of the utility of the plan, I may mention that this year we have not had a single case of robbing orchards.

THE MAYOR OF FAVERSHAM.

September 6, 1861.

The formidable charge of severity at Faversham is, therefore, reduced to very narrow limits, and there is ground for hoping that at other places also "lashes of the cat" may resolve themselves into a small beating of birch twigs, accompanied with a very considerable frightening of the offender. But if this should turn out to be so, as we trust it may, there is some very strange error about the returns. Where does the source of this exaggeration lie? Is it with those who furnish the statistics, or those who collect and arrange them for the benefit of the Legislature and others "whom they may concern"? It is quite clear that by no legitimate use of words can a birching be described as the "lashes of a cat;" and the misdescription is so little likely to have been made by mistake that we can only suspect that some over-zealous humanitarian has been unduly exciting our sympathies by a pia fraus, or a slight of imagination. We should nevertheless be rejoiced to hear that every item in the black catalogue recounted at p. 713 is susceptible of so simple an explanation, or to speak plainly, of so direct a denial as in this case at Faversham. Prison authorities would do well to look to their entries and returns; and if the blame of misrepresentation is found to rest upon the compiler of the blue book, it is a duty which the committing magistrates owe, as much to themselves as to the public, to expose the falsehood. If anything can be more culpable than doing an injustice to private character, it is the folly or carelessness of those who have spread through the country incorrect or inflammatory statements on such a topic as prison discipline.

Our readers will be not a little startled, perhaps amused, at the announcement conveyed to us by a correspondent relative to a rumoured appointment of a second registrar to the District Court of Bankruptcy at Bristol. An impression seems to prevail that the Lord Chancellor meditates creating this new office, and that the person designated to fill it is a Mr. Inskip, who is now one of the ushers and the housekeeper of the Court. It is added that Mr. Inskip has, on several occasions, brought himself under the notice—we presume the favourable notice—of the Lord Chancellor when Attorney-General; and that his suggestions have been favourably received by Sir F. Kelly and others. Our correspondent seems to believe the story; but we confess that to us it appears simply incredible, and we must have some better authority than an unauthorised paragraph in the local newspapers to convince us that it deserves serious attention. Can our correspondent succeed in discovering some better grounds than those he has stated for the truth of this monstrous suggestion? On further inquiry we learn that the paragraph in the Bristol Times, to which, no doubt, allusion is made, states that Mr. Inskip has received the support of the present and of the late commissioner in an application for the appointment of additional registrar. This assertion, at any rate, is open to immediate inquiry, and may be at once confirmed or denied. It is stated, also, in the paragraph in question that an assistant registrar's salary is £800 a year, whereas under the new Act it is £1,000. We cannot help thinking that some humourist, possibly wishing to satirise the unlimited nature of the powers vested in the Chancellor by the new Bankruptcy Act, has been attempting to draw on the credulity of the profession and the public at Bristol.

DR. LONGFIELD'S SCHEME FOR THE ISSUE OF LAND DEBENTURES.

The authority which attaches to the office of Dr. Mountifort Longfield, as one of the judges of the Landed Estates Court, and his high reputation as a political economist, lend great weight to his recent suggestion with respect to the issue of land debentures in connection with sales of encumbered estates. The suggestion which is thrown out by the pamphlet before us, "A proposal for an Act to authorise the issue of land debentures, &c," published by Messrs. Thom, of Dublin, though made with reference only to sales under the authority of the Court in Ireland, may possibly, upon trial, be developed into a measure of general national usage. The scheme is best explained in Dr. Longfield's own words. After observing on the delay, expense, and inconvenience which attend the raising of money by mortgage on a landed estate; the author proceeds:—

Let us suppose that an estate, worth £2,000 a-year, is sold by the Court for £40,000, and that the purchaser desires to have the power of raising money by debentures. He takes the conveyance accordingly, subject to twenty debentures for £1,000 each, which should be expressly mentioned in the conveyance. Those debentures should be drawn in a form to be settled by the Court, and should include a copy of the conveyance of the lands on which they are charged; so that the holder of a debenture should know, accurately, the nature and value of the security. Those debentures are handed to the purchaser, together with his conveyance, and are to be considered as real property, descendible with the estate, but not merging in it as long as they belong to the owner of the land. An account of them, and of every sale and transfer, should be kept in the Court book. Every debenture entitles the holder to interest, at the rate therein mentioned, and also to repayment of the principal money at a time therein specified. This, of course, does not lead to any payment as long as the same person owns both the estate and the debenture. But the debenture may be assigned, at any time, by a short deed, to be registered in the books of the Landed Estates Court. At the same time, the Court will cause a note of this assignment to be endorsed on the debenture.

ture; and the title of the new holder will then be perfect in law and equity, as if he had so much Government stock transferred in the books of the Bank of England. It will be the duty of the Court to make proper rules and forms to prevent forgeries or frauds in the assignments. An equitable assignment may be made by a written instrument, accompanied by a deposit of the debenture, and this equitable assignment should entitle the assignee to demand a legal assignment to be registered in the books of the Court. In case of the loss or destruction of any debenture, the Court is to have power, after proper proof and inquiries, to issue a new debenture in its place. The holder is armed with ample power to enforce the contract expressed in the debenture; but no proceeding shall be taken to recover more than two years' arrears of interest on a debenture. An assignment may be made to any number of persons, not more than four, with a condition that no smaller number shall be permitted to assign. When an assignment is made to trustees on this condition, on the death of one trustee the survivors cannot assign until a new trustee is appointed, either according to the provisions of the deed, or by an order of the Court; but a purchaser is not bound by the trust, provided he obtains a legal assignment on the books of the Court from the proper parties. Any holder of a debenture may, by a proper instrument, registered in the books of the Court, release and extinguish it altogether. We have put the case of a purchaser of an estate for £40,000, who takes, at the same time, twenty debentures of 1,000 each from the Court. (No inspection of the Registry can take place without the permission of the Court). If he wants, at any time, a temporary loan of money, he will have no difficulty in procuring it from his banker, on a deposit of a suitable number of debentures. This without any legal expenses, will be a sufficient equitable security, and a proof that his estate is still unincumbered. If he pays off the debt, he gets back his debentures, and is replaced in his original position, without anything appearing on the record to complicate his title. If he wishes to settle his estate, he assigns to trustees as many debentures as are necessary to raise the charges for the younger children, &c., and extinguishes the rest. The estate is then settled, subject to the debentures, and the settlement is relieved from all those clauses relating to the charges which add so much to its length and complexity. When the proper time comes for raising the charges, the trustees raise the necessary sums by selling the debentures, or assigning them to the parties entitled, according to their equitable rights. If the owner of an estate and debenture, or of a debenture only, desires to contract a permanent loan, he may hand the debenture to a stockbroker, who will dispose of it in the market for its fair price, like so much railway stock, and in this manner obtain the money without any legal expense or unnecessary delay. The person, on the other hand, who wishes to procure an investment for his money, applies to his broker to procure him debentures of such a nature as he requires. The purchaser of a debenture has secured to him, by law, a perfect title to a first incumbrance, without the possibility of deception on this point; and he has also the advantage that the value of the land has been carefully investigated by a disinterested and competent tribunal. It is not too much to say that no ordinary mortgage can be compared to such a security. Admitting even that the Court may make a mistake as to the value of an estate, it is most unlikely that such error will be so great as to prevent the debenture from being recovered; and it is certain that such cases will bear a very small proportion to the number of cases in which persons now lose money, which they imagine they have lent upon good security. At present there is no regular market or market price for such securities as mortgages, charges on land, &c. The person who wants money does not know how long he may have to wait, or how much he may be compelled to pay for it. On the other hand, the person who has money to lend, does not know what terms he may be able to obtain, or how long he may be obliged to keep his money idle. One man may be for some months unable to procure a good investment at 4½ per cent., while during the same period another man has succeeded in obtaining 5 per cent. for his money, on unexceptionable security. Each case is a separate transaction, affording no indication to enable any one to conjecture what may be the result in a different instance. But with the proposed plan of debentures, each will be able to borrow or lend at the market rate, which, of course, may be subject to fluctuations.

This proposal, we learn, is not new; it was made law soon after the introduction of the first Incumbered Estates

Act, but was then rejected on the supposition that it was a mere device to catch purchasers for the estates about to be sold by the Court. The necessity for any such bait for capital has been amply disproved; but the statement involves the necessary inference that the scheme must have been attractive, or it would not have been even pretended to be an incentive to buyers at all. Some objections to the scheme are suggested and answered by the author himself. It has been supposed that people may say, "Oh! you are encouraging extravagance by increasing the facilities for running into debt." Others may anticipate fraud. The first of these apprehensions, scarcely, we think, deserves serious argument. The natural caution of every man, be it more or less, will soon adapt itself to a new state of circumstances. With regard to fraud, inasmuch as the original issue and every transfer of a debenture are proposed to be equally under the control of the Court, a system may doubtless be devised whereby all reasonable security can be attained. The questions which arise with regard to the mode of dealing with an estate subject to debentures necessarily require more explanation and in some instances suggest grave doubts. How is a man who has the power of issuing debentures on an estate to be enabled to lease it? How is he to sell a portion of his estate, in case he has parted with his debentures, or in case he still holds them in his possession? These questions are briefly answered by the writer, but an explanation of all the new relations which present themselves would require a treatise. The only remedy of the debenture-holder appears to be a power of sale to be exercised by the Court on his application; but, in case the debenture-holder prefers that his principal should remain a charge on the unsold lands, the nature of his rights do not appear to be defined. All the debentures are to be made payable together at the end of a certain time to be fixed by the parties, and the right of redemption is necessarily postponed to the expiration of the same period. This latter necessity seems to be one of the disadvantages of the process, unless it can be obviated by previous arrangement, involving, perhaps, a sacrifice on the part of the issuer of the debentures. It is no part of the proposal to make the debentures transferable by mere delivery, like the notes of a bank. Entry in the books of the Court is to form a necessary condition of every legal transfer, but simple delivery will pass the estate in equity. The debenture holder is to be at liberty to apply for a sale within one month after default of payment of interest, and no proceeding to recover arrears of interest is to be taken after the lapse of two years after the same has fallen due. This shortness of time is an essential part of the scheme, and is expected to lead to prompt and punctual payments.

The reader who remembers the visionary project of Mr. Law, whereby a bank was to be established in Scotland with power of issuing money to the whole value of the lands in the country, may be disposed to look with disfavour or incredulity upon a system of land debentures, but a scheme so boldly devised and patiently elaborated as the present, cannot but attract the study alike of jurists as of financiers. More especially interesting is it to those who believe that in the working of the Landed Estates Court is to be found the true solution of the disputed question, now rising into paramount importance, of the transfer of title in land.

Recent Decisions.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENT—STATUTE OF 13 ELIZ. C. 5.

Thompson v. Webster, 9 W. R. 641.

Having already, ante p. 725, reviewed a series of cases in which the question arose, as to whether a voluntary settlement is or is not to be considered fraudulent, on the ground of the settlor having been indebted, either at the time of the settlement, or subsequently to that date, we now proceed to consider the decisions which have turned on the construction of the 8th section of the 13th Eliz. c. 5, by which all conveyances made upon good consideration and bona fide, are excepted out of the operation of the Act.

In the first place it will be observed that the condition is twofold; in other words, that the failure of either quality, the good consideration or the bona fides of the transaction, will avoid the deed; and secondly, that good considerations may be of two kinds, either valuable, or meritorious. Instances will be found of attempts to relieve deeds from the operation of the statute, on the ground of valuable consideration, when the consideration was, in fact, merely colourable or inadequate; or where marriage or a pretended family arrangement has been resorted to, in order to give value to what otherwise would be only voluntary. There are instances also where a meritorious consideration, such as actual love and affection, has been relied upon, but accompanied with such evidence of fraud as to destroy its validity. There are, finally, cases of deeds fraudulent in themselves, which have been set aside without relation to the peculiar circumstances of the settlor.

Of the latter class the case of Coppin v. Coppin (1725), 2 P. Wms. 291, is an example. A receipt was indorsed by the seller on the deed for the purchase-money; but as the money was not really paid, the instrument was of no avail against creditors. On the other hand, where a deed is apparently voluntary, but has been really executed for value, the consideration may be proved aliunde; and in one case a bond was admitted in evidence to rebut the presumption arising from the deed that it was executed to delay creditors, Gale v. Williamson (1841), 8 M. & W. 405; overruling or qualifying Peacock v. Monk, 1 Ves. sen. 128. The same rule prevails in equity; extrinsic evidence will be admitted to prove that a deed apparently voluntary was made for value; Pott v. Todhunter (1845), 2 Coll. 76; and further authorities on the same point are Melland v. Gray (1843), 2 Y. C. C. 199; Clifford v. Ferrell, 1 Y. & C. C. 138; affirmed by Lord Lyndhurst, C. (1845), 9 Jur. 633; 2 Phillips on Ev. 347; Lord St. Leonards' V. & P. 13th ed., p. 592.

It may here be observed, that a deed which is fraudulent under the statute of the 13th Eliz. against creditors, may be set aside at the suit of the assignees of the debtor; in equity, although the subject matter be only a chose in action, Norcutt v. Dodd (1841), Craig. & Ph. 100; and at law, Doe v. Ball, (1843), 11 M. & W. 531.

The question of consideration has frequently arisen in cases of separation deeds. Thus, in Fitzner v. Fitzner (1742), Lord Hardwicke says, "it is certain every conveyance of a husband that is voluntary and for his own benefit, is a fraud against creditors;" but he adds, that the Court will not weigh considerations in these cases in too nice scales. In Stephens v. Olive (1786), 2 Bro. C. C. 90, decided by Sir Lloyd Kenyon, M.R., sitting for Lord Thurlow, C., it was settled that in a deed of separation a covenant by the trustees indemnifying the husband against the wife's debts, is a valuable consideration, and will take the conveyance out of the statute. Where, on the other hand, as in Clough v. Lambert (1839), 10 Sim. 174, there is no indemnifying covenant on the part of the trustees, the deed of separation cannot, generally speaking, be supported against creditors; see also St. John v. St. John, 11 Ves. 532. But the rule is not universal, as appears from the case of Frampton v. Frampton (1841), 4 Beav. 287. In that case the property, which had been originally the wife's, and in which the husband had an interest under their marriage settlement during their joint lives, was assigned by the husband and wife on trust to pay her an annuity of £300, to invest the residue and pay her the proceeds; and after his death to transfer the principal to her. The husband alone covenanted to pay the annuity, and there was a covenant by the wife to exonerate him from all debts, charges, and incumbrances, which was, of course, void. There was no infraction of the terms of the agreement on the part of the wife; the annuity was regularly paid to her; but the surplus was not regularly invested. The husband died twelve years afterwards. Lord Langdale, M.R., said he did not think a voluntary assignment and declaration of trust by a husband was necessarily vitiated by the absence of a covenant on the part of the trustee; and, under all the circumstances of the case, the deed was supported.

It is obvious that where a valuable money consideration is relied upon in support of a deed, it becomes essential to show that such consideration was adequate. Inadequacy of consideration in a pecuniary sense will not be assisted by a meritorious consideration, such as natural love and affection, in cases where its presence leads to the suspicion of fraud. In a case in the year 1786, where a man was indebted to the trustees of his daughter's marriage settlement in £300, and at the age of 77, being of infirm health and not likely to live, assigned leaseholds, worth £600, to his son, in consideration of an annuity of £30 a year, and natural love and affection; and died shortly afterwards, leaving the son executor, and the son denied assets beyond £40; the assignment of the leaseholds was set aside. Sir Lloyd Kenyon, M.R., said, that if the conveyance had been made without any consideration, it would certainly have been void under the statute; and he was of the same opinion when the consideration was inadequate. It was true that, as between vendor and vendee, the Court would not weigh the consideration in golden scales; but this was a transaction between father and son, and natural love and affection was mentioned as part of the consideration, upon which, as against creditors, he could not rest at all. It was meritorious, and which, in many instances, the Court would maintain, but not as against creditors; Mathews v. Feather, 1 Cox, 278. A case of remarkable resemblance to this, both in its circumstances and in its result, is Strong v. Strong (1854), 18 Beav. 408.

Instances in which another valuable consideration—that of marriage—has been relied on in support of a deed against creditors, or has been had recourse to in order to protect property against debts are so numerous, that a few leading authorities only can be referred to here. Of these, Campion v. Cotton (1810), 17 Ves. 263, is one of the most remarkable. J. L., after having lodged for many years at the house of one Charlotte T., in January, 1805, married her. During this time he had no property of his own, but with the money of others he bought stock, money, and valuables, and gave them to her. By the settlement made previous to the marriage, reciting that the intended wife was possessed of stock in her own name, and of stock standing in her name and that of another person, also of goods, &c., and reciting that the intended husband was seised of freehold and copyhold property purchased with her money (being, in fact, purchased with money which was partly hers and partly supplied by him), it was witnessed that in consideration of marriage, the funds, rents, and jewels, &c., were assigned to be for the sole and separate use of the wife, with power to her to assign, transfer, sell, &c. After the husband's death his creditors filed a bill against the executor to have the deed set aside, but Sir W. Grant, M.R., upheld the settlement. He said, "I do not think it can be inferred from the evidence, that she knew he was in such circumstances as to make his bounty to her a fraud upon any one." The same principle was followed in Hardey v. Green (1849), 12 Beav. 182. There, by articles previous to the marriage, the husband and wife agreed that all the property to which either husband or wife might become entitled should be settled to such uses as the wife should appoint, and in default, on trusts for the husband, wife, and children. The husband at the time had no property, and soon after the marriage became insolvent. Property descended to him afterwards, which Lord Langdale, M.R., held to be bound by the articles. He observed that there was no evidence that the wife had participated in the fraud in any way whatever.

Townsend v. Westacott (1840), 2 Beav. 340, is a leading example of a class of cases in which marriage has been resorted to, for the purpose of attempting to support by a valuable consideration an instrument which at first was either in whole or in part voluntary. A., being indebted to the extent of £3,500, on the 2nd April, 1830, made a settlement of freehold land on Maria P., an infant, the daughter of his housekeeper, absolutely, with a gift over to the mother, in case of the infant's death under twenty-one. Some time afterwards A. married the housekeeper. In October, 1832, he was imprisoned for debt; and in January, 1833, he petitioned the Court under the Insolvent Debtors' Act. Lord Langdale, M.R., directed inquiries as to A.'s indebtedness in April, 1830, and the master having found as above stated, the settlement was set aside. So also, in Colombine v. Penhall (1853), 1 Sm. & Giff. 256, which was the case of a settlement made in consideration of marriage by a man who was in insolvent circumstances at the time, whereby he assigned the whole of his real and personal estate (including every article of furniture in his house) upon trust for his wife, subject to a power of joint appointment, but reserving no interest to himself. Sir J. Stuart, V.C., said that "where there is evidence of an intent to defeat and delay creditors, and to make the celebration of marriage a part of a scheme to protect property against the rights of creditors, the consideration of marriage cannot support such a settlement."

Cases of marriage settlements by traders next present themselves; as Higinbotham v. Holme (1812), 19 Ves. 87, before

Lord Eldon, C., where a limitation in a settlement, whereby the intended husband, not then being indebted or intending to become a trader, conveyed his own property to the use of himself for life, unless he should embark in trade, and in the life of his wife become bankrupt, and from his decease to secure an annuity to his wife, and subject thereto for his heirs, executors, &c. After the marriage he did embark in trade, and some years afterwards became bankrupt. Lord Eldon said that a limitation of a wife's property until the bankruptcy of the husband, or a lease determinable on the bankruptcy of the lessee, would be good, but not such a provision as this, which "looked forward to a change of intention, and a purpose of becoming a trader." In Lester v. Garland (1832), 5 Sim. 205, a trader, by settlement previous to marriage, having received a fortune of £5,000 with his wife, settled a sum of £33,333 6s. 8d. stock in trust for himself for life, with limitations over for the benefit of his wife and children in the event of his becoming bankrupt or insolvent. There was a proviso that if he should survive, and issue of the marriage should fail, and he should then become a bankrupt, 15-66ths of the said sum of stock, being equal in value to £5,000, should go to the wife's next of kin. No part of the £5,000 was settled. It was held that the limitations over in event of bankruptcy were good to the extent of the 15-66ths, but void as to the remainder. The principle of Campion v. Cotton, appears to have been followed in Ex parte M'Burnie (1852), 1 De G. M. & G. 441. In that case, the husband a trader, being in insolvent circumstances, covenanted by ante-nuptial settlement to pay to trustees £500, who were also to hold about £230 belonging to the wife, on such trusts as the wife should appoint, subject thereto to her for her separate use, then for the husband for life, and the capital to go to the survivor. There was nothing to show any implication on the part of the wife in any fraudulent intention on the part of the husband; and the provisions of the settlement being considered fair on her part, the deed was upheld as against the husband's assignees. One of the latest cases is Frazer v. Thompson, (1859), 4 De G. & J. 659. The short grounds of this decision, whereby the settlement was set aside, were that the husband had, prior to and shortly before the date of the settlement, which was expressed to be in contemplation of, and was speedily followed by marriage, committed various acts of bankruptcy, of which the intended wife was cognizant, and to which she was a consenting party. She had in fact, sheltered him in her own house from arrest. In that case, moreover, the marriage engagement had been entered into some two years previously, and it was not shown that the husband was insolvent or indebted at that time.

Correspondence.

BANKRUPTCY APPOINTMENTS.

The legal profession of this city was not a little surprised at a paragraph which appeared in our local newspapers on Saturday last, announcing that it was understood that a second registrar to the Bristol District Bankruptcy Court was to be appointed, and that the expectant new registrar was Mr. Inskip, one of the ushers, and the housekeeper of the court.

On referring to the law on the subject, it appears that any one may be appointed registrar of a court of bankruptcy, and that under the new Act the Lord Chancellor has the power to appoint additional registrars where he thinks fit: so that if his Lordship pleases, and the voice of the profession against the appointment be not raised, and does not reach him, there is every probability of the appointment in question being made.

The qualifications of the gentleman named for the post I do not desire to canvass; he is known I believe to the profession here to have given some attention to the amendment of bankruptcy law, and he has on several occasions brought himself under the notice of the Lord Chancellor when Attorney-General. His suggestions, also, have been favourably received by Sir F. Kelly and others; but my object is to draw attention to the disparagement (I had almost said insult) offered to the legal profession at large, barristers as well as solicitors, if the impending appointment is made. Surely it is not the thing to appoint the lowest officer of a court to the post of registrar without official proof of his fitness for the office, and without his having passed through any professional training for it. Why, look at some of the consequences. The registrar sits as deputy for the commissioner during the latter's absence; and in the case of this court, our commissioner, besides his regular vacations, and necessary absence from indisposition, &c., is away from his court at least four weeks in every year attending to his duties as Recorder of Birmingham; and on these occasions the registrar of the court sits for him, and may have to hear and decide on questions of law argued before him by learned counsel, to say nothing of the regular duties of his office, taxation of costs, &c.; and it certainly will not be the most agreeable thing in the world for our local bar to have to do this before the newly-raised expectant registrar in question. Why even a county court registrar in any out-of-the-way town or village, such as the neighbouring small places of Sodbury, Temple-Cloud, or Thornbury, is obliged to be an attorney or solicitor, and surely a bankruptcy court registrar ought to possess an equally high qualification.

On principle, therefore, apart from any personal feeling on the subject, I hope the legal profession everywhere will raise their voice and pen against the appointment in question, or against any similar ones elsewhere being made. I believe the profession here has made a move in the matter, but with what success I do not know.

In conclusion, I may say the salary of registrar under the new Act is £1,000 per annum, so that as far as the public purse is concerned the Lord Chancellor has only to make five new registrars at the salary mentioned, and we might as well have had the chief judge at £5,000 a-year at once, and saved all the discussion on that subject that arose between the Lords and Commons when the Bill was before the House. LEX.

Bristol.

CONVEYANCE—FORM OF HABENDUM.

Will any of your conveyancing correspondents give the proper form of the habendum in a conveyance of a freehold estate to a purchaser?

It has been contended, that since the Act 8 & 9 Vict. c. 119, declaring the immediate freehold to lie in "grant" as well as in livery, no limitation of an use is necessary as was formerly the case when the estate was conveyed by lease and release.

A SUBSCRIBER.

PROMISSORY NOTE.

I shall be obliged by your inserting this query in your next, and by any correspondent who will be kind enough to state his opinion as to whether the document (of which the subjoined is a copy) amounts to anything more than a simple I. O. U., or whether it is a promissory note, and also give his reasons:—

"This is to show that I, J. L., owe you, R. H., the sum of £5 borrowed money, with the promise of payment of £1 per month, beginning on the 1st of October, 1860, with the interest to be one shilling in the pound.

"Signed my name."

There is no stamp affixed.
King's Lynn.

JOHN NURSE CHADWICK.

ESTATE OF WIDOWS IN FREEHOLDS.

If A.'s widow was married to A. after 1st January, 1834, she is entitled to dower out of his equitable interest in the freehold estate contracted to be purchased by him, unless her right to dower is barred by his will (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 105, s. 2).

The contract must be completed by a conveyance to A.'s daughter, notwithstanding she is under age—(an infant may be a grantee, Sheppard's "Touchstone," p. 234, 6th edition)—subject to the widow's dower, and the balance of the purchase-money must be paid out of A.'s personal estate.—See Smith's "Manual of Equity Jurisprudence," pp. 155 and 156, 2nd edition.

The widow clearly will have a right of dower out of the estate, unless the husband may have deprived her of her right by any of the various means specified in the Act (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 105). The equitable estate in fee simple, which the purchaser acquired by the contracts, vests in his real representative, as the heir-at-law or devisee (as the case may be), who is entitled to have the remainder of the purchase-money paid out of the personal estate of the deceased purchaser. Your correspondent does not state whether the purchaser died intestate or not. If the executor or administrator complete and take the conveyance in his own name he will, of course, be a trustee for the infant devisee or heir-at-law. If the purchaser, however, has made a will, subjecting his real estate to any trusts, the vendor will convey to the trustees upon the trusts of such will.

J. T. S.

ATTESTATION OF WILLS.

Neither of the forms given in your last number is grammatically correct. In C's form I object to "in our presence, both being;" and I should like to ask O. A. T. to what nominative "who" is coupled by "and."

I also object to the words "the above-named" and "the said." The attestation clause should be complete in itself, without reference to the will, and it should not imply that the witnesses have read the will.

I suggest the following clause, which I have always used:—

"Signed by A. B., and by him declared to be his last will, in the presence of us who, at his request, in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunder subscribed our names as witnesses." S. G.

The following form will answer and be found concise:—

"Signed by the said A. B., in the joint presence of us who, in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." J. T. S.

I have prepared very many wills—I was going to say hundreds of them—and I always use the following form of attestation, and it seems to me to meet every requirement of the statute:—

"Signed by the said A. B., as and for his last will and testament, in the presence of us present at the same time, who, at his request, in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses."

If you think it worth while to add another to the numerous forms already given by you, pray make use of the above.

D. T. W.

Reviews.

The Law of Nations, considered as Independent Political Communities. On the Right and Duties of Nations in Time of Peace. By TRAVERS TWISS, D.C.L., Regius Professor of Civil Law in the University of Oxford, and one of her Majesty's Counsel. Oxford: University Press. London: Longman & Co. 1861.

The publication of a work on international law, which is a branch of jurisprudence that has been so largely commented upon by Wheaton and Story, nevertheless does not require much apology in the present disturbed state of the world. International jurisprudence has been indeed treated of by a host of foreign jurists usque ad nauseam. Still, we should gladly hail the announcement of an eclectic treatise in the English language, which would give us the essence of the judgments of the leading foreign writers, without too copious an infusion of statements of treaties. The work before us, however, has not this recommendation. It mixes up both law and fact, with little regard to their mutual relations, and cannot be considered to tend much to advance the science of which it treats. The author of this work appears to us to have discussed its subject-matter too much in the historical or chronological, as distinguished from the logical, method. Thus, he has taken the Peace of Westphalia as a starting point for his deductions, which should rather have been founded in the nature of things, than professedly drawn from any historic events. This mode of treating the subject of international law, by one who considers that branch of jurisprudence to be a science, is not much more rational than if a writer on logic at the present day professed to go no higher for the source of the principles adopted by him than the date of the publication of Archbishop Whately's treatise. Even the epoch selected by Mr. Twiss seems by no means to possess exclusively the qualities which attracted his favourable notice of it. It was not "a new era" (as he writes) "in the intercourse of commonwealths; the treaties of Munster and Osnabruck being the first practical recognition on the part of the nations of Europe of the principle of territorial sovereignty." If the latter part of the quotation were in the negative, it would be strictly correct, though it should be considered a barren truism. The study of international law, it is true, was not much, if at all, cultivated under the Roman empire. The common explanation of this void in the jurisprudence of Rome is satisfactory enough—viz., that Rome was alone supreme, and, consequently, dictated, instead of obeying, international laws. But even Rome, so far as she allowed foreign nations any voice in the conduct of their external relations, made and moulded this concession ratione soli. We are at a loss, therefore, to perceive the merits of the treaties alleged by Mr. Twiss to have instituted a new principle of international law. He himself admits that the treatise of Grotius had previously popularised the idea of territorial sovereignty.

Mr. Twiss discusses the question whether the term law is to be interpreted to mean "a rule of conduct imposed by a sovereign power upon a subject community," or as "an ordinance of reason promulgated for the common good." He prefers the latter definition of the word law as alone compatible with the existence of an international executive. But though all states are equal in right, they nevertheless obey international law, which has for its executive not one but many states, or, in other words, the balance of power. All particles of matter of equal density have the same gravity; yet these are organised into varied collections of united forces and of solar systems. A law may be properly described as a rule of conduct imposed by a sovereign power upon a subject community for the common good. This account of the meaning of the word law cannot, indeed, be termed its definition. The distinction between the theory of moral sentiments and the criteria of morality may be used to illustrate our meaning. The utility of virtue is not of its essence. That utility is, notwithstanding, an inseparable accident of moral excellence, regarded in its external relations to the individual and society; the utility of virtue, therefore, may be correctly mentioned in a philosophic description of the nature of morality. If the word law be substituted for virtue in the observations we have here offered, the inference is equally unimpeachable. We think that the meaning of the term preferred by Mr. Twiss is inadequate to designate any particular rule of individual or of national conduct; since there are many ordinances of reason promulgated for the common good which have never yet been considered to be duties even of imperfect obligation. The origin of law, indeed, is to be found, as Sophocles declares, in high Olympus—in the supremacy of conscience. But its exposition is made by the light afforded by the natural criterion of virtue—utility, whenever that utility is enforced by a sufficiently powerful executive.

Mr. Twiss considers that international jurisprudence admits of scientific treatment because the rules of international law are of universal application. This reason, like his definition of the term law, is too comprehensive; or, to use a logical phrase, proves too much. Universal rules do not necessarily admit of scientific exposition merely because of their universality. A science is generally considered to be a system of propositions, a knowledge of which leads deductively to an acquaintance with all other matters to which those propositions directly relate. Such are the pure sciences of mathematics and arithmetic. Induction is sometimes termed a science. But, as Archbishop Whately has accurately demonstrated, an inductive process denotes merely a judicious method of observation whereby data are acquired for deductive purposes. Induction, nevertheless, is equally as universal in its application as deduction. Indeed, almost every method, however unscientific, of collecting facts may be applied to any department of science or art. The universality, therefore, of the application of laws is no evidence whatever of their scientific character. In a subsequent portion of his work Mr. Twiss, with more regard for the rules of logic, defines a law to be "a system of applied principles." The mere universality of principles, without a recognised utility which has recommended their adoption and application in practice, is insufficient to entitle them to the designation of laws.

Our author gives the various definitions of a state laid down by Cicero (De Republica, lib. 1. c. 25), Grotius, Puffendorf, and Vattel. He defines a nation to be "a political body capable of discharging, without the consent of any political superior, the obligations of natural society towards other political bodies, and of regulating, in concert with them, the mode of discharging these obligations, either as regards the mutual action of the communities themselves or as concerns the intercourse between individual members of them." Without commenting upon the length of this description of the essential elements of national life, we may observe that it is a definition which discloses very special tendencies in the mind of its author. It regards states only in their external relations, which comprise only a portion of the functions of government. These, indeed, are the only phases of national life contemplated by Mr. Twiss in the present treatise. But it would be much better to omit laying down definitions than to give them merely secundum subjectam materiam. The terms of the definition are such as we would expect to hear from an advocate discussing the law of nations in a court of admiralty, and showing how with a proper infusion of exceptive and restrictive provisions, his explanation of the functions of a state corresponded with the claims of his client. But we should never have expected so special, incomplete, and illogical a definition from a philosophic jurist. Moreover, it is, indeed, impossible to treat of international law without occasional references to the rights and duties of individual citizens, both as regards foreign states and their own government. Thus, the right of reprisals between nations, for instance, depends upon the right of the individual citizen to protection from the head of the State against injury, either from his fellow-citizens or from foreigners.

Mr. Twiss considers that sovereignty and independence are distinct qualities of international life, and that it is the latter alone which gives a state a right to contract by treaty arrangement with other states. He cites, as examples of this position, the federal union of the United States of America, which are sovereign in their internal, but not in their external, relations; and, on the other hand, the States of Barbary, which are sovereign as regards their right of entering into treaties with foreign States, and are at the same time subject to the suzerainty of the Sultan of Constantinople. But for all purposes of juridical investigation, sovereignty and independence must be considered identical, and States, which, like those of Barbary, are subject to a foreign suzerainty may, in their contracts with foreign powers, be deemed, so far as the interests of their own provinces are concerned, to be the plenipotentiaries of their suzerain, or to have surrendered their independence only as regards matters which do not vitally affect their external sovereign relations. The right of contracting with foreign States appears to us to be the criterion of sovereignty and of independence. Incidental to this prerogative is the right of alliance, to secure preventively the performance of stipulations by foreign States; of legation, in order to observe whether these stipulations are duly performed; and of making war, to recover indemnity for any injury sustained either in violation of the law of nations or in contravention of express treaty. The question is interesting in its relations to the present American civil contest. Mr. Twiss avoids offering an opinion as to the international status of the several North American States as settled by the Articles of the Confederation of 1778, and by the subsequent constitution of 1787. He even considers that "it is not within the scope of a treatise on the law of nations to examine in what respects and to what extent the sovereignty reserved to each State by the Articles of 1778 was modified by the subsequent constitution of 1787." As regards the independence of the several States, however, he observes "that the exercise of all those functions which characterise an independent State has been delegated by the respective States to the Federal Government, and the national character of each State is so far merged in the national character of the Union." The distinction between sovereignty and independence appears to us to be entirely unreal and delusive. In the case of the United States is not the sovereignty of each as much merged as its independence? No State should, we think, be designated sovereign, which has not the power to make war or peace, to appoint ambassadors and consuls, to conclude treaties, to levy duty on tonnage, to keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, and to engage in war. It might, however, be contended that the United States originally delegated, rather than surrendered, their sovereignty to the Federal Government. The right of entering into compacts, and, consequently of making peace or war on a just occasion with foreign powers, appears to us to be the essential characteristic—"the round and top"—of sovereignty. The acknowledgment of a foreign suzerainty, or the render of a tribute to a foreign power, may affect the social status, so to speak, of the inferior State in the family of nations; but as it does not affect the right of such a State to contract on an equal footing with other nations, and to enforce its claims by an appeal to its own arms, and to the common executive, the balance of power—as it does not, in short, affect the international personality of such a State—it should not, we think, be considered as essentially affecting its independence. The various modifications of international life are well illustrated by Mr. Twiss by references to the semi-sovereign or protected independent States, Monaco, Kniphausen, &c. We regret, therefore, that he did not offer an opinion as to the degree in which each of the United States retained or surrendered its individual sovereignty by the Articles of 1787. The maxim silent inter arma leges is, indeed, unhappily but too often applied in practice, and we should have little expectation that the union of the States would be restored by the administration of a dozen lectures from as many accomplished jurists; yet the conjuncture called for an enquiry into the legal rights of the parties, who, with fratricidal animosity, appear but little disposed themselves to reconcile "the foes that once were friends."

The third chapter of this work, on the National State-systems of Christendom, comprises an account of all the abnormal sovereign nationalities, both in Europe and in North and South America. The lover of political curiosities will find his taste much gratified by a perusal of this chapter, which describes the constitutions of all the leading confederate powers, as well those of the Germanic Confederation and the United and Confederate States of North America, as also those of the Argentine and Swiss Confederations, &c. The point of view from which Mr. Twiss contemplates the subject of his treatise is, as we have stated, eminently the historical one. His work accordingly abounds with important statements of facts of international importance. In this chapter he copiously pours forth the treasures of his collection. But a logical or juridical mind is not gratified with mere details of the data of a science which is not, in our opinion, in itself avide des faits; and, accordingly, even in his narrative of the constitutions of Christian States, we miss much that aptitude for discursive suggestion and clear deduction which a sound analysis of international law, even à posteriori, should be expected to beget.

Although the data which a science adopts as its premises stand themselves in need of proof derived not from reason but from experience, nevertheless, such premises, when once proved, offer as firm a foundation for ulterior investigation and development as if they were à priori cognizable by the human mind. Religion may thus be termed a science, although its revealed data rest on external evidence only. In like manner the law of nations may justly be considered a science, even though its data should be regarded as requiring external proof. Locke considered that the reduction of morality to a strict deductive science stood in need merely of definitions. These are certainly requisite, whether the foundations of a science are laid in the rational or in the empirical conceptions of the mind. Barbeyrae, De Wolff, and Vattel virtually assume that reason alone does not afford the premises for a science of international law. "There are many cases," says the last author, "in which the law of nature does not decide between State and State as it would between man and man." We altogether dissent from this proposition, so far as it applies, and know not how international law can be considered a science by those who hold such an opinion. Hobbes "De civ. Imperium, c. 14, s. 4, and Puffendorf, "Law of Nature and of Nations," lib. 111, c. 3, s. 23, have thought differently, and we do not think that Mr. Twiss has successfully combated their position. Grotius considered that certain rules of international life could not be deduced from principles of natural right. As this body of law rested upon custom and tacit compact, he included it in the "Jus Gentium Voluntarium or Jus Constitutum." This portion of international common law reminds us of the ancient statutes which are supposed to form an element of the English common law. We think that international law may be logically, and analogically to our civil code, divided into the rational or necessary, and the conventional law of nations; and almost all the premises necessary for the constitution of a scientific code of international law are, we think, deducible a priori from principles of natural justice and expediency. But if, according to the opinion of Grotius, some of those data cannot be based upon pure first principles only, their need of a posteriori proof suggests that they should be classed among the conventional laws of nations.

Mr. Twiss very clearly refutes Wheaton's opinion as to the extent to which treaties bind the contracting parties, as regards foreign powers not parties to the convention. The latter jurist considers that treaties in many cases constitute a rule to be observed by the contracting parties towards the rest of the world. Such an extreme proposition, so contrary to our municipal rule as to privity, is as unwarranted by first principles as it is contrary to the practice of nations. It has never been even alleged that the Paris manifesto of 1856 bound the contracting parties, as regards the United States which refused to be bound by it. If a nudum pactum is inoperative according to our civil code, it should surely be so likewise as regards international disputes. If, indeed, a formal treaty expressly granted a gratuitous favour to a third party, then, such an instrument, by its analogy to the municipal laws relating to special contracts, should, of course, be held irrevocable. But any implied donations to third parties are wholly unwarranted by a treaty which is declared to be made between the contracting parties only. So untenable a proposition on the part of so eminent a jurist as Wheaton, shows the danger of constructing a code of international law, as Mr. Twiss does, upon premises which mainly rest, not upon first principles, but upon a collection of facts which can seldom constitute a sufficient induction for a law of universal obligation.

Some of Mr. Twiss's analyses display more accuracy of technical deduction than soundness or breadth of comprehension. Thus, he says (p. 192) "Title by conquest resolves itself juridically into title by cession, and it is not the superior power of the conqueror which gives right to his conquest, but it is the consent of the conquered which ultimately sanctions the conqueror's right of possession." We cannot appreciate this subtle reasoning, which ignores the logical maxim causa causæ est causa causatæ. The superior power of the conqueror is the cause of the consent of the conquered. Mr. Twiss must admit, therefore, that it is superior power that gives right to the conqueror, which, of course, he denies. Again, he distinguishes the right of empire from the right of property as to newly-acquired territory. But though he cites the authority of Grotius in support of this position, it is, nevertheless, hardly tenable. "The right of empire," Mr. Twiss argues, "may be enjoyed by a nation over certain things in which it is incapable of acquiring an absolute right of property." What are the examples adduced?—air, flowing water, the sea, and the sea shore (Inst. Lib. 11, Tit. 1, s. 1.) Only a qualified property we admit can be acquired in these; but so, also, can only a limited right of empire be exercised over them. As regards international possession, therefore, the right of empire and the right of property are concomitant and co-extensive. In his discussion of the question whether there be a general law of nations for the extra-tradition of criminals who have immigrated from a foreign country, Mr. Twiss cites a host of authorities pro and con. He then adds (p. 346), "In the conflict of opinion amongst such high authorities, we may safely have recourse to the practice of nations." Yet, in the next page but one he says, "Heffler has very aptly remarked that the very fact of the existence of so many special treaties respecting the extra-tradition of fugitives from justice is conclusive that there is no such usage amongst nations which constitutes the surrender of such fugitives, upon the demand of a state whose laws have been violated, a perfect obligation upon other states." Heffler is certainly right, and, consequently, Mr. Twiss was in error when he referred us to the express conventions of states for the purpose of discovering a common law of nations upon this question.

The treatise before us proceeds mainly upon a basis of historical fact. Its method is, consequently, essentially erroneous. International law, if at all worthy of scientific treatment (and this few will deny), must be discussed and its problems must be solved by a constant reference to first principles of reason and justice. The construction of a complete system of international jurisprudence appears to us to be equally feasible as it is desirable. Political economy has been raised to an almost perfect science, although the conventions of states furnished seeming refutations, rather than examples, of its rules. As to international jurisprudence, treaties between different States, although, in se, negating the assumption of the conformity of their stipulations to the common law of nations of the periods when those treaties were concluded, are, nevertheless, evidences of usage, which, if acknowledged in treatises of standard merit, to be recommended generally by their intrinsic utility, would soon become part of the common law of nations. Mr. Twiss has, indeed, devoted too much attention to treaties and express stipulations, and too little to the analysis of this common law. Whenever he does recur to first principles, the transition is somewhat abrupt, and the analysis exhibits more acuteness than judgment on the part of the analyst. The practical merits of the treatise, however, are very considerable. The work is more than a philosophic Hartslet. It comprises a vast amount of details arranged in a good order. The main defect of the work is one of method. It rests too much upon the terms of treaties, and too little upon first principles and authorities. Such a result is due to the chronological order in which the author has mainly conducted his investigations. These are sometimes of an elaborate character, and impart a considerable value to the treatise. It abounds with collections of recondite matter; and is likely to enjoy considerable vitality, though, we think, it is entitled to but little fame.

The National Association for the Promotion of Social Science.

BANKRUPT LAWS OF BELGIUM.

At the recent meeting of this association at Dublin, the following paper was read by Mr. Corr-Vandermaren, a judge of the Court of Commerce at Brussels.

I owe the privilege of attending this distinguished assembly to my position as chairman of the "International Association for Customs Reforms," established by the Free Trade Congress held at Brussels in 1856; I have been delegated here by the central committee of that association. To fulfil the mission with which I am charged, and to show how the question of commercial law has come into the province of our free trade association, I must ask permission to say a few words in explanation.

Engaged in the battle for free trade for a great number of years, we took advantage of the constitutional liberties which we so happily enjoy in Belgium to agitate that great question upon the continent; in 1847 we got up an international congress, "le congrès des économistes," where were discussed the principles of political economy in their applications to international commerce; we persevered in the teaching of those principles until 1856, when we got together another and a more important congress, "le congrès pour les réformes douanières." In this latter congress we discussed before several hundred members, gathered from various countries, the most practical means to reform the customs tariffs in every country; this congress gave birth to our international association, which again placed in the hands of a central committee established at Brussels the duty of carrying out its objects, and the power to convene at a proper time its future meetings. The unsettled state of Europe interfered very much with the workings of this committee; meanwhile a Belgian association, of which I was also named president, continued with unabated vigour its peaceful agitation. After five years, during which this association held meetings all over Belgium, the public mind has been converted to free trade; our tariff has been considerably reformed; and our chambers of commerce now are claiming the complete suppression of all customs. Thus the question of free trade in Belgium has now entered upon its last stage, and the international central committee has resolved to convene in 1862 a third congress which will have to entertain the great question of the total suppression of customs in all countries; the international association will thus become virtually one for financial reform.

Amongst the members of the congress of 1856, an Irish barrister, a countryman of yours, Mr. Dix Hutton, brought forward the question of tribunals of commerce. This important question was well handled by Mr. Hutton; the resolutions proposed by him were voted, and the congress referred to our association the question so ably advocated by this distinguished member of the Irish bar. It is in the performance of the duties thus devolved upon us that the Brussels committee sent me here. I regret that they did not choose a more competent person to represent them upon this occasion.

I have not made law my special study, I have passed my life in commercial pursuits; owing to that fact, I have been returned several times as judge of the Tribunal of Commerce of Brussels, and I have been lately again called to the same office by the unanimous vote of the merchants of that city. I must claim your indulgence for my insufficiency in the English language, as well as in many other respects. I shall, however, attempt to give you a slight sketch of the practical workings of the bankrupt laws of Belgium. My demonstration will necessarily be incomplete, and in order to give any additional information that may be required, I put myself at the disposal of the section to answer to the best of my abilities any questions that may be put to me respecting the internal workings of the Belgian Tribunals of Commerce.

In 1830, when Belgium, after a bloody contest, proclaimed her independence, a national assembly, perfectly independent, and in the absence of royalty, discussed clause by clause a constitution which forms the basis of those political institutions which ensure to her people the enjoyment and the blessings of perfect constitutional freedom.

(1) The civil and commercial laws of Belgium, like those of a great portion of Europe, have their basis in the great body of statute law, known by the name of "Code Napoléon." Those laws, particularly the commercial laws, have been modified in many respects so as to make them suitable to the country, and to the times in which we live.

For the purpose of determining disputes arising out of trading and commercial transactions, the law provides for the establishment of tribunaux de commerce in such places as the Government shall, by reason of the extent of mercantile business in the district, see fit to determine. The laws for the organisation of these tribunals are to be found in the Code of Commerce. The object of their formation is, to secure a readier and shorter mode of determining questions arising out of commercial transactions, as also to provide a tribunal which, not being so fettered with forms as the other tribunals, may also take into consideration those principles and customs of trade, which are best understood and appreciated by those who are themselves daily and continually employed in commercial transactions. The tribunal is composed of a president, and of not less than two or more than eight judges, whose services are purely honorary. The president is chosen from among the old judges, and must be at least forty years of age. The judges are elected for two years by an assembly composed of the chief merchants and traders in the locality, from a list prepared by the governor of the province, and approved of by the minister of the interior. The judges, as also the supplementary judges, belonging to the tribunals of Belgium, must be of the age of thirty years at least, and have been actively employed in trade, with honour and success, for at least five years. The registrar and bailiffs of the Court are nominated by the King.

The intervention of solicitors, in proceedings before the tribunals of commerce, is forbidden; but in other respects, the proceedings are conducted in the same manner as before the civil tribunals. The judgment of the Court must be delivered in the presence of three judges at least, including the president. The tribunals of commerce determine, without appeal, actions in which the amount sought to be recovered does not exceed the value of 2,000 francs in principal (£80); beyond that sum, an appeal may be brought before the ordinary courts of appeal, as the tribunals of commerce stand in the same relation to matters of trade, as the tribunals of première instance do to civil matters.

The tribunals of commerce can alone take cognisance:— (1) of all disputes relative to engagements and transactions between merchants, traders, and bankers; (2) of disputes between all parties relative to acts of commerce; (3) of actions against factors, and merchants' clerks or servants, in matters relating to the trade in which the merchant is engaged; (4) of matters relating to failures, bankruptcies, and insolvencies. Their jurisdiction in respect to the matters which they are competent to determine is coextensive with that of the civil tribunal of the arrondissement, except where there may be more than one tribunal of commerce within the arrondissement, in which case the district over which the jurisdiction of each extends is prescribed. In arrondissements where no tribunal of commerce exists, the tribunal of première instance performs the functions attributed to the tribunal of commerce, according to the laws which regulate the questions cognisable by these tribunals. It is supposed by many people in this country, I have even remarked it amongst the members of Parliament, when I was examined before a committee of that house, that the Belgian tribunals of commerce are mere chambers of arbitration, whereas the fact is that those tribunals are royal courts of justice, possessing jurisdiction and executive power equal to the highest courts of the State; their judges sit in robes, as do those of the other courts. They administer justice in the name of the king. The Code de Commerce, which rules the jurisprudence of this Court, was promulgated in 1807. A section of this code is specially affected to the bankrupt laws of Belgium. Those laws of 1807 are now effaced from the Code de Commerce, and this section of it has been replaced by a law on failures, bankruptcies, and insolvencies, voted by the Belgian Legislature on the 18th of April, 1851, which forms now the third section of the code. It is a great improvement upon the former enactments of the Code Napoleon. The object in view in modifying those laws was to simplify, and thereby to obtain economy of time and money. Ten years' experience has proved that those objects have been admirably realised.

According to the present bankrupt laws of Belgium, every merchant or trader who ceases to pay his debts is, by that fact alone, in a state of bankruptcy.

The state of bankruptcy is declared by a judgment of the Tribunal of Commerce; it declares the cessation of payments by the bankrupt, either upon the admission of the fact of his having ceased his payments being laid before the Court by the bankrupt himself, or upon a written request proving the same fact, put before the Court by one or more of his creditors, or by the initiative of the court when the cessation of payments comes to their knowledge by bills being protested, or any other facts proving sufficiently the state of insolvency.

The Tribunal of Commerce receives from the competent authorities every month a list of all the bills protested in their arrondissement.

By the judgment declaring the state of bankruptcy, the tribunal names one or more curateurs or assignees to whom is confided the conduct of all the operations; it delegates one of the judges of the Court who is specially charged with the surveillance and direction of the assignee, who is previously authorised by this juge commissaire in every act of his administration.

The Juge-Commissaire reports to the Tribunal, and deliberates with the sitting judges upon every case where the interest of the estate may be engaged; he presides over every assembly held in reference to the bankruptcy confided to his charge.

By the same judgment the Court fixes the dates on which the creditors are to furnish their accounts, and on which those accounts are to be admitted or discussed. The first of those meetings must take place within twenty days.

All accounts admitted or disputed must be dealt with in open court; every creditor whose account is admitted as correct has a right to take part in the proceedings and debates.

Wherever there is any appearance of fraud, or even neglect in keeping proper books, the tribunal may, by the same judgment, order the arrest and imprisonment of the bankrupt; and the tribunal may by the same or another judgment, when acts are discovered which prove that the bankrupt had in reality ceased his payments at an earlier period, fix the state of bankruptcy at that period, so as it does not go back more than six months from the declaration of the bankruptcy.

The assignee, after taking an oath before the Juge-Commissaire to execute with integrity the mission which he receives from the court, proceeds with the judge accompanied by a commis-greffier (a registrar-clerk) to take possession of the estate.

If a detailed inventory of all the assets cannot be made out in one day, the judge orders everything to be put under the seal of the Court in his presence.

In three or four days after this a regular inventory is made out in presence of the judge, who gives over the estate into the safe keeping of the assignee. The bankrupt is summoned to be present during all these operations; and he is obliged to give all the information in his power that may be required from him; he must, and any of his family or his clerks or servants may, be put to his oath by the judge as to the question whether or not the whole of his assets have been given up for the benefit of his creditors.

The means for the winding up of the concern are carefully examined. In order to save expense of warehouse and house rent, the immediate sale of the property by auction or otherwise is generally considered the best. The sale must be authorised by a judgment of the Court, given upon the report of the Juge-Commissaire.

The judgment declaring a bankruptcy is brought to the knowledge of the parties interested by the public papers, by placards, and by circular letters, which are addressed to all those who may be known by the assignee.

At a subsequent meeting of the creditors, the bankrupt may, if he thinks proper, make proposals to compose with them, or, as we call it, to obtain a concordat. The creditors, after discussion of those propositions, vote upon them. The intention of the creditors to agree to a concordat must be expressed by a majority in number, and three-fourths in amount, of the whole body.

The concordat is not perfect without the sanction of the Court; when this sanction of the Court is obtained, the assignee gives in his account and the bankruptcy is terminated. If the composition or arrangement proposed by the bankrupt has not been accepted by his creditors, or fails to obtain the sanction of the Court, the assignee proceeds with the definitive liquidation of the estate. The law provides that all moneys received by the curateur must be immediately placed at interest at the caisse des consignations, an office belonging to the Government Treasury. The liquidation being at an end, the juge-commissaire, after verification and a strict audit of the accounts, and the personal account of the curateur being taxed by the Court, convenes a general meeting of the creditors, wherein they receive a detailed report of all the transactions of the bankruptcy; the creditors are heard in any observations which they may wish to offer; if no objections are produced they sign the procès-verbal of the assembly, by which they give a discharge in full to the assignee. At this latter meeting the judge consults the creditors as to the question whether the bankrupt should or not be declared excusable by the Court; this word "excusable" corresponds I suppose with what I believe is called here a certificate: whatever may be the opinion of the creditors, the question of excusability remains with the Court.

If the bankrupt is declared excusable the creditors lose all future right to imprison him for whatever balance he may remain their debtor for. If he is declared non excusable they recover all their rights against him, including that of imprisonment for debt, which each one of his creditors may exercise for the amount remaining due to them. The bankruptcy laws of Belgium are very lenient towards those who are only unfortunate, but they give most energetic means of punishing fraud. If at any future period a bankrupt, coming to better fortune, pays his creditors the whole amount of his debts, with interest, the law sanctions that he shall be reinstated in all his rights.

One of the judges of the Brussels Tribunal of Commerce is named every three months to perform the duties of juge-commissaire in all the bankruptcies declared during that period. I have had those duties to perform in Brussels during the months of May, June, and July, 1861. The Court of Brussels declared in that period twenty-four bankruptcies, all of which were confided to my direction, besides forty-three others which were given over to me from judges whose time was up. When a bankruptcy shows no assets whatever, not even the £8 or £10 which are necessary to pay the expenses of working it, it is immediately closed by a judgment of the Court; and, the effects of bankruptcy having thus ceased, the bankrupt becomes again liable to be sued and imprisoned for debt by any one of his creditors. Of the forty-three cases handed over to me from my predecessor by judgment of the Court, thirty-seven are concluded, and the Court has pronounced upon the excusability of each of these; the six remaining cases are impeded by various incidents, such as law suits, out-standing debts, or assets in foreign countries, &c. Of the twenty-four new cases declared during my period of three months, five were closed for want of assets, six have been regularly wound up and definitively disposed of; the thirteen remaining still under my direction are progressing, and, with the exception of those cases where complicated incidents interfere, I hope to have them all closed and wound up in the course of another month.

The new Bankrupt laws of Belgium now practised for ten years have produced great economy of time and money;—so much so that the President of the Brussels Tribunal of Commerce, in his report to the electors on the 12th of March last, recommended strongly the adoption of this mode of legal liquidation. "The expenses," said he, "of the working out of a bankruptcy case are very moderate, and we think that it would be much to the interest of honest dealing, except, perhaps, in cases of large establishments where the law of 'sursis' (reprieve) may be applicable, and far more desirable, to have recourse to this judicial mode of liquidation, than to those amicable and private arrangements wherein the most pressing creditors generally obtain special advantages over the others, and which we see in almost all cases end in disastrous results.

I am afraid, gentlemen, that I have taken up more of the time of this section than I am allowed by your rules. The subject which I have tried to give a sketch of in as brief a manner as I could is extensive in its bearings, and, as I said before, I should be glad to answer any questions upon it which might interest any member of this assembly.

I shall conclude by one observation: we are labouring to suppress custom houses, to adopt uniform weights and measures, to remove all restrictions on international relations; we are labouring, in fact, to promote commercial intercourse and feelings of brotherhood between all nations by assimilating their interests. The uniformity of commercial laws,—so happily introduced into the programme of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science—is another and a most important link in this golden chain of harmony and peace between nations, which the promoters of free-trade and of free institutions are endeavouring to put together. International uniformity of commercial laws is the corollary of free trade.

I recollect some years ago having produced at one of our free-trade meetings, as an example for Belgium to imitate, a little sixpenny book containing the British tariff, whereas at that time our tariff formed a frightful folio volume, with additional supplements.

I know very little of the commercial laws of Great Britain, but I am informed that to acquire any knowledge of them, I should have to study more folio volumes than one—a task which would be out of the reach of a commercial man.

We have profited by the example given by your sixpenny tariff; our folio volume has disappeared, and we are progressing towards reducing it to nothing. I have here in my hand a sixpenny book of our own containing the commercial laws of Belgium, which I offer to you in return as an example which may, at all events in its form, be useful for you to consider.

If every country had, like Belgium, a fixed code of commerce, the merchant could thus obtain for sixpence the means of acquiring some knowledge of the laws which govern his operations in trade, and which would serve him as a guide to his transactions, not only in his own country, but also in foreign countries to which he trades; and commercial law would no longer be the exclusive monopoly of lawyers.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

- ANDREWS—On Sept. 8, the wife of Thomas Andrews, Esq., Solicitor, Bagshot, of a son.
BLAXLAND—On Sept. 11, at 18, Clapton-square, the wife of George Blaxland, Esq., of a daughter.
CREERY—On Sept. 5, at Ashford, Kent, the wife of Leslie Creery, Esq., Solicitor, of a son.
JONES—On Sept. 12, at 40, Craven-hill-gardens, the wife of Henry Cadman Jones, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law, of a daughter.
SYDNEY—On Sept. 5, at 88, Guildford-street, Russell-square, Mrs. Algernon E. Sydney, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

- BOSANQUET—LUTTRELL—On Sept. 4, Henry Anstey Bosanquet, Esq., Inner Temple, Barrister-at-law, to Mary Anne, daughter of Colonel Luttrell, of Kilve Court.
CAWLEY—TWINBERROW—On Sept. 4, William Wilkes Cawley, Esq., Solicitor, Malvern, to Elizabeth Mary, daughter of the late John Twinberrow, of Madresfield.
COLT—COLLINS—On Sept. 5, Frederick Hoare Colt, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, to Bertha, daughter of Henry Collins, Esq., of The Duffryn, near Newport, Monmouthshire.
HERBERT—WITHAM—On Sept. 5, George Herbert, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, to Constantia, daughter of the late Sir Charles Witham, of Higham, Suffolk.
HOLKER—WILSON—On Sept. 5, John Holker, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, to Jane, daughter of the late James Wilson, Esq., of Gilda Brook, Eccles.
POULTER—MC CREA—On Sept. 4, Brownlow Poulter, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and late Fellow of New College, Oxford, to Harriet Amelia, daughter of Rear Admiral McCrea.
TOURLE—MARTIN—On Sept. 12, John Joseph Tourle, Esq., of Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, to Sarah Anne, daughter of the late David Martin, Esq., of Hove, Sussex.
WEST—DICKSON—On Sept. 10, Rev. George West, to Mary Anne, daughter of William Dickson, Esq., of Alnwick and Alnmouth, Clerk of the Peace for the county of Northumberland.

DEATHS.

- CARLINE—On Sept. 6, aged 47, Jane Frances, wife of Richard Carline, Esq., Solicitor, Lincoln.
PEARSON—On Aug. 28, at Madeira, Octavia Gillespie, widow of Andrew Adam Pearson, Esq., of Luce, Writer to the Signet.
WYNNE—On Sept. 3, in her 15th year, Alice Charlotte, daughter of James Wynne, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

Unclaimed Stock in the Bank of England.

The Amount of Stock heretofore standing in the following Names will be transferred to the Party claiming the same, unless other directions appear within Three Months:—

- BURCHALL, SAMUEL, of Grooby-park, and WILLIAM CUMBERLAND, of Mapplewell, Leicestershire, Farmers. £106 18s Consols.—Paid to WILLIAM BURCHALL, the survivor.
CHESTERMAN, HENRY, Timber Merchant, North-street, Manchester-square, £1,500 Navy 5 per Cents.—Paid to RICHARD BROWNING, the surviving acting executor of the said Henry Chesterman, deceased.
MOLONY, EDMOND, Esq., of Cloonony Castle, King's County, Ireland, £470 3 per Cents.—Paid to Alicia Bennett, widow the person named in the said order.

Next of Kin.

FOXBROOK, ANTHONY AUGUSTUS, formerly of 24, Duke-street, West Smithfield, in the city of London, but late of Holme, in the county of Norfolk, a widower, who died at Holme on the 17th day of March, 1861.—Next of kin to apply to the Solicitor to the Treasury, Whitehall, London, S.W.

London Gazettes.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

LIMITED IN BANKRUPTCY.

TUESDAY, Sept. 10, 1861.

HADFIELD'S PATENT CASE AND PACKAGE COMPANY (LIMITED).—Commissioner Perry will, on September 27, at 11, at Liverpool, proceed to make a call upon contributors for 14s. per share.

WESTMINSTER STREET RAIL COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up, presented September 7, will be heard before Commissioner Holroyd, on September 21, at 12. G. F. Cooke, 35, Southampton-buildings, London, Agent for Hayes & Wright, Oldbury, Worcester, Solicitors for petitioner.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Sept. 10, 1861.

ANJER, JOHN, Gent., Bedminster, Somersetshire. Sols. Davis & Fry, Shannon-court, Bristol. Oct. 21.
BARTON, JAMES, Spinster, Silchester, Hants. Sols. Blandy & Blandy, 1, Friar-street, Reading. Dec. 1.
COLEMAN, MARY ANN, Widow, Sandridge, Kent. Sol. Holcroft, Sevenoaks. Oct. 18.
DOWLING, RICHARD, Surgeon-Dentist, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Sols. Griffith & Crighton, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Oct. 5.
ORME, HUMPHREY, Esq., St. George's, Stamford. Sol. Laxton, Stamford, Lincolnshire. Oct. 11.
SELLS, JONATHAN, Turner, St. John's Hill, Sevenoaks. Sol. Holcroft, Sevenoaks. Oct. 18.
TONGE, JAMES, Toll Contractor, Pendleton, Lancashire. Sols. Slater, Heelis, & Co., 75, Princess-street, Manchester. Oct. 16.
WILLOUGHBY, WILLIAM LEMOS, Esq., of 91, Victoria-street, Westminster, Middlesex. Sols. Parko & Pollock, 63, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex. Oct. 1.
YOUNG, Sir WILLIAM NOBIS, Bart., Lieutenant in Her Majesty's 23rd Regiment, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Sols. Bager, Bewes, & Bager, Stonehouse. Nov. 15.

FRIDAY, Sept. 13, 1861.

BECKWITH, RICHARD MITCHELL, Gent., Fairfield, Liverpool. Sol. Houghton, 39, Lord-street, Liverpool. Nov. 21.
BAILEY, CHARLES, Gent., 4, Montague-place, Kentish-town, Middlesex. Sols. Denton & Hall, 15, Gray's-inn-square. Oct. 31.
EMPEON, CHARLES, Gent., 7, Terrace-walk, Bath. Sol. Gibbs, 4, Northumberland-buildings, Queen-square, Bath. Nov. 1.
HARRIS, WILLIAM, Farmer, Lever-hill, Kimbolton, Herefordshire. Sol. Lloyd, Leominster. Sept. 29.
MOORE, EDWARD, Warehouseman, formerly of Chelsea, then of Primrose-hill, and afterwards of 400, Oxford-street, Middlesex, and late of High-street, Hoxton. Sol. Steward, Museum-street, Ipswich. Nov. 2.
SWATLING, JOHN, formerly of Rumwood-green, near Maidstone, Kent, afterwards of Crescent-road, Plumstead, Kent, Victualler, and late of 6, Studley-road, Stockwell, Surrey, Gent. Sol. Humphreys, East India Chambers, Leadenhall-street, London. Nov. 9.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

TUESDAY, Sept. 10, 1861.

COUNIHAN, JOHN JOSEPH, & JOHN MURPHY, Spirit Dealers, Liverpool (Counihan, Murphy, & Co.). Sol. Quinn, 22, Lord-street, Liverpool. Aug. 20.
DOBBS, THOMAS HARGOOD, Grocer, Draper, & Milliner, Bedworth, Warwick, and of Halifax, Yorkshire. Sol. Davis, Coventry. Aug. 15.
DOWNS, ROBERT, Bookbinder & Bookeller, 53, Paternoster-row, London. Sol. Burr, 12, Paternoster-row, London. Aug. 31.
GRACIE, WILLIAM, Draper, Greenfields, Llanelly, Carmarthenshire. Sol. Brown, Llanelly, Carmarthen. Aug. 31.
HOOPER, HENRY RICHARD, Brewer, Shirley, Southampton. Sols. Hearn & New, Newport, Isle of Wight. Aug. 13.
IBBOTSON, EDWARD, Grocer & Joiner's Tool Maker, Duke-street, Sheffield. Sols. Smith & Hinde, Sheffield. Sept. 3.
ISON, JOHN, Wheelwright, Blacksmith, & Innkeeper, Nailstone, Leicestershire. Sol. Harvey, 10, Market-street, Leicester. Aug. 19.
LITTLEWOOD, JOHN, Carpenter, Thornhill, Yorkshire. Sol. Walker, Dewsbury. Aug. 17.
MOORE, GEORGE, Butcher, Somersham, Suffolk. Sols. Jackaman & Son, Ipswich. Sept. 4.
PACE, GEORGE ROBERT, & RICHARD LINTON, Mercers & Drapers, Boston, Lincolnshire (Pack & Linton). Sols. Hughes, Kearsey, Masterman, & Hughes, 17, Bucklersbury, London. Aug. 14.
RAYNER, RICHARD, Innkeeper, Bramley, Leeds. Sol. Booth, Leeds. Aug. 21.
RHODES, STEPHEN, Joiner & Builder, Farnworth, Lancashire. Sols. Greenhalgh & Hall, 8, Acrefield, Bolton-le-Moors. Sept. 5.
SMITH, EDWARD, & FREDERICK HOLMES, Drapers, Union Passage, Birmingham (The Merchant Drapers' Co.). Langford & Marsden, 59, Friday-street, Cheapside, Agents for Sale, Worthington, Shipman, & Seddon, Manchester, Solicitors. Aug. 29.
THOMPSON, JOHN, Clothier, Dover. Sols. Sydney & Son, 46, Finsbury-circus, London. Aug. 29.
WORDSWORTH, EDWARD EGGLESTON, Plumber & Glazier, Scarborough, Yorkshire. Sols. Nowell & Priestley, Barton-on-Humber. Aug. 29.

FRIDAY, Sept. 13, 1861.

BANNISTER, JAMES, Tailor, Bernard-street, Southampton. Sol. Mackey, Southampton. Aug. 14.

COOKE, ALFRED, Tailor, Newport, Isle of Wight. Sol. Ratty, 3, King-street, Cheapside, London. Sept. 6.
KIMBLE, FANNY, Linendraper, Ipswich. Sols. Davidson, Bradbury, & Hardwick, Weaver's-hall, 22, Basinghall-street. Aug. 26.
NORTHLEY, SAMUEL LANG, Wine & Spirit Merchant, Tavistock. Sol. Chilcott, Tavistock. Aug. 28.
ROBINSON, THOMAS, Jeweller, Sheffield. Sol. Saunders, Cherry-street, Birmingham. Aug. 14.
ROTHWELL, JOHN, Bloom-street, Liverpool. Sol. Harris, Sandown-lane, Waverley. Aug. 17.
SINCLAIR, GEORGE, Glass Merchant & Commission Agent, 22, Warwick-street, Pimlico, but now of 28a, Walbrook, London. Sol. Scott, 4, Skinner-street, Snow-hill, London. Aug. 27.
SMITH, DAVID, Tailor, 32, Gresham-street, London. Sols. Fraser & May, 78, Dean-street, Soho. Aug. 30.
WOOD, EDWIN, & HENRY ALDERSON, Cabinet Makers, Host-street, Bristol. Sol. Miller, Bristol. Aug. 22.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Sept. 10, 1861.

BARSTOW, EDMUND, Grocer, Bradford. Com. West: Sept. 23 and Oct. 19, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Dawson, Bradford; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Aug. 27.
CARTER, THOMAS, Builder, Dealer in Boots and Shoes, and Warehouseman, late of 79, Shoreditch, Middlesex, and 9, Bell-yard, Doctors'-commons, London, and now of Windoor-road, Upper Holloway, Middlesex. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 20, at 12.30; and Oct. 22, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Jay & Pilgrim, 14, Bucklersbury, London, and Norwich. Pet. Sept. 5.
CLARKE, FREDERICK, Licensed Victualler, Duke of Cambridge Inn, Devon-road, Bromley, Middlesex. Com. Fonblanque: Sept. 23, at 12; and Oct. 16, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sols. Dal & Longstaffe, 19, Great Portland-street, London. Pet. Aug. 28.
COOMBS, WILLIAM GONNAN, Merchant, St. Peter's-hill, Doctors'-commons, London, and Halifax, Nova Scotia. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 21, at 1; and Oct. 29, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 68, Aldermanbury, London. Pet. Sept. 7.
COOPER, JAMES, Wootton Bridge, Isle of Wight. Com. Goulburn: Sept. 19, at 12.30; and Oct. 21, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Fennell. Sols. Walker & Jerwood, 12, Farnival's-inn, London, and Buckel, Newport, Isle of Wight. Pet. Aug. 22.
DRAKE, JAMES, Builder, 4, Lansdown-place, Upper Norwood, Surrey. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 20 and Oct. 29, at 2.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Howard, Halse, & Trustram, 66, Paternoster-row, London. Pet. Sept. 5.
GRAY, JAMES, Joiner and Builder, Innkeeper, and Licensed Victualler, Leeds. Com. West: Sept. 23 and Oct. 18, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Middleton & Son, Leeds. Pet. Sept. 3.
HAITMANN, EMIL, General Merchant, 24, Martins lane, Cannon-street, London, and 1, Little Love-lane, Wood-street, London, and 8, Bedford-terrace, Upper Holloway, Middlesex. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 21 and Oct. 22, at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Bailey, 8, Tokenhouse-yard, Lothbury, London. Pet. Sept. 6.
MUNDY, DANIEL, Cook and Confectioner, 55, Westbourne-grove, Bayswater, Middlesex. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 23, at 1; and Oct. 22, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Buchanan, 13, Basinghall-street, London. Pet. Sept. 7.
PRINCE, THOMAS, Dealer in Fancy Goods, 35, Beckford-row, Walsworth-road, Surrey. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 24, at 2.30; and Oct. 29, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Buchanan, 13, Basinghall-street, London. Pet. Sept. 9.
SHARPLES, JOSEPH, Soft Soap Manufacturer and Manufacturing Chemist, Ashton Old-road, Ardwick, near Manchester. Com. Jemmett: Sept. 25 and Oct. 25, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Herniman. Sols. G. & R. W. Marsland, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 5.
SKEEP, HENRY, Beer-shop Keeper, Abbey Arms Beer-shop, Abbey Wood, Kent. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 23, at 2.30; and Oct. 22, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Buchanan, 13, Basinghall-street, London. Pet. Sept. 7.
SMITH, JOHN, Manufacturer, Street End, near Failsforth, Manchester. Com. Jemmett: Sept. 26 and Oct. 24, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Herniman. Sols. Cobbett & Wheeler, Manchester. Pet. July 16.
THEOFILIDI, MOURAT, Merchant, Manchester. Com. Jemmett: Sept. 26 and Oct. 24, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sols. Sale, Worthington, Shipman, & Seddon, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 6.

FRIDAY, Sept. 13, 1861.

COOPER, JAMES, Miller, Wootton Bridge, Isle of Wight. Com. Goulburn: Sept. 19, at 12.30; and Oct. 21, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Fennell. Sols. Walker & Jerwood, 12, Farnival's-inn, London; and Buckel, Newport, Isle of Wight. Pet. Aug. 22.
EDBROOKE, ROBERT, Brightsmith and Bellhanger, 14, Orchard-street, Bristol. Com. Hill: Sept. 23 and Oct. 28, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sol. Ayre, Jun., Bristol. Pet. Sept. 10.
GOODWIN, JOSEPH, Earthenware Manufacturer, Tunstall, Staffordshire. Com. Sanders: Sept. 27 and Oct. 25, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sol. Smith, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 9.
HALL, THOMAS, Licensed Victualler, North End, Fulham, Middlesex. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 27, at 2; and Oct. 29, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Edmunds, 1, New-inn, Strand, London. Pet. Sept. 11.
HILLS, JOHN, Baker and Flour Dealer, Faversham, Kent. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 24, at 2; and Oct. 29, at 2.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Lawrence, Mews, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London; or Messrs. Bathurst & Phillips, Faversham, Kent. Pet. Sept. 5.
MEER, JOHN THOMAS, & HENRY MARTIN RADLOFF, Oil Refiners, Chicksand-street, Whitechapel, Middlesex. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 24, at 2.30; and Oct. 18, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Norton, Son, & Elam, 37, Walbrook, London. Pet. Sept. 5.
SOARES, MANOEL JOAQUIM, & AGUSTO SOARES, General and Commission Merchants, 50, Mark-lane, London (M. J. Soares & Sons). Com. Holroyd: Sept. 26, at 1; and Oct. 29, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Van Sandau & Cumming, 13, King-street, Cheapside, London. Pet. Sept. 10.
STINCHCOMBE, THOMAS, Woollen Draper, 37 & 28, Cloth Fair, London (Thos. Stinchcombe & Co.). Com. Holroyd: Sept. 29, at 12; and Oct. 29, at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Ashurst, Son, & Morris, 6, Old Jewry, London. Pet. Sept. 6.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Friday, Sept. 13, 1861.

CHORLEY, WILLIAM Brownsword, Slate & Slab Merchant & Manufacturer of Slate Slabs, 16, Great Ormond-street, and 37, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, Middlesex, and of Cwmorthen, Festiniog, Merionethshire, North Wales. Sept. 12.

HOW, FREDERICK, Butcher, Whitstable, Kent. Sept. 13.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

Tuesday, Sept. 10, 1861.

GEORGE PATRICK ROONEY, Licensed Victualler & Builder, Liverpool. Sept. 20, at 11; Liverpool.—ROBERT CRADOCK DAVIES & JOHN NICHOL TROUGHTON, Bankers, 167, Shoreditch, Middlesex. Oct. 8, at 11; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH APPLETON, Hop Merchant, Three Crown-square, Southwark, Surrey. Oct. 1, at 11; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS BACON, Hotel Keeper, Newmarket, Cambridgeshire. Oct. 2, at 12; Basinghall-street.—STEVENS TAIPF, Money Scrivener, Bill Broker, and Commission Agent, 15, Sergeants'-inn, Fleet-street, and late of 2, Adelaide-place, King William-street, London. Oct. 5, at 11; Basinghall-street.—JOHN JOSEPH, Importer of Foreign Goods, 87 & 88, Houndsditch, London, and 8, Alton-terrace, Albion-road, Dalston, Middlesex. Oct. 2, at 11; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS CLAPHAM, Silversmith and Jeweller, 48, Piccadilly, Middlesex. Oct. 2, at 11; Basinghall-street.—ANGUS JENNINGS & WILLIAM TAYLOR JENNINGS, Ship Stores & Commission Merchants, 14, Little Tower-street, London. Oct. 2, at 12; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE JAMES M'LENNAN & JOHN WILLIAM BIRD, Builders & Contractors, 12, Osnaburgh-street, Regent's-park, Middlesex. Oct. 2, at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—JOHN EVERARD FARR, Carpenter & Builder, Baldock, Hertfordshire. Oct. 2, at 1; Basinghall-street.—LEWIS ROBERT POOLE & SAMUEL BRYAN, Boot & Shoe Manufacturers, 504, New Oxford-street, Middlesex, and Northampton. Oct. 2, at 11; Basinghall-street.—PHILIP RAPHAEL, Wine & Spirit Merchant & Publican, St. James's Tavern, Duke-street, Aldgate, London, and Cigar Dealer & General Merchant, Magdalen-row, Great Prescot-street, Middlesex. Oct. 2, at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—ARCHIBALD ARTHUR COOPER, East India & Commission Merchant, Winchester-house, Old Broad-street, London. Oct. 2, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM JAMES WINDHAM & EDWARD SQUIRE TEBBUTT, Elastic Web Manufacturers, Leicester. Oct. 3, at 11; Nottingham.—JAMES CAUDWELL, Coal and Coke Merchant, Southwell, Nottinghamshire. Oct. 10, at 11; Birmingham.—GEORGE KYNERSTON PALING, Draper, Wolverhampton, Staffordshire. Oct. 25, at 11; Birmingham.—WILLIAM BOWEN, Victualler Swansen. Oct. 3, at 11; Bristol.—JAMES PERROTT, Draper, Cheddar, Somerset. Oct. 3, at 11; Bristol.—JAMES M'MASTER & SAMUEL HAINES, Drapers & Tea Dealers, Abergavenny, Monmouth (M'Master, Haines, & Co.). Oct. 3, at 11; Bristol.—THOMAS WINWOOD, Grocer & Tea Dealer, Neath, Glamorganshire. Oct. 3, at 11; Bristol.—JOHN ACOCK, Builder, Winchcomb-st. Cheltenham. Oct. 3, at 11; Bristol.—THOMAS WILLIAMS, Grocer & Draper, Crickhowell, Brecon. Oct. 4, at 11; Bristol.—THOMAS WATTS, Sail & Ship's Colors Maker, Bristol. Oct. 4, at 11; Bristol.—JOSEPH HARROP & JAMES HARROP, Woollen Manufacturers, Westbury, Wilts. Oct. 4, at 11; Bristol.—EDWIN FOWLER, Draper & Tailor, Bristol, and Pontypool, Monmouth. Oct. 4, at 11; Bristol.—JOHN RODGERA, Draper, Morbyr Tydfil, Glamorgan. Oct. 5, at 11; Bristol.—JOHN HYNDMAN, Beer & Porter Merchant & Licensed Victualler, Dock-street, Newport, Monmouth. Oct. 5, at 11; Bristol.—GEORGE REEVES, JUN., Riding Master, Livery Stable Keeper, & Horse Dealer, Cheltenham. Oct. 5, at 11; Bristol.—THOMAS SAMPSON, Shawl Manufacturer, Ham Mills, Stroud, Gloucester, and William Barnard, Shawl Manufacturer & Woollen Cloth Manufacturer, Highlands, Minchinhampton, and of Stroud (Thomas Sampson & Co.); also separate estate of WILLIAM BARNARD. Oct. 5, at 11; Bristol.—DAVID WILLIAM JAMES, Coal Merchant & Coke Manufacturer, Llynneelyn Colliery, Llanwanno, Glamorgan. Oct. 10, at 11; Bristol.—RICHARD WILSON, Flax Spinner, Leeds, York. Oct. 1, at 11; Leeds.—GEORGE WILSON & JOHN WILSON, Heckmondwike, York. Oct. 1, at 11; Leeds.—JOHN EARNSHAWE & GEO. EARNSHAWE, Dyers, Halifax. Oct. 1, at 11; Leeds.—STEPHEN STORRY SMITHSON, Provision Merchant & Ship Owner, Kingston-upon-Hull. Oct. 2, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull.—ABRAHAM CHAMBERLIN, Butcher & Cattle Dealer, 248, High-street, Exeter, and of Stoke Canon, Devonshire. Oct. 8, at 12; Exeter.—RICHARD PAIRN, Ironmonger, Exeter, and 48 & 49, Western-road, Brighton. Oct. 8, at 12; Exeter.—GEORGE CHANT, Glove Manufacturer, West End, Stoke-sub-Hamden, Somersetshire. Oct. 8, at 12; Exeter.—NOAH MILLER, Builder, Sidmouth, Devonshire. Oct. 8, at 12; Exeter.—FREDERIC EVERY, Scrivener, Bampfylde-street, Exeter, and Aliphington-road, Saint Thomas, Devonshire. Oct. 8, at 12; Exeter.—JOHN FRENCH, Butter & Corn-factor, Martock, Somersetshire. Oct. 8, at 12; Exeter.—JOHN DALY, Inn-keeper & Coal Merchant, Starcross, Kenton, Devonshire. Oct. 8, at 12; Exeter.—EDWARD WILLIAMS, Builder & Joiner, Wrexham, Denbighshire. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—RICHARD FORSHAW, Machine Manufacturer, Liverpool (Richard Forshaw & Co.) Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN M'MILLAN, Licensed Victualler, Liverpool. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—JOSEPH WORSLEY, Draper, Wotton, Cheshire. Sept. 27, at 11; Liverpool.—JAS. GRAHAM, Blue Manufacturer, Liverpool. Oct. 2, at 12; Liverpool.—GEO. SLEDDALL WRIGHT & JOHN WRIGHT, Brewers, Wine and Spirit Merchants, Liverpool (G. & J. Wright). Oct. 2, at 12; Liverpool.—EDWARD BROWN, Brewer, Ditton, near Warrington, Lancashire. Oct. 2, at 11; Liverpool.—HUGH MACKAY & WILLIAM BISHTON DAVIES, Shipwrights, Ship Dealers, Liverpool. Oct. 2, at 12; Liverpool.—HENRY LEMOX, Merchant, Liverpool. Oct. 2, at 12; Liverpool.—WILLIAM THOMAS, Draper, Llanerchynedd, Anglesey. Oct. 2, at 12; Liverpool.—JOHN JONES, Draper, Wrexham, Denbighshire. Oct. 2, at 12; Liverpool.—JOHN MERSON & T. BRECK INGHAM, Glass Manufacturers, St. Helen's, Lancashire (J. Merson & Co.) Oct. 2, at 12; Liverpool.—ED. LYON & JOSEPH GREENWOOD, Builders, Huyton Quarry, Lancashire. Oct. 2, at 11; Liverpool.—HENRY ELIAS MOSS, Merchant, Liverpool. Oct. 2, at 11; Liverpool.—ROBERT CARBUTHERS & GEORGE CARBUTHERS, Drapers, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 12; Liverpool.—WILLIAM FARRELL, Cattle Salesman, Kensington, and of the Cattle Market, West Derby, Lancashire. Oct. 4, at 12; Liverpool.—JOHN WARFORD HUNT, Lamp Manufacturer, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN LANGTON, Ship Owner, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—CHARLES TUNEAU, Tobacconist, 11, Castle-street, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN ROBINSON, Plumber, Painter, & Glazier, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 12; Liverpool.—JOHN PARKER HALL, Broker & Commission Agent, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—THOMAS BARTON, Tanner, Liverpool (Barton & Son). Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.

Friday, Sept. 13, 1861.

PHILIP TURNER MILLER, Linen Draper, Aylesbury. Sept. 24, at 2; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM SMITH & ROBERT WALLS SINCLAIR, Linen Factors, 10, Pancras-lane, London (Smith, Sinclair, & Company.) Oct. 10, at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—ARTHUR DOVVIS KIDD, Straw Hat Manufacturer, 10, Fore-street, and 10, Cripplegate-buildings, London (Archibald Duff). Oct. 9, at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH MANTUA, Jeweller, Cutler, & General Dealer, Market-place, Luton, Bedfordshire. Oct. 9, at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE TODD, Jun., Builder, Ranelagh Works, Cheyne-walk, Chelsea, Middlesex. Oct. 8, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—DANIEL PILDITCH, Builder, Oakley-crescent South, Chelsea, Middlesex. Oct. 7, at 11; Basinghall-street.—CHARLES NICHOLSON, EDWARD PASCALE, & WILLIAM STONE, Warehousemen, Cannon street West, London. Oct. 8, at 12.30; Basinghall-street; same time sep. est. of Charles Nicholson & William Stone.—JAMES COOK & HENRY BICKERTON GREENWOOD, Wine & Spirit Merchants, 44, Mark-lane, London (Cook & Greenwood.) Oct. 8, at 12; Basinghall-street.—EDWARD RUSSELL DAUNT & JOHN WILSON, Bill Brokers, 37, Old Broad street, London (Daunt, Wilson, & Company.) Oct. 7, at 11; Basinghall-street.—ROBERT SPEAR BEGGIE, Merchant, 6, Great Winchester-street, London. Oct. 4, at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH BUSHELL & ALFRED WALKER, Straw Hat Manufacturers, 93, Wood-street, London, and of Harpenden, Hertford. Oct. 7, at 11; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS GERMAIN, Italian Warehouseman, 75, Gracechurch-street, London. Oct. 5, at 12; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM HENRY SMITH, HENRY WILLIAM WITHERS, CHARLES WILLIAM COOK, & GEORGE PARSON, Coal Merchants, Creek Bridge-road, Deptford, Kent (Smith, Withers, & Co.) Oct. 7, at 11; Basinghall-street; joint estate of William Henry Smith; same time sep. est. of William Henry Smith.—JOHN YATES, Mustard Manufacturer & Drysalter, 14, Berry-street, Clerkenwell, Middlesex. Oct. 5, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH BARNETT BEHRENS, Dealer in Pictures, 4, Coventry-street, Haymarket, Middlesex. Oct. 7, at 12; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS FEAGLE DIAMOND, Warehouseman & Commission Agent, Blue Boar-court, Friday-street, London. Oct. 5, at 11; Basinghall-street.—SAMUEL VAGO, commonly known as SAM COLLINS, Licensed Victualler, late of Hyde, Hendon, Middlesex, now of 40, Gower-place, Bedford-square, Middlesex. Oct. 7, at 1; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE ELLIOTT, Blacksmith & Licensed Victualler, West-street, Farnham, Surrey. Oct. 5, at 11; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS CREAMY BARBER, Carrier and Leather Seller, 67, High-street, Gravesend, Kent, Grays, Essex, and Enfield, Middlesex. Oct. 5, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—ISAAC ANTOINE CHOMEL, Jeweller, Watch, & Clock Maker, 4, Saint James's-street, Saint James, Westminster. Oct. 5, at 11; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE DAVIS, Builder, Plumber, & Brass Founder, Southampton. Oct. 7, at 1; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE PEFFANI, Sail Maker & Ship Chandler, 133, Minories, London. Oct. 4, at 2; Basinghall-street.—HENRY JAMES NORFOLK, Builder, Great Yarmouth, Norfolk. Oct. 7, at 1; Basinghall-street.—EDWIN KITT, Publican, Bent Arms, Lindfield, Sussex. Oct. 7, at 12; Basinghall-street.—JOHN GOODALL BRETT, Grocer & Draper, Hornchurch, Essex. Oct. 7, at 12; Basinghall-street.—SAMUEL WESTON MOORE, Lace Manufacturer, Nottingham. Oct. 3, at 11; Nottingham.—GEORGE WILLIAM CAYE, Bleacher, Nottingham. Oct. 10, at 11; Nottingham.—THOMAS SADLER REED, Silk Manufacturer, Derby. Oct. 10, at 11; Nottingham.—TERENCE FITZPATRICK, Newark-upon-Trent, Nottinghamshire, and BERNARD FITZPATRICK, Nottingham, Travelling Drapers. Oct. 10, at 11; Nottingham.—JOSEPH MORRIS, Needle Manufacturer, Astwood Bank, Feckenham, Worcestershire (Joseph Morris & Sons). Oct. 25, at 11; Birmingham.—EDWIN PARKES, Carrier & Leather Seller, Gloucester. Oct. 10, at 11; Bristol.—EDWARD WETHERSTON, Plumber, Cheltenham. Oct. 10, at 11; Bristol.—THOMAS PLUMMER DUNN, Woollen Flock & Waste Dealer, Woodchester, Gloucestershire, and of Maesteg, Glamorganshire, Iron Master & General Shop Keeper. Oct. 10, at 11; Bristol.—WILLIAM CLAYTON, Langcliffe, York, WILLIAM CLAYTON, Lostock, Walton-le-dale, Lancashire, and WILLIAM WILSON, Preston, Lancashire, Bankers. Oct. 10, at 12; Manchester.—THOMAS SAMUEL DALTON, HENRY DALTON, and WILLIAM HEAP, Calico Printers, Manchester (Dalton Brothers). Oct. 9, at 11; Manchester.—CHARLES PENNINGTON, Builder, Timber Dealer and Commission Agent, Manchester, formerly of Salford. Oct. 10, at 12; Manchester.—JAMES DANIELS, Iron Merchant and Commission Agent, Manchester. Oct. 10, at 12; Manchester.—WILLIAM WHITAKER, Merchant, Bradford. Oct. 4, at 11; Leeds.—GEORGE HILL, Grocer & Tea Dealer, South Milford, Yorkshire. Oct. 4, at 11; Leeds.—HENRY BINNING, & GEORGE DOWSON, Ship Owners, Middlesborough, Yorkshire. Oct. 4, at 11; Leeds.—JAMES BOOTH, JUN., Worsted Manufacturer, Bramley, Yorkshire (J. & J. Booth). Oct. 4, at 11; Leeds.—JOHN SMITH, Stuff Manufacturer, Bradford. Oct. 4, at 11; Leeds.—THOMAS PARKINSON, Stock and Share Broker, Halifax. Oct. 4, at 11; Leeds.—EDWARD PARKIN, sen., File Manufacturer, Sheffield. Oct. 5, at 10; Leeds.—WILLIAM MARTIN, ALFRED PHILLIPS YOULE, and WILLIAM RICHARDSON ROEBUCK, Iron Manufacturers, Doncaster. Oct. 5, at 10; Leeds.—JAMES MARK MARTIN, Ironmonger, Brazier, & Gasfitter, Chesterfield. Oct. 5, at 10; Sheffield.—GEORGE HARTLEY, Common Brewer, Sheffield. Oct. 5, at 10; Sheffield.—JOHN PARKIN and EDWIN PARKIN, Iron-forgers, Oughty Bridge, Sheffield (John Parkin and Brothers). Oct. 5, at 10; Sheffield.—DAVID SILLAR & JOHN CHARLES SILLAR, Merchants, Liverpool, and of Shanghai, China. Oct. 3, at 11; Liverpool.—THOMAS BLADES WALDEN, Silk Mercer and Draper, Liverpool. Oct. 3, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN MERSON and THOMAS BRECK INGHAM, Glass Manufacturers, St. Helen's, Lancashire (Merson & Co.). Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—ROBERT HELSBY & JOSEPH HELSBY, Builders, Garston, Childwall, Lancashire, and of Warrington (Robert and Joseph Helsby). Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN CUBBON, Joiner and Builder, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—EDWARD LANDSAY BAKER, Ship Broker & Commission Agent, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—THOMAS FLEMING, Merchant and Commission Agent, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—ROBERT MORROW, JOHN MORROW, & CLARESON GARBUTT, Merchants & Commission Agents, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—HENRY CLAPHAM, Woollen Draper, Liverpool. Oct. 4, at 11; Liverpool.—HUGH MATHESON, Merchant, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 11; Liverpool.—ROBERT WADEBY KIRKUS, Chemist & Druggist, Walton-on-the-Hill, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN SCOTT, JUN., & RICHARD WOODWARD POWELL, Tea Merchants, Liverpool (Scott, Powell, and Company); also separate estate of each. Oct. 7, at 11; Liverpool.—JOSEPH EDWARD BELCH, Ship Broker, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 11; Liverpool.—THOS. HINDLE, Builder, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 11; Liverpool.

AN INDISPUTABLE LIFE POLICY IS ALTOGETHER DIFFERENT FROM AN ORDINARY LIFE POLICY.

It is different in meaning, construction, and effect, being really a LIFE-DEBENTURE, as shown by the Opinions of the Attorney-General, and the Lord Advocate of Scotland, copies of which, and Prospectuses, forwarded to applicants.

INDISPUTABLE LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF SCOTLAND.

EDINBURGH—13, QUEEN STREET.

ALEX. ROBERTSON, Esq., Manager.

LONDON—54, CHANCERY LANE.

JAS. BENNETT, F.S.S., Resident Secretary.

AGENTS WANTED in Places where the Company is not already represented.

Recently published, in 8vo., price 15s., cloth.

BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT, LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited).

17, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.

Capital, £200,000, in 20,000 shares of £10 each. £3 per share paid.

CHAIRMAN.

METCALF HOPGOOD, Esq., Bishopsgate-street.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. PATTESON & COBOLD, 3, Bedford-row.

MANAGERS.

CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Esq., 17, New Bridge-street.

INVESTMENTS.—The present rate of interest on money deposited with the Company for fixed periods, or subject to an agreed notice of withdrawal, is 5 per cent.

LOANS.—Advances are made, in sums from £50 to £1,000, upon approved personal and other security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over any period not exceeding 10 years.

Applications for the new issue of Shares may be made to the Secretary, of whom Prospectuses, the last Annual Report, and every information can be obtained.

JOSEPH K. JACKSON, Secretary.

ROMNEY MARSH, KENT.

An Eligible Freehold Estate, consisting of 313a. 3r. 13p. of Valuable Land.

TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, in One Lot, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the causes of "Jane Holman and Others v. Thomas Holman and Others," and of "Thomas Holman v. Ann Holman and Others," and of "H. H. Sweetnam and Others v. Ann Holman and Others," with the approbation of the Right Honourable the Master of the Rolls, the Judge to whom these causes are attached, by Mr. JOSEPH TOOTELL (the person appointed for that purpose), at the AUCTION MART, LONDON, on WEDNESDAY, the 18th day of SEPTEMBER, 1861, at TWELVE for ONE O'CLOCK precisely, an eligible FREEHOLD ESTATE, known as "Gammon's Farm," consisting of 313a. 3r. 13p. of valuable land, 217 acres of which are exceedingly productive arable land, and the remaining 96 acres are sound fattening land, together with a good farm dwelling house, and all the requisite agricultural buildings well arranged, well placed, and in good repair. This valuable property is situated in the parishes of New Church and Eastbridge, in the County of Kent, four miles distant from New Romney, ten miles from Ashford, and seven miles from Hythe. The estate is held on lease by Messrs. Matthew and Thomas William Butler (highly respectable tenants), for a term of twenty-one years from the 11th October, 1853.

The property may be viewed on application to the tenants. Particulars may be obtained on application to Messrs. BROCKMAN & HARRISON, Solicitors, Folkestone; to Messrs. TALBOT, TALBOT, and TASKER, Solicitors, 47, Bedford-row; to Messrs. HUSCHOFF, COX, and BOMPAS, Solicitors, 19, Coleman-street; to Messrs. FLUX and ARGLES, Solicitors, 68, Cheapside; and to Mr. JOHN MURRAY, Solicitor, 7, Whitehall-place, London; also at the Auction Mart, London; at the Royal Fountain Hotel, Canterbury; at the Shakespeare Hotel, Dover; at the Albion Hotel, Hastings; at the New Inn, New Romney; at the Swan Hotel, Hythe; at the Saracen's Head Inn, Ashford; and of Mr. TOOTELL, Land Agent and Valuer, Maidstone.

COAL.—GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—COAL DEPARTMENT.—The SILKSTONE and ELSECAR COAL-OWNERS' COMPANY delivered their Coal, under specified, to the consumer direct from their own pits; and this Company have supplied from their collieries fully three-fourths of the late customers of the Great Northern Railway Company. Present prices:—

R. C. Clarke's best old Silkstone, screened	21s. per Ton.
Wharfedale's best Silkstone	ditto 22s. "
Ditto Paley ditto	ditto 20s. "
Newton, Chambers & Co.'s ditto	ditto 22s. "
Ditto, ditto Park Gate or Brazil	ditto 19s. "
Ditto, No. 2	ditto 18s. "
Ditto, thin seam ditto	ditto 20s. "
Elsecar House	ditto 18s. 6d. "
Wombwell Main ditto	ditto 20s. "

Delivered within five miles of depot.

Deliveries at Hampstead, Highgate, and Finchley, 1s. per ton extra. — Apply to, and to be obtained ONLY of the SILKSTONE and ELSECAR COAL OWNERS' COMPANY, Great Northern Railway, King's-cross, and Holloway.

Sole Agent, JAMES J. MILLER.

*. Customers are particularly requested to specify the description of coal required; and to notice the recent CHANGE of AGENCY, in the appointment of Mr. JAMES J. MILLER in the place of Mr. HERBERT CLARKE.

WINES for the NOBILITY and GENTRY.
WINES for the ARMY and NAVY.
WINES for the CLERICAL, LEGAL, and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS.
WINES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.
PURE and UNADULTERATED GRAPE WINES from the SOUTH of FRANCE.
VENDED by the PROPRIETORS of the VINEYARDS.

THE FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION have taken extensive cellarage at the West-end of London, for the purpose of introducing FRENCH WINES only to the British public at FAVORABLE PRICES; and the members of that Association being proprietors of the most esteemed growths in France, the Nobility, Gentry, and Families patronising such Wines, will become assured of their genuineness.

THE EMPRESS PORT, 20s. per dozen. Sent free, bottles included, to any British Railway Station, on receipt of an Order on Charing-cross Post-office for 22s. 6d., payable to A. Rophe, Director.

THIS EMPRESS PORT, is pure grape, of first-class quality, and delicious taste; the very for Wine family consumption.

CHAMPAGNE, equal to Moët's, 42s.

SPARKLING BURGUNDY

("The Glorious Bumper") at 42s. per dozen.

Pure CLARETS from 16s. to 84s. per dozen.

Tariffs of other Wines sent post free.

Cheques requested to be crossed "London and Westminster Bank."

FRENCH VINEYARD ASSOCIATION,
32, REGENT CIRCUS, PICCADILLY, LONDON, 1861.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO GUINEA BIN.

OCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS sent carriage free, on receipt of post-office order, to any part of the United Kingdom. The extraordinary power of this instrument renders it adapted to answer the combined purposes of telescope and opera glass. It will define objects distinctly at ten miles distance; is suitable for the theatre, race-course, sportsmen, tourists, and general out-door observations. Only to be obtained of KEYZOR and BENDON (successors to Harris and Son), Opticians, 50, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Illustrated Price List of Optical and Mathematical Instruments free, on receipt of two stamps.

MODELS of SHIPS or BOATS made to Scale or

Order. Blocks, deadeyes, anchors, cannon, flags, figure-heads, &c. and every article used in fitting up models of ships, cutter and schooner yachts, screw and paddle boats. Models cleaned and repaired. Models of any description made for evidence in actions at law. Ensigns, burgees, and signal flags made to order.

W. STEPHENS, the Model Dockyard, No. 23, Trinity-square, Tower-hill, near Barking Churchyard, E.C.

ALBION SNELL, Watchmaker and Jeweller, has removed to his New Premises, 114, High Holborn, seven doors east of King-street, where he respectfully solicits an inspection of his new and well-selected stock.

THOSE WHO ARE ABOUT TO FURNISH

should visit G. I. THOMPSON'S extensive stock of Furnishing Ironmongery, Electro-Silver Plate, Fenders, Fire-Irons, Japan and Paper Maché Trays, Baths, Toilette Furniture, Gas Chandeliers, Moderator Lamps. All articles marked in plain figures.

THOMPSON'S Electro Silver Spoons, 36s.; Forks, 34s. dozen.

THOMPSON'S Ivory Balance Table Knives, 16s., 22s., 28s. dozen.

25, FINSBURY-PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to Railway Stations. Send for a Furnishing List.

IMPORTER OF PURE COLZA OIL.

PICTURE FRAMES.—Cheap and Good Gilt Frames

for Oil Paintings 24 by 24, 4 inches wide, 20s. Ornamental Frames for Drawings, 14 by 10, 4 s. each. The Art Union Prints, framed in a superior style, at the lowest prices. Neat gilt frames, for the illustrated Portraits, 1s. 6d. each. Gilt Room Bordering at 4s. per yard. Oil paintings cleaned, lined, and restored; old frames re-gilt equal to new. The trade and country dealers supplied with gilt and fancy wood mouldings, print, &c. German Prints 5s. per dozen. Neat Gilt Frames, 17 by 13, with glass complete, 1s. 6d. each. CHARLES REES, Carver, Gilder, Mount Maker, and Print Seller, 35, Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER

AND CORK FLOORCLOTH. Warm, noiseless, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

F. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Walbrook, London, E.C.

Manufactory—South London Works, Lambeth.

TRELOAR'S CORK FLOOR CLOTH, or KAMPTULICON, COCOA-NUT MATTING, and DOOR MATS. Best quality and moderate prices.

T. TRELOAR, Manufacturer, 42, Ludgate-hill, London.

TO SUFFERERS.—YOUNG'S FLEXIBLE CORN

and BUNION PLASTERS. The best remedy for those who suffer from Corns and Bunions. Price 6d. and 1s. per box. Ask for Young's White Felt.

H. YOUNG, 31, Shaftesbury-place, Aldersgate-street, E.C., and all chymists.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

 * Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.*

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 21, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

We alluded last week to a rumour prevalent in Bristol to the effect that Mr. Inskip, who is the housekeeper and usher of the local Court of Bankruptcy there, was about to be appointed to the office of Assistant-Registrar of that Court. We are now authorised to state that there exists no intention of appointing Mr. Inskip to this office. If any recommendation in favour of such an appointment has been made, it has not prevailed; and if any intention of carrying it out has at any time been entertained, it is now abandoned. We congratulate our readers and the profession, especially our correspondent from Bristol, whose timely remonstrance on this subject appeared in our impression of last week, in being able to make this announcement.

Another vacation grievance is complained of, arising in this instance in the Common Law Taxing Offices. A correspondent points out that out of the fifteen masters, one only remains in London to transact business for all the courts. He sits for three hours a-day, on four days in the week only; and as a general rule, refuses to transact any but "vacation" business. This consists mainly, we believe, of "short bills," that is to say, bills of costs in actions after judgment by default, or where the amount is under £20. The master will also tax in all cases of pressing importance, such as impending executions, where serious loss would arise from delay; and, as a matter of course, in all cases where specially directed by the Court to do so. Any bills, other than the above, are taken only as a matter of courtesy, in case the master happens to be at leisure, and with respect to them he refuses to make any appointment. Such, at least, is the representation which has been made to us, and we should be glad to be furnished with the experience of practitioners on the subject if our impression is erroneous. The only question, therefore, seems to be, whether the case complained of falls within either of the classes above described; if not, it is by no means clear how a failure to obtain a matter of indulgence can be fairly considered as a grievance. It is manifest that to alter the whole practice of the taxing offices, and to throw them open during the autumn for the transaction of all business, would be tantamount to doing away with the vacation altogether; and if it were incumbent on the masters to proceed with taxation, on the application of any one who may present himself, we should have a system of preference introduced, depending on the priority of application in each case. If it should be thought desirable to enlarge the class of vacation business, we can suppose an arrangement easily made whereby one master should attend in rotation for each court. But at present it is not alleged that all the so-called regular vacation business cannot be discharged by one master. As to the enjoyment of a vacation, that is a right so highly prized that nothing but the most clearly established necessity will warrant an invasion of the privilege. This, indeed, is felt by our correspondent. The only difficulty is how to admit the claim upon the master's time of one applicant, unless his case is one of those above enumerated, without letting in the claims of all others at the same time.

It seems absolutely necessary that a distinction should be made between vacation and other business in the taxing offices as in other branches of the Court; but it is highly desirable that a clear and liberal rule, when once made, should be strictly adhered to, otherwise an infringement which is granted as a favour, may come to be looked upon as a matter of right.

The annual report of the Council of the Law Society, which will be found in another part of our impression, will be read with much interest, offering, as it does, the latest observations and reflections of a number of specially qualified professional men on subjects which, either externally or internally, affect the whole body. Not only does the practical working of new statutes which affect the profession fall immediately under the observation of these gentlemen, but their attention is also ex officio directed to proposals for the amendment of the law, and to the more silent changes which are continually taking place within the ranks of the profession itself. It is gratifying to observe that, in regard to the last particular, their report is encouraging and satisfactory. They point to signs of manifest improvement both in the status and influence of the body whose interests they guard over and represent.

A review of the new Act relating to attorneys is rendered incumbent upon the Council, from the circumstance that its provisions are not always observed. Even to lawyers, it seems, and especially to young lawyers, repeated notice is required of the obligations laid upon them by statute, as to registering articles of clerkship, registering commissions, the production of the certificate of duty having been paid, and the prohibition of article clerks from holding other offices. With great justice the Council point to the success of their efforts in establishing a general test examination, both before entering into articles and during articles, a measure which will be fraught with the greatest advantages both to the profession and the public, whilst it must very considerably affect the pursuits and course of study of a large majority of article clerks. They will have now, before their final legal examination, to undergo a matriculation examination and a "little go" in general subjects, as prescribed by the rules of the 26th of July last. Some useful suggestions as to the best mode of providing facilities of study for article clerks in the country will be found in our correspondence of this week.

Inquiries have in some instances been prosecuted by the Council as to the operation of the new Inland Revenue Act upon certain matters of taxation connected with the profession. Two points have been ruled which deserve notice; one that attorneys and solicitors who may transact the class of business usually managed in London by house agents, such as the letting and receiving the rent of houses, are not, on that account, to be charged under the Act with additional duty. Another is that no stamp duty attaches to a written authority from a vendor to a purchaser to pay the purchase-money to the vendor's solicitor.

The Treasury minute of the 16th of March last, empowering district registrars to prepare affidavits and other documents for parties who are unassisted with other professional advice, is commented upon by the Council in terms of just reprobation, as being dangerous to the public and needlessly injurious to the regular practitioner. On this subject our own opinion has already been expressed on precisely similar grounds. We are further informed that the practice which had crept in of surrogates acting as proctors' agents was first checked at the suggestion of the Council and is now put an end to.

Cases of invasion and encroachment upon solicitors' practice are again alluded to, and the imperfect nature of the remedy is pointed out. The council say they are unauthorised to sue unqualified persons for penalties for acting in matters of this kind; such prosecutions can be instituted only in the name of the Attorney-General by the Solicitor of Inland Revenue. The Council instruct their own secretary to assist the Solicitor in investigating these cases; but a clear statement of the evidence in each case is required, and no penalties can be recovered after the lapse of two years. Under the head of malpractice we have a summary of the various cases which have arisen in the course of the year, in which frauds and irregularities have been punished and checked at the instance of the Council.

With a few firm and temperate remarks the Council dismiss the question of "privilege of Counsel" which arose between them and Mr. Huddleston in November last. The rest of the report is devoted to the internal affairs of the society. At this period of comparative leisure a retrospect of the past year comes with peculiar advantage. By demonstrating the exact position of the profession in all quarters where changes have been made or are expected, it provides security for the present and the best foundation for wise improvement in the future.

THE LANDED ESTATES COURT—TRANSFER OF TITLE IN LAND.

No. II.

The gist of the statute 21 & 22 Vict. c. 72, which has established the Landed Estates Court as at present constituted, is contained in the sixty-first section of that Act. By that clause every conveyance executed as therein mentioned by any judge of the court, and purporting to pass an estate in fee, is rendered effectual to pass such estate, subject to such charges, tenancies, rights of common, easements, and leases, as may be expressed therein, but discharged from all other estates and incumbrances; and every conveyance of a lease, rent-charge, annuity, or partial estate, is rendered effectual to pass the estate designated in the instrument, subject, as to a lease, to the rent and covenants annexed to the reversion; and, as to rent-charges, annuities, &c., to such tenancies, rights, and easements as are expressed in the instrument; but freed from all other rights, titles, charges, and incumbrances. Conveyances are made, subject to rent-charges in lieu of tithes, crown rents, quit rents, and drainage charges under the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 89, and 10 & 11 Vict. c. 32. Commons and easements were inconsistently excepted out of the original Act. In the case of Rorke v. Errington (7 Ho. of Lds. Cas. 617), the effect of the Act was sought to be entirely evaded. In that case A.'s estate, upon which B. had a lease, had been sold by the Incumbered Estates Court. A paper, called "a rental," was, under the 23rd section of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 77, issued by the Commissioners for the purpose of informing everybody as to what was to be sold. This document recognised the existence and validity of B.'s lease, and proper notices in conformity with that rental were given to the tenants. C. became the purchaser of part of the land, and in the conveyance made to him by the commissioners under the 27th section of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 77, there was introduced a mistaken description, accompanied by a map, which was also erroneously drawn, of the land purported to be conveyed. The description and map described the land which was held by B. under his lease. In ejectment by C. against B. the House of Lords held, on appeal, reversing the decision of the Irish Court of Exchequer Chamber, that evidence to impeach the conveyance executed by the commissioners had been improperly admitted; that the question founded upon that evidence was improperly submitted to the jury; and that, under the 27th section of the Act last mentioned, the land must be conclusively deemed to have passed by the conveyance, subject only to the leases "expressed therein." The House of Lords also held that the 49th section of the same Act rendered the conveyance conclusive evidence that all necessary acts had been duly performed, and that all requisite consents had been given. The ground of this appeal was the want of jurisdiction in the commissioners to sell an unincumbered portion of an estate, the other parts of which were incumbered. We may observe that such a question could not arise under the present Act: nor can it be raised in any case under the West India Incumbered Estates Act, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 117, inasmuch as the 38th section of that Act provides that "no conveyance made by the commissioners shall be set aside on the ground of their not having had jurisdiction over the subject matter thereof." A point very similar to that raised in Rorke v. Errington, strange to say, had become the subject of judicial decision in two Irish cases relating to the decisions of trustees of forfeited estates. These trustees had been invested with arbitrary powers under a commission consequent on the Irish Rebellion of 1688, and possessed a Parliamentary jurisdiction in Ireland similar to that at present enjoyed by the Landed Estates Court. The decision of these trustees was held, in the case of Ellis v. Segrate (5 Bro. P. C. 478), to be final. The case of Annesley v. Dixon (Holt 372, 377; 7 Bro. P. C. 213, Toml. ed.), on the other hand, decided that these trustees could not give themselves jurisdiction by declaring an estate forfeited. The judges, upon questions submitted to them by the House of Lords in Rorke v. Errington, were unanimous in the opinion that the conveyance of the commissioners passed the estate discharged of B.'s lease, and the House ruled accordingly. When arguments are advanced in favour of the exceptional jurisdiction of this Court, founded upon the absence of complaints and mistakes (as has been recently done by the Irish Solicitor-General at the meeting of the Social Science Association, at Dublin), it should not be forgotten that the case of Rorke v. Errington is one which has actually occurred; that the court was then in the probationary stage of its existence, and is not likely to be more vigilant now when endued with permanent authority than it was then; and that such mistakes being irremediable, are not to be lightly discussed as of infrequent occurrence and unimportant in results.

Our readers are familiar with the mode in which the Statute of Uses was evaded by the Court of Chancery. That statute was somewhat similar in principle to the Acts under which the Irish Landed Estates Court has been established. By the first-mentioned statute the corporal seisin of the land is transferred, by the magic of an Act of Parliament, from the legal owner to the cestui que trust; by the latter series of enactments both the legal and the beneficial interests in the land are transferred to the purchaser in despite of all other claims and titles, save such as are excepted by the instrument of conveyance itself or by statute. The Court of Chancery, in interpreting the Statute of Uses, was more modest in its pretensions than the Irish Court of Exchequer Chamber has been, as regards the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 77; for equity at no period sought wholly to avoid the Statute of Uses, whereas the decision of the Irish Court of Queen's Bench in Errington v. Rorke (6 Ir. Com. Law Cas. 279), tended completely to neutralise the Incumbered Estates Court Act. The current of public opinion or social exigencies of the day may possibly in time to come influence our courts in deciding upon the construction to be placed upon Acts of the Legislature. But, when a statute has been passed in harmony with the requirements of the period in which it is promulgated, if courts of law were to show themselves astute in depriving it of its force, to whatever arbitrary or moral results the application of that force may lead, the Legislature would be likely in such a contingency to re-assert itself by means of ex post facto legislation. And this, we believe, was actually contemplated regarding the Landed Estates Court, if the House of Lords had not reversed the decision in Errington v. Rorke. It is eminently desirable, therefore, that attention should be timely directed to the nature of the Bills with which we are threatened, before Parliament shall have committed itself to the adoption of principles contrary to received maxims of law and justice, which, if once established, would in all probability be propped up, if necessary, by supplemental legislation.

The present Act possesses a great advantage over its predecessor as regards the efficaciousness of the method which it has adopted to realise the views of its authors. The first Act applied only to estates that were incumbered. Accordingly, as was ascertained by the commission of inquiry which investigated the working of the Court in 1855, owners actually created charges upon their estates for the purpose of giving the Court jurisdiction to sell. There is no doubt that the principle of the Act applies in the nature of things equally to unincumbered as to incumbered estates. The Act is considered to have worked well in Ireland. The prosperity of that country, however, since 1850 is by no means attributable to the Court; nor, indeed, could that prosperity have flowed from any effort of the Legislature. The price of agricultural produce has risen since 1859 almost progressively. This has been partly owing to the outbreak of the Russian war, and partly to the influx of gold from Australia and California. Lessees at a fixed pecuniary rent have been thus better able to meet the claims of the landlords than if the prices of agricultural produce had been either falling or stationary. We do not think that the throwing of immense quantities of land suddenly into the market, which the Incumbered Estates Court effected, could have served any useful purpose whatsoever. The price of land, like that of every other commodity, depends on demand and supply; and there cannot be a forced increase of the quantity in the market without a fall of price. Land, accordingly, in Ireland, in 1849 and 1850, used to fetch a purchase-money not greater than the value of a few years rent. The persons who suffered most from this effect of the Court on the value of landed property were generally pious incumbrancers. The properties sold were in many cases incumbered to their full normal value. When the price of land fell, as it did in 1849, the creditors of the owner lowest down on the list got nothing, while such of his immediate relatives as had family charges either bought in the estate in order to keep it in the family, getting credit for their charges in the purchase-money, or were, at all events, as a general rule, paid off in full. Incumbrancers who had lent their money when the price of land was high were thus the chief sufferers from the operation of the Act. Besides, the peculiar condition of Ireland in 1849, which seemed to call for a change in the tenure of land as likely to obviate the periodic recurrence of agricultural distress, the state of the law in that country facilitated the working of the Incumbered Estates Court Act. Since the reign of Queen Anne, a general system of registration as regards land has prevailed in Ireland. Searches for title and incumbrances were thus narrowed to the limits of the register. The Incumbered Estates Commissioners admitted the claims of unregistered owners and incumbrancers, if these appeared in the proceedings. If they did not so appear, the conveyance executed by the commissioners barred them for ever. But a conveyance by the owner to a purchaser who registered the instrument would have equally barred them, unless the purchaser had notice of their claims. The existence of a registry system in Ireland, therefore, facilitated the working of the Court in a two-fold manner. It enabled the Court to see the charges which alone were indefeasible, and it also enabled it to grant a conveyance without doing greater injury to any claimant than the owner could have done if he were so disposed. The condition of Ireland, therefore, in 1849, both in law and in fact, precludes the advocates of a parliamentary title system from citing the success of such a judicature in Ireland as a precedent that equally recommends itself to our own adoption.

Recent Decisions.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENT—STATUTE OF 13 ELIZ. C. 5.

Thompson v. Webster, 9 W. R. 641.

Amongst the very few cases which in recent times have come before the courts where the deed of gift was made for no legal consideration either valuable or good, and was the mere act of bounty of the settlor, is to be noticed Re Magawley's Trust (1851) 5 De G. & Sm. 1. In that case E., being indebted to A. in a sum of £100, and also to B. and P., in October, 1837, assigned a life policy to A. to secure the £100 and interest. A. acknowledged receipt of the policy, and said he held the balance of the proceeds in trust for M. E. also wrote a letter, in which he stated he had made this arrangement "in order to secure M. from harm," &c., this being "the only way he could legally do so." On the 30th of December, 1837, E. died intestate and insolvent, his personal estate being only £95. B. and P., whose debts amounted to £130, thereupon said they had advanced their money on the faith of the representation that E. had effected the policy for the benefit of his creditors generally. The fund was invested by A., and accumulated until the year 1850. Then, B. and P., having brought a creditor's suit, an administration decree was made, the trust in favour of M. was declared void as against B. and P., but M. was held to be entitled to the residue. Notwithstanding the indebtedness of the settlor, and the want of any consideration, the assignment and letter were held to be a good declaration of trust in favour of M.

The class of deeds executed for good consideration, such as natural love and affection, has already been noticed (ante p. 726). It was shown that at first they were considered either as void—Townshend v. Windham (1750), 2 Vea. sen. 10; or as prima facie evidence of fraud—Russell v. Hammond (1738), 1 Atk. 15; Holloway v. Millard (1816), 1 Madd. 414. Neither the one nor the other of these doctrines has been advanced of late years. A good illustration of the modern view of the operation of the statute upon a voluntary conveyance for meritorious consideration is to be found in Jackson v. Bewley (1841), Carr. & M. 97, in the Court of Common Pleas. L. had executed a deed of gift to his niece in consideration of natural love and affection. Mr. Justice Erskine said, "L. had a right to assign his property, but the law says it is void against creditors, if done fraudulently." The plaintiffs attempt to prove that it was so done by showing that at the time of the conveyance he was indebted in two sums of £20 and £19; and that, when the property in question was removed from the whole property which he had, there was not enough left to pay these two sums amounting to £39. The question is, what is meant by insolvency? If by the act of assignment the party makes himself insolvent—that is, if the property left after the conveyance is not enough to pay his debts—that is insolvency sufficient for the purposes of the plaintiffs in this action (assumpsit against an executor.) But inasmuch as there is no evidence (or plea of pleni administravit) that he owed more than £39, and as his property realised a sum so near the amount expended, even if that expense were all fair, it is still a question for you (the jury) whether the transfers above spoken of were fraudulent."

We finally come to that class of cases, of which Thompson v. Webster is an example, in which the consideration or alleged consideration for the deed was a family arrangement, or a transaction partaking or affecting to partake of that character—as a post-nuptial settlement, or a deed founded on past cohabitation. Of these Nunn v. Wilmore (1800), 8 T. R. 521, is an instance. "If this deed," said Lord Kenyon, "were either actually fraudulent or voluntary, from which the law infers fraud, then the conveyance insisted upon by the plaintiffs would follow, and the defendant would be obliged to repay this money. But that it was not fraudulent in fact is perfectly clear, nor do I think it was voluntary. Consider what was the condition of the parties. The husband and wife living together on bad terms: the former squandering away the property, and ill-treating the wife. In order to prevent his ill-using her in future, to prevent her instituting a suit in the Spiritual Court, and to put an end to all differences, and in consideration of £200 advanced by one of the trustees, this deed was executed. I do not see why the £200 was not a consideration. In deciding questions of this kind the Courts have always disavowed inquiring whether or not the consideration be equivalent. They will not weigh it in very nice scales if it be an honest transaction." This case establishes the principle that a family arrangement will give a value in point of consideration to a deed, of which the Courts will not attempt to estimate the pecuniary equivalent. In Perse v. Perse (1840), 7 Cl. & Finn. 279, Lord Cottenham, C., observed, "By what scale of money consideration are these objects (securing the re-union of a lunatic's estate to the family property) to be estimated? The impossibility of estimating them has led to the exemption of family arrangements from the rules which affect others. The consideration in this and in other such cases is compounded partly of value and partly of love and affection." In another instance, where the consideration for the deed was the marriage of the settlor's son, it was upheld against creditors. M., a banker, being indebted in bond to the trustees of his son's marriage settlement, and also to other persons, on 1st July, 1831, assigned a house in the Regent's Park and a bond debt as a security to the trustees. On the 2nd January, 1832, he stopped payment, and a fiat in bankruptcy was obtained on the 26th. A jury found that the assignment was not made by way of fraudulent preference Belcher v. Prittie, (1834), 10 Bing. 408; and it was also supported in equity, Bannatyne v. Leader (1841), 10 Sim. 350. It was laid down in Parker v. Carter (1844), 4 Hare 409, that the mutual concurrence of husband and wife in the buying of a piece of land in which they are jointly interested, and in a declaration for the benefit of the issue, is a valuable consideration to support a deed as against creditors. Past cohabitation was treated as sufficient consideration to support a settlement in Skarf v. Soulbly (1849), 1 Mac. & G. 364. *J. M., a married man, living separate from his wife, by deed, in December, 1842, which recited past cohabitation with Eliza Q. and the birth of children, settled on her and the children an annuity of £250, and two policies of assurance. He died in May, 1846, and in a creditor's suit, to which the executors answered that the estate was insufficient, a supplemental bill was filed against Eliza Q. and the children. Lord Cottenham, C., in the absence of evidence as to the testator's insolvency at the time of the settlement, said that the plaintiffs might take any benefit which would accrue to them from the fact of the settlor being indebted to others, but that "indebted" could not be considered as meaning only that he owed some debt; and directed inquiries as to his debts at the time, and the value of the settled property. Heap v. Tonge (1851), 9 Hare 90, is the case of a deed being supported, which was entered into between the members of a family for conveying the property of an intestate according to the terms of an agreement entered into between them.*

The following, on the other hand, are three instances where deeds purporting to have been made for the benefit of the wife or relatives of the settlor have been pronounced by the court to be a fraud upon creditors. In the first, a settlor being in embarrassed circumstances, executed a deed for an alleged valuable consideration, which, on investigation, turned out to be in part merely meritorious. The trusts of the deed were mainly in favour of an illegitimate infant daughter. There was a special agreement between the settlor and his mother, to whom, according to the recitals, the settlor was indebted, that provision should be made for the illegitimate daughter. This agreement was not recited in the deed. An annuity, also, which the deed affected to assign to the mother, was continued to be received by the settlor himself. Sir John Stuart, V.C., observed—"Courts of equity have gone very far to maintain family settlements. A deed made between the members of a family, founded on no better consideration than the compromise of a doubtful right, may be upheld on this principle. In this case, if there had been no circumstances of suspicion—no contravention of higher rights—upon the claim of a parent (the mother) who had made large pecuniary advances in favour of a child—advances which had, perhaps, at first, formed the obligation of a debt—the Court might, perhaps, even after lapse of time, have considered the assertion or the existence of such a right a sufficient consideration to support a deed purporting to be a family settlement. But where the rights of existing creditors are directly interfered with, a more severe rule must be applied. And in such circumstances of suspicion as occur here, from the embarrassed circumstances of the grantor, the pressure of creditors, and the appearance of a voluntary arrangement originating in the necessity and fear induced by this pressure, the case is carried beyond the principle which supports a deed as a mere family arrangement, and not on actual valuable consideration;" Penhall v. Elwin (1853), 1 Sm. & Giff. 258.

In the second, Mr. R., a debtor, was seised in fee of the reversion of one-third of a manor. Being married, he executed a settlement of his property, purporting to be in consideration of £500 paid by his wife's father. The settlement contained a power to the father, the husband, and the wife jointly to concur in a sale of the property. In January, 1845, they effected a sale to the tenant for life for a sum of £4,300. The money was invested, and in May, 1846, a deed was executed declaring the trusts of the stock, which corresponded with the trusts of the settlement of January, 1845. The plaintiff obtained judgment on his debt about the same date; and there were other creditors. The evidence showed that the payment of the £500 was illusory. The Lord Chancellor (Cranworth) held the sale in January, 1845, to have been a valid sale; but that the settlement of May, 1846, was voluntary, and that the transaction was a fraudulent contrivance to defeat execution on the judgment just before Mr. R., the debtor, went abroad. The deed of May, 1846, was set aside; Goldsmith v. Russell (1855), 5 Do G. M. & G. 547.

In the third, a trader, who was in insolvent circumstances, agreed to sell his business and stock in consideration of a money payment, and that the purchaser should, during the joint lives of the trader and his wife, pay to the former an annuity equal to one-fourth of the profits, and a contingent annuity to the wife, if she survived, of one-sixth of the profits. The trader died, and in a creditors' suit the annuity reserved to the wife was held void. The Lord Chancellor (Cranworth) said, "I think the case is clearly within the statute. A person may, though indebted, withdraw some portion of his property, provided there remains enough for the satisfaction of his creditors; but that must be made out. If the effect is to withdraw any portion of the property, so that there does not remain sufficient to enable creditors to pay themselves, that is, in my opinion, clearly within the statute;" French v. French (1855), 6 Do G. M. & G. 95. In Jenkyn v. Vaughan (1856), 3 Drew. 419, where a post-nuptial settlement was made by a person largely indebted at the time, and it was not clear whether the then existing debts were paid off or not, though it was certain the plaintiff's debt did not accrue till afterwards, Sir R. Kindersley, V. C., after remarking that there was little or no authority to decide whether a deed could be set aside at the suit of a subsequent creditor (see ante, p. 727), directed inquiries as to the settlor's solvency at the time, as was done in Skarf v. Soulbly, supra.

More recently still the result of the decisions in the same class has been favourable to the settlor, and in several instances, previous to and including Thompson v. Webster, the efforts of creditors to disturb the arrangement have failed. Such was Holmes v. Penney (1856), 3 K. & J. 90, which was the case of a voluntary post-nuptial settlement, providing for the payment of existing creditors, and directing the income of the settled property to be applied for the benefit of the settlor, his wife and children, as the trustees, in their uncontrolled discretion, should think proper. This settlement was upheld as not being fraudulent against a subsequent creditor. In Wakefield v. Gibbon (1857), 1 Giff. 401, there was a family arrangement, whereby the tenant for life surrendered his interest and certain policies of assurance on his own life to his son, in consideration of the son, who was tenant in tail in remainder, and also a creditor, paying off certain charges on the life estate, and providing an annuity for his mother. A bill was filed by the creditors of the tenant for life, on the authority of French v. French, impeaching the arrangement. Sir John Stuart, V. C., said that "if the father in this case had disposed of the property available for payment of his debts to purchase the reversionary contingent annuity for his wife, the case might have been brought within the authority of French v. French. But here the son was a creditor to so large an amount that the transaction could not be viewed as a fraud upon other creditors." In a very recent case, land was settled by a marriage settlement on such trusts as the husband and wife should jointly appoint, and subject thereto, to the husband in fee. The husband became in insolvent circumstances, and he and the wife executed the joint power, in order to protect part of the property (originally the wife's) from the judgment creditors. The Vice-Chancellor (Wood) considered that if the husband had been insolvent, this could not have been held to be a fraudulent exercise of the power. But no case of insolvency had been made out, or of any design to defeat or delay creditors. The appointment was held valid; Acraman v. Corbett, (February, 1861), 9 W. R. 409.

Finally, in the case before us, one J. C. was indebted to the plaintiff on a promissory note for £200. He was also indebted to H. in £90, and to other persons. He was entitled to a moiety of the residue of his father's estate, and also to certain real estate, worth about £45 a year. Judgment was obtained by H. for the £90 and costs. J. C. then applied to his mother to advance him £190. She agreed to do so if he would settle his property. After some hesitation and discussion it was agreed that she should advance him £400, and thereupon J. C. executed the deeds. One was a mortgage of all his property to his mother to secure repayment of the £400 and interest. The other was the settlement now attempted to be set aside, by which J. C., in consideration of natural love and affection, purported to convey the real estate (subject to a mortgage) upon trusts to sell, and pay the dividends and interest of the proceeds to J. C. for life, remainder to his children. The settlement was executed within six weeks of the date of the promissory note to the plaintiff. J. C. became insolvent, and the plaintiff was appointed his assignee. J. C. died, and then his mother died. The evidence showed that the proposition about settling the property originally came from Mrs. C., who found that her son was squandering his property. It did not appear that she knew of the existence of the plaintiff's debt; and it also appeared that at least £210 never came into the pocket of the son. The deed was supported in every stage of the cause, from the judgment of Sir R. Kindersley, V.C., 7 W. R. 648, to those of the Lords Justices, 4 De. G. & J. 660, 7 W. R. 596; and finally, of the House of Lords. The state of the law, as exemplified by this and the other cases to which we have referred, may be summed up in the following terms:—

In every case, where a deed is impeached as being void against creditors under the statute of the 13th Elizabeth, the Court has to decide whether, under all the circumstances, it can come to the conclusion that the intention of the settlor in making the settlement was to delay, hinder, or defraud his creditors. A voluntary deed is not necessarily void; yet, as we have seen, a settlement executed for the highest consideration—that of marriage—may be set aside. Adequacy of consideration is not always necessary to the instrument; yet there are cases in which the amount of consideration is so important an index to the motives of the settlor that a deficiency of consideration will be fatal. Indebtedness to the extent of insolvency is not essential to be shown in order to the overthrow of a deed; inasmuch as a man may have executed a settlement with intent to defeat, defraud, and delay his creditors, although at the time he may be possessed of more property than is sufficient to satisfy them all. The amount of notice or want of notice on the part of the assignee is a circumstance not conclusive in itself, but is one upon which, amongst others, the Court may found its decision. In the comprehensive words of Mr. Justice Leblanc, in Nunn v. Wilmore, "in all cases, whether or not the deed is to be considered as fraudulent with respect to the creditors, must depend on the motives of the party making the deed. In investigating those motives the Court or the jury must be governed less by rules than by circumstances, and precedents can only furnish the aid of example and analogy in guiding them to a conclusion."

Correspondence.

ATTESTATION OF WILLS.

This question having brought forth many correspondents all differing on the point, although each has produced a form of attestation sufficient for the purpose, yet every one considering his own adoption the best, I beg to suggest the following, which was prepared by an eminent conveyancer, as it seems to me the most simple and yet effective form I have hitherto seen.

"Signed by the above named ———, the testator, as and for his will, in the presence of both of us present at the same time, who do attest and subscribe the same in the presence of the said testator."

I agree with some of your correspondents that it is unnecessary to refer to the testator at all in the attestation either as the above-named, or in any other manner, because the Wills Act, 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 9, declares that "it shall be signed at the foot or end thereof by the testator, or by some other person in his presence, and by his direction, and such signature shall be made, or acknowledged by the testator, in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time, and such witnesses shall attest and shall subscribe the will in the presence of the testator, but no form of attestation shall be necessary." Now I consider that any person making a will—that is, executing one—can do so without communicating to the witnesses the nature of the document he is signing. They are only required to attest and subscribe his signature, the Act declaring a form of attestation to be unnecessary; but if more convenient and regular that a form should be used in which it is made declaratory of the instrument being a will, then I think the form I have set out meets the requirement of the Act, inasmuch as it states the witnesses both present at the same time, and following the words of the Act, "they attest and subscribe," &c.

G. H. B.

I object to S. G.'s form "signed by A. B., and by him declared on in the presence of us, who at his request," &c.

The Wills Act, 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 9, requires that the will should be signed at the foot or end thereof, by the testator or by some other person in his presence, and by his direction, and that such signature should be made or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time, and that such witnesses should attest and subscribe the will in the presence of the testator.

The Act does not require that the testator should declare the document to be his will, nor does it require that the testator should request the witnesses to attest the will.

I think the attestation clause should contain a reference to the will.

In sending you the form of attestation I made a slight slip therein. The form should run thus:—"Signed by the above-named A. B., the testator, as his last will and testament, in the presence of us the undersigned, both being present at the same time, and subscribing this attestation in the presence of each other, and of the testator."

C.

An attestation to a will in the following concise form will, think, be found to comply in every particular with the requirements of the statute:—

"Signed by the above-named A. B., as his last will, in our joint presence, and by us in his presence."

E. T.

INVESTMENTS BY TRUSTEES.—EAST INDIA STOCK.

The decisions on this subject are perplexing, but neither C.'s nor G. C.'s letters, in your impression of the 7th September, seem to me to fully answer the questions raised by "B. P. A." in that of the 31st August. The Acts he quotes directly authorise an investment in the New East India Five per Cent. Stock (see Re Colne, &c., Railway, 8 W. R. 18, and Equitable, &c., Co., v. Fuller, 9 W. R. 400); for if the first Act does so, a fortiori, the second does also; and that the first Act does so is clearly stated in the judgments, particularly in that of Vice-Chancellor Wood. Therefore, irrespective of what the Court of Chancery directs, as to the money in the hands of the Accountant-General, it is clear that trustees may safely invest not only in the old but in the new stock; and even according to "G. C.'s" reading of the case, this may reasonably be inferred from Equitable, &c., Co. v. Fuller, and confirmed on appeal. But I read this case differently; and the Court of Chancery has acted on the Act of Parliament by its using the order of the 1st February, 1861. In that the language of the first Act is followed. In exercising a discretion, however, under this order, the Court says that even the Old East India Stock is not permissible (your correspondents quote the cases—Cockburn v. Peel and Ungless v. Tuff); a fortiori, therefore, the new stock is not. One letter misleads us as to Equitable, &c., Co., v. Fuller, and neither of the letters in your impression of the 7th tells us how the Court of Chancery can over-ride two Acts of Parliament and its own order; and I submit trustees may invest in both descriptions of stock, though I believe it is not the practice so to advise them.

J. S.

CONVEYANCE.—FORM OF HABENDUM.

In a letter appearing in your last impression, signed "A Subscriber," reference is made by him to an Act of Parliament, relating (inter alia) to the transfer of freehold land (8 & 9 Vict. c. 119).

I think on referring to the statutes of those years, your correspondent will find that the Act alluded to is 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, not 119.

As my experience in the profession is limited to five years, I scarcely feel competent to give the information your subscriber requires; yet I humbly submit that the form of an habendum contained in any conveyance to a purchaser, drawn by a tolerably competent solicitor or counsel within the last few years, will afford all that is required—though some may differ from others, as the sundry attestations of wills, of which himself as well as the rest of your "subscribers" have recently had ample illustration.

ANOTHER SUBSCRIBER.

PROMISSORY NOTE.

In reply to the letter of your correspondent J. N. Chadwick, in your impression of last week, I beg to say that the memorandum would have been a simple I O U had it not contained an express promise to repay the amount lent at times specified.

The following case shows the principles which govern these cases. A. lent B. £1,000, who gave A. the following memorandum:—"I agree to pay quarterly to A. the sum of £12 10s. sterling, the interest on £1,000 at £5 per cent." The opinion of three eminent counsel, among whom was the late Baron Watson, was taken upon this document, and they all agreed, as also did C. B. Pollock, under whose notice the case came at Nisi Prius, that the document was a simple I O U upon the grounds—1st, that the ultimate amount to be paid for interest was uncertain; 2ndly, there was no agreement to repay the principal. J. G.

If Mr. Chadwick refers to Brooks v. Elkins (2 M. & W. 74, 6 L. J. Ex. 6) he will see that a similar document to that inserted in his letter was held by the Court to be a promissory note, or an agreement for payment of money, and in either case to require a stamp. H. A. A.

COMMON LAW OFFICES.—VACATION.—TAXATION OF COSTS.

It would seem somewhat invidious at this time of the year to make any complaint about public officials taking their holidays, but as there is a medium in all things, even in the matter of recreation, we think the publication in your hands of the following state of things at present existing in the common law taxing offices might aid in reforming what we cannot abstain from terming an abuse. Reminding you that there are fifteen taxing masters attached to the superior courts of common law, and that fourteen of these are taking their vacation, there remains only one to perform their functions. This year one of the masters of the Queen's Bench sits four days a week from 11 to 2, to tax all bills of costs in all the courts that are brought before him.

A trial of ours took place at the last Liverpool Assizes, in which a verdict was recovered with costs by our client, the plaintiff in the action.

Upon the plaintiff's bill of costs being in due course laid before the vacation master for taxation, the master stated that it was not "vacation business," and refused to tax it. A remonstrance to him, followed by another application to tax, has been ineffectual, and he persists in his refusal.

The result is that the plaintiff cannot enforce the payment of his verdict or his costs until next term, by which time the defendant may be nowhere, and the plaintiff lose his money. If the master be right in his refusal, what becomes of the order giving power to parties to tax and enforce payment of damages and costs at the expiration of fourteen days after the trial. Is not this a state of things that ought to be at once remedied before it is too late? "LONDON AGENTS."

EDUCATION FOR ARTICLED CLERKS.

It will afford me much pleasure to find that, at the meeting of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, appointed to be held on the 8th of October next, at Worcester, attention will be given to the subject of an improved course of education for articled clerks. I desire to see members of the profession promoting the study of the law under the conviction that it is, in the language of Hooker, "a science to which all should do homage, the very least as feeling her care, and the greatest as not exempt from her power," and one which deserves and requires when chosen as a profession the exercise of the best powers of the heart and mind with unwearied industry. This will be greatly promoted by good training of law students in morals founded on Divine truth, and by a well provided course of legal, theoretical, and practical education, and general literature, with athletic and other recreations. Articled clerks in country towns would reap great advantage from having the use of a suitable room, to which a legal and general library is attached. Opportunities would thus be afforded them of passing their evenings profitably and pleasantly; and there might be well selected readings from legal authors by men who can read well. A small company in every considerable town might readily be found to advance a sufficient sum for providing the room and library, the interest of the shares being paid by a subscription; and in almost every town a public room might be met with not occupied of an evening, the use of which might be obtained for the purposes I have suggested. F. T. S.

Foreign Tribunals and Jurisprudence.

EXECUTION IN FRANCE OF FOREIGN JUDGMENTS BETWEEN TWO ALIENS.

(By ALGERNON JONES, Esq., Advocate in the Imperial Court of Paris.)

A Spaniard, of the name of Muriel, had taken shares in the Mexican and South American Company, which was established in England for mining purposes. The company was subsequently wound up, and M. Muriel was adjudged to pay towards the debts of the company a sum of £11 6s. per share; and an order was made against him to that effect. Meanwhile Muriel had taken up his residence in France, and a suit was brought against him in the Tribunal of First Instance in France to obtain the execution of the English order. He demurred to the jurisdiction of the Court, on the ground of both parties being aliens; but his plea was rejected, and jurisdiction asserted over the case by the Tribunal in the following judgment:—

The TRIBUNAL.—Whereas, it is enacted by the articles 546 of the Code of Civil Procedure and 2123 of the Code Napoleon that the judgments of foreign courts may be ordered to be executed in France by the French courts:—Whereas, the above enactments are general in their terms, and make no distinction between whether the judgment has been given between French subjects and aliens or between aliens of different nationalities; that it is evident that whatever be the nationality of the parties they cannot have recourse to any but the French tribunals to obtain the execution in France of judgments given in foreign countries; and that, therefore, these courts could not, without an absolute denial of justice, refuse to interfere, declares itself competent, &c.

An appeal was entered against this judgment by Muriel, and it was reversed on the 15th of June last by the following judgment of the First Section of the Imperial Court of Paris:—

The COURT.—Whereas, the question to be examined is, whether any execution may be granted upon a judgment given out of France between two aliens; whereas, as a general rule, the French courts owe justice only to French subjects, and that aliens cannot, in general, apply for it one against another; whereas, the above rule of law is grounded on the two principal reasons—1, that the French judges owe their time and labour only to French suitors; 2, that it cannot be expected of them that they should enter into the examination of laws which they know nothing of; that these two reasons have their full force where an alien plaintiff claims execution upon a foreign judgment; that where execution is demanded upon a foreign judgment which concerns a French subject, it is a duty of the French Courts to grant it; and a practicable duty, since they can grant execution only according to the rules of the law of France. But when the contest is between two aliens it does not go thus. Their engagement can only be executed according to their national law; and it is not reasonable to admit that an English subject may demand against his countryman the execution of an English judgment, which will have to be modified according to the laws of France; whereas, the French judge would have to go both into the form and merits of the judgment, which would entail upon him the necessity of an acquaintance with the practice and procedure of foreign countries; and this might occur in suits of all kinds involving the necessity of the examination of all classes of right, which is evidently out of the question:—Whereas, the texts of our laws is entirely in conformity with these principles—that the 1st chapter of the Code Napoleon, which is the only one which settles the principles in these matters, does not recognise any suits before the French but those which interest French subjects; and the Code of Procedure, which settles the mode of enforcement of the various rights, far from extending these, restricts them on the contrary, in article 546, and while one might have supposed by the article 14 of the Code Napoleon, recognising the engagements taken by a French subject in favour of an alien in or out of France, that the law would give ipso facto an executory force to the documents embodying the same; but the article 546 of the Code of Procedure, on the contrary, denies all executory force

o foreign contracts and judgments, and submits the judgments to a revision. . . . Whereas, nothing is more rational than the contrary system:—When the right concerns a French subject an action lies either in the French or the foreign courts, and if the judgment has been given by the latter, it must be revised by the French judges, because the principle of national sovereignty requires it, and because the judgment must be brought into conformity with the fundamental principle of the national law. But when the right concerns strangers exclusively, no action lies in France. There can be no procedure because there are no rights to be enforced. . . . Whereas, to conclude, the judges of France owe themselves exclusively to their countrymen; besides, they could not order the execution of a foreign judgment without entering into a law of which they are ignorant, and by which aliens contracting together are exclusively bound:—Whereas, in point of fact, Muriel has never had in France neither authorised domicile nor commercial establishment, but a mere residence; that he falls under none of the exceptions where an alien may be cited before the French courts, receives the appeal and rejects the petition.

This decision, which I have translated as literally as possible, though it comes from a high authority whose judgments are generally of great weight, bears in its style and mode of argument and the repetition with which it abounds, a clear proof of the hasty manner in which it was drawn. But I have other and more material faults to find with it. The French courts have in general not shown themselves very liberal in their reception of the applications of strangers for justice against one another. They apply the rule actor sequitur forum rei to such cases very generally. But, as I shall at some future opportunity explain, they have of late shown a disposition to relax in their severity, and in many instances they have given their assistance to aliens against others, where the latter could not be made amenable to any other jurisdiction. Here is, however, and from very high authority, the first Section of the Imperial Court of Paris, a decision with quite contrary tendencies, which lays down principles most startlingly novel, and which could hardly be expected in those days of increased international communication. Till this judgment was given, few had dreamt that there was any doubt about the right of an alien to apply to the French courts for execution on a foreign judgment against another alien. The article 546 of the Code of Procedure, which regulates the execution of foreign judgments in France, says generally, "The judgments given by foreign courts, or acts of foreign officers, shall not be executed in France, except according to the enactment of the articles 2123 and 2128 of the Code Napoleon;" that is, that they must be declared executory by the French courts. The article 121 of the ordinance of 1629, from which the substance of the above articles is taken, is likewise general. It does not limit the possibility of being executed in France to such judgments of foreign courts as have been given between an alien and a French subject. Indeed, it contains a clause which seemed to give more full and uncontrolled operation to the foreign judgment where it is between aliens than where a French party is concerned. It runs thus, immediately after the laying down of the general rule:—"And notwithstanding such judgments, those of our subjects against whom they may have been given, shall be free to defend their rights as if they were entire before our judges." This clause has led many of the judges and text-writers to infer that where there was no French party ousted or condemned in the judgment, the merits of the case were not to be entered upon again; and that the court had no other duty to perform but simply to glance over the judgment to see whether the rules of public morality and policy and the general received rules as to jurisdiction had not been violated therein. That theory is, however, now exploded: at least, the weight of authority is against it, and it now begins to be generally understood that whether both parties are aliens or not, the court is justified in looking into the merits of the case, and trying it de novo from the very outset, though in general the gist of the examination of parties and witnesses, as it appears in the judgment of the foreign judges, is generally taken as evidence. Such was, till this judgment, the practice without distinction as to both or one of the parties being of alien status; nor do I think this judgment likely to arrest the current. The novelty of the doctrine it contains is certainly not legitimated by the vigour of the reasoning with which it is set forth, nor is it sufficiently in season to compensate for its other shortcomings. It is at the moment when France has thrown open her doors, and is preparing to do away with the terrors of those bugbears which scared away from her so many visitors,—the passport office and the custom-house,—that foreigners are told that they may tread the soil of France as much as they please: that they may meet there, but that they may not deal together except at their peril; that France will give them everything except justice; that she will allow aliens dishonestly to walk her streets, and spend as alienum there in safety. I do not think, however, there is much danger of this new doctrine prevailing. The reasons on which it is grounded are hardly strong enough to overpower the array of authority which can be exhibited against it. That the alien has no claim upon the French courts is a proposition which many will dissent from, when they recollect that the alien on the French soil is not allowed the enjoyment of the natural rights of doing justice to himself, and that, therefore, he must be allowed the freedom of that legal succedaneum which society has substituted for the turbulent exercise of the same. The impossibility of the French judges understanding foreign law does not seem more conclusive, when one recollects that in many cases where French subjects are concerned, the French courts must do their best to understand and apply it—when, for example, a contract has been entered into by a French subject with an alien in a foreign country, or where a French subject is heir or legatee to an alien. Not to mention many other cases, these and the other arguments of the Court do not seem, therefore, sufficient to counterpoise that which is grounded on the terms of the various articles of the law (which I have given above), and on the rule ubi lex non distinguit nec nos distinguere debemus. The weight of authority, as I have already stated, is entirely against the decision of the Court, and I have every reason to believe that it would be set aside upon a writ of error in the Court of Cassation, which would be highly desirable.

Review.

What is Contraband of War and what is not; comprising all the American and English Authorities on the subject. By JOSEPH MOSELEY, Esq., B.C.L., Barrister-at-law. Butterworths. 1861.

Although the international law of contraband is in a very unsettled state, yet, owing to the authority which the works of the American authors, Kent, Story, Wheaton, Flanders, and Parsons, have in our Admiralty Courts, the American law on this branch of belligerent rights is almost identical with our own. This uniformity is still further insured by the deference paid in the American courts to the decisions of Sir William Scott, afterwards Lord Stowell. Moreover, the rules of the British Courts of Admiralty have been formally recognised by the supreme courts of the United States. The duties of an author on this branch of law, which has thus been so copiously treated of, cannot, therefore, be very onerous, especially as regards the bearings of the American code. A concise manual, describing the general principles of international law applicable to questions of contraband, and containing an abridged account of the leading cases which have settled this branch of law, would appear to be as easy of construction as it would doubtless be at the present time acceptable to the commercial as well as to the legal public. A sine quâ non of such a work is a good index. A practical treatise on any branch of international law should possess this adjunct, in order that its preventive cautions might be of use to the mercantile public. The present treatise, considered apart from its faults in point of style and grammar, is sufficiently accurate in its statement of received principles, and contains a good collection of decided points, with references to the cases in which they were adjudged, but is wanting in one of the main requisites of a work on contraband as it has no index.

The question whether any particular articles (except arms and ammunition) are contraband is a question rather of fact than of law, and is to be solved in each particular case by a reference to the intentions of the parties concerned as disclosed by the evidence rather than by the application of general principles of law. The work before us, therefore, correctly enough, is made up, to a great extent, of statements of decided points. A good index of the Admiralty cases which have settled the law of contraband is what is mainly desirable in a branch of law which is in little governed by first principles. Mr. Moseley's a priori speculations, so far as they go, do not appear to us to be calculated to promote much the interests of international jurisprudence. For instance, he disposes very summarily of an objection urged by Bynkerchoek against regarding as contraband everything that can be used for warlike purposes. Mr.

Moseley considers that swords and cannon are not solely used for these objects. He observes, "swords used as ornament are not articles solely applicable for war, nor are cannon, which are used for public rejoicing." We are entirely at a loss to understand how a belligerent inquisitor could foretell whether swords and cannon found in a neutral vessel would be used by the enemy for useful or merely for ornamental purposes; or whether the enemy might not possibly, on an emergency, use the swords not as pruning hooks but as instruments of warfare. The method pursued by the author in the compilation of this treatise is, indeed, an exceedingly good one. He first states, at the commencement of almost every chapter, the general rule evolved from the cases of which he gives a digest in the chapter.

The work itself, however, is penned very loosely, and shows but little regard on the part of the author for the graces of style, or even for the rules of grammar. Some of his rules are expressed in terms almost comic; others are sentimental in their nature. Of the first species we may give his first rule as an example—"Natural produce, neutrality, and nationality, make free goods." The author then adds in a note, "This might be called, perhaps, the rule of the three N's." The second of his rules is, that "doubtful goods of a doubtful power, bound to a doubtful port, will be free." The author, however, does not enunciate this canon as the rule of the three D's. We have, indeed, no objection to alliterate aids to memory. What appears really faulty in this book is its ungrammatical diction, and the want of an index. Of the class of sentimental axioms propounded by the author, let the following suffice as a specimen:—"A friend's ships in a foe's service are foes." Cervantes would, doubtless, limit the application of this axiom to sailing vessels. The next rule we meet with is as follows:—"Ships, and what ships are made from, in contraband of war, is the same thing." Again we find the proposition that "money, and what money stands for, in contraband of war, are liable." What the writer means by the second branch of his axiom is that bills, bonds, and notes represent money to all purposes as regards the law of contraband. The rule as to pre-emption, or the right of a belligerent to take such neutral goods as are capable of warlike use when destined for the enemy's service, the captor paying the price of the articles, is thus stated by the author—"In contraband, whatever may be of use in war, may be taken on payment." He thus describes the penalty for carrying contraband—"Contraband confiscates all of the same bulk and of the same owner." If brevity be the essence of wit, it is sometimes, also, the occasion of a confusion of ideas on the part of a sententious and personifying author. This book, although so faulty in diction and grammar, nevertheless explains the law of contraband concisely and as clearly as bad grammar allows. If revised by the author, and supplied with a copious index, it would, we think, be found generally useful.

Societies and Institutions.

INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COUNCIL TO THE GENERAL MEETING OF THE MEMBERS, JULY 2, 1861.

In obedience to the charter of incorporation and the constitution and laws of the Society, it now becomes the duty of the Council to present their Report for the year 1861;—to trace the progress and indicate the present position of the society, and of the profession with which it is so intimately connected, and for whose benefit it was called into existence;—to advert to the subjects which have occupied the attention of the Council since the last annual meeting;—to show that the Council have endeavoured at least, if not always successfully, to further the legitimate objects and to protect the just rights of the body whose representatives they are;—and to prove that they have not been wholly undeserving of the confidence which has been reposed in them—a confidence which was indispensable to their usefulness.

The Council feel that there is abundant cause for congratulation in the retrospect of the last few years. There is satisfactory evidence of a growing conviction among the members of the Government and the Legislature that the profession as a body are deserving of confidence, and are judicious and disinterested promoters of law amendment, and are qualified by their experience and legal information to render efficient service in the correction of old abuses. There is a marked improvement in the tone of the public mind with reference to the profession; vulgar and unjust prejudices are giving way to a more enlightened estimate of their value as members of this great social community; and year by year increasing numbers of well-educated gentlemen, graduates of the universities and others, are entering the ranks of the profession.

These important and satisfactory changes are in a great degree attributable, as the Council believe, to the existence and influence of this and other kindred law societies in London and the provinces, and to the cordial manner in which those societies co-operate with each other.

I. LAW OF ATTORNEYS.

For obtaining the sanction of the Legislature to the important statute of last session for the amendment of the law of attorneys, arduous and persevering efforts were required, and though the Act when it received the Royal assent was not entirely satisfactory in some minor points, the Council confidently anticipate very beneficial results from its operation.

At the time of the general meeting on the 3rd of July, 1860, the Bill stood appointed for consideration in committee of the House of Commons. After numerous postponements it passed that House with several alterations, and on the 20th of August was returned to the House of Lords, where the alterations were adopted, and the Bill received the royal assent on the 28th August.

It may be useful to state shortly the scope of this statute, especially as some of its provisions are not always observed, and applications have to be made to the judges for orders to correct irregularities of procedure. [An analysis of the statute is here given. See the Solicitors' Journal for 1860, p. 880; and Public Statutes for 1860, p. 90.]

In order to ascertain the qualifications of clerks applying to be examined and admitted under the 4th section who have served three years only under articles, after a ten years' antecedent service in the transaction and performance of business usually transacted and performed by attorneys or solicitors, the examiners have issued an additional set of questions as to the nature of the business transacted during such antecedent clerkship. During the four terms which have elapsed since the Act passed, thirty-eight candidates have claimed the privilege given by the 4th section, and of these thirty-three were examined and passed.

In the course of the four terms no less than thirty-nine candidates whose articles expired in vacation have availed themselves of the privilege conferred by the 12th section of being examined in the preceding term.

It is very material to notice that, under the 7th section, articles of clerkship and assignments within three months after enrolment in one of the courts are to be produced to the registrar of attorneys, who is to enter the names of the parties and date of the contract on the register, otherwise the service will be reckoned only from the time of such production, unless the Court or a judge shall otherwise order.*

So, under the 30th section, commissions to administer oaths or take acknowledgments must be brought to the registrar, who shall enter the date and mark the same on the commissions before they can be acted upon.†

By the 21st section of the Attorneys' Act, when the certificate duty is paid after the 1st of January, the certificate must be produced to the registrar of attorneys at the Incorporated Law Society within a month from payment of the duty. If not, it has effect only from the time of production, unless an order be obtained from a judge to enter it nunc pro tunc.

It is also important to attend to the 10th section of the Attorneys' Act, by which an articulated clerk is prohibited from holding any office, or being engaged in any employment whatsoever, other than the employment of clerk to the attorney. Many applications have been made to the Council for their opinion as to clerks holding the appointment of deputy coroner, clerk to boards of guardians, agents to insurance offices, &c., and the parties have been referred to the stringent provision of the statute.

Their opinion has also been asked whether the service of an articulated clerk to an attorney who is acting as clerk to another attorney would be deemed good service under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 4, where the attorney acted as clerk in one town who had a practice of his own in another town, and the Council deem such service would not be sufficient.

In carrying into effect the 22nd section of the Attorneys' Act, by which the Law List is made prima facie evidence of

* From the passing of the Act in August last to the present time, the number of articles of clerkship registered has been 269—viz., 232 for five years, 14 graduates for three years, and 23 clerks for three years, besides 56 assignments for the residue of the term.

† There have been 70 chancery commissions registered; 230 common law, and 40 perpetual commissions.

the right to practise, it was thought desirable that all the places of business of attorneys who practised at several towns should be inserted at each, thus making the list more complete, and removing a serious inconvenience under which attorneys sending writs and other legal documents to country attorneys have hitherto laboured.

The Council have had before them several instances of delay in the service of process, when sent to an attorney entered in the Law List as of a town where he only attended on market days. It is expected that under the provisions of the Act attorneys will insert those places only at which they have an office; and no doubt in sending process to an attorney for service one will be selected who, having one place of business only, may be assumed to reside as well as practise there. The list of London attorneys already contains both addresses where a London attorney also practices at some adjacent country place.

In addition to this improvement, the Law List now contains the dates of the admission on the roll of attorneys; and the name of each member of a firm practising in the country is placed in alphabetical order as in the London list.

Pursuant to the 31st section of the Act applications have been made to the officers of the several courts for lists of the authorities and appointments now in force granted to attorneys, solicitors, proctors, or others, enabling them to administer oaths and take acknowledgments, declarations, and affirmations, whether such authority be to act in England, or elsewhere, in order to form a complete register of such authorities and appointments, with the places of business of the persons so appointed, and the extent of the authority conferred.

On applications to the High Court of Admiralty for admission as a commissioner to administer oaths in admiralty, the judge has been pleased to direct that the testimonials in support of the application should be sent to the Council for investigation, and they make the requisite inquiries into the character and professional position of the applicants, and report the result.

The Council, having been instrumental in urging upon the Legislature the expediency of the examinations prescribed by the 5th and 8th sections of the Act, on subjects of general knowledge before or during articles, and by the 9th section in legal knowledge during articles, felt that the duty devolved on them of offering to the judges suggestions for carrying those sections into effect.

The Council therefore referred the subject to a committee of their body, who, after having made extensive inquiries for the purpose of obtaining information to guide their judgment, presented a preliminary report, which was widely circulated by the Council among the members of the society, and the several law societies in London and the country. Copies were also sent to the masters of the several courts of law, and all were invited to express their opinions on the subject. The suggestions thus elicited by the Council enabled the committee materially to improve their report, and the Council believe that the revised report, as adopted by them, expressed the opinions and wishes of a very large proportion of the attorneys and solicitors of England.

They transmitted copies of the revised report to the Lord Chief Justice, Master of the Rolls, and Lord Chief Baron, and solicited them to take the report into their favourable consideration, and to make such regulations as might appear to them calculated to carry into effect the intentions of the Legislature, and to confer on the public the advantages which must result from having well-educated, intelligent, and honourable legal advisers.

The report was sent to the judges in the early part of Easter Term, and the Council have recently received from them a communication which leads the Council to believe that, with some modification of one of the suggestions, the scheme contained in the report will be adopted.*

It may here be added, with respect to the examinations in legal knowledge, that in the course of the last four Terms 477 candidates have been examined, of whom 417 were passed and 60 postponed. To the first class of the successful candidates 18 prizes were awarded; and to the second class 24 certificates of merit; a favourable notice was also given by the examiners to 25 candidates who were above the age of 26. The names of all these gentlemen are given in an appendix to this report.

II. ALTERATIONS IN THE LAW.

[The Council here enumerate the various Acts of Parliament affecting the profession which were passed, after the previous

* The Rules were made on the 26th July, and a printed copy will be sent by the Council to every attorney. [They are printed ante, p. 696.]

annual general meeting of the society, up to the 2nd of July, 1861.]

III. BILLS IN PARLIAMENT.

During the remainder of the last session the Council continued to watch the progress of such of the Bills as affect the duties or interests of practitioners; and they have also taken into consideration the several Bills introduced in the present session of Parliament relating to the following subjects:—*

- * Bankruptcy and Insolvency.
- Constructive Notice of Incumbrances.
- * Wills of Personalty.
- Disgavelling Lands.
- * Drainage of Lands.
- Trustees of Charities.
- Trade Marks.
- Copyright.
- Lunacy Regulation.
- County Courts Procedure.
- Recovery of Debts and Frivolous Defences.
- * Criminal Law Consolidation.
- * Probate Stamp Duties.
- * Inland Revenue.
- * Crown Suits Limitation.
- * Attorneys and Solicitors (Ireland).
- * Statute Law Revision.
- * East India Courts.
- * Wills and Domicile.

The Council received several communications from attorneys and solicitors in the provinces on the subject of the resolution proposed to be moved by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in Committee of Ways and Means, that "there shall be charged for and upon a licence to be taken out yearly by every person who shall use or exercise the business, occupation, or calling of a house agent, not being an auctioneer or an appraiser duly licensed as such, the stamp duty of £2."

The communications expressed apprehension that attorneys and solicitors, especially those practising in the country, might be liable to the payment of this tax, many of them having the management of the house properties of their clients, and letting the houses and transacting that description of business connected with house property, which in London is ordinarily under the charge of house agents.

Considering that attorneys and solicitors pay an annual certificate duty of £9 in London and £6 in the country, the Council addressed a letter to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, suggesting that attorneys and solicitors duly authorised to practise as such, should be excepted from the operation of the tax, as well as auctioneers and appraisers duly licensed as such.

In answer to their letter, the Council received a communication from the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the effect that there is no intention of imposing any additional charge upon attorneys, and a proviso has accordingly been introduced, expressly exempting certificated attorneys.

This Bill received the royal assent on the 28th of June.

A select committee of the House of Commons having been appointed to consider the assessments made in respect of different kinds of property, real and personal, the Council have assisted their brethren in preparing petitions to the House of Commons, setting forth the several heavy taxes by which they are already burdened, the uncertainty of professional incomes, and the moderate amount at which the practice of an attorney or solicitor can be estimated, either when he disposes of it when he retires, or is compelled by illness to relinquish.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue authorised their officer to state that a written authority from a vendor to a purchaser to pay the purchase-money to the solicitor of the former on completing the purchase, is not an instrument chargeable with any stamp duty.

IV. CONCENTRATION OF THE COURTS AND OFFICES.

Soon after the last general meeting, the Commissioners on the Concentration of the Courts and Offices made their report in favour of the site suggested by this society, lying between Lincoln's-inn and the Temple, and extending from this institution to Clement's-inn and New-inn; and the report conclusively showed that the accumulation of surplus interest for upwards of a century in the Court of Chancery might justly be applied towards the purchase of the site and the expense of the building. [See S. J. for 1860, p. 715.]

The Council sent a print of this report to all the members of the society, and deputations from the Council attended the Prime Minister, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the

* Marked thus have passed, the rest have been postponed.

Chief Commissioner of Public Works, and assistance was given in the preparation of Bills for the acquisition of the site, and appropriating the requisite funds. The Government authorised surveys and estimates to be made, and notices to be given to the owners and occupiers of the site. Some delay has taken place from the pressure of other public business in forwarding the Bills through Parliament, but they are making progress, and it is hoped they may be passed during the session.

V. CHANCERY EVIDENCE COMMISSION.

The commissioners appointed to enquire into the mode of taking evidence in the Court of Chancery, one of whom was a member of the Council, made their report on the 28th of June last year, and the great importance of the matter induced the Council to supply the members with printed copies thereof. As stated in the last annual report, the Council and their equity committee supplied many suggestions during the progress of the measure, and an Act passed authorising the judges to make rules and orders for carrying the recommendations of the commissioners into effect.

(To be continued.)

In the Court of Bankruptcy, on the 18th inst., in a case of no public importance, Mr. Commissioner Goulburn took occasion to remark upon the absence of the solicitor for the assignees. He said that it was a very common practice for solicitors to send their clerks to that court. The Act did not allow him to hear solicitors' clerks, nor would he do so. He must put a stop to the custom referred to. For the future the fee of every solicitor for the assignees attending only by his clerk would be disallowed upon taxation.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

CURRY—On Sept. 12, at Maidenhead, the wife of Frederick Curry, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a son, still-born.

MARRIAGES.

BROOMHEAD—SHIRT—On Sept. 12, Barnard P. Broomhead, Esq., Solicitor and Notary, to Matilda Staveley, daughter of John Staveley Shirt, Esq., of Wales, Yorkshire.

CABELL—LAWSON—On Sept. 12, William Lloyd Cabell, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law, to Fanny Harriott, daughter of the Rev. G. R. Lawson, vicar of Pitminster.

CHURCHER—GREENFIELD—On Sept. 4, J. Churcher, Esq., R.N., to Emma, daughter of the late Thomas Greenfield, Esq., Solicitor, Winchester.

M'CULLOCH—CASWELL—On Sept. 10, Samuel M'Culloch, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of the Middle Temple, to Nessie, daughter of the late Capt. W. Caswell, R.N., of Balickera, William's River, Australia.

DEATHS.

DICKSON—On Sept. 7, at Edinburgh, Mary Campbell Johnstone, wife of Samuel Dickson, Esq., Writer to the Signet.

MAUDE—On Sept. 9, at Champéry, Switzerland, Arthur Grey Maude, Esq., of Great George-street, Westminster, and of the Sessions House, Clerkenwell.

London Gazettes.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

TUESDAY, Sept. 17, 1861.

ENGLISH AND IRISH CHURCH AND UNIVERSITY ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—Petition for winding up, presented September 3, will be heard before V.C. Wood, on the first petition day in Michaelmas Term. Sols. Langford & Marsden, 59, Friday-street, Cheap-side.

FRIDAY, Sept. 20, 1861.

LIMITED IN BANKRUPTCY.

VALE OF CLWYD MINING COMPANY (LIMITED).—Order to wind up made by Commissioner Holroyd, Sept. 11. Same time, George John Graham, 25, Coleman-street, London, was appointed official liquidator. Creditors to prove their debts before Commissioner Fonblanque, on Oct. 16, at 11.30.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Sept. 17, 1861.

AMES, JOHN, Gent., Bedminster, Somerset. Sols. Davis & Fry, Shannon-court, Bristol. Oct. 21.

ATTWOOD, WILLIAM, Grocer, St. Alban's, Hertfordshire. Sol. Blagg, St. Alban's. Nov. 2.

FOXWELL, WILLIAM, Gent., Bridgewater, Somersetshire. Sol. Smith, Bridgewater. Dec. 2.

GULLIFORD, THOMAS, Gent., Shoscombe, Wellow, Somersetshire. Sols. Skurray & Son, 2, Chapel-row, Queen-square, Bath. Nov. 15.

MORLEY, ARTHUR, Hosier, Nottingham, and also of Sneinton, Nottingham. Sols. Sawyer & Brettel, 2, Staple-inn, London, and Wells, Fletcher-gate, Nottingham. Nov. 16.

OSMAN, WILLIAM, Brewer & Licensed Victualler, The Two Brewers, Mason's Hill, Bromley, Kent. Sol. Leitch, 8, Bartlett's-buildings, London. Nov. 30.

SACHS, HERMANN, Bead Merchant, born in Hirschberg, Silesia, formerly of 76, Newgate-street, London, and late of King-street, Holborn, Middlesex. Sols. Sydney & Son, 64, Finsbury Circus, London. Oct. 15.

SPRADBURY, GEORGE JOHN, Licensed Victualler, Castle Inn, Old Kent-road, Surrey. Sol. King, 5, South square, Gray's-inn, Middlesex. Oct. 24.

FRIDAY, Sept. 20, 1861.

FILDER, MOSES, Gent., Eastbourne, Sussex. Sols. Gell & Son, Lewes. Nov. 16.

FORRESTER, JOSEPH JAMES, Merchant, Crutched Friars, London, and Oporto. Sols. W. & H. F. Sharp, 92, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street. Dec. 15.

NORRIS, JAMES, Farmer and Market Gardener, Sion-hill, Isleworth, Middlesex. Sols. Woodbridge & Son, 8, Clifford's-inn, Fleet-street, London, and Brentford, Middlesex. Nov. 18.

SANDYS, ANN EMMA CHARLOTTE SOPHIA, Widow, Plymouth. Sols. Elworthy, Curds, & Dawe, Plymouth. Oct. 28.

STACEY, CHARLES, Elstree, Aldenham, Hertfordshire. Sol. George, Wood-street, Chipping Barnet, Hertfordshire. Nov. 21.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

TUESDAY, Sept. 17, 1861.

GLOVER, RICHARD HAY, Merchant, Gibraltar, and late of Clifford street, Bond-street, London. Glover v. Heelis, V.C. Wood. Nov. 20.

FRIDAY, Sept. 20, 1861.

ELDSFORTH, ANTHONY, Esq., Poulton Hall, Lancashire. Eldsforth v. Eldsforth, M.R. Nov. 25.

FENTON, GEORGE, Baker, Kensall-green, Harrow-road, Middlesex. Lucas v. Fenton, V.C. Kindersley. Nov. 27.

WHOLEY, THOMAS CROSSBY, Grocer, Gainsborough, Lincolnshire. Markham v. Wholey, V.C. Wood. Nov. 4.

(County Palatine of Lancaster.)

STATTER, GEORGE, Gent., Bird-hole, Bury, Lancashire. Office of Registrar, 4, Norfolk-street, Manchester. Oct. 14.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

TUESDAY, Sept. 17, 1861.

BOTHAMLEY, CHARLES PARKINSON, Grocer, Gainsborough, Lincolnshire. Sol. Oldman, Gainsborough. Aug. 30.

COCKILL, JOSEPH, Farmer & Wool-buyer, Retford, Nottinghamshire. Sols. Burnaby & Denman, East Retford. Sept. 3.

GUMBRELL, EDWARD, Draper, Dorking, Surrey. Sol. Sole, 63, Alderman-bury, London. Sept. 13.

HARRIS, CHARLES, Ironmonger, Stratford, Essex. Sol. Sole, Alderman-bury, London. Aug. 26.

HICKS, GEORGE, Ship Chandler, Calstock, Cornwall. Sols. Roacher, Lavers, & Matthews, Plymouth. Sept. 2.

JONES, THOMAS, Farmer, Bryn, Glaschw, Radnor. Sols. Bodenham & Temple, Kingston. Sept. 13.

KING, FREDERICK, Inn Keeper, Rye, Sussex. Sol. Butler, Rye. Sept. 3.

LEIGH, HENRY JONES, Draper, 76, Leather-lane, Holborn, Middlesex. Sol. Turner, 68, Aldermanbury. Sept. 3.

NICHOLSON, EDWARD, Grocer, Seaham Harbour, Durham. Sols. Rawson & Son, Sunderland. Sept. 3.

QUICK, WILLIAM, Grocer & Tea Dealer, Camborne, Cornwall. Sols. Roscoria & Davies, Penzance. Sept. 7.

THORP, ABEL, Woollen Cloth Manufacturer, Meltham, Almondbury, Yorkshire. Sol. Booth, Holmfirth. Aug. 27.

WATERFIELD, JOSEPH, Furniture Dealer, Peterborough. Sol. Deacon, Peterborough. Sept. 11.

FRIDAY, Sept. 20, 1861.

COVERDALE, JOHN, Grocer & Provision Dealer, Thirsk, Yorkshire. Sol. Rider, Thirsk. Sept. 13.

HOLE, WILLIAM, Grocer & Butcher, Bulwell, Nottinghamshire. Sol. Sleinton, St. Peter's Gate, Nottingham. Aug. 20.

LILLEY, JAMES, Brick & Tile Manufacturer & Victualler, Starton by Stowe, Lincoln. Sol. Plaskitt, Gainsborough. Sept. 13.

MOSGROVE, GEORGE, Draper, Rawtenstall, Lancashire. Sols. Sale, Worthington, Shipman, & Seddon, 29, Booth-street, Manchester. Aug. 31.

STRITTON, JOHN, Draper, Newton Abbot, Devonshire. Sols. D'Arcy & Beachey, Newton Abbot. Sept. 7.

UNDERWOOD, JOHN, Draper, Daventry, Northamptonshire. Sols. Parker, Lee & Haddock, 18, St. Paul's Church-yard. Aug. 31.

WRAGO, WILLIAM, Machine Builder, Beeston, Nottinghamshire. Sols. Campbell, Burton, & Browne, Nottingham. Sept. 14.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Sept. 17, 1861.

ALFORTH, CHARLES EDWARD, Timber Dealer, 10, Lonsdale-terrace, Barnes, Surrey. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 28, at 12; and Oct. 29, at 2.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. White & Sons, Bedford-row, London; or Wood, Bristol. Pet. Sept. 12.

BACON, STEPHEN, Corn & Coal Merchant, 2, Northampton-place, 48A Kent-road, Surrey. Com. Goulburn: Sept. 27, at 12; and Oct. 28, at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Keen, 77, Lower Thames-street, London. Pet. Sept. 16.

BANFIELD, JOHN, Organ Builder, Handsworth, Staffordshire. Com. Sanders: Sept. 27 and Oct. 25, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kincaid. Sols. Harrison & Wood, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 14.

BLOW, ALFRED, Mill Band Maker, 15, Great Charles-street, Birmingham. Com. Sanders: Sept. 27 and Oct. 25, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. Duke, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 13.

FARSON, WILLIAM, Miller, Horncastle, Lincolnshire. Com. Ayrton: Oct. 2 and 30, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull. Off. Ass. Carrick. Sol. Bean, Boston. Pet. Sept. 9.

FIELDING, AARON, Grocer & Corn Dealer, Glossop, Derbyshire. Com. Jemmett: Oct. 1 and 29, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hermonian. Sol. Reddish, 52, Princes-street, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 10.

GREATOREX, WILLIAM, Boot and Shoe Manufacturer, Leicester. Com. Sanders: Oct. 3 and 24, at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sol. Pike, Leicester. Pet. Sept. 12.

GREEN, WILLIAM, Cartman & Carrier, 1, Bear-lane, Blackfriars-road, Surrey. Com. Goulburn: Sept. 26, at 12; and Oct. 28, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Howard, Quality-court, Chancery-lane, London. Pet. Sept. 16.

HARRALL, JOHN MILLS, Cloth Finisher, Huddersfield (Joseph Shaw & Co.). Com. Ayrton: Sept. 27 and Nov. 4, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sol. Jessop, Huddersfield; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Sept. 10.

HEARD, HENRY CLEMENT, Newspaper Proprietor, Apothecary, Chemist, & Druggist, Bridgewater. Com. Andrews: Oct. 1 and 29, at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sol. Smith, Bridgewater; or Turner & Hirtzel, Exeter. Pet. Sept. 12.

JAMES, WILLIAM CONWAY, Tin Plate Manufacturer, Pontnewydd Tin Works, Llanvrechva Lower, Monmouthshire. Com. Hill: Oct. 1 and 29, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sol. Devan, Girling, & Press, Bristol. Pet. Aug. 27.

MAMBY, JOHN, Grocer & Provision Dealer, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Staffordshire. Com. Sanders: Sept. 30 and Oct. 21, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. Hodgson & Allen, Birmingham; or Dutton, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 14.

MAYES, HARLEY JOHN, Cattle Dealer, Stoke Ferry, Norfolk. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 28, at 12.30; and Nov. 1, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 69, Aldermanbury, London; or Miller, Son, & Bugg, Norwich. Pet. Sept. 9.

PENTON, GEORGE, Malster, Basingstoke, Hants. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 27, at 2.30; and Nov. 1, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. John & Weatheralls, Temple, London; or Lamb, Brooks, & Challis, Basingstoke, Hants. Pet. Sept. 7.

PLATT, JOHN, Furniture Dealer, Oldham, Lancashire. Com. Jemmett: Oct. 1 and 29, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. G. & R. W. Marsland, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 4.

RAMSAY, DAVID, Merchant, Melbourne, Victoria, and Forest-hill, Kent. Com. Holroyd: Sept. 27, at 1, and Nov. 1, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Linklater & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London. Pet. Sept. 13.

FRIDAY, Sept. 20, 1861.

BELFORD, MARY ANN, Innkeeper, late of Fremantle, Southampton, and since of the Royal George Hotel, High-street, Southampton. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 1, at 11.30; and Nov. 4, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Howard, Halse, & Trustram, 66, Paternoster-row, London. Pet. Sept. 19.

JEFFRIES, RICHARD, Bleacher, Chapel-en-le-Frith, Derby. Com. Jemmett: Oct. 4, and Nov. 6, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. Cobbett & Wheeler, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 18.

JEPSON, WILLIAM, and DENNIS PICKUP, Cotton Manufacturers, Blackburn, Lancaster (Jessop & Pickup). Com. Jemmett: Oct. 4 and Nov. 1, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sol. Cobbett & Wheeler, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 13.

MAITLAND, FRANCIS, Grocer & Tea Dealer, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Com. Ellison: Oct. 2, at 11.30; and Oct. 30, at 12; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sol. J. & R. S. Watson, Dean-street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Sept. 13.

MORGAN, JAMES, Printer, Stationer, & Bookseller, 48, Upper Marylebone-street, Portland-place, Middlesex. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 1, at 11; and Nov. 4, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Paterson & Longman, 3, Winchester-buildings, London. Pet. Sept. 19.

SHACKELL, THOMAS, Woollen Merchant, High-street, Bristol. Com. Hill: Sept. 30 and Oct. 29, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sol. Miller, Bristol. Pet. Sept. 16.

TALL, JOHN, Tar & Turpentine Distiller, Kingston-upon-Hull (John Tall & Co.). Com. Ayrton: Oct. 2 and 30, at 12; Kingston-upon-Hull. Off. Ass. Carrick. Sol. England, Saxelbye, & Roberts, Hull. Pet. Sept. 5.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

FRIDAY, Sept. 20, 1861.

SUGDEN, JOHN, Builder, 1, Charles-terrace, Paxton Park, Sydenham, Kent. Sept. 17.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Sept. 17, 1861.

WILLIAM MATTHIAS BRUSTER, Letter Press Printer, Swansea, Glamorgan-shire. Oct. 9, at 11; Basinghall-street.—JAMES ALFRED AXTELL, WILLIAM RUDD KNIGHTS, & WILLIAM AXTELL, Tanners, 1, White's-grounds, Bermondsey, Surrey, and of St. Neots, Huntingdonshire. Oct. 9, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM BOUND, Jun., Corn & Seed Merchant, Hanworthy, Poole, and Paradise-street, Poole. Oct. 9, at 12; Basinghall-street.—NATHAN AARON JOSEPH, Importer of Foreign Goods, 19, Vine-street, Minorities, London (N. A. Joseph & Co.). Oct. 10, at 1; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS NEWMAN, General Shop Keeper, Hindolveston, Norfolk. Oct. 10, at 11; Basinghall-street.—HENRY NORRIS & WILLIAM NORRIS, Jun., Builders, Maro-street, Hackney, Middlesex (Norris Brothers). Oct. 10, at 12; Basinghall-street.—ARTHUR SMITH, Engineer, Paragon-buildings, New Kent-road, Surrey. Oct. 12, at 11; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS TUCKER, Jun., Lamp Manufacturer, Gas Fitter, & Dealer in Oil and Candles, 190, Strand, and Essex Works, Water-street, Strand (Tucker & Son). Oct. 12, at 12; Basinghall-street.—EDWARD JOHN HEARD & JAMES JOHN WALTERS, Packing Case Manufacturers, Norway Wharf, Wapping Wall, Middlesex; joint estate. Oct. 10, at 12; Basinghall-street. Same time, separate estate of Edward John Heard.—MATRICE MONTFLORE JOSEPH & LUDOVICK CARMICHAEL, Merchants, Calcutta, and Liverpool (Montflore, Carmichael, & Co.). Oct. 9, at 12; Basinghall-street.—SUDAN CATHERINE HARRISON, Innkeeper, Ipswich. Oct. 10, at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—JOHN GURNEY MASON, Ironmonger, Ironmonger-street, Stamford, Lincolnshire. Oct. 10, at 12; Basinghall-street.—JAMES SMITH, Cartman and Contractor, 19, Hope Wharf, Macclesfield-street, City-road, Middlesex. Oct. 10, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM CASH, Grocer, High-street, Portland town, Middlesex, and Peterborough, Northamptonshire. Oct. 10, at 12; Basinghall-street.—ISAAC BROWN, Wine Merchant, late of Brabant-court, Philpot-lane, London, but now of 25, Philpot lane. Oct. 10, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—JOHN LARGE, Cattle & Sheep Salesman, Upton, Berks. Oct. 9, at 1; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE HENNER, Railway Contractor, Ship Owner, Engineer, Timber Merchant, Lime Burner, & Coal Merchant, 24, Duke-street, Westminster, Middlesex. Oct. 9, at 12; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE HORSLEY, Gas-fitter & Engineer, 13, West Front, Kingsland-place, Southampton. Oct.

10, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—JAMES FREDERICK INGLEDEW, Coal Merchant & Furniture Dealer, 20, St. James-street, and 7, Rock-place, Brighton. Oct. 10, at 11; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM PORTER, Linen Draper & Hatter, 5, Bond-street, Brighton. Oct. 8, at 11; Basinghall-street.—JAMES HERBERT SMITH, Tanner, Wyld's-tenns, Bermondsey, Surrey. Oct. 8, at 12; Basinghall-street.—EDWARD HERRING, Manufacturing Chemist, Trinity-street, Southwark, Surrey (British and Foreign Alkaloid Co.). Oct. 9, at 12; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH CHADWICK, Stone Merchant, Willington-wharf, Augustus-street, Regent's-park, Middlesex. Oct. 8, at 12; Basinghall-street.—JAMES THOMAS, Builder, Abingdon, Berks, and Brickmaker, Culham, Oxfordshire. Oct. 8, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—LEWIS POWELL, Builder, Plumber, Painter, Glazier, & Decorator, 2 Chapel-place, Cavendish-square, Middlesex (Lewis Powell & Co.). Oct. 8, at 11; Basinghall-street.—FREDERICK FRANCIS FOX, Tailor, 131, Fenchurch-street, London. Oct. 8, at 11; Basinghall-street.—CHARLES McLOUGHLIN, Gun Maker, 69, High-street, Cheltenham, Gloucestershire. Oct. 10, at 11; Bristol.—JAMES ROGERSON, Linen and Woollen Draper, East Hartlepool, Durham. Oct. 10, at 12; Newcastle-upon-Tyne.—JAMES WILLIAM GREGORY, Grocer, Halifax. Oct. 11, at 11; Leeds.—MAJOR GLUCKSTEIN, Tobacconist, Leeds. Oct. 8, at 11; Leeds.—DAVID APPLEYARD, THOMAS WIGGLESWORTH, JOHN EGHERTON, & ENGINEER CLEGG, Machine Makers, Leeds. Oct. 10, at 12; Leeds.—SAMUEL LEES, Grocer & Draper, Meltham, Almondsbury, York. Oct. 10, at 12; Leeds.—JONATHAN HAINSWORTH, Plumber & Glazier, Halifax. Oct. 8, at 11; Leeds.—THOMAS GOMLAY, Draper, Bradford. Oct. 8, at 11; Leeds.—JOSEPH HAMERTON, Worsted Manufacturer, Dam Head Mill, Shibden, Yorkshire. Oct. 8, at 11; Leeds.—ARTHUR JACKSON & RICHARD MICHELS EASTMAN, Brokers & Commission Agents, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 12; Leeds. Sep. est. of Richard Michele Eastman.—EDWARD HEATHCOTE, Grocer, Rock Ferry, Chester. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.—JAMES BROADBENT HERBERT & EDWARD HINDLEY, Coal Factors, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.—THOMAS ISLAM & VINCENT WANO-STROCHT, Brokers & Shipowners, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.—WILLIAM FAWCETT, Merchant & Iron Founder, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.—JOHN ANDREW CHRISTIAN REIMANN & JOHN GEORGE GILLER, Merchants, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.—JOHN ULWIN, Baker & Flour & Provision Dealer, Seacombe, Cheshire. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.—RAINES WAITE APPLETON, Merchant, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.—JOHN MERTON & THOMAS BRECK INGHAM, Glass Manufacturers, St. Helens, Lancashire. Oct. 8, at 11; Liverpool. Sep. est. of John Merton.—CHARLES BRITAIN, Builder & Brick Maker, Dacre-hill, Bebbington, Cheshire. Oct. 8, at 11; Liverpool.—THOMAS PUGH JONES, Boot & Shoe Manufacturer, 108, Mill-street, Toxteth-park, Liverpool, and 106, Brownlow-hill, Liverpool. Oct. 8, at 11; Liverpool.—JOSEPH R. PIM, Brickmaker, Birkenhead, Cheshire. Oct. 8, at 11; Liverpool.—HUGH MACKAY & WILLIAM BISHTON DAVIES, Shipwrights Ship Dealers, Liverpool. Oct. 8, at 11; Liverpool.—ENOCH FAIRBANKS, Grocer, Ormskirk, Lancashire. Oct. 8, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN MOSSET, Provision Dealer, Liverpool. Oct. 8, at 11; Liverpool.—JAMES MORISON & LARS OSCAR ABELIN, Ship Chandlers, Liverpool. Oct. 8, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN WILKINSON, Iron Master, Brynbo, Denbigh. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.—HENRY DAVIES & WILLIAM DAVIES, Stock & Share Brokers, Liverpool. Oct. 7, at 12; Liverpool.

FRIDAY, Sept. 20, 1861.

GEORGE PERKINS, Earthenware Dealer, Bank-street, Ashford, Kent. Oct. 11, at 12; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM ROBERTS, Grocer, King's Lynn, Norfolk. Oct. 21, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—JOHN WILLIAM NYREN & ADAM WILSON, Colour Manufacturers, Battersea, Surrey. Oct. 29, at 12; Basinghall-street; sep. est. of Adam Wilson.—JAMES CAUDWELL, Coal & Coke Merchant, Southwell, Nottingham. Oct. 10, at 11; Nottingham (and not Birmingham, as advertised in Gazette of the 10th Inst.).—JOHN HOBSON, Grocer, Leeds. Oct. 11, at 11; Leeds.—THOMAS HASTINGS INWIN, Stock & Share Broker, Liverpool. Sept. 10, at 11; Liverpool.—ELIEZER TIMWELL, Cart Owner & Carrier, 7, Castle-street, Kirkdale, Lancaster. Oct. 11, at 11; Liverpool.—WILLIAM HENRY NORTH, Grocer, Liverpool. Oct. 11, at 11; Liverpool.—JOHN CUBBON, Joiner & Builder, Liverpool. Oct. 11, at 11; Liverpool.—RICHARD HARRISON & JOHN SHERRATT, Builders & Timber Merchants, Saint Helens, Lancashire; also separate estate of John Sherratt. Oct. 11, at 11; Liverpool.

UNITED KINGDOM LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 8, WATERLOO PLACE, Pall Mall, LONDON, S.W.

The Hon. FRANCIS SCOTT, CHAIRMAN.

CHARLES BERWICK CURTIS, Esq., DEPUTY CHAIRMAN.

Fourth Division of Profits.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Parties desirous of participating in the fourth division of profits to be declared on policies effected prior to the 31st of December, 1861, should make immediate application. There have already been three divisions of profits, and the bonuses divided have averaged nearly 2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, or from 30 to 100 per cent. on the premiums paid, without the risk of co-partnership.

To show more clearly what these bonuses amount to, the three following cases are given as examples:

Sum Insured.	Bonuses added.	Amount payable upto Dec., 1854.
£5,000	£1,987 10	£6,987 10
1,000	379 10	1,379 10
100	39 15	139 15

Notwithstanding these large additions, the premiums are on the lowest scale compatible with security; in addition to which advantages, one-half of the premiums may, if desired, for the term of five years, remain unpaid at 5 per cent. interest, without security or deposit of the policy.

The assets of the Company at the 31st December, 1860, amounted to £730,000 7s. 10d., all of which had been invested in Government and other approved securities.

No charge for Volunteer Military Corps while serving in the United Kingdom.

Policy stamps paid by the office.

For prospectuses, &c., apply to the Resident Director, No. 8, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall.

By order,

E. L. BOYD, Resident Director.

GUARDIAN FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, No. 11, Lombard-street, London, E.C.

Established 1821.

CAPITAL SUBSCRIBED, TWO MILLIONS. PAID UP, ONE MILLION.

DIRECTORS.

HENRY VIGORS, Esq., Chairman.

Sir MILES T. FARQUHAR, Bart., M.P., Deputy Chairman.

Henry Hulse Berens, Esq.

Charles William Curtis, Esq.

Chas. F. Deves, Esq.

Francis Hart Dyke, Esq.

Sir Walter R. Farquhar, Bart.

Thomson Hankey, Esq., M.P.

John Harvey, Esq.

John G. Hubbard, Esq., M.P.

John Labouchere, Esq.

John Martin, Esq.

Rowland Mitchell, Esq.

James Morris, Esq.

Henry Norman, Esq.

Henry R. Reynolds, Esq.

John Thornton, Esq.

James Tulloch, Esq.

AUDITORS.

Lewis Lloyd, Esq.

John Henry Smith, Esq.

Henry Sykes Thomson, Esq.

Cornelius Payne, Jun., Esq.

Thomas Tallmarch, Esq., Secretary. — Samuel Brown, Esq., Actuary.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to new Insurers EIGHTY PER CENT of the PROFITS, AT QUINQUENNIAL DIVISIONS, OR A LOW RATE OF PREMIUM, without participation of Profits.

Since the establishment of the Company in 1821, the Amount of Profits allotted to the Assured has exceeded in Cash value £600,000, which represents equivalent Reversionary Bonuses of £1,056,000.

After the Division of Profits at Christmas, 1859, the Life Assurances in force, with existing Bonuses thereon, amounted to upwards of £4,730,000, the Income from the Life Branch £307,000 per annum, and the Life Assurance Fund, independent of the Capital, exceeded £1,615,000.

LOCAL MILITIA AND VOLUNTEER CORPS.—No extra Premium is required for service therein.

INVALID LIVES assured at corresponding Extra Premiums.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, if such value be not less than £50.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written notices of, received and registered.

MEDICAL FEES paid by the Company, and no charge for Policy Stamp.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That FIRE Policies which expire at Michaelmas must be renewed within fifteen days at this Office, or with Mr. SAMS, No. 1, St. James's-street, Corner of Pall Mall; or with the Company's Agents throughout the kingdom; otherwise they become void. Losses caused by Explosion of Gas are admitted by this Company.

BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT, LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited).

17, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.

Capital, £300,000, in 30,000 shares of £10 each. £3 per share paid.

CHAIRMAN.

METCALF HOPGOOD, Esq., Bishopsgate-street.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. PATTESON & CORBOLD, 2, Bedford-row.

MANAGER.

CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Esq., 17, New Bridge-street.

INVESTMENTS.—The present rate of interest on money deposited with the Company for fixed periods, or subject to an agreed notice of withdrawal, is 5 per cent.

LOANS.—Advances are made, in sums from £50 to £1,000, upon approved personal and other security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over any period not exceeding 10 years.

Applications for the new issue of Shares may be made to the Secretary, of whom Prospectuses, the last Annual Report, and every information can be obtained.

JOSEPH E. JACKSON, Secretary.

LONDON INVESTMENT COMPANY.—Forty £10 Shares for Sale, £3 paid. May be had a bargain. Interest at the rate of 10 per cent. received the last three years.

Apply by letter, N. & B., 30, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn.

AGENTS' REGISTER: Being a complete Alphabetical Index of the Principal Towns of the United Kingdom, with space for inserting the Names of Agents, &c., for the use of Insurance and other offices. Large Post Folio, price £3 2s.

London: YATES & ALEXANDER, Horsehoe-court, 21a, Ludgate-hill.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO GUINEA BINOCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS sent carriage free, on receipt of post-office order, to any part of the United Kingdom. The extraordinary power of this instrument renders it adapted to answer the combined purposes of telescope and opera glass. It will define objects distinctly at ten miles distance; is suitable for the theatre, race-course, sportsmen, tourists, and general out-door observations. Only to be obtained of KEYZOR and BENDON (successors to Harris and Son), Opticians, 50, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Illustrated Price List of Optical and Mathematical Instruments free, on receipt of two stamps.

PICTURE FRAMES.—Cheap and Good Gilt Frames

for Oil Paintings, 2 1/2 by 3 1/2, 4 inches wide, 20s. Ornamental Frames for Drawings, 14: 7 1/2, 4 s. each. The Art Union Prints, framed in a superior style, at the lowest prices. Near gilt frames, for the Illustrated Portraits, 1s. 6d. each. Gilt Room Bordering at 4s. per yard. All paintings cleaned, lined, and restored; old frames re-gilt equal to new. The trade and country dealers supplied with gilt and fancy wood mouldings, print, &c. German Prints 3s. per dozen. Neat Gilt Frames, 17 by 13, with glass complete, 1s. 6d. each. CHARLES KEES, Carver, Gilder, Mount Maker, and Print Seller, 36, Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

FREEHOLD FOR SALE, near SLOUGH, a Comfortable Residence, and 26 acres of Land adjoining.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road.

SOMERSET.—Freehold Gentleman's Residence and 6 acres of Rich Pasture Land, FOR SALE. Price £2,500.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

BUCKINGHAM.—FOR SALE, Freehold Estate of 450 acres, lying in a ring fence.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.—FOR SALE, Freehold Estate of about 200 acres, lying in a ring fence.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

BERKSHIRE, near ASCOT.—For SALE, a Freehold Cottage Residence and 11 Acres of Land. Price £1,000.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

SHOOTING over 1,000 Acres, Exclusive Right, a few miles from Town, near railway station.

For particulars apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Auctioneer, &c., City-road.

THOSE WHO ARE ABOUT TO PURNISH

should visit G. I. THOMPSON'S extensive Stock of Furnishing Ironmongery, Electro-Silver Plate, Fenders, Fire-bricks, Japan and Paper Maché Trays, Baths, Toilette Furniture, Gas Chandeliers, Moderator Lamps. All articles marked in plain figures.

THOMPSON'S Electro Silver Spoons, 2s.; Forks, 2s. 6d.

THOMPSON'S Ivory Balance Table Knives, 16s.; 22s.; 26s. 6d.

25, FINSBURY-PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to Railway Stations. Send for a Furnishing List.

IMPORTER OF PURE COCA OIL.

KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER AND CORK FLOORCLOTH. Warm, soft, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

F. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Watling-st., London, E.C.

Manufacture—South London Works, Lambeth.

TRELOAR'S CORK FLOOR CLOTH, or KAMPTULICON, CHOCOLATE MATTING, and DOOR MATS. Best quality and moderate prices.

T. TRELOAR, Manufacturer, 41, Ludgate-hill, London.

ALBION SNELL, Watchmaker and Jeweller, has removed to his New Premises, 114, High Holborn, seven doors east of King-street, where he respectfully solicits an inspection of his new and well-selected stock.

JOHN GOSNELL & CO., PERFUMERS TO THE QUEEN, beg to recommend the following Fashionable and Superior Articles for the TOILET to the especial notice of all purchasers of Choice PERFUMERY.

John Gosnell & Co.'s JOCKEY CLUB PERFUME is universally requested as the most admired perfume for the handkerchief, price 2s. 6d.

John Gosnell & Co.'s LA NOBLESSE PERFUME—a most delicate perfume of exquisite fragrance.

John Gosnell & Co.'s GARIBOLDI BOUQUET—a most chosen and fashionable perfume.

John Gosnell & Co.'s RUSSIAN LEATHER PERFUME—a very substantial and agreeable perfume.

John Gosnell & Co.'s BALL-ROOM COMPANION or FOXTAILED PERFUMES. Elegant Novelties, in the form of Portable Handkerchief Perfumes in a neat case, which emits on pressure a jet of most refreshing perfume. Price 1s. and 1s. 6d. each.

John Gosnell & Co.'s LA NOBLESSE POMADE—elegantly perfumed, and highly recommended for beautifying and promoting the growth of the Hair.

John Gosnell & Co.'s GOLDEN OIL—Mouline—Mourner Oil—Bran Grease, &c., for the Hair.

John Gosnell & Co.'s CHERRY TOOTH PASTE is greatly superior to any Tooth Powder, gives the Teeth a pearl-like whiteness, protects the enamel from decay, and imparts a pleasing fragrance to the breath.

John Gosnell & Co.'s AMBEROIAL SHAVING CREAM, 1s. and 1s. 6d. in pots; also, in compressible tubes, for the convenience of persons travelling. price 1s.

Manufacture, 12, Three King-court, Lombard-street, London.

VIRGIN VINEGAR for PICKLING, warranted made from Malt only, and perfectly pure. Families supplied.

SARSON & SON, near the Gate, City-road. Carriers call daily.

CHEDDAR LOAF CHEESE. 6jd. and 7jd. per lb.; fine ditto ditto, 9jd. per lb.; ripe Stilton, 7d. to 1s. per lb.; small Dutch Tongues, 2s. 6d. per half dozen; prime Ox ditto, 2s. 3d. each, or three for 6s. 6d. Osborne's best-smoked Breakfast Bacon is now in excellent cure, and Butters in perfection, at reasonable rates; other first-class provisions equally moderate; packages gratis.—OSBORNE'S Cheese Warehouse, Osborne House, 30, Ludgate-hill, near St. Paul's, E.C.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

* Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 28, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Mr. Goulburn, the Commissioner in Bankruptcy, has again declared his resolution not to hear in court the clerk of an attorney. The appearance, he says, must be either by the party in person, or by his attorney; otherwise the summons must be dismissed. With reference to the enforcement of this rule under the new Act, it must be understood as referring solely to such clerks of solicitors as have been already admitted solicitors of the Court of Chancery. The rule, with respect to all other persons, has been expressly laid down by the Legislature. The 212th section of the new Bankruptcy Act, which empowers solicitors to appear and plead in the Court of Bankruptcy, contains also this provision that in case any person not being such solicitor—that is to say, not being a solicitor of the Court of Chancery, who has been admitted as a solicitor of the Court of Bankruptcy—shall practise in the Court as a solicitor, he shall be deemed guilty of a contempt of court, and be liable to all the penalties incident thereto. This language is sufficiently explicit, and the only question that can arise is whether a clerk of a solicitor, being himself also a solicitor, is to be at liberty to appear in place of his principal, on behalf either of the debtor or of his creditor. The objections to such a provision have not been very distinctly shown. If the head of a firm, not choosing or being too much occupied to appear in person, thinks proper to delegate his duty of advocate to another solicitor or attorney, who is retained in his own office, he does so at his own risk, and that of his client. He is no more likely to endanger the interests of his client by employing an unduly qualified person, than he would be likely to damage a cause in the courts of law or chancery by securing the services of an inefficient counsel. Every security that can be required or can be obtained by the Court is present in the fact of the advocate being an admitted solicitor or attorney, and, consequently, subject to the jurisdiction of the Court. But the case seems to us to be placed beyond doubt by the language of the 212th section, which expressly states, that "every solicitor," now or hereafter admitted, may practise; and that in case any person, "not being such solicitor," shall practise, he is to be deemed guilty of a contempt. The learned Commissioner proceeded to say, it had been suggested that before the hearing of any attorney, he be bound to produce a retainer, to show that he has been retained by the client as attorney in the case; also that before the hearing of an attorney's clerk in chambers, he be bound to show that he is in fact the representative of a professional man. The reasons for the former suggestion we have yet to learn. The appearance of a solicitor or attorney, whether principal or not, in Court, on behalf of a client, one would suppose to be sufficiently good prima facie evidence of his authority to attend; and when coupled with his assurance to that effect, to be beyond question, except upon the distinct statement to the contrary, of the client himself. If a solicitor or attorney is not to be believed in making a personal statement in open court, the sooner the 212th section is repealed the better. The two simple questions—For whom do you appear, Mr. So-and-So? Are you instructed?—admit only of the simplest form of answer, the latter, indeed, consisting of only one of two monosyllables, aye or no. The precaution with regard to the hearing of a clerk in chambers is another matter. Such a clerk would not be, and often is not a solicitor; his responsibility and self consideration are less; and some security against irregularity in such a case may be desirable. But until we have heard good grounds to the contrary, we cannot but think the requirement of a retainer from an attorney or solicitor who appears on behalf of a client in court would be a vexatious as well as an unnecessary precaution.

THE THIRD CAUSE CELEBRE.

The Rugby proceedings have incurred and surmounted the recent danger of a collapse, like that which reduced the Twickenham domestic drama from a deep-laid scheme of murder by an avaricious father to an unhappy mistake in using the wrong end of a riding-whip in a fit of parental displeasure. The treacherous breakfast at the Clarendon, the alluring visit to the ex-Royal Family of France, the wrapt mood of the Baron on the highway, his abrupt and ill-explained departure from it, the young man's undefined dread, the mysterious threading of bye-lanes—all, in fact, that gave such hopeful newspaper promise that the Vidil trial would prove a worthy follower to the Northumberland-street pistolling and braining case, flashed in the judicial pan. A squamish casuistry set some notion or other of filial duty above the rightful expectations and vested interests of justice and of the reporters. Talk of judges frustrated at the expense of a month in gaol; consider a judicial public disappointed at a time when the serial of exciting crime is coming out in illustrated monthly numbers—when newspaper pen-cunning is rising up to, and a little above, the occasion, with paper itself on the very eve of freedom. There, a tale, standing at the creditable figure of £20,000 under settlement, was as effectually snatched from society as if a manuscript of Mr. Harrison Ainsworth, proofs, copies, and copper-plates, had perished in the fire at Longman's. And now Mr. Philbrick would sacrifice to a dry, selfish exercise of his supposed duty, as counsel for Mr. Richard Guinness Hill, otherwise "R. Hill," an opening romance of £14,000 a-year. Let us treat such a case with the respect which it deserves.

As early as last Monday week, before evidence had been taken, all had been written up to the proper pitch. Mr. Brett, of the London detectives, had, by extraordinary ability, perseverance, and foresight, penetrated what was called the atmosphere of mystery, and had overcome insurmountable difficulties. Grouping together a £20 reward, a gentleman of about thirty and five feet six inches, a stout woman of forty, another, dark, thin, and tall, a large double plaid shawl, dark green and blue, rather faded, and a fine healthy boy, a placard brought Mr. Brett to an interview with the woman Mackay. Though she had but a two years' remembrance of a child's cry heard for a couple of nights through a partition, she thus put one end of the labyrinthine coil between the detective finger and thumb, and at the other end was found the "heir to £14,000 a-year" (under a settlement again, by-the-bye) with nothing on but a dirty rag, and covered with vermin and filth, in a little room up two pair in a foul alley of St. Giles', his companions being an unclad dying man in the corner of the chamber, and some most ragged and miserable women squatting over the floor. The heir's toes were depicted as terribly scored with wounds from walking barefoot on stones, and his head and body as marked with ill-usage. From this den Mr. Brett escapes, as Rolla or his representative may be seen in the picture, with the child held aloft, except that the intrepid police officer had to pay his way "through the swarm of people that blocked up every means of egress." We must not meanly stay here to inquire whether this be not a vigorous allusion to some one or two women who called down stairs after descending Rolla, something about a pint or other familiar measure of female drink in St. Giles', for which bounty, flushed at the professional success of the rescue, he undrew his heart and purse strings. Mr. Brett, with the heir and its foster mother or proprietress, Mrs. Andrews, at length alight from a cab at the office of Mr. Cooke, the solicitor. Thereabouts, we may imagine, was first disclosed the history of the shilling retainer slipped by the gentleman into her mendicant hand; the retreat into the dimly-lighted entry; the wardship negotiation; the appointment at the same dimly-lighted entry for the following night; her conference with the dark, tall, thin woman, the gipsy, Mrs. Scott, alias Idle, cashier in the business, and now under imprisonment for robbery; the contract of wardship; the night appointment opposite Euston Station; the completion of the contract; the additional term somewhat irregularly imposed pro re nata by the gipsy for the shawl; its pledge and redemption; the baby-linen box with the linen marks cut out (by the gentleman, of course, according to the reporters); the second inexact St. Giles' registration, "to make all right," of the heir, as Albert Farebrother; his workhouse sojourn on a particular occasion when Mrs. Andrews' tutelage happened to be suspended by an absence over which she had no control; and, in general, the touching addition made by him weekly to the Andrews' family tableau as, on Saturday nights, it would stand before the gas-flare on the gutter slope, with all the outward cleanliness and resignation which betokened the respectable memory of better days. Such were the salient touches in the extra-judicial narrative presented by the gentlemen of the daily press, not omitting the deferential courtesy which they have paid to their valued fountains of daily "copy," "Mr." Policeman Brett, with all his qualities; "Mrs." Gipsy Scott, otherwise Idle, now of Tothill Fields; and "Mrs." Beggarwoman Andrews.

Some two years before the detective exploits in St. Giles', and about the time of the stolen meetings and contract of wardship in Windmill-street, two other events occurred. Amy Georgina, née Burdett, wife of Richard Guinness Hill, Esq., of St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, being with child, and on her way to London at her desire to lie in there, was taken suddenly in labour. Stopping at the Globe, in Railway-terrace, Rugby, she was delivered of a boy by a surgeon of the place. The babe, when ten days old, was wrapped in a shawl, and with a box of linen was sent under a girl's care, in Hill's company, to London, to be nursed. The other event was, that two days after this birth an informant, whose signature to the Rugby register is sworn to be Richard Guinness Hill's, supplied the district registrar with particulars for an entry, giving as the date of birth the day Hill's own child was born; the sex, a boy; the father's name, "Robert Hill," the mother's, "Mary Hill, formerly Seymour;" and the description and residence of the informant, "father, 42, Railway-terrace," that being also the number in the terrace of the house known as the Globe. Now, it is enacted by the 41st section of the Act for registering Births, Deaths, and Marriages in England (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86), that every person who shall wilfully make or cause to be made, for the purpose of being inserted in any register of birth, death, or marriage, any false statement touching any of the particulars in the Act required to be known and registered, shall be subject to the same pains and penalties as if he were guilty of perjury. These particulars required to be known and registered are found in the form of schedule (A.) to the Act, according to which form the Registrar-General is, by the 17th section, to cause register books to be printed for making entries. Under the 41st section a charge has been laid against Hill, on the hearing of which on remand last Monday, by the magistrates at Rugby, Mr. Philbrick raised a point of great legal interest, to say nothing of its importance to the biographical stir made in the reports that used to follow but now precede the hearing of criminal accusations.

The bulk of the evidence was directed to prove, by recognition of the women, the shawl, and the box, that the gentleman and Richard Guinness Hill were one, and that the child found by Brett really was the heir to the £14,000 a-year, or rather the owner of the capital of £5,000 in possession and £9,000 in reversion, for to that more moderate garniture the narrative became sobered down at the hearing. To the admission of any of this evidence — and, indeed, of all evidence relating or subsequent to the nurse-girl's departure, as being evidence totally irrelevant to the charge of falsifying the register — the counsel of the accused made reiterated objections; and he required from the magistrates a formal decision, as it might be necessary to refer to the matter in another place. They held that the evidence was admissible, as of things incidental to the matter before the Court.

In this state of the question we need scarcely say that it is not our intention to anticipate the legal argument which will be heard in the proper place on the reception of the greatest part of the evidence which has hitherto been taken. That evidence of facts posterior to and in themselves distinct from an offence charged may be admitted is undoubted. For instance, Manning and his wife murdered O'Connor in the evening and buried him in the night; the next morning she went to his lodgings and rifled his cash box. These facts were given in evidence. The disposal of the body might certainly be regarded as a continuation of the act of murder. The robbery was incidental to the act of murder only so far as the murder was a step necessary for the accomplishment of the subsequent act — in short, so far as the two crimes were part of one plan. The same theory would apply to the trial for Mrs. Elmsley's murder, a still stronger case of the admission of evidence of subsequent facts. This, on the first impression, independently of authority, is the test by which we must try the relevancy of the evidence objected to in the Rugby case. Assuming that according to the story told by the newspapers, and on one side of the case — which, however, we beg leave to say we treat at present as only one side — Hill had been desirous of dealing with his child for any purpose of his own succession to property, which purpose required him to endeavour to obliterate all traces of the existence of this inconvenient owner of the £14,000, what would be the bearing of a false registration on the accomplishment of such an intention? If the registration of a birth were a duty made obligatory as a consequence to the birth, the London and Rugby facts might seem to hang inseparably together. But if the registration of the child Hill was a voluntary act of the father, it can scarcely be said that a false registration was more likely to obliterate traces than no registration at all. The 20th section of the Act provides only that the father or mother of every child, or in case of the death, illness, absence, or inability of the father and mother, the occupier of the house or tenement in which such child shall have been born, shall, within forty-two days next after the day of every such birth, give information, "upon being requested so to do," to the registrar, according to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, of the several particulars required by the Act to be known and registered touching the birth of such child. The district registrar who made the entry of the Hill birth has since died. There is no evidence that he requested information from Richard Guinness Hill or from any other person respecting the child born at the Globe; and as it is proved by the evidence of the superintendent registrar that the district officer was then almost past business by reason of infirmity, no presumption will arise that he did make any such request.

Whatever be the ultimate decision on the point of evidence, or, indeed, the issue of the Rugby proceedings, the facts which have come out in the course of them, and are undisputed, will not increase public confidence in the system of registration. The object of such registration being to establish and preserve evidence, the practical working of the system is that a resident in Dublin, casually stopping at a way-side inn, may describe himself as residing at that inn, not calling it by its well-known name, but by the number which it may happen to occupy in the street or terrace. And the further practical working is, that the child registered at Rugby as a Robert Hill by its unavouched father is again registered in London in a speculative way as Albert Farebrother, by a woman who has no legally definable relation to or connection with it. Again, a district registrar verging upon three-score years and sixteen, whose infirmities are growing upon him so that he is almost past work, who has to travel round his district after his feet have failed him, who mis-spells words, inserts superfluous letters and smears out others, writes December with an o, and has been reported at head quarters by his superintendent for irregularities and inaccuracies in keeping the register, is continued for fifteen months longer, recording marriages, births, and deaths, though the district does not meanwhile stop that rite or its duties, or keep off the grim one who, with impartial tread, knocks at the cottages of the poor and the towers of kings. Such an exhibition of the operation of the registration system will, it may be hoped, afford ground in the next session of Parliament for overhauling it altogether, and will, in that expectation, we have no doubt, stimulate the officials themselves to set their house in better order before February.

Another fact in connection with the enforcement of the law against Richard Guinness Hill demands a brief notice. A warrant had been issued some months ago for his apprehension. He was in Brussels, living within reach of, though not conjugally with, his wife. There is no extradition treaty between this country and Belgium. Hence we have the edifying spectacle of a police contrivance, by which Mrs. Hill was to come to England as a bait to lure her husband within the jurisdiction of the detective. The bait certainly took, so that after quitting Brussels the prey found himself on the floor of the Rugby Court before he had time to change his clothes. It is not easy to understand why a convention should not be made with Belgium, similar at least to those with France and America. Not, however, that these conventions and the Acts made to give effect to them, authorise extradition for any alleged crime other than, in the case of France, murder, attempt to murder, forgery, and fraudulent bankruptcy; and, in the case of America, murder, assault with intent to commit murder, piracy, arson, robbery, forgery and utterance of forged paper. Perjury, for some reason which we are at a loss to discover, enjoys international immunity and protection. There is an equally unaccountable difference in the international estimate of crime between the one convention and the other. This subject appears to be also one to which legislative attention may be renewed, now that intercourse and facility of passage between England and other countries are so much greater than they were even in 1843, when the present conventions were made.

The Courts, Appointments, Promotions, Vacancies, &c.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN.)

Sept. 20.—In the matter of a trader debtor summons.—Mr. George, solicitor for the alleged debtor, objected that the attorney's clerk, who appeared on the other side, could not be heard.

Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN said he would once again state that he could not hear the clerk of an attorney. If there was no appearance either in person or by attorney, the summons must be dismissed.

Subsequently counsel was instructed, and the summons stood over.

Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN said he would be very glad of any suggestion from Mr. Bagley, or any other member of the bar at this court, respecting the rule to be enforced under the new statute in reference to the hearing of attorneys. It had been suggested that before the hearing of any attorney he shall be bound to produce a retainer, or some other writing, to show that he has been retained by the client as attorney in the case; also that before the hearing of an attorney's clerk in chambers he shall be bound to show that he is, in fact, the representative of a professional gentleman.

Mr. Bagley said the suggestions referred to were well worthy of consideration.

Mr. Philip William Lovett, Guildford, Surrey, has been appointed a perpetual commissioner for taking the acknowledgments of deeds by married women, for the county of Surrey.

Recent Decisions.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

ATTESTATION OF WILL—SIGNATURE OF WITNESS.

Hindmarsh v. Charlton, 9 W. R. 521.

The judgment of the House of Lords in this case was directed to a technical question—the elucidation of an arbitrary rule which has been laid down by the Legislature as one of the criteria of validity to be applied to the attestation of a will. The limits of the subject are necessarily narrow; but Hindmarsh v. Charlton follows a series of antecedent decisions, a summary of which will illustrate the working of the statute, and show what kind and degree of formal observance will satisfy the requirements of the law, and what amount of departure from the letter of the rule will vitiate a testamentary instrument. The subject may be well introduced by reference to the language of Lord Cranworth, who observes that “for the security of mankind, the Legislature has thought fit to prescribe certain forms and rules which are necessary to be complied with in order to authorise a different distribution of property from that which the law would make, if there were no will. That it is reasonable that, under these circumstances, there should be some rules, no one can doubt; and the rules being established, the House, as the ultimate court of appeal, would ill discharge its duty if it listened to the suggestions of minute differences which would not meet the ordinary apprehensions of mankind, and which would necessarily or naturally lead to great discussions and litigation.”

The enactment bearing on the subject is the 9th section of the Statute of Wills, 1 Vict. c. 26 (1838), by which it is declared “that no will shall be valid unless it shall be in writing, and executed in manner hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, it shall be signed at the foot or end thereof by the testator, or by some other person in his presence and by his direction, and such signature shall be made or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time, and such witnesses shall attest and shall subscribe the will in the presence of the testator, but no form of attestation shall be necessary.”

The case before us turns solely upon what is required of the testator in relation with the two witnesses, and upon what is required of them; and it will be observed that the statute insists, first, that the testator shall “make or acknowledge” his signature “in their presence;” and second, that they shall “attest and subscribe” his will “in the presence of the testator,” and declares that no will shall be valid unless these rules are complied with. The two essential requirements, therefore, are (1) the “presence” of witnesses when the testator signs or acknowledges, and (2) a “signature” by them; and on both these points a number of difficulties have occurred. We discuss here all cases turning upon the presence, in point of locality, of the witnesses, as to what amount of contiguity to, and visibility by, the testator, &c., will constitute presence in the legal sense. The law is laid down in a line of authorities, of which Tod v. Winchelsea (1826), 2 Carr. & P. 491, s. o. 3 Russ. 421, is a leading case under the old law; and Norton v. Bazell (1856), 1 D. & Sm. 259, under the new; but nothing of this kind arose in Hindmarsh v. Charlton. In this case the simple facts were that the deceased produced his alleged will to Mr. W. in the morning, and acknowledged his signature, whereupon Mr. W. signed as witness. In the afternoon, Mr. W. being present, the will was again produced, and the signature acknowledged by the testator to him and the second witness, who there and then attested it, and signed his name. Mr. W. did not sign again; he only made a slight addition to his former signature by crossing an "F," and he also inserted a date. Here it will be observed that until the afternoon no signature, or acknowledgment of signature, by the testator in the joint presence of the two witnesses, such as the statute requires, had been made. Consequently Mr. W.'s signature on the morning must be held (1) to have amounted to nothing, unless (2) his acknowledgment in the afternoon of his previous signature could be held to be a sufficient signature under the statute, or (3) his mark on the letter "F" could be held to amount to a fresh signature.

1. It was decided not long after the passing of the Wills Act, Re Byrd (1842), 3 Curt. 117, that where a will was propounded, which had been signed by the deceased after the witnesses had subscribed their names, the witnesses having verified the signing by the deceased by putting their seals opposite to their signatures, the document was inadmissible. Where, on the other hand, a testatrix produced a codicil all in her own handwriting, and with her signature attached; and two witnesses, who were present at the same time, at her request, made their marks thereto, and the testatrix afterwards wrote the witnesses' names opposite their respective marks, by mistake giving to one of them a wrong surname, the will was admitted; Re Ashmore (1843), 3 Curt. 756. There it was considered that there was an acknowledgement under the statute, which was sufficient. The next case is perfectly reconcilable with the preceding, though it led to an opposite result. Two persons subscribed a will in the presence of L. and of each other—L. having previously, in their presence, acknowledged the said paper to be his will. The witnesses did not see L. sign his name to the paper, nor did they, at the time of subscribing their names to it, see his signature; the writing on the paper being purposely concealed from them. On the death of L. his signature was found at the end of the paper. It was held that this was not a valid will within the statute; for the reason that, although there was a signature, it was neither made nor acknowledged in the witnesses' presence, and non constat that it was not added afterwards; Hudson v. Parker (1844), 1 Rob. 14. If that had been so, the instrument would have been inadmissible. In Brenchley v. Still (1850), 1 Rob. 167, Sir H. J. Fust lays it down as perfectly clear, that if the witnesses subscribed before the deceased signed his name, there would not be a due execution. It is a necessary corollary to this, that if the witness subscribes, as in Hindmarsh v. Charlton, before the deceased makes acknowledgment of his signature, the execution is invalid.

2. The important question therefore arose, whether the acknowledgment by Mr. W. of his former signature was a sufficient attestation under the statute?

To this inquiry Moore v. King (1842), 3 Curt. 243, was in point. A testator signed a codicil in the presence of a witness, his sister, who at his desire attested and subscribed it. On the subsequent day, when his sister and another person were present, he desired her to bring him the codicil and requested the other person to attest and subscribe it, saying, whilst he pointed to his signature, "This is a codicil signed by myself and by my sister, as you see; you will oblige me if you add your signature, two witnesses being necessary." The other person then subscribed in the presence of the testator and his sister, the latter pointing to her signature and saying, "There is my signature; you had better put yours underneath." She did not, however, re-subscribe the document. This was held not to be a sufficient execution. A subsequent Privy Council case, Foulds v. Jackson (14th June, 1845), 6 Notes of Cas. supp. i., must be considered to have shaken the doctrine considerably, as to the necessity of the two witnesses being present together at the attestation. In that case it further appears that the testator endeavoured to conceal from one of the witnesses the fact that the instrument was his will. The decision must be treated as an exceptional one, particularly as in a case of Caement v. Fulton (25th July, 1845), 5 Moo. P. C. C. 130, one month afterwards, where the circumstances closely resembled those of Moore v. King, it was decided that the acknowledgment by a witness of his former separate signature on the occasion of the attestation by the second witness in the presence of the testator and the first witness, is not to be permitted. We next meet with a case of Re Webb (1855), 1 Deane & Sw. 1, in which, on the authority of an unreported case of Chodwick v. Palmer, Sir H. J. Fust is reported to have decided that "witnesses need not subscribe in the presence of each other;" that is to say, that the testator must either sign or acknowledge in the presence of both witnesses, and after such signature or acknowledgment both witnesses must sign, but not necessarily in each other's company. This decision, however, if it be law, has no immediate bearing on Hindmarsh v. Charlton. The remaining authority is one of Mitchell v. Huffington, decided in November, 1858, by the Irish Court of Probate. It was there held that where one of the attesting witnesses subscribes the will after the signature of the testator, but before execution in the presence of the other witness, the execution is bad, unless the first witness signs again. The judgment of the Lord Chancellor fully bears out this. He says, "An acknowledgment by the witness of his former signature is not sufficient." The option, therefore, of either signing or acknowledging his signature, which the law allows to the testator, is not permitted to the witness.

3. The enunciation of the above principle virtually decided the question in Hindmarsh v. Charlton. But there still remained the contention that the mark made by Mr. W. in the afternoon was equivalent to a new signature. The following authorities bear on this point, it being observed that we purposely omit all cases turning upon the circumstance of the witness not being able to write—which are numerous, but have no application to the present.

It has been held that where an attesting witness on re-execution traced over his signature with a dry pen, this was not a subscription, but only an acknowledgment of a former signature, and that it was insufficient under the statute; Playne v. Scriven (1849), 1 Rob. 772. It has also been held that writing the initials of witnesses is a sufficient subscription under the Act—that they are not required to write their names in full; Re Christian (1849), 2 Rob. 110; and even that an attestation by marks only on the part of witnesses who could write (their names having been already written in by somebody else, and there being no room between the names and the edge of the paper to have them written over again) was sufficient; Re Amias (1849), 2 Rob. 116. Another case very much resembling the present was Re Trevanion (1850), 2 Rob. 311. An attesting witness, having already duly attested and subscribed alone, on the second execution of the will merely added the word "Bristol" at the end of her name, and wrote the name of the street in which she resided over or upon her former execution. This was held to be imperfect, and probate was refused.

In conformity with the above authorities, especially Playne v. Scriven and Re Trevanion, it was found impossible, both in the Court of Probate below and on appeal in the House of Lords, to support the execution of the will in Hindmarsh v. Charlton. An acknowledgment on the part of a witness of a former signature is inadmissible, and crossing the letter "F" with a pen cannot be held to amount to a fresh signature. It does not necessarily follow if, after a testator has either signed or acknowledged his signature in the presence of both witnesses, they attest his signature each in his presence, but separately, and not in the presence of the other witness, that the attestation will be bad, but it is manifestly of the greatest importance that the two witnesses should, if possible, both sign at the same time, as the omission to do so may lead to much controversy.

Correspondence.

INVESTMENTS BY TRUSTEES.—EAST INDIA STOCK.

I may add other cases to those I cited on the above subject in your impression of the 7th instant,—namely, Re Frome's Estate, decided, 24th Feb. 1860, by Vice Chancellor Stuart. (8 W. R. 272.) on the authority of the Colne Valley Case, and Bishop v. Bishop, V.C.K., 19th April, 1861, (9 W. R. 549.) decided on the authority of Equitable Assurance Company v. Fuller. To return to B. P. A.'s queries: clearly the power of investment, where not expressly forbidden by the terms of the trust, now exists, as to both the old and the new East India Stock, and trustees will be protected who act bona fide to the best of their discretion under the power given. But the Court of Appeal in Chancery (by which I apprehend in future the other branches of the Court will be guided), has decided that it will not exercise the power (which the Court and trustees undoubtedly have), unless under very special circumstances—such, for example, as the exigencies of a family at the time of the application. Even in the case of Equitable Assurance Company v. Fuller, costs were refused, and apparently L. J. Turner was opposed to granting the application which, in effect, when before the Lords Justices, was to confirm the investment already made under order of the Court below. The proper course, then, to be taken as to the advice to be given to trustees must depend on the particular circumstances of each case, and the principles to be acted on must be extracted from the cited cases which have been before the Appeal Court: and trustees acting bonâ fide to the best of their discretion will be protected. G. C.

THE LAW LIST.

In the annual report of the Incorporated Law Society, published in your last Saturday's number, I see the council of the society refer to the plan for the first time adopted in this year's Law List, of inserting after attorneys' names published therein, all the places of business where they practise when more than one; and they say "it is expected that under the provisions of the Act, attorneys will insert those places only at which they have an office."

This naming of the different places where an attorney practises or professes to do so, is one of the most useful features of the new Law List, and it is with the object of making more precise the naming of these other places that attorneys enter themselves as practising at, that I suggest that in future, in the form of application for renewal of the annual certificate, attorneys should be obliged to state in cases where they practise at more than one place, (for instance) "I also have an office and practise at — and —," as the case may be. This would get rid of, to a great degree, attorneys putting themselves down as practising at their places of private residence, which is done in many cases at present. For instance, in the city of Bristol, I observe that some eight or nine attorneys there enter themselves as also practising at Clifton, which is a suburb of that city, not one of them having an office there, or being to be found there in business hours, but merely residing there, with their business offices in the city, the same as I am informed is the case with most of the Bristol attorneys, but who do not, however, profess to "practise" as such at their private residences. Round about London, Liverpool, Shrewsbury, and other places, the same thing occurs, the object being doubtless, as pointed out by another of your correspondents some time ago, to catch stray writs and legal documents. If some such plan as that suggested were adopted in future, the evil would no doubt be remedied, as no respectable attorney or solicitor would, I think, care to assert he had an "office" and "practised" at his private house, when, in fact, he was never known to transact any business there, but on the contrary would be only too likely to show the door to any man who came to him on an ordinary business matter there—especially if he called when my "gentleman" was enjoying his dolce far niente after dinner. FAIR PLAY.

GIFT, OR SETTLEMENT OF PERSONALTY.

Not having the Act for registering bills of sale at hand, would any of your practical and informed readers say whether a deed of assignment, or gift of household furniture by A. to trustees for benefit of his wife and children, would require to be registered. It would be an absolute grant. R E. J.

The Provinces.

BRADFORD.—At the monthly meeting of the Bradford town council on Tuesday, the 17th instant, Mr. J. Rayner, the late Secretary of the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce, was elected to the office of town clerk of Bradford, in the place of the late W. H. Hudson, Esq. There were nine other candidates, eight of whom ultimately withdrew, and the contest finally lay between Mr. Rayner and Mr. William T. McGowan, who has filled the important position of town clerk of Liverpool for the last eight years. Both candidates having been proposed and seconded, a vote was taken, when 32 voted for Mr. Rayner and 17 for Mr. McGowan. Mr. Rayner was then introduced into the council-room, and the mayor informed him of his success. Mr. Rayner, in returning thanks, said that, notwithstanding the very flattering testimonials which his friends had been good enough to shower down upon him, he felt sure the council would not expect him on that occasion to be equal to the task of acknowledging in adequate terms the very high honour they had been pleased to confer upon him. He could only say that he thanked them sincerely for the honour they had done him. In undertaking an office of that sort he should, under any circumstances, feel the great responsibility of doing so, but under present circumstances he felt it more especially in having to succeed a gentleman so able, worthy, and well qualified in all respects as their late lamented town clerk. He could only assure them that it would be his endeavour to tread in his footsteps. It might perhaps be too much to expect that he should ever stand so high in the estimation of the town council as the late town clerk did; but the fact of his having so brilliant an example before him would perhaps enable him to attain to a higher degree of excellence than he otherwise should. The duties and salary of the office were fixed to commence on the 1st of October next. The salary is £800 per annum.

Foreign Tribunals and Jurisprudence.

FRANCE.

In your number of the 29th of June last, you mention as affecting the wills of British subjects dying in France, a decision of the Imperial Court of Paris, on the will of Miss Kelly. I do not wonder at your taking notice of that judgment, as it must have appeared very strange to you that the rights of the executor should have been so entirely set aside. But your astonishment will cease when you hear, that as appears clearly by the argument in the judgment, the Court was entirely in the dark as to the nature of an executor by the law of England, and his right to the residue of the property. The Court argued on the supposition, which nobody took any pains to combat, that an executor in England was in the same position as one under the law of France, which gives him no right to the residue of the property. Feeling curious on the subject, and desirous of ascertaining the correctness of my impression, I inquired of the counsel who had appeared for the executor, whether he had been instructed as to the right of the executor under the law of England; and he informed me he had not been, and that if the Court had had evidence to that effect, no doubt the judgment would have been different. There is certainly every probability that it would, but assuming the ground which the Court took, the judgment was undoubtedly correct; nobody substantiating against the Crown a right to the residue. It is the more to be regretted that the counsel for the executor had not correct information upon the subject, as there is now, I am afraid, no means of setting matters right, at least in the ordinary course of things, as proceedings in error in the Court of Cassation lie only when the error is on a point of law, and the Court of Cassation has generally till now looked upon questions of foreign law as facts upon which the judgment of the Imperial Court was conclusive.

A case relative to the wills of the late Lord Henry Seymour was recently submitted to the Civil Tribunal. By a will made the 19th of June, 1856, he "gave and bequeathed to Frederick Seymour 200,000*fr.*, and in the event of his death to his eldest daughter, Mary Seymour," and all his property not otherwise specified to the hospitals of London and Paris. He made another will, dated the 22nd of June, 1858, which was almost the literal reproduction of the first one, but which made no mention of the bequest to Frederick Seymour or his daughter. Mr. Frederick Seymour being dead, his daughter, now Mrs. Biddulph, and her husband, recently brought an action against the executors of the deceased nobleman, and also against the hospitals of Paris and London, his residuary legatees, to obtain payment of the 200,000*fr.*, and they based it on the ground that, as the legacy was not expressly revoked in the second will, it must take effect. But on the part of the hospitals counsel contended that the omission must by law be held to prove that the testator did not mean to make the legacy; and besides, they stated that he had left a written declaration to the effect that he annulled all bequests made previously to the 22nd of June, 1858. The Tribunal decided that the suit of Mr. and Mrs. Biddulph must be dismissed with costs.

A decision of some interest to foreigners was lately given by the Imperial Court at Paris. A foreign lady, named De Saldanha, purchased in 1858 from an upholsterer of the name of Lemoine a quantity of furniture of the value of 3,125*fr.*; and as eighteen months after she had not paid, he brought an action against her. She endeavoured to delay judgment as long as possible, and then, when she could do so no more, she represented that all the proceedings were of no legal value, inasmuch as she was married to a Brazilian, residing at San Jos, in Brazil, and that consequently the action ought to have been brought against her husband as well as herself. The Imperial Court was yesterday called on to say whether this pretension was good in law. The Court held that it was not, for the reasons that the woman, as a foreigner, could not claim a privilege of being a feme covert, which is reserved for French married women by the Code Napoleon.

The Civil Tribunal of the Seine recently gave a decision of importance to foreigners residing in France, and the more so as it is in direct opposition to what has been hitherto supposed the law of the land. M. Muhlschovien, a tailor, carrying on business in Paris, sued a person named Pfnor, also a foreigner for the sum of 454*fr.*, for goods delivered. The defendant declined the competence of the Tribunal to decide in a suit between two foreigners, and also demanded that the plaintiff should be called on to give security for the costs of the Court. After hearing counsel, the Tribunal decided that no principle of public order prevented French tribunals, when their competence is accepted by both parties, from deciding suits arising from a contract between foreigners residing and trading in France; that if one of the parties declined the competence of the French judges it is for the latter to decide whether he has not implicitly renounced the right to take such exception by having abandoned his original domicile, in establishing himself in business in France, or by having no other domicile or residence; and that in the present case there had evidently been such renunciation. With respect to the demand for security, judicatum solvi, the Tribunal decided that it was only available for a French defendant in a suit brought against him by a foreigner; and that Pfnor's demand was, therefore, inadmissible. For these reasons the Tribunal declared itself competent, ordered the case to be heard on its merits, and condemned Pfnor to pay the expenses arising from the incident.

The Civil Tribunal of the Seine, on the 8th inst., decided a case of some importance to lessees. M. Chevreuil, three years since, took a house at St. Mandé, belonging to three brothers named Tuvillon. The lease was for three, six, or nine years, and contained the following clause:—"It is agreed that in case the lessors or lessee may wish to put an end to the lease six months' notice shall be given." On the 14th of November last, at the expiration of one of the periods, one of the brothers gave M. Chevreuil notice to leave on the 14th of May following. The lessee disputed the right of one lessor to cancel a lease made by three; but the juge de paix decided that the lease must be considered void, since it required the consent of all three to continue. M. Chevreuil appealed against that decision, and the Tribunal, after hearing counsel on both sides, decided that the lease is valid for the whole nine years, unless the three brothers give joint notice of their intention to put an end to it.

Societies and Institutions.

INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.

(Continued from p. 768.)

VI. CHANCERY FUNDS COMMISSION.

The president of the society some months ago received a communication from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, stating that his attention had been directed by important public considerations to the state of the stocks and funds of the suitors in chancery; and as the association has taken a great interest in the subject, the Chancellor of the Exchequer requested to see the president on that subject.

The president reported that he had attended the Chancellor of the Exchequer, when the Chancellor expressed his approval of the concentration of the law courts and offices, and adverted to the consequent charge upon the finances of the country, and to the duty which devolved on him, as financial minister, of inquiring into the Accountant-General's mode of keeping the accounts of the funds in the Court of Chancery, and the course of proceeding in the Accountant-General's office on the investment, transfer, and sale of cash and stock belonging to the suitors, and into the means of preventing loss to the suitors by an improvement in the mode of dealing with cash in court not invested at the instance of suitors, and generally into the system of conducting the business of the office; and he desired to know whether he might rely on the earnest support of the profession of solicitors, of whom he considered the Council of this society substantially the representatives, in any attempt to effect the improvements advocated by the witnesses who had given evidence before the Concentration of Courts Commission.

The president further reported that he had referred the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the reports of the committee of this society of the 2nd December, 1851, and 2nd July, 1857, and had stated to him the deep interest which this Council took in the measure for the concentration of the courts recommended by the report of the commissioners; and that if they could be assured that the fund there referred to would be applied to the accomplishment of that object, and that the advantages to be derived from the changes contemplated would enure for the benefit of the suitors, he might rely on the cordial and zealous co-operation and support of the Council, and through them of the profession, and that the Chancellor of the Exchequer fully assented to the propriety and reasonableness of the conditions.

The Council therefore approved of the assurance given by the president to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

A royal commission has since been issued to inquire into the constitution of the Accountant-General's department of the Court of Chancery, the forms of business in use therein, and the provisions for the custody and management of the stocks and funds of the court, and to suggest improvements in the said matters, with especial view to the advantage of the suitors, and the safety, convenience, economy, and despatch in the transaction of the business of the court. One of the members of the Council has been appointed a commissioner.

The Council have received a special application from the commissioners, requesting them to procure, either from such individual members of the society as may be willing to assist the commission, or from a sub-committee of the society, an expression of their opinion in reference to the matters of complaint alleged to exist in connection with the Accountant-General's department, and the best modes of remedying the same.

The Council have accordingly requested their equity committee to consider and report on the subject, and the committee have held several meetings, and have applied to a considerable number of eminent practitioners, to whom they transmitted a copy of a letter which they had received from the commissioners, together with the printed statements referred to in it, and requested them to favour the council with such information and suggestions as might appear likely to forward the objects of the commission. It is expected that the committee will soon be enabled to make their report. [The report has been published, and will be found ante p. 728.]

VII. USAGES OF THE PROFESSION.

During the past year several questions of conveyancing practice have been submitted to the Council, particularly relating to the preparation of conveyances by the vendor's solicitors; the charges for producing deeds and making copies, under a covenant for such production; the preparation of deeds of appointment and marriage settlements; the expense of perusing deeds of covenant when there are several lots; and the charge of the solicitor of a trustee for receiving the notice of an incumbrance and communicating it to his client. The opinions on these and other matters have been entered in the usage book kept in the secretary's office.

VIII. PROBATE COURT.

By a treasury minute issued on the 16th of March last it is provided:—[The provisions and bearing on the profession of this treasury minute are stated and commented on ante p. 494.]

The Council, in stating the scope of this treasury minute, feel called upon to observe, that the permission granted and salaries allowed to district registrars to assist strangers in preparing the forms required for probates and letters of administration is highly objectionable in principle, and at variance with the practice of all the superior courts. The district registrars exercise judicial functions in granting probates and administrations, and it is their duty carefully to examine the documents which are brought to them in support of the applications on which they have to decide. It is manifestly inconsistent with this duty that they should act as agents or solicitors for the parties. Neither in the courts of law or equity do the officers of the court prepare, or assist the parties who sue in person in preparing, the writs or other process on which the official seal is to be affixed. Where a proctor or solicitor is employed, and who is personally acquainted with the parties, there is some security against fraudulent conduct; whilst, under this new regulation, the papers on which the registrar has to exercise his discretion will be prepared by his own clerks, to whom the applicants will be strangers. It appears to the Council, therefore, that this alteration is dangerous to the public, and needlessly injurious to the regular practitioner.

The 26th section of the Attorney's Act prohibits persons from practising in any wise as a proctor, in or with respect to any proceeding in the Court of Probate, without being duly qualified. The Council were informed by solicitors in different parts of the country that it was the practice of clergymen who had formerly been surrogates to act as agents for proctors, in taking out probates and letters of administration, and that they obtained a large part of this branch of professional business, and participated in the profits, contrary to the provisions of the statute.

The Council of the society felt it due to the proctors complained of to acquaint them with the allegations made, and to give them an opportunity of correcting any inaccuracy in the statements which had been laid before the society.

The proctors, not being aware of the illegality of the practice, laid a case before an eminent counsel, who gave an opinion adverse to the proctors, which they candidly communicated to the society.

IX. UNQUALIFIED PRACTITIONERS.

The attention of the Council was called to a statement in a work on the practice of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, to the effect that the solicitor or agent in an appeal before the Judicial Committee is not necessarily a solicitor or attorney of any of the superior courts at Westminster, and that there seemed to be no special qualification required, and an application was thereupon made to the registrar of the Judicial Committee for information on the subject.

The registrar replied, that "by the practice of the Privy Council it is competent to practitioners duly qualified in the several dependencies of the Crown from which appeals are brought before her Majesty in council, to conduct on either side such appeals from the courts to which these practitioners respectively belong."

Numerous complaints are made against house agents, accountants, and persons who have been clerks in solicitors' offices, for preparing conveyancing and other legal instruments.

The Council are not authorised to sue unqualified persons for penalties for acting in these matters. Such prosecutions can only be instituted in the name of the Attorney-General by the Solicitor of Inland Revenue, but the Council are accustomed to authorise their secretary to assist in bringing these cases before the Commissioners of Inland Revenue. The solicitor requires, in each case, a clear statement of the evidence that can be adduced to support the prosecution. No penalties, however, can be recovered after the lapse of two years from the date of the instrument.

The 44th Geo. 3, c. 98, s. 14, prohibits unqualified persons from preparing deeds relating to real or personal property, but excepts from the prohibition "the drawing or preparing any will, or other testamentary papers, or any agreement not under seal, or any letter of attorney."

In one instance a patent agent had drawn and engrossed an assignment of a share in a patent, for which he made the usual professional charges. It appeared that he was extensively engaged in similar transactions, and the Council submitted to the commissioners that this was a fit case for prosecution. Proceedings were accordingly instituted, and a penalty inflicted.

Information has also been received of attempts of debt-collecting offices and others to encroach on the province of the regular practitioners in the recovery of debts by action, and the conducting of other legal business. The attention of the Council has been very frequently called to instances of irregular conduct in such cases, but they have not yet had before them any case in which any efficient step could be taken to put an end to the irregularities.

In one instance the officer or clerk of an association threatened that he would take legal measures if the debt were not paid; but this was not punishable for several reasons. It was not a proceeding in any court; the expression "legal measures" did not necessarily mean bringing an action; and the intimation might mean that legal measures would be taken through a regular practitioner.

The Council are of opinion that if county court judges and magistrates would refuse to recognise any but regular practitioners great benefit would result to the public. The judges of the county courts, in the exercise of their discretion, sometimes think proper to allow agents who are not attorneys to appear before them, and allow them costs out of pocket.

The Council have also received from one of their correspondents a prospectus of a "Legal and Mercantile Advice Office," proposing to prepare various deeds as well as to give advice on very moderate terms. If deeds should be actually drawn and the charges for them paid, these unqualified persons will be liable to prosecution for penalties, but the mere offer to transact business of course does not subject them to any proceedings.

Papers have also been sent to them relating to a publication, called "Mercantile Test," and they have frequently received objections to the publication of the names of persons against whom warrants of attorney, bills of sale, and judges' orders have been registered; but in the present state of the law and practice they are unable effectually to interfere.

Complaints have also been made of persons acting as clerks to attorneys in the county courts and before magistrates in petty sessions, but there is nothing in the County Courts' Act to prevent the judge from allowing the clerk of an attorney to appear for a party, and there seems no objection to a bonâ fide clerk appearing for his principal on such occasions. Indeed, in many instances, the practice is a great convenience to the attorney, who may be unable personally to attend the court. The grievance which has frequently been complained of is that unqualified persons, assuming to act as the clerks of attorneys without due authority, are in some of the courts permitted to appear. In proceedings in the police courts in the metropolitan district, besides hearing barristers and solicitors, the magistrates relax the general rule, and hear clerks to solicitors whom they know, or a solicitors' clerk who brings a letter from the principal requesting that he may be allowed to conduct the particular case in question; and the magistrates make it a rule to exclude from practising before them certain persons who they know are not qualified, and are not the bonâ fide clerks of solicitors.

X. CASES OF MALPRACTICE.

Numerous cases of alleged malpractice have been brought under consideration during the last year, in some of which the complaining parties had an obvious remedy by summary application to the court or a judge to compel an account and a taxation of costs, or by an action to obtain damages for neglect; but where there existed no fraud or gross malpractice, an application to strike the accused off the roll could not be maintained. In other cases the evidence in support of the charge has, upon investigation, not been deemed sufficient.

In one case a rule was obtained and ultimately made absolute, at the instance of the society, against an attorney who had committed several breaches of trust by appropriating moneys entrusted to him to invest on mortgage to his own purposes, in speculations in which he was engaged.

A considerable proportion of the complaints which are investigated relate to the highly objectionable practice prevailing amongst a low class of attorneys, of allowing their names to be used by unqualified persons in conducting legal proceedings.

There appears to be no doubt that in many of these cases the attorney is paid for the use of his name, or allows the unqualified person to participate of the profits of the business; but it rarely happens that sufficient evidence of these illegal proceedings can be obtained.

It is essential, in applications to strike an attorney off the roll, that there should be no unreasonable delay. In some instances which came before the Council the complaining parties have neglected to bring the matter forward in time.

Some important questions have arisen as to the sufficiency of service under articles of clerkship where the attorney has more than one place of business, and where the clerk has the management of a branch office at a distance from the attorney's usual residence. The statutes and rules of court require that the clerk should serve the full term of his articles at the office where the attorney carries on his business. Cases have arisen in which the clerk, from his local connections, has, in fact, established the practice and induced the attorney to allow him a salary during the clerkship proportioned to the profits of the business introduced into the office. This is not considered a service within the terms of the statute.

The attention of the Council has been called to advertisements from attorneys, which from time to time appear in the newspapers, and seem designed to obtain professional employment for the advertisers in a very objectionable manner. Amongst others, they have observed offers to discount bills and notes.

The Council are now empowered, by the 26th section of the Attorneys' Act, to prosecute persons who act wrongfully as attorneys. This enactment has probably operated in preventing infringements of the law; for at present it has become necessary only in one case to put this clause in force against a person, formerly an attorney's clerk, who had opened an office and used the name of an attorney without his knowledge or authority. In this case a rule nisi was obtained, as for a contempt of court, and the matter has been referred to one of the masters of the Court of Exchequer. Under this section the society may institute proceedings against attorneys practising without annual certificates; but, in such cases, it is necessary that sufficient evidence be previously submitted to the Attorney-General for his sanction to the proceeding. The penalties recovered are to be paid to the Treasury.

A considerable number of applications to renew or take out annual certificates have come before the Council, either on a term's notice or specially on short notice by leave of the judge. The affidavits in support of these applications are referred by the judges to the Council, in order that care may be taken to inquire into the respectability of the parties, and to ascertain whether any arrears of duty be payable, or whether the applicants should be examined, if they have long ceased to practice.

XI. NEW RULES AND ORDERS, AND OTHER PRACTICAL MATTERS.

[A list is here given of the new rules and orders from the 23rd of August, 1860, to 16th April, 1861.]

Complaints have been renewed of delay in the taxation of costs in chancery owing to the pressure of business in the masters' offices.

The Council have referred the matter to the consideration of their Equity Committee.

The inadequacy of the scale of allowance for costs of prosecutions at the assizes and the sessions has again been brought under notice. The Council are informed that the matter is under the consideration of the Government; and it will be expedient for the provincial law societies to communicate directly with the Home Secretary on the subject.

XII. PRIVILEGES CLAIMED BY COUNSEL.

The Council reprint here the correspondence between themselves and Mr. Huddleston, Q.C., in November last, which will be found ante pp. 61, 62.

It was very far indeed from the wish or intention of the Council to invade or weaken the just privilege of counsel "established for the benefit of the client;" but they felt it to be their duty to Mr. Clutterbuck to give him an opportunity of vindicating his character, and that it was due, alike to Mr. Clutterbuck and to Mr. Huddleston, to ascertain that the facts had been accurately stated by the former, and to give the latter an opportunity of correcting them, if inaccurate; and they indulged the hope that if Mr. Huddleston could not deny the facts, he would have felt it not unbecoming his position as a barrister, or his honour as a gentleman, to express, spontaneously, his regret that, misled as to the facts, he had been betrayed by his zeal as an advocate into a course which, on reflection, he could not justify. Mr. Huddleston did not think fit to pursue this course, and the Council feel called upon to remark, that it is not, in their opinion, within a legitimate exercise of the privileges of counsel to make statements injurious to the character of professional men, which they know do not admit of proof, and which the accused is not at the time permitted to disprove.

XIII. GENERAL AFFAIRS OF THE SOCIETY.

The auditor's report of the receipts and payments of the year, and the debts and assets of the society, has been, as usual, open for inspection since the 15th April last, in the secretary's office, in accordance with the bye law.

It is satisfactory to state that since the audit, which extended to the 31st December, the Council have paid £800 out of the surplus income as the final balance due for the new building, and have also paid out of such surplus another £800 towards the discharge of the loan raised on account of the building.

It will be seen by the auditors' report that credit has been given for the registration fees received to the end of last year. Under the 20th section of the Act a yearly account of these fees and the application thereof is to be rendered to the judges, and a copy open for inspection at the hall of the society. The receipts of these fees commenced on the 16th November last, and the account will of course be made up to that day in the present year.

The courses of conveyancing lectures, by Mr. Frederick J.

Turner; of equity lectures, by Mr. Hemming; and of common law lectures, by Mr. F. Meadows White, have been concluded, and it will be the duty of the council to elect other gentlemen to the vacant lectureships. The lectures during the last season were attended by numerous members of this society, and by 213 subscribers.

Since the last meeting the society has been favoured with valuable donations of books from Mr. W. Baker, Mr. Bilton, Mr. B. Blundell, Mr. T. Boodle, Mr. W. D. Cooper, Mr. J. W. Davis, Mr. C. W. Dilke, Mr. W. Harris, Mr. O. B. Harrison, Mr. S. W. Hunter, Mr. E. Lawrance, jun., Mr. M. Montagu, Mr. H. G. Prichard, Mr. Rickman, Mr. C. Rivington, Mr. John Stow, and from the Law Society Club.

The further publications of Her Majesty's Commissioners of Patents, and several additional contributions from the Colonial Office of the Acts and Ordinances of the Colonies of the Empire have also been received.

The following solicitors and parliamentary agents engaged in promoting local, personal, and private Acts, have kindly presented copies of their Acts—namely, Messrs. Bircham and Co., Mr. M. Brown, Mr. Bryden, Messrs. Burchell, Messrs. Connell and Hope, Messrs. Deans and Rogers, Messrs. Dodd and Greig, Messrs. Dorrington and Co., Messrs. Durnford and Co., Messrs. Dyson and Co., Messrs. Edwards and Co., Messrs. Fearon and Co., Mr. Gale, Messrs. Grahame and Co., Messrs. Gregory and Co., Messrs. Holmes and Co., Messrs. Hunt and Co., Messrs. Johnston and Co., Mr. Kingdon, Messrs. Loch and MacLaurin, Messrs. Maitland and Graham, Mr. Manning, Messrs. Marriott and Jordan, Messrs. Marchant and Pead, Mr. F. Martin, Messrs. Muggeridge and Bell, Mr. Newall, Messrs. Paine and Layton, Mr. Porter, Messrs. Toogood and Co., Messrs. Robertson and Co., Messrs. Walmisley and Son, and Mr. Wyatt.

It is trusted that other solicitors will make similar contributions towards the completion of this department of the library.

The Council have been enabled, by the kind assistance of Mr. Salt, the banker, to make a large and very valuable addition to the collection of private Acts, and in exchange have supplied him with such duplicates as they could spare.

Mr. Salt states that he has completed the task in which he has been engaged, in providing the British Museum with all the private Acts that could be obtained, for the purpose of making up their set; and having prevailed upon the trustees to hand over to him in exchange all the duplicates they had in the time of Queen Anne and George I., he has supplied the Council with a large collection of these Acts. In prosecuting his researches for the British Museum he availed himself of the stores of every law bookseller in London, including the large stock of Messrs. Stevens & Norton, whose collection had been accumulating for nearly a century. The society's series of private Acts is carefully arranged, and it appears that there is no other good collection of them, except at the British Museum.

Besides the above important additions to the library, the Council have availed themselves of the recent sale of the library of the College of Advocates at Doctors' commons, and have purchased many rare, ancient, and valuable works on Roman, Ecclesiastical and Civil Law, with those published by the Parker Society, and other learned and classical publications. They have also recently purchased the last edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica, and other books of reference.

The purchase of new legal works during the year has been very considerable, and these, added to the donations, have increased the collection by 777 volumes, making in the whole 16,161.

It has been suggested to the Council, that the extension of the general education of gentlemen intending to enter this branch of the profession under the provisions of the new statute, should induce an enlargement of the classical and literary department of the library, but the Council at present feel reluctant to invest any considerable sum in the purchase of this class of works until they have reduced the debt incurred for the new building, and it has therefore been proposed to form a separate subscription, to which such of the members as approve of the measure are invited to contribute.

It has become the painful duty of the Council to record the loss of their valued friend and colleague Mr. Gregory. Intimately associated with him during many years they have enjoyed more than ordinary opportunities of estimating the worth of his character, and bear cordial testimony to the uniform ability, knowledge, and courtesy, with which he discharged his duties whilst president of the society and as a member of the Council.

At the last annual general meeting there were 1,771 members, and during the current year 86 new members have been elected, making in all 1,858, from which number 56 are to be deducted in consequence of deaths, retirements, and other causes, leaving at the present time 1,802, of whom 1,370 are town and 432 country members.

The Council have had under consideration the expediency of inviting the members of the society to social meetings in the library and hall, but as it appeared that the object could not be carried into effect without a more considerable expenditure of the society's funds than the Council felt justified in appropriating on their own responsibility, it was resolved that the subject be specially brought under the notice of the members at this general meeting with a view to eliciting their opinions and wishes.

(Signed)

WM. STRICKLAND COOKSON, President.

The National Association for the Promotion of Social Science.

THE ADMIRALTY COURT.

At the recent meeting at Dublin of the above association, Mr. B. C. Lloyd read the following very interesting paper:—

The president of this section, in his luminous and excellent address, has already called the attention of the society to the expediency of having a perfect assimilation of the laws, as well as of procedure, in the Courts of England and Ireland. This opinion is one that is daily gaining ground, and we may hope the time is not distant when in every Bill of a national character that shall be introduced into Parliament the word Ireland will be found placed after that of England. The increased intercourse and facility for the transaction of business which such a state of things would bring about would be the true mode of cementing the union between the two countries, which would then rest for its support not upon standing armies, but in a community of interest in that happy constitution under which we have the privilege to live. But there is one branch of our judicial system to which the remarks upon the subject of assimilation are peculiarly applicable—that is, the Court of Admiralty. This is, in fact, the Court of Commerce of the country. Great improvements of late years, and particularly in the last session, have been made in the jurisdiction and procedure of the Court of Admiralty in England; and except a similar constitution be given to the Court of Admiralty here, the result must be very injurious to the interests of commerce in Ireland. This is a subject that affects not only the merchant in Ireland, but the merchant in England, and the merchants all over the world. The number of British and foreign ships that enter the ports of Ireland has of late years been greatly on the increase. In 1854 the number of English ships that entered the ports of Ireland was 881, and of foreign ships 621; while in 1859 the number of English ships was 1,168, and of foreign ships 1,066; and the intermediate years show the increase to have been gradual. There is every reason to believe that the trade with France, which at present is considerable, will be greatly increased by the new tariff. Now, suppose the owner or master of an English or foreign ship coming into an English port, were to find that for any particular grievance he can obtain redress in a summary and inexpensive form, while in an Irish port he finds that for a similar matter, either the Court here has no jurisdiction at all to entertain the complaint, or else that the exercise of its jurisdiction is so clogged with an expensive and continuous machinery as to amount to a denial of justice. The result cannot but be injurious to the interests of commerce in Ireland. I happen to know that there is at present a memorial before the Government by the merchants of Cork, complaining that they have not the same advantages as England for breach of duty or contract on the part of the master or owner of foreign ships. A foreign ship lately arrived in Queenstown with a cargo of wheat, and by the charter-party the master was directed to take the cargo into whatever port he should be directed. He was ordered to go to Yarmouth. He refused to go, and sold part of the cargo, paid his freight, put another captain on board, and made his escape. The Court of Admiralty in this country could give no relief; and as to an action in a court of common law, the vessel might be in the most distant part of the globe before its process could avail. Whereas in England, by the 6th section of the new Act, a fiat could be at once obtained for the arrest of the vessel, and thus the captain would be made to perform his contract. For a long time the jurisdiction of the Courts of Admiralty in both countries was the same. In very early times they exercised a greater jurisdiction, but owing to the jealousy of the courts of law, this jurisdiction was considerably abridged, for these courts maintained that if any part of the contract was to be performed on land, the case came within their jurisdiction, and they issued prohibitions against the proceedings in the Court of Admiralty. They made an exception in the cases of trials by seamen for their wages, from the necessity of the case, as they admitted the seaman could not be kept in this country to attend from term to term to recover his wages in a court of common law. At last, in the year 1632, upon a petition of the merchants of London, an act of the Privy Council, signed by the twelve judges, was obtained, setting forth the cases in which their prohibitions were not to issue. This act of the council was observed from time to time, but in the troubled times that followed it was suppressed, on the pretext that it was an act of prerogative prejudicial to the common law and the liberty of the subject. Afterwards, on the Restoration, another petition was presented by upwards of one hundred of the merchants of London, for a renewal of the powers of the Court, and referring to the acts of the Privy Council; a Bill was in consequence introduced into the Lords, which, had it passed, which was not the case, would have placed the Court of Admiralty in almost the same condition as it has been placed by the Act of the last session. Thus, it required the lapse of two centuries to get over existing prejudices and to pass the Act for England, which received the Royal assent in the month of June last. But in Ireland nothing has ever been done by the Legislature, except upon the address of the House of Commons a royal commission issued to inquire into the state of the Admiralty Court in Ireland; a report was made in 1829, but nothing has been done; but by the 8th article of the Act of Union, which enacts "That from and after the Union there shall remain in Ireland an Instance Court of Admiralty for the determination of causes civil and maritime only." That is a court as distinguished from a prize court. The only other enactment is a clause which has been inserted into the recent Probate Act, which gives to the Crown, whenever a vacancy shall occur in the Court of Admiralty, the power to annex it to the Court of Probate under the same judge. I have no hesitation in saying that the latter enactment is a step in the wrong direction; for, besides the heterogeneous nature of the business of those courts, the whole value of the Court of Admiralty consists in its being a court open all the year round, and exclusively devoted to marine matters, so as to be able to afford redress in the most summary and inexpensive form. This is very quaintly put by Sir Lincoln Jenkins, who was judge of the Court of Admiralty in the reign of Charles the Second, in his argument before the committee of the House of Lords on the occasion of the introduction of the Bill I have already referred to. He says—"We are yet left the form of a Court of Admiralty, and are bound by it to proceed not only de die in diem, or as summary as a judgment de jure gentium can be, but from tide to tide. It is the ancient style of the Admiralty and not without reason, for there is not one case in ten before the Court but some of the parties and witnesses in it are pressing to go to sea with the next tide; and the mariners had better lose the wages of a whole voyage than not go off the next that offers itself." Now if the duties of this court are annexed to another, the value of the Court of Admiralty as a court of instance is greatly diminished; for the master and crew, who are perhaps bound for another voyage to a different merchant, may not be able to wait until the termination of some other business in which the Court of Probate may be engaged. It is for this reason that in most mercantile countries there is a separate court for marine affairs. In France there is the Tribunal of Commerce, exclusively devoted to this subject, and where immediate redress can be had. In Ireland the jurisdiction remains as in former times, and is confined to cases of salvage, collision of vessels at sea, bottomry bonds, suits for seamen's wages, suits for materials supplied to the vessels, and suits of possession—that is, where there are part-owners in a vessel, and they quarrel amongst themselves, or differ as to the employment of the ship. All that the Court of Admiralty in Ireland can do in this last case is to arrest the vessel until security is given to the dissentient party for the return of the ship. But such quarrels are very injurious to commerce, and prevent the healthy working of the ship. To remedy it a most important clause has been introduced in England by the 8th section of the Act of last session, which enacts "that the Court of Admiralty shall have jurisdiction to decide all questions arising between the co-owners, or any of them, touching the ownership, possession, employment, and earnings of any ship registered in any part of England or Wales, or any share thereof, and may settle all accounts outstanding and unsettled between the parties in relation thereto, and may direct the said ship, or any part thereof, to be sold." By this section the Court in England, if it should fail by other means to settle the disputes between the co-owners, has the power to direct the ship, or any share of it, to be sold, so that it may pass into new hands, and the healthy working of the ship be restored. But this enactment is defective in not giving to masters and owners a reciprocal right against the merchant to recover their freight and demurrage. I know of one case in which the master of a French vessel, in order to recover his demurrage, proceeded in the Court of Admiralty, and finding he could get no relief there from want of jurisdiction in the court, he had to go into a court of common law. It was eighteen months before he succeeded in getting a verdict, and then at a cost that left him worse than before. In such cases the Court of Admiralty should have power to issue a monition against the merchant, and compel him to show cause why the freight or demurrage should not be paid. I have been informed by Mons. Burgraff, the intelligent French Consul residing here, that the want of power to give relief by the Court of Admiralty is loudly complained of by the owners and captains of French vessels, who complain of the difficulty they experience in recovering demurrage. The next matter related to proceedings in the Court of Admiralty, and the mode of taking evidence. That must be done in scriptis by written interrogatories exhibited to the witness, which is in all cases a very defective mode of arriving at the truth, and even where the impugnant does not appear, the promovant must still prove his case in scriptis, and establish each material fact by the evidence of two witnesses. Whereas, the judge should have the power, where the impugnant will not appear, or answer the case made against him, to allow judgment to be entered against him by default, according to the practice of other courts. I ought to mention here, what is very creditable to the proctors practising in this court, that they in almost all cases enter into a consent to have the case heard by a viva voce examination of the witnesses in open court. When this is done, a cause can be heard and adjudicated upon in this court in a very few days. But then it is not always practicable to obtain such consent, and the proceedings of the court should not be dependent upon the good feelings of the practitioners. In fact, as Sir Lincoln Jenkins has two centuries ago observed, owners of vessels should then be enabled to recover their freight, and merchants their demurrage; and charter-parties, which are only calculated for sea affairs, should be interpreted and adjudged by the sea laws, and according to the style of the court; not from term to term, but from day to day, and tide to tide, all the year round. If all this cannot be accomplished, I trust, at all events, the court here will not be left in its present condition, so injurious to the interests of commerce; but that the benefits of the Act passed for the improvement of the court in England will, through the intervention of this society, be shortly extended to Ireland.

Public Companies.

REPORTS AND MEETINGS.

CALEDONIAN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 10th instant, a dividend at the rate of £5 per cent. was declared for the past half-year.

EAST ANGLIAN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 6th instant, a dividend on the B. stock at the rate of £6 per cent. per annum, and on the C. stock at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, was declared for the past half-year.

GLASGOW AND SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 4th instant, a dividend at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 20th instant, dividends were declared at the rate of £7 per cent. per annum on the preference and original stock of the company. The dividend on the 4½ per cent. preference shares was also declared.

SCOTTISH NORTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 5th instant, the following dividends were declared:—The dividends on the 3½ per cent., 6 per cent., and 7 per cent. preference stocks; ½ per cent. per annum on the Aberdeen ordinary stock; and at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum on the Scottish Midland original stock.

SHROPSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company, held on the 7th instant, a dividend at the rate of £1 17s. 6d. per cent. was declared.

BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY.—The last returns made respecting the judicial proceedings of the year 1860 show of what small amount the mass of the bankruptcy and insolvency cases are, and how ill able to bear an expensive system of administration. About a thousand bankrupts had their balance-sheets passed in the course of the year, and in 866 instances the debts owing by the bankrupt were under £5,000, in 398 under £1,000; dividends were made in 968 cases, and in 562 of them the dividend was under 2s. 6d. In the Insolvent Debtors' Court 5,817 schedules were filed in the year, and in 5,184 instances the debts owing by the insolvents were under £1,000; dividends were made in 701 cases, and in 593 of them the dividend was under 2s. 6d. The returns of the Bankruptcy Court state that the sum realised for administration by that court in the year was £1,080,656, and the charges amounted to £329,440, or £30 9s. 8d. per cent. The official assignees took £45,459; the solicitors, £127,690; the court for its percentage, £26,566; the "messengers," £28,195; brokers, auctioneers, and accountants, £23,598; the bankrupt's allowance and excepted articles amounted to £31,265, and £9,497 was allowed for their accountants, and "other charges," including charges for carrying on trade, took £37,170. The Insolvent Debtors' Court realised £55,952 for administration, and the expenses of administration were £11,963, or £21 7s. 7d. per cent.

The number of persons committed for trial in 1860 on charges too serious for the magistrates to dispose of summarily was—in England, 17 per cent. less than it had been five years previously; in Scotland, 11 per cent. less, and in Ireland 24 per cent. The year's list of committals for murder and attempts to murder or to maim was more numerous in Ireland (in proportion to the population) than in England, being 105 against 283, but the convictions were far more numerous in England—163 against 33. For all offences together convictions in England and Scotland were about 75 per cent. of the committals; in Ireland only 55. The feuds, faction fights, and quarrels of Ireland make their mark in the criminal tables; 560 persons were committed for riot or breach of the peace in 1860, and 154 for rescue or refusing to aid peace officers, the two classes together forming 13 per cent. of the whole number of the committals; in England, for both classes of offences together, the committals were only 50. Taking the more comprehensive returns of the numbers who were in prison during the year for all offences so as to include persons sent to gaol summarily by the magistrates, as well as those committed for trial by the courts, it appears that the number in England (without reckoning military prisoners) was 1 to every 197 of the population, and in Ireland 1 to every 195. But, as the same person when recommitment within the year was counted again, the number of persons sent to prison was not really so large as this; in Ireland there were 30,712 committals, but the number of persons committed was only 24,639, of whom 15,760 had never been in gaol before. In England 34 per cent. could neither read nor write; in Ireland 46 per cent. In England the females were 30 in every 100 criminals; in Ireland no less than 47. Female prisoners in Ireland are not declining in the same ratio as male, and last year's returns show in a most striking manner the irreclaimable character of many female prisoners. 165 of the male prisoners in Ireland had been in gaol above 11 times, but 688 of the females; 47 of the male prisoners had been there above 20 times, but no less than 336 females. Cork city gaol had in it a woman undergoing her 66th imprisonment. 86 per cent. of the Irish committals were Roman Catholics.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.BIRTHS.

DEWSNAP—On Sept. 19, the wife of Mark Dewsnap, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law, of a daughter.

WEBSTER—On Sept. 18, at 25, Drayton-grove, West Brompton, the wife of Benjamin Webster, Jun., Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

CRAWFORD—COLLINS—On Sept. 19, S. Knox Crawford, Esq., Solicitor, Supreme Courts, Edinburgh, to Sarah Jane, daughter of the late Knight Collins, Esq., of Flaxton Lodge, Yorkshire.

DAWBBER—HULLAND—On Sept. 24, Robert Dawber, Esq., Brewery, Lincoln, to Charlotte Elizabeth, daughter of the late Richard Hulland, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn.

LEVICK—GABB—On Sept. 18, Frederick Levick, Esq., of Shirenewton House, near Chepstow, to Alice Parry, daughter of the late Baker Gabb, Esq., of Llwyn-du, near Abergavenny.

WRIGHT—HUGHES—On Sept. 21, Herbert Wright, Esq., of 6, Waterloo-street, Birmingham, Solicitor, to Helen Marion, daughter of William Hughes, Esq., of Peckham, Surrey.

DEATHS.

DONALDSON—On Sept. 20, William Leverton Donaldson, Esq., Solicitor, of Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square, in the 59th year of his age.

NAYLOR—On Sept. 15, at Hammersmith, Elisha Naylor, Esq., Solicitor, late Assistant Record Keeper of the Inland Revenue Record Office, Spring-gardens.

Unclaimed Stock in the Bank of England.

The Amount of Stock heretofore standing in the following Names will be transferred to the Party claiming the same, unless other Claimants appear within Three Months:—

REEVES, FREDERICK JOHN HAWKES, Clerk, East Sheen, Surrey, JOHN AGLAND JAMES, Esq., King's College, Cambridge, ADOLPHUS MEETKERKE, Esq., Julians, Herts, and FRANCIS HERBERT GALL, Esq., Trinity College, Cambridge, £2,487 : 19 : 2, 3¼ per Cents.—Claimed by the said FRANCIS HERBERT GALL.

London Gazettes.Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.Last Day of Claim.*

TUESDAY, Sept. 24, 1861.

ASHTON, ROBERT JOHN, Solicitor, 7, Pelham-crescent, Brompton, Middlesex, and New Inn, Strand. Sol. Doughty, 41, Montpelier-square, Brompton, Middlesex. Nov. 31.

BUTCHER, THOMAS, Wholesale Grocer, Provision Dealer, and Tallow Chandler, 1, Norfolk-crescent, Bath. Sol. Little, 11, Bladud-buildings, Bath. Nov. 30.

FENWICK, REV. JOHN PERGRINE LASCELLES, 2, Vineyards, Bath. Sols. Mant, Maule, & Robertson, 2, Wood-street, Bath. Nov. 5.

GOULD, CHARLES, Farmer, Aldbourne, Wilts. Charles James, Shillingford, Berks, and Thomas Hicks Chandler, Aldbourne, Wilts, Executors. Nov. 5.

HARRISON, JOHN, Swiller and Farmer, Beckside, near Ulverston, Lancaster. Sol. Woodburne, Ulverston. Oct. 19.

JOHNSTON, WILLIAM, Esq., 30, Westbourne-place, Eaton-square. William Sander Higley, Esq., Stamford-hill, Middlesex, and Arthur Frederick Vulliamy, Gent., Ipswich, Suffolk, Executors. Dec. 16.

JONES, Mrs. ELIZA, Widow, 60, Fulteney-street, Bath. Sols. Mant, Maule, & Robertson, 2, Wood-street, Bath. Nov. 5.

LAMBERT, EDWARD, Gent., Attercliffe, Yorkshire. Sols. J. J. P. & H. Wood, Pavement, York. Nov. 5.

MENZIES, JOHN, Rangoon, Pegu, British Burmah. Sols. Oliveron, Lavie, & Peachey, 8, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, London. Oct. 24.

FRITCHARD, JOHN, Jeweller, Regent-place, Birmingham. Sols. Hodgson & Allen, 13, Waterloo-street, Birmingham. Dec. 1.

RICHARDSON, JOSEPH, Bank Manager, Loughborough. Sol. Perkins, Loughborough. Nov. 15.

RIDLEY, GEORGE, Gent., Newbrough, Northumberland. Sol. Kirsopp, Hexham. Jan. 1.

FRIDAY, Sept. 27, 1861.

BONE, ELIZABETH, Widow, formerly of George-street, Westminster, but late of Gravesend, Kent. Sols. Boulton & Sons, Northampton-square, Clerkenwell, Middlesex. Oct. 10.

BONE, WILLIAM, Victualler, George-street, Westminster. Sols. Boulton & Son, Northampton-square, Clerkenwell, Middlesex. Oct. 10.

GREGORY, WILLIAM BROCKSOPP, Esq., formerly of Clapham, Surrey, but late of Woodlawn, Loose, Kent. Sols. Baker, Baker, & Forder, 52, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Oct. 31.

HEATH, ISAAC, Gent., Kidderminster. Sols. Saunders & Son, Kidderminster. Dec. 10.

HIGHTON, EDWARD, Civil & Telegraphic Engineer, formerly of Clarence Villa, Gloucester-road, Regent's-park, Middlesex. Sol. Harley, 30, Broad-street, Bristol. Nov. 30.

MARSH, EDWIN LEE, Plumber, Painter, & Glazier, Dover. Executors, Jane Saunders, Spinster, Canterbury, and Edwin Coleman, Estate Agent, Dover. Jan. 1.

ROBINSON, ABRAHAM, Plumber, 3, Ann's-terrace, Liverpool-road, Islington. Sols. Boulton & Sons, Northampton-square, Clerkenwell, Middlesex. Oct. 10.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

TUESDAY, Sept. 24, 1861.

BURN, JOSEPH ANTHONY KELSON, Grocer, Hill-street, Haverfordwest. Sol. Smith, 1, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry. Sept. 10.

GILBERT, WILLIAM, Grocer and Draper, Langport, Somersetshire. Sols. Newman, Lyon, & Newman, 7, King's Bench-walk, Temple, London, and Yeovil, Somersetshire; or Trenerry, Bristol. Aug. 27.

HOPK, ROBERT EDMUND, JOHN EDWIN HEATH, and WILLIAM LEON HILTON, Oil Merchants, 37, and 38, Mark-lane Chambers, London, and Lord-street, Limehouse, Middlesex. Sols. Hare & Whitfield, 1, Mitre-court, Temple, London. Sept. 20.

PALMER, RICHARD GIBBS, Draper, Bicester, Oxfordshire. Sol. Jones, 15, Sisco-lane, London. Sept. 13.

RODIER, JAMES BICKHAM, Manchester Warehouseman, Queen-street, Exeter. Sol. Petherick, Cathedral-yard, Exeter. Sept. 5.

SEED, JOHN, Grocer and Provision Dealer, Keighley, Yorkshire. Sols. Weatherhead & Burr, 41, New Bridge-street, Keighley, Yorkshire. Aug. 37.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

FRIDAY, Sept. 27, 1861.

DOBSON, JOSEPH, Confectioner, Liverpool (Barker & Dobson). Sols. Dodge & Wynne, 7, Union-court, Castle-street, Liverpool. Aug. 29.

FITZ, GEORGE, Grocer, Totnes, Devonshire. Sol. C. F. Michelmores, Totnes. Sept. 18.

HORSLEY, CHARLES EDWARD, Professor of Music, Southfield, Wandsworth, Surrey. Sol. W. B. Tarrant, 2, Bond-court, Walbrook, London. Aug. 30.

JOHNSON, STANLEY KENDRICK, and WILLIAM VOKES, Drapers, 61, Newington-causeway, Surrey. Sols. Davidson, Bradbury, & Hardwick, Weaver's-hall, 22, Basinghall-street. Sept. 11.

POWELL, JOHN, Iron Master, Brecon, and Clydach Iron Works, Breconshire. Sols. Abbott, Lucas, and Leonard, Bristol. Aug. 30.

SHONE, WILLIAM, Coach Builder & Cab Proprietor, Chester. Sols. Hoagge & Tatlock, Bridge-street, Chester. Aug. 37.

SNOW, RICHARD CHAPPELL, Grocer, 18, Union-street, Plymouth, Devonshire. Sol. Rooker, Plymouth. Sept. 16.

THOMPSON, JOHN WILLIAM, Baker & Grocer, 1, Abercrombie-street, Landport, Portsea, Hants. Sols. H. & R. Ford, 170, Queen-street, Portsea. Sept. 13.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Sept. 24, 1861.

ASHWIN, MARTIN RICHARD, Factor, 27, Islington, Birmingham. Com. Sanders: Oct. 4 and 25, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. Harrison & Wood, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 23.

BROWN, WILLIAM, Apothecary, Somersham and Earith, Huntingdonshire. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 7, at 12.30; and Nov. 11, at 13; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Harris & Mee, Bishopgate-churchyard, London. Pet. Sept. 23.

CROTHWAITE, JOHN, Merchant, Liverpool. Com. Perry: Oct. 3 and 24, at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sols. Lowndes, Bateson, Lowndes, & Robinson, 3, Brunswick-street, Liverpool. Pet. Sept. 23.

HOLDEN, ANDREW, GEORGE HOLDEN, RICHARD HOLDEN, & AMOS HOLDEN, Cotton Manufacturers (Holden, Brothers). Com. Jemmett: Oct. 11 and Nov. 14, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sols. Hall & Janion, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 9.

KENT, GEORGE HENRY, Timber Merchant, Stratford-upon-Avon. Com. Sanders: Oct. 7 and Oct. 28, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Hobbes & Slater, Stratford-upon-Avon; or James & Knight, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 23.

NIXON, JAMES, Merchant & Commission Agent, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, and of Liverpool. Com. Perry: Oct. 3 and 23, at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sol. Yates, Jun., Fenwick-street, Liverpool. Pet. Sept. 20.

SHERWOOD, THOMAS, Laceman, Southsea, Portsea, Southampton. Com. Holroyd: Oct. 5, at 1; and Nov. 1, at 2.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Mason, Sturt, & Mason, 7, Gresham-street, London. Pet. Sept. 12.

WHITESIDE, WILLIAM, & GEORGE SIMMONS, Gas Engineers & Brass Finishers, 34, Gt. Queen-street, Middlesex. Com. Goulburn. Oct. 7, at 2; and Nov. 4, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Murrough, 18, Warwick-court, Gray's-inn, London. Pet. Sept. 31.

FRIDAY, Sept. 27, 1861.

BINNEY, RICHARD, & JOSEPH WALKER BINNEY, Stock & Share Brokers, Leeds. Com. West: Oct. 11 and Nov. 8, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Sept. 20.

CHURCHILL, HENRY, Builder & Brickmaker, Washington, Sussex. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 7, at 11.30; and Nov. 13, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. J. & J. H. Linklater & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London. Pet. Sept. 20.

DAVID, EDWARD, Innkeeper & Sheep & Cattle Dealer, Bridgend, Glamorgan. Com. Hill: Oct. 8, at 11.30, and Nov. 5, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sols. Edwards & Nalder, Bank-court, Bristol. Pet. Sept. 12.

FRANKAU, SIDNEY, Importer of Meerschaum Pipes, 79, Bishopgate-street Within, London, and 19, Bridge-street, Westminster (Sidney Frankau & Co.) Com. Goulburn: Oct. 8, at 11.30, and Nov. 11, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Brandon, 15, Essex-street, Strand, London. Pet. Sept. 24.

HART, WILLIAM, & JOHN HART, Drapers & Grocers, Framlingham and Dennington, Suffolk. Com. Fonblanque: Oct. 10, at 12, and Nov. 8, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfield. Sols. Mason, Sturt, & Mason, 7, Gresham-street, London, and Miller, Son, & Bugg, Norwich. Pet. Aug. 6.

HENLEY, WILLIAM, Printer, Bookseller, & Stationer, 1, Southgate-street, Gloucester. Com. Hill: Oct. 8 and Nov. 4, at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sol. Wilkes, Gloucester. Pet. Sept. 17.

LYON, JOHN DICKSON, Commission Agent, Kingston-upon-Hull. Com. Ayrton: Oct. 16 and Nov. 13, at 13; Kingston-upon-Hull. Off. Ass. Currick. Sols. Easton & Bellby, Hull. Pet. Sept. 25.

MAILLEY, GEORGE ISADORE, Corn Dealer, 8, Westbourne-grove, Bayswater, Middlesex. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 8 at 11, and Nov. 11, at 1.80; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Willoughby, Cox, & Lord, 13, Clifford's-inn, London. Per. Sept. 16.

RIDGE, JOHN JAMES, Forest Hill, Kent, and lately carrying on business as a Chemist & Druggist, 10, Freeschool-street, St. John's, Southwark, Surrey. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 8, at 2.30; and Nov. 13, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Lawrence, Smith, & Fawdon, 12, Broad-street, Cheapside, London. Per. Sept. 26.

SOTHERAM, JOHN, jun., Builder & General Dealer, Nottingham. Com. Sanders: Oct. 10 and 29, at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sol. Preston, Nottingham. Per. Sept. 26.

WEATHERLEY, FREDERICK, Draper, 7 Old Chapel-row, Kentish Town, Middlesex. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 7, at 1, and Nov. 13, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 68, Aldermanbury, London. Per. Sept. 20.

WHITLEY, JOSEPH, Brass Founder, Leeds. Com. West: Oct. 7 and Nov. 8, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sol. Carls, Leeds. Per. Sept. 26.

WRIGHT, EDWIN, Cowkeeper & Dairyman, Upton, near Slough, Buckinghamshire. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 8, at 12.30, and Nov. 13, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Cordwell, 22, College-hill, London. Per. Sept. 16.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED. TUESDAY, Sept. 24, 1861.

COOMBS, WILLIAM GORROAN, Merchant, St. Peter's-hill, Doctors'-commons, London, and of Halifax, Nova Scotia. Sept. 21.

LEVY, JOSEPH, General Dealer, Finsbury-pavement, London. Aug. 1.

FRIDAY, Sept. 27, 1861.

SHARPLES, JOSEPH, Soft Soap Manufacturer & Manufacturing Chemist Ashton Old-road, Ardwick, near Manchester. Sept. 25.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Sept. 24, 1861.

ISAAC DEWHIRST, Worsted Spinner and Commission Agent, Halifax. Oct. 18, at 11; Leeds.—THOMAS LEE, Merchant, 8, George-yard, Lombard-street, London, and 1, Edmund-street, Birmingham. Oct. 3, at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—JAMES JONES SALT, Glass Dealer and Patent Coffin Manufacturer, Birmingham. Nov. 11, at 11; Birmingham.—GEORGE WILSON WARD, Publican, Worcester. Nov. 4, at 11; Birmingham.—ROBERT OVERBURY, Hotel Keeper, Henley-in-Arden, Warwickshire. Nov. 4, at 11; Birmingham.—WILLIAM ROSE, Rope Maker, Birmingham. Nov. 4, at 11; Birmingham.—GEORGE MOORE, Market Gardener, Perry Barr, Staffordshire. Nov. 7, at 11; Birmingham.

FRIDAY, Sept. 27, 1861.

THOMAS COATES, Publican and Wine and Spirit Merchant, Sunderland. Oct. 8, at 11; Newcastle-upon-Tyne.—WILLIAM DOWNES, Grocer and Tea Dealer, Wolverhampton. Nov. 1, at 11; Birmingham.—GEORGE BOWLEY MEDLEY, Underwriter, Highbury-park, North Islington, Middlesex, and 34, Great Tower-street, and of Lloyd's Coffee-house, London. Oct. 19, at 11; Basinghall-street.—ROBERT HARMAN, Corn Dealer and Coal Merchant, Littlewick, Whith Waltham, Berks. Oct. 19, at 11; Basinghall-street.—JOHN CADMAN, Brick Maker, Upholland and Billinge, Lancaster. Oct. 21, at 11; Liverpool.

BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT, LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited).

17, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.

Capital, £300,000, in 20,000 shares of £10 each. £3 per share paid.

CHAIRMAN.
METCALF HOPGOOD, Esq., Bishopsgate-street.

SOLICITORS.
Messrs. PATTESON & COBOLD, 3, Bedford-row.

MANAGER.
CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Esq., 17, New Bridge-street.

INVESTMENTS.—The present rate of interest on money deposited with the Company for fixed periods, or subject to an agreed notice of withdrawal, is 5 per cent.

LOANS.—Advances are made, in sums from £50 to £1,000, upon approved personal and other security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over any period not exceeding 10 years.

Applications for the new issue of Shares may be made to the Secretary, of whom Prospectuses, the last Annual Report, and every information can be obtained.

JOSEPH K. JACKSON, Secretary.

LONDON INVESTMENT COMPANY.—Forty £10 Shares for Sale, £9 paid. May be had a bargain. Interest at the rate of 10 per cent. received the last three years.

Apply by letter, N. & B., 59, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn.

AGENTS' REGISTER: Being a complete Alpha- betical Index of the Principal Towns of the United Kingdom, with space for inserting the Names of Agents, &c., for the use of Insurance and other offices. Large Post Folio, price £2 2s.

London: YATES & ALEXANDER, Horsehoe-court, 32A, Ludgate-hill.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO GUINEA BIN- OCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS sent carriage free, on re- ceipt of post-office order, to any part of the United Kingdom. The extraordinary power of this instrument renders it adapted to answer the combined purposes of telescope and opera glass. It will define objects distinctly at ten miles distance; is suitable for the theatre, race-course, sportsmen, tourists, and general out-door observations. Only to be ob- tained of KEYZOR and BENDON (successors to Harris and Son), Opti- cians, 80, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Illustrated Price List of Optical and Mathematical Instruments free, on receipt of two stamps.

FREEHOLD FOR SALE, near SLOUGH, a Com- fortable Residence, and 26 acres of Land adjoining.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road.

SOMERSET.—Freehold Gentleman's Residence and 8 acres of Rich Pasture Land, FOR SALE. Price £2,300.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

BUCKINGHAM.—FOR SALE, Freehold Estate of 450 acres, lying in a ring fence.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.—FOR SALE, Freehold Estate of about 200 acres, lying in a ring fence.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

BERKSHIRE, near ASCOT.—For SALE, a Free- hold Cottage Residence and 11 Acres of Land. Price £1,000.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road, Finsbury.

FOR SALE, THREE FREEHOLD VILLAS, at Wood Green. Price £1,000, clear yearly rental of £75.

Apply to Mr. STEPHENS, Estate Agent, 79, City-road.

PICTURE FRAMES.—Cheap and Good Gilt Frames for Oil Paintings, 2 4 by 24, 4 inches wide, 30s. Ornamental Frames for Drawings, 14 y 16, 4 s. each. The Art Union Prints, framed in a superior style, at the lowest prices. Neat gilt frames, for the Illustrated Portraits, 1s. 6d. each. Gilt Room Bordering at 4s. per yard. Oil paint- ings cleaned, lined, and restored; old frames re-gilt equal to new. The trade and country dealers supplied with gilt and fancy wood mouldings, print, &c. German Prints 5s. per dozen. Neat Gilt Frames, 17 by 13, with glass complete, 1s. 6d. each. CHARLES REES, Carver, Gilder, Mount Maker, and Print Seller, 36, Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

THOSE WHO ARE ABOUT TO FURNISH should visit G. I. THOMPSON'S extensive Stock of Furnishing In- ventory, Electro-Silver Plate, Fenders, Fire-Irons, Japan and Paper Maché Trays, Baths, Toilette Furniture, Gas Chandeliers, Moderator Lamps. All articles marked in plain figures.

THOMPSON'S Electro Silver Spoons, 36s.; Forks, 34s. dozen.

THOMPSON'S Ivory Balance Table Knives, 16s., 22s., 28s. dozen.

25, FINSBURY-PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to Railway Stations. Send for a Furnishing List.

IMPORTER OF PURE COLEA OIL.

KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER AND CORK FLOORCLOTH. Warm, noiseless, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

F. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Walbrook, London, E.C.
Manufactory—South London Works, Lambeth.

TRELOAR'S CORK FLOOR CLOTH, or KAMP- TULICON, COCOA NUT MATTING, and DOOR MATS. Best quality and moderate prices.

T. TRELOAR, Manufacturer, 42, Ludgate-hill, London.

HAIR DYE! HAIR DYE! HAIR DYE!—

GILLINGWATER'S ATRAPILATORY is the best Hair Dye in England. Grey, red, or rusty hair dyed instantly to beautiful and natural brown or black without the least injury to hair or skin, and the ill effects of bad dyes remedied.—Sold at all Chemists and Perfumers of repute, and by the proprietor, W. GILLINGWATER, 148, Holborn-bars, and 96, Goswellroad. Sent free to any railway station in the kingdom in cases, 3s. 6d.,
5s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. each.

DYSPEPSIA and FITS.—Dr. O. Phelps Brown was for several years so badly afflicted by dyspepsia that for a part of the time he was confined to his bed. He was eventually cured by a prescription furnished him by a young clairvoyant girl. This prescription, given him by a mere child, while in a state of France has cured everybody who has taken it, never having failed once. It is equally sure in cases of fits as of dyspepsia. All of the ingredients are to be found at any herbalist's. Those who are afflicted with consumption, bronchitis, or asthma, will receive immediate relief by using my remedy. I will send this valuable prescription to any person, on the receipt of six stamps to pay postage.—Address, Dr. O. PHELPS BROWN, No. 5, King-street, Covent-garden, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—GOOD SPIRITS.—

Every one has frequently experienced the sudden personal change from gaiety to gloom. The wind and weather oftentimes receive the blame, when a faulty digestion is alone the cause of the depression.
Holloway's Pills can be honestly recommended for regulating a disordered stomach and improving digestion. They entirely remove the sense of fullness and oppression after eating. They clean the furred tongue, and act as a wholesome stimulant to the liver, and as a gentle aperient to the bowels; they healthfully rouse both body and mind. Holloway's digestive Pills are the best known antidotes for want of appetite, nausea, flatulency, heartburn, languor, depression, and apathy, so characteristic of chronic derangement of the digestion.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.

In the annual Report of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, inserted in our last week's number at p. 776, under the head "Chancery Fund Commissions," we refer to a document at ante p. 728, as the report of a committee of that society. The document intended to be referred to by us is that inserted ante p. 728, under the head "The Accountant General's Department of the Court of Chancery," being observations and suggestions of the Equity Sub-Committee of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, in relation to the Accountant General's Department.

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, OCTOBER 5, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

At the approaching meeting of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, which will be held at Worcester on the 9th inst., the following papers will be read:—

Mr. John Morris.—On Fraudulent Trade Marks.

Mr. Arthur Ryland.—On Registration of Trade Marks.

Mr. W. Shaen.—On Professional Education.

Mr. C. A. Smith.—On Action for Malicious Prosecution, &c.

Mr. John Turner.—On Justice and its Miscarriages.

Mr. Thomas Dry.—On the Avoués of France.

The Solicitors' Benevolent Association will hold its half-yearly general meeting in the lecture room of the Worcestershire Natural History Society, Foregate-street, Worcester, on Wednesday next, the 9th instant. The meeting will be open to the profession generally, and the presence and co-operation of their professional brethren are earnestly invited by the directors. From the half-yearly report of the directors, recently issued, it appears that since the general meeting in April last eighty-five new members have joined the Association. The aggregate number of solicitors now enrolled in the Society is 1,090, of whom 408 are life members and 682 are annual subscribers. The receipts during the last half-year have amounted to £755 11s. 4d., out of which the directors have invested the sum of £500. It appears that the funded capital of the Society now amounts to £5,159 9s. 11d. £3 per Cent. Consols, the dividends arising from which, amounting to £154 16s., is the only fund at present applicable for the objects of the Society. The directors express an earnest hope that those members of the profession who have not yet contributed to the funds of the Society will now do so, in order that its benevolent objects may be carried out to their fullest extent. We have on previous occasions urged the claims of this excellent Association, and we can only repeat that the objects it has in view are such as to entitle it to the warmest sympathy and most liberal support from all members of the profession.

The courts of the revising barristers are now in full operation throughout the country, and deserve attention on account of the extraordinary form which their proceedings are gradually assuming. The practice in these courts is becoming organized into a system which threatens to take it altogether out of the hands of regular practitioners. It seems probable that the suitors, if they may be so called, will soon be represented exclusively by the registration agents of the two great opposing parties into which it is assumed for the purpose in hand the country is divided. What the abstract and transcendental principles of Liberalism or Conservatism may, be considered apart from the merits of any particular candidate or any definite question of politics, it is not our province to determine, nor have we, fortunately, to make choice between them, though it is taken for granted, at least for registration purposes, that everybody must accept either one or the other. These distinctions belong to the region of politics, into which we strictly refrain from entering. We are anxious only to prevent politicians encroaching upon the province appropriated to practitioners of the law. It seems that, besides the two recognised agents above mentioned, there exists on behalf of each party an unrecognised agent, whose function it is to supply the raw materials of litigation, in the shape of objections to the voters on the register, and who passes under the high sounding title of "the objector-general." Perhaps it would be safer to confine our observations to the office of the objector-general, without going so far as to assert that there is always an officer to fill it; for the functionary in question, whether it be that he exists only in the form of his office, or whether kept in the background by the apprehension of penalties for groundless objections, though much called for and sought after, is seldom forthcoming. As a specimen of the efficient way in which he performs his duties, however, we find that in Middlesex the objector-general on one side made and served no less than 4,000 objections, each objection involving four notices, and each notice, besides the filling up, requiring a separate signature by the hand of the objector himself. Now objections to the register, it is well known, can only be made by a person properly qualified and duly registered himself, and with an exact observance of all the statutory regulations; all which requirements must be sufficiently proved as a condition precedent to the Court entertaining the objection. In the absence of the objector-general himself, great difficulty is naturally found in furnishing available proof of these matters, notwithstanding the zeal and ingenuity of the agents who appear in support of his objections. The revising barristers, as may be imagined, are by no means favourably disposed to this wholesale mode of supplying work for the court, and are equally ingenious in defeating the objections by detecting flaws in the preliminary proofs. In the case above referred to the signatures of the notices were proved by an actual eye-witness of that remarkable feat of signing, but proof of other essentials has not been so readily produced; and such points as the identity of the objector, proof of the posting of the objection, proof that the place of posting was a post-office, that the stamp was a post-office stamp, and others of a like kind, have raised formidable obstacles to the progress of the objections, and have furnished the means of knocking them off by hundreds. The business of the Court thus consists chiefly of very sharp fencing with the rules of evidence between the rival agents; and perhaps it is rather matter of wonder, considering the complicated process required for bringing a voter to defend his vote, and that the judges themselves are often the first to raise the objections to the evidence, which they afterwards adjudicate upon, that any cases at all get safely through to a hearing. The presiding judges, however, profess to show more consideration for independent objections bonâ fide taken for the purpose of correcting the register than for the objections thrown broadcast by the objector-general. The first question which occurs to every one in regard to the practice thus described is the general one, whether this is the mode of correcting the register intended by the Legislature, and whether it was really contemplated to make the register the battle-field for political parties. Another important question occurs as to the consequences to the individual voter. The voter served with an objection has the opportunity of entrusting the defence of his vote to a registration agent instead of his own solicitor, and has an obvious interest in so doing; for by that means he pays his law expenses with his vote instead of with his money. In plain language, he sells his vote to the party to whom he becomes compromised by accepting their services in securing it to him. The transaction, in a political view, is a species of bribery and corruption, and in a legal view savours strongly of champerty and maintenance. With the political view of the question we disclaim any interference; but the monopoly of a large amount of legitimate law business by the agents of political associations seems a matter of serious consideration for the profession.

THE LANDED ESTATES COURT—TRANSFER OF TITLE IN LAND.

No. III.

Statistics by decades are likely to be fallacious. This, however, is the only form in which the Solicitor-General for Ireland has dwelt upon the successful working of the Court. It is the superabundance of causes adjudicated upon in the first years that gives a good average to the records of the decade. We do not think, indeed, that the Court has become unpopular in Ireland; we only mean to say that the argument advanced in its favour, on the ground of its rapid and constant despatch of a vast amount of business, wants foundation. Besides the extreme degree to which the properties brought under the Court in the first years of that tribunal's existence were encumbered, another cause powerfully contributed to gain public favour for the Court. This cause was the condition in which chancery procedure was in Ireland in 1849. Sales of land were not ordered by the Court of Chancery until the priorities of incumbrancers had been adjusted. Upon the unnecessary tediousness of this system we need not now comment. Such delays seldom serve any useful purpose, as the fund in Court, constituting the proceeds of the sale, may be made to represent the estate sold for all necessary purposes. The Irish chancery procedure, however, was in the condition we have described at the period when the Incumbered Estates Court was first established. But the latter tribunal at once ordered a sale in every case when the Court had ascertained that it had jurisdiction to sell; the adjustment of priorities being a matter of subsequent arrangement by the Court. It may be observed that an incumbrancer did not really touch his money one minute sooner under this procedure than he would have under the old. But the presence of money in Court gratified all parties, and the incumbrancer was at all events in the sight of his perhaps long-lent investment. A prompt sale, besides affording mental tranquillity to the incumbrancers of the estate sold, effected real good for the tenants. It demolished the receiver, removed an insolvent owner, and substituted one who was not, like his predecessor, obliged to anticipate the gale day, and be the debtor, instead of the creditor, of his tenants. The Landed Estates Court was thus wafted with a promising breeze before the Irish public. Properties were rapidly brought under the judicial hammer, and if the proceeds were not disbursed with a rapidity proportioned to the expectations of suitors, receivers, at all events, were abolished, and the country improved under solvent landlords and in prosperous times.

Notwithstanding the change of chancery procedure effected by the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 89 (the Irish Chancery Regulation Act, 1850), few in Ireland cared to enquire whether the old Court would act up to its new calling, since there was a young and vigorous rival in Henrietta-street which had no old habits to unlearn. Now, that the altered procedure in chancery has been tried and found to work well, we cannot see the utility of having two judicatures appointed to administer the same class of business, and we altogether concur with Mr. Whiteside, who has already done so much for the reform of Irish common law procedure, in the opinion that a consolidation of the Landed Estates Court with the Court of Chancery is as desirable on every ground, as it appears to us to be a natural development of the former tribunal, if it is to become a permanent institution. A division of labour is practicable and useful in works of toil, or of art. A similar division of duties is seldom practicable in abstract matters which depend for their due realization upon principles of science, philosophy, or even of positive law. A pin takes ten men to make it, but, if there were ten directors of the pin factory, there would doubtless be the usual results of a divided leadership. There are few more gross fallacies than the notion that a mutual isolation of our judicatures is desirable. For that opinion implies that the client has a knowledge of the legal bearings of his case, and knows to which tribunal he should apply. Many, however, are deceived by the specious phrase—division of labour, and think that a system of jurisprudence may be administered on principles which apply only to the lower walks of art. There should doubtless be but one set of guiding principles and laws for courts which administer similar functions. The division of judicatures which we are now discussing is seldom indeed likely to mislead any one; at least to such a degree as that he may not obtain redress in one of the tribunals, if he is entitled to it in the other. Under the original Incumbered Estates Act, however, the special nature of that judicature, which depended for the definition of its powers solely upon the words of a single statute, might readily have led to inconvenience. Thus, suppose a petition presented against a tenant for life, who was considered by the incumbrancer to be a tenant in fee or a tenant in tail, and, after several proceedings, suppose that the commissioners, upon a re-perusal of an ill-drawn will, considered that the supposed owner took only a life estate,—they should of course dismiss the suit. But, if the petitioner in such a case had proceeded in chancery, he would obtain a decree for sale of the life estate. All unnecessary distinctions of tribunals into separate classes are to be deprecated upon principle, even though the inconveniences of the division might not be as obvious as they are as regards the tribunals, the functions of which we are discussing. It is, moreover, an inconvenient system of procedure that requires decrees, after being pronounced by the Court of Chancery, to be carried out by the Landed Estates Court. We pointed out, ante p. 506, the inconvenience of compelling suitors in chancery to resort to the Court of Probate to obtain administration, and showed the expediency of having these judicatures consolidated. The arguments which we there urged are equally applicable to the subject of our present observations. If the Landed Estates Court is to become a permanent adjunct or element of the Irish system of judicatures, it should, doubtless, be completely amalgamated with the more ancient tribunal, with which it is at present so closely allied.

The Times of the 20th ult., in a leading article on the Landed Estates Court, observes:—"There are few people who wish to see half a county with all its territorial rights and appendages, quite as transferable as £100 Consols." We should not, indeed, desire to see British soil, which is the chief basis of our political and social system, rapidly changing hands. But we do not coincide with the opinion implied in the passage we have cited from our contemporary, viz.—that it is desirable that there should be legislative checks to the transfer of land, if we except such as the Statute of Frauds, and the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, require, for the ensuring of caution and deliberation on the part of individuals. Consols, although so negotiable, are not constantly changing hands. No great proportion of the whole National Debt is yearly sold, and even of that amount, a considerable proportion is, doubtless, sold for the purpose of investment in land. We do not think, therefore, that if a conveyance in fee simple could be as easily perfected as a transfer of stock may be made at present, that such a capability of transfer would induce landed proprietors to dispose of their estates, or to have agents in Chancery Court where the prices of their lands could be quoted with daily variations. There is nothing inherent in the nature of landed property to prevent it from being as negotiable as merchandise, or stock. Although ponderous in its own substance, it is not that substance which is sought to be conveyed to a purchaser of it, but merely a right to enjoy it; neither is it the substance of merchandise or of stock, which is obtained by a purchaser of these respectively, but merely a right to enjoy or sell the former, and a right either to obtain a certain sum of money from the Government for the latter, or to re-sell it. Rights, and rights alone, are necessarily the subjects of transfer, and, consequently, of law in either of these three cases. These rights are equally intangible, and equally incorporeal, in the three cases mentioned, notwithstanding the diversity of subject matter to which they respectively relate. But, though so ideal in their own nature, they all admit of transfer, and may be alike transferred with equal facility. Notwithstanding, however, that rights to land, merchandise, ships, shares, or stock may be made equally negotiable, it is, on the other hand, impossible that either of these classes of property can be perfectly negotiable, and that the purchaser should, at the same time, be bound to see to the discharge of the trusts with which any such property may be burdened. Would consols be as transferable as they are at present if the Bank incumbered its books with notices of trusts of stock and if the law affected purchasers of such with notice of the trusts thereon charged? If stock, therefore, could not be readily transferred in the case supposed, why do persons chimerically expect that land can be endued with the quality of being readily transferred, and, at the same time, that the purchaser is to look to the discharge of the trusts imposed on it? We cannot at one and the same time enjoy advantages that are contradictory of one another. Land cannot be made to flit rapidly through brokers' offices and purchasers at the same time be bound to discharge the trusts charged on land. We must, therefore, make an election. We must either prefer the interests of those making family settlements or of purchasers of land. In a new country, such as Australia, upon the conveyancing system of which we commented, ante pp. 176, 196, the interests of agricultural trade are properly deemed paramount to the occasional requirements of family settlements. The state of agriculture in Ireland offers likewise an excuse for the abnormal tribunal upon the constitution of which we have here commented. But the enormous extent to which many Irish properties were incumbered, and the state of the Irish Chancery procedure down to 1850, offer much more cogent reasons for the first establishment if not for the continuance of the Landed Estates Court—an institution which the Irish system of registration deprives of many of its naturally noxious tendencies. In England, however, what perhaps gives an especial value to land is its security as a basis for family settlements, and neither the requirements of agriculture nor the indebtedness of the landowners is so urgent as to require that the interests usually protected by settlements of land should be sacrificed for the purpose of expediting the deduction of title.

Recent Decisions.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

SUCCESSION DUTIES ACT, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 57—BARRING AN ESTATE TAIL—DISPOSITION AND DEVOLUTION.

Lord Braybrooke v. The Attorney-General, 9 W. R. 601.

It was observed by the late Lord Chancellor, in a case to which we shall presently refer, that one of the intentions of the Legislature, in passing the Succession Duties Act, was to provide "that like interests in property should be subjected to like duties, wheresoever throughout the United Kingdom the property might be situated." The design was to make the operation of the Act equal, whether it took place in England or in Scotland. In order to effect this object, the framers of the Act were compelled to construct a new nomenclature, by giving to words of ordinary use, a legal significance hitherto unknown. They had to select terms which should be comprehensive enough to include estates under both Scotch and English law, and not so technical as to exclude either the one or the other. Thus in the 2nd section of the Act, all successions are divided into successions by "disposition," and successions by "devolution." The person entitled to a succession is called a "successor;" and the term "predecessor" denotes the person from whom the succession is "derived." Three new terms of art, at least, namely "disposition," "devolution," and "derivation," have been introduced into the legal vocabulary; and the necessary consequence has been a not unfrequent controversy between the Crown and the subject, as to who is, and who is not, in a given state of circumstances the predecessor from whom, whether by "disposition" or "devolution," the succession is "derived." The general principle of law, applicable to all cases of this nature is, that the subject is not to be taxed, except upon the clearest language, and that where a dispute arises as to the amount of tax payable, it is for the Crown to establish its right.

The points raised for the decision in the House of Lords in Lord Braybrooke v. the Attorney-General were two: one relating to the amount of duty payable in respect of the real estates, the other as to the duty payable in respect of an annuity charged upon the estates. Each of these may be considered separately. First, as to the estates. By the 2nd section of the Act (which was passed on the 4th of August, 1853, and is to be taken to come into operation on the 19th of May previous) it is provided that "every past or future disposition of property by reason whereof any person has or shall become beneficially entitled to any property, or the income thereof, upon the death of any person dying after the time appointed for the commencement of this Act, and every devolution by law of any beneficial interest in property, or the income thereof, upon the death of any person so dying, shall be deemed to confer on the persons entitled by reason of any such disposition or devolution a 'succession,' and the term 'successor' shall denote the person so entitled, and the term 'predecessor' shall denote settlor, disponent, testator, obligor, ancestor, or any other person from whom the interest of the successor is or shall be derived." Sect. 12 provides that "where any person shall take a succession under a disposition made by himself, then, if at the date of such disposition he shall have been entitled to the property comprised in the succession expectantly on the death of any person dying after the time appointed for the commencement of this Act, and such person shall have died during the continuance of this disposition, he shall be chargeable with duty on his succession at the same rate as he would have been chargeable with if no such disposition had been made." By s. 13, where the successor shall derive his succession from more predecessors than one, and the proportional interest derived from each of them shall not be distinguishable. . . in the absence of any agreement, the successor shall be deemed to have derived his succession in equal proportions from each predecessor, and shall be chargeable with duty accordingly.

It was upon the construction of these clauses principally that the following decisions turned, to which Lord Braybrooke v. The Attorney-General forms a sequel. In the case of Re Jenkinson (1857), 24 Beav. 64, it appeared that in the year 1852, A., the tenant for life, and B., the remainderman in tail, executed a disentailing deed, reciting that A. was desirous to make a settlement on his daughters, his only issue, and that for that purpose B. concurred in the execution of the deed. On the following day another deed was executed, reciting that it had been agreed that A. should secure an annuity of £2,250 to B. for A.'s life, and that in consideration thereof B. should join with A. in charging the property with £25,000. Accordingly, A. covenanted to pay B. the annuity of £2,250, and A. and B. appointed the estates in the event of the death of A. without male issue, to trustees for a term, on trust to raise the £25,000, of which £5,000 was to go as A. should appoint, and £20,000 was settled on the daughters. Subject thereto the estates were appointed to B. absolutely. On the death of A. in 1855, the daughters petitioned the Court of Chancery for the money (the trustees having paid it in), and the question arose as to the amount of duty payable on the fund. The petitioner contended that the £20,000 was a debt, which might have been recovered against B.'s reversionary estate, and that it was therefore not chargeable, under the 17th section of the Act; or it was an incumbrance created by B. himself, and that no allowance was to be made to him in respect of it, under the 34th section; in other words, that the duty was payable by him. Or, lastly, it was a succession from A., the petitioners' father, not from B., their cousin, and therefore liable to no more than £1 per cent. On B.'s behalf it was contended that the £20,000 was a reversionary interest to which B. was originally entitled, and which was now vested in the petitioners by alienation, and that they were therefore chargeable under the 15th section with the same duty as B. himself would have been chargeable with—viz. £5 per cent. (B. having been the nephew of A.). The Crown contended that there were two predecessors in this case, A. and B., and that, in the absence of any agreement under the 13th section, the property must be chargeable, as to one moiety at the rate of £1 per cent., and as to the other at the rate of £3 per cent. The Master of the Rolls decided, first, that the £20,000 was not a debt under the 17th section, inasmuch as the petitioners were not contracting parties; secondly, that it was not a reversionary vested interest, being contingent on the death of A., without male issue; thirdly, that it was a charge emanating from A., for the benefit of his daughters, for joining in which B. received valuable consideration. A., therefore, alone, and not B., was the predecessor under the 2nd section. It might have been otherwise had the provision flowed from the bounty of B. Hence £1 per cent only, on the whole fund, was payable by the petitioners. As to the £5,000 the Master of the Rolls treated it as a debt contracted for between A. and B. The important feature in this decision was, that, although A. and B. concurred in making the provision for A.'s daughters, who were also B.'s cousins, yet that as B. received valuable consideration for what he gave up, A. was held to be the sole "predecessor" of the daughters.

The case of The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp (1858), 3 H. & N. 424, occurred in the following year. Under the will of A. Colonel S., his brother, was tenant for life, and Major S., the eldest son of Colonel S., was tenant in tail in remainder. In March, 1848, Colonel S. and Major S. executed a disentailing deed, and by another deed on the following day, the estates were conveyed to trustees on trust, subject to the payment of £1,000 per annum to Major S., during the joint lives of Colonel S. and himself, for Colonel S. for life, remainder to Major S. for life, with remainder over in tail to his sons in succession. Colonel S. died in 1855. Two questions arose: one, as to the estates, whether Major S. succeeded under the will of A., his uncle, in which case he would, as the Crown contended, have to pay £3 per cent., or under the deeds of 1848, in which case he would have to pay, as he said, nothing; or, at all events, only £1 per cent. in respect of a moiety. The other question was as to the £1,000 annuity, which will be noticed hereafter. The Court decided for the Crown on both points. They laid down in broad terms the rule which has since been confirmed by the Lord Chancellor Campbell, that it is not in the power of a tenant in tail in remainder to defeat the operation of the statute by joining with the tenant for life in the ordinary arrangement for barring the entail and re-settling the estates. The Court of Exchequer arrived at this conclusion, but the judges differed widely as to their reasons. The Chief Baron thought that the effect of the deeds of 1848 was to leave the succession just were they found it. Baron Bramwell, on the other hand, thought that section 2 had no application. He decided the case on section 12, upon which he thought the argument was irresistible. He considered that the son took a succession under a disposition made by himself, and that he was liable under that clause to the same rate of duty to which he would have been liable, if such disposition had not been made by him. With reference to the 13th section, he considered that the son took nothing from the father, consequently that he did not take from more predecessors than one, and therefore the £3 per cent. duty was payable on the whole succession. Baron Watson in like manner decided the case solely on the operation of the 12th section.

The next case is that of The Attorney-General v. Baker (1859), 4 H. & N. 26, which turned entirely upon the construction of the 2nd clause. John P. having died intestate, his brother, Wadham P., administered. Mrs. S. claimed a share of the estate as being a daughter of the intestate's sister; but her right was disputed or doubted, and thereupon an arrangement was entered into between Wadham P., and Mr. and Mrs. S.; and by two deeds a sum of £30,000 was settled on the husband for life, afterwards on the wife for life; and afterwards on the children, as they should jointly appoint; and the husband and wife gave a release to Wadham P. They afterwards appointed £2,000 to one of their sons under the power. The question was, who was the "predecessor" of this son, under the 2nd section; whether his mother, as he contended; or Wadham P., a stranger in blood, as was said on behalf of the Crown. The decision of the Court was arrived at with considerable difficulty, and with some dissent. Baron Watson thought that, inasmuch as the £30,000 moving from Wadham P. was given in consideration of the release, he could in no sense be held to have been the originator of the trust for the son of Mrs. S.; and consequently that the mother was the settlor and predecessor. The Chief Baron and Baron Martin considered the facts as stated in the special case to be so uncertain that the Crown must be held to have failed in establishing its claim. It did not clearly appear whether Mrs. S. thought she had a just claim, but could not satisfactorily establish it; whether she had a perfect claim, and the £30,000 was her proper proportion; or whether she thought her claim doubtful, and so accepted the sum of money as a satisfaction. Under these circumstances it was impossible, they thought, to do more than guess that she was the predecessor. Mr. Justice Channell leaned to the opinion that Wadham P. was the predecessor.

The Attorney-General v. Lord Braybrooke (May, 1860), 5 H. & N. 588, is a case confessedly undistinguishable in its circumstances from The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp. By will in 1796, A. devised estates to his cousin B. for life, remainder to C., the eldest son of B., for life, remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail male. After the death of B., C. and his first son D., in the year 1841, barred the entail; and in 1850 the estates were re-appointed to the use that D. should receive an annual rent charge of £1,200 during the joint lives of himself and C., and subject thereto, to C. for life, remainder to D. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. Upon C.'s death in 1858 the question arose. The Court of Exchequer, following The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp, decided in favour of the Crown. The Chief Baron, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said they considered "the father could not, in any sense, be the predecessor of the son in reference to his present beneficial interests; and that the transaction was not anything more than a resettling of the family estates." There appears to be no reference whatever in this judgment to the operation of the 12th clause of the Act. The opinion of the Chief Baron seems to have been that the deeds of 1841 and 1850 were wholly inoperative upon the succession, which must be traced back to A. the original settlor, and that duty must be paid by D. as the successor of A. With reference to clause 13 he lays it down that D. "never was and never could have been his own predecessor."

We shall find how far this view has been since modified, but before proceeding to consider the judgment of the House of Lords in the last case, we may notice an intermediate decision of Lord Saltoun v. The Lord Advocate (June, 1860), 3 Mac. App. Cas. 659. Lady S. by deed of entail in 1846, according to the forms of Scotch law, limited estates to Lord S., her only surviving son and the heirs of his body, whom failing, to A. F., eldest son of a deceased son of Lady S., and the heirs of his body. After Lady S.'s death, Lord S. took the estates, and died in 1853 without issue, whereupon A. F. succeeded. Was A. F. to be considered the successor of his grandmother or of his uncle? According to Scotch law, property can be entailed on a series of heirs ad infinitum (subject to the tenant in tail, with certain consents, being able to disentail the property); and the theory of law is that the whole fee is vested in each successive tenant in tail, subject to restrictions as to sale, incumbrances, and non-alteration of the series of heirs. When one tenant in tail dies, his successor must "prove himself heir" to the deceased tenant in tail. The tenant in tail corresponds mainly to tenant for life according to English law. The Lord Chancellor (Campbell), after commenting on the language of the Succession Duties Act, as above mentioned, held, overruling the Court of Session, that the grandmother was in this case the "settlor," "disponer," or "ancestor," from whom A. F. "derived" his succession. Lord Cranworth and Lord Wensleydale concurred; and the case would have presented no difficulty but for the peculiarities in the law of Scotland which led the Court of Session to adopt a too narrow construction of the language of the statute.

We lastly come to the appeal in The Attorney-General v. Braybrooke (March, 1861). The Lord Chancellor (Campbell) began by exposing the erroneous view which had been taken in argument, that under the deeds of 1841 and 1850, D. did not take "by his own disposition." He laid it down that the deed of 1841, must be held to be a new disposition by the son of his interest as tenant in tail for his own benefit. The subject matter of the deeds, therefore, divided itself into two portions, one, the property which D. took by virtue of his new disposition; and the other, that in which the father had a life estate, and which remained unaltered by the arrangement. The Lord Chancellor distinctly confirmed Baron Bramwell's reasoning in The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp, on the 12th section of the Act, holding that as to the property which D. took by his own disposition, it was chargeable at the same rate as if no such disposition had been made, i.e., as if he had succeeded under the will of A. Thus both as to one portion of the fund, and as to the other, the same rate of duty, £10 per cent. was payable. In this view Lord Kingsdown concurred. His opinion was that, under the Act, every person succeeding to property on the death of a person after 19th May, 1853, is subjected to payment of duty. One of the exceptions is where a person succeeds under a disposition made by himself. But this exception is subject to the qualification expressed in the 12th section above. In this case D. was at no time entitled to any interest except in expectancy on the death of C. Under the will of A., D. was chargeable with 10 per cent., and so far as the subsequent deeds were a disposition made by himself, D. remained liable to the same amount of duty. After much consideration Lord Kingsdown rejected the view that C, the father, could be held to be one of the predecessors of D. within the 13th section. So far the decree of the Court of Exchequer was confirmed, but rather upon the grounds stated by Baron Bramwell and Baron Martin, in The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp, than upon those laid down by the Chief Baron in the two cases. Lord Wensleydale, however, dissented from the Lord Chancellor and Lord Kingsdown. He agreed in condemning the doctrine that family settlements had no effect upon the succession; but, rejecting the application of the 12th clause to the deeds of disentail and re-settlement, he considered that both father and son were "settlers" or "disponers;" and that under the 13th clause the son ought to pay £1 per cent. on that portion of the subject matter only which he "derived" from his father. He thought the deed of 1850 constituted an entirely new succession, to be treated in the same way as if the father and son had bought and settled a new estate. But this view was negatived.

The conclusion to be drawn is the establishment of this principle, that a tenant in tail in remainder cannot vary the succession duty to which he will be liable, by barring the entail and resettling the estate. The tenant in tail in remainder, when he bars the entail, may, if he pleases, alienate the estate, and no succession duty will then be payable by him; but if he re-settles the estate so that he himself shall succeed to it on the death of the tenant for life, he must then pay the same succession duty as if he had taken under the original settlement.

Before quitting this part of the subject, it may be observed that since the above decision of the House of Lords in March last, another case has come before the Master of the Rolls, involving the question of who was the "predecessor" within the 2nd section, under these circumstances. By a marriage settlement the intended husband covenanted to pay within twelve months the sum of £10,000 to trustees, to be held on trust for him and the intended wife successively for life, and after the death of the survivor, for the children of the marriage; and in default of issue of the marriage (which happened), for the children of the intended wife by her late husband, as the wife should appoint; and in default of appointment amongst such children equally. The intended wife also brought a sum of £6,000 into settlement. After the marriage the £10,000 was paid; the wife survived, and died without having exercised the power. When one of the children's shares came to be paid, the question arose as to who was the predecessor, and the trustees, in her interest, relying on The Attorney-General v. Baker, and Re Jenkinson, amongst other cases, argued that the mother was the predecessor, inasmuch as she supplied the consideration for which the provision was made. The Master of the Rolls held that where upon the marriage of the owner of an estate to a lady, he agrees to settle a sum of money upon her relations, he, and not the lady, must be considered as the predecessor. If it were not so, the wife's property would, for the purposes of succession, be considered as the husband's, and the husband's as belonging to the wife. The ultimate destination of the fund could not affect the question as to who was the predecessor. In this case also, the wife had not exercised her power of appointment, and this made the argument stronger against the theory of her being the settlor. In re Ramsay's Settlement (June, 1861), 9 W. R. 910.

More recently still, a judgment has been delivered by the Court of Exchequer, which, though prepared before the decision of the House of Lords in the Braybrooke case, coincides entirely with it.

A., being seised in fee, devised lands to his son Henry for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, and died. Henry, the son, being tenant for life, and William John, his eldest living son, being tenant in tail male in remainder, in 1810, suffered a recovery to such uses as they should jointly appoint. In 1821, Henry and his son, William John, appointed the estates to the use of Henry for life, then to William John for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; then to the use of George, the next son of Henry, for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male. Henry died in 1834; William John died in 1855 without issue; whereupon George succeeded as tenant for life, and the question arose. If George derived any part of the succession from his brother William John as predecessor, as to that portion the rate of duty would be £3 per cent.; if not, the whole, being derived from George's father and grandfather, would be chargeable with only £1 per cent. Baron Bramwell, in delivering the judgment of the Court, distinguished the present case from The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp. If the question here had been what duty William John should pay, the Court would have followed their decision in the case of Major Sibthorp. But in this case George got an estate by the joint power of his father and brother operating on a fee created out of his brother's estate, but which the brother alone could not operate on, the result was that, whether the Court considered the succession to come half from Henry and half from William John, or whether the interest arising from each could not be distinguished, the 13th section applied, and the rate of duty was £3 per cent. on one moiety, and £1 per cent. on the other. The argument in this case was heard in the year 1860, on the day after the decision in the Saltoun Case; The Attorney-General v. Floyer and Others (6th July, 1861), Exch.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

RIGHTS OF ASSIGNEES FOR VALUE OF VOLUNTARY MORTGAGE GIVEN UNDER DURESS.

Parker v. Clarke, M. R., 9 W. R., 877.

This case involved an important question as to the rights of an assignee for value of a voluntary mortgage. It has been settled by the more recent decisions that such an assignee stands to all intents and purposes in the place of his assignor. The right of such assignees, however, to be regarded as plenary purchasers for valuable consideration, is very often sought to be supported, nor is this position without countenance from the older authorities; for instance, in the case of the Earl of Aldborough v. Trye, 7 Cl. & Fin. 436, it was held that if a person grants a voluntary deed enabling the grantee to raise money upon it from a third party, the grantor cannot get back or set aside the deed without paying what was advanced on it without fraud. That case related to the grant of an annuity. In the case of George v. Milbanke, 9 Ves. 190, Lord Eldon established that even a creditor of the grantor, in the case of his bankruptcy, could not get back a voluntary deed from a third party, who had purchased it from the grantee, without repaying him the money he had paid for it. This, however, was the case of a purchaser from a party who took under a voluntary deed of appointment. At the time when this decision was pronounced, 1803, the doctrine of powers was in great esteem, and an appointee, even under a voluntary deed, would, doubtless, be regarded with more favour by the Court than at present. A purchaser from the appointee, as observed in the argument in the latter case, could not be deemed to have notice of the state of the appointor's affairs. Even a judgment debt due by the appointor, prior to the statute 1 Vict. c. 110, might be defeated by an appointment. There is, therefore, a clear ground of distinction between voluntary appointees and purchasers from them, and voluntary mortgagees and their assignees for value. An assignee of a mortgage takes subject to all the equities of the mortgagor, and is liable to have the account taken from beginning to end, although he may have had no notice by endorsements on the deeds, or otherwise, that part of the debt had been discharged; Porter v. Hubbard, 3 Ch. R. 78; Matthews v. Wallenger, 4 Ves. 118. If there is nothing due on foot of the mortgage, the assignment of it is valueless. Why should it not be equally so where no consideration had been ever advanced upon the mortgage? In Daubeny v. Cockburn, 1 Mer. 627, a bill by a purchaser for value was dismissed as against the person entitled under the settlement in default of appointment, such person having also the legal estate in the fund appointed. This case, indeed, seems to have proceeded upon the general principle that when the equities are equal, the law shall prevail. But the decision also seems to imply that the equities of the purchaser from the appointee, and of the party entitled in default of appointment, were not equal, as the former was not considered to have a right to call for a conveyance of the legal interest. All equities, as a general rule are extinguished on a sale to a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice, who also obtains a conveyance of the legal estate. The reason why this rule has no operation as regards assignments of mortgages is, that there cannot be a purchase of the mortgagee's interest without constructive notice of the equities, if any, of the mortgagor. The assignee of a mortgage granted for value may, no doubt, be deemed in many respects, a purchaser for value, as for instance, as regards the right given to purchasers by the 27 Eliz. c. 4, to avoid, pro tanto, prior voluntary grants. Such assignee is, nevertheless, bound to consider the mortgage in the light in which equity considers it, viz., as a security for a debt, and therefore liable to be overhauled on an examination of the accounts and equities between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. The Court allows a mortgagee before foreclosure only a qualified interest in the land, which may be still further diminished on an examination of the accounts. The rule which protects purchasers for valuable consideration without notice, ex necessitate rei does not apply to the assignees of mortgagees, because these have implied notice that the conveyance is only a security for a debt, and may, therefore, have been either wholly or partially discharged. Such assignees are, consequently, under an obligation to ask the mortgagor whether there is anything due on the mortgage. In the present case, A. B., while in prison, had granted a mortgage under promise of a release which was not carried into effect. The mortgagee subsequently assigned it to a party who had notice of the circumstances under which it was given, and the latter made an equitable mortgage of it to the defendant who gave a consideration for the deposit, and had no notice of its being a voluntary instrument made under duress. The Master of the Rolls held that the depositor could not claim to be in a better position than his mortgagor, and accordingly ordered the deed to be delivered up. The onus of proving the invalidity of the deed lay of course on the plaintiff; but, as this was coupled with the difficulty of proving a negative, once that a prima facie case of undue influence was made out by the plaintiff, the burden of proof, became, then, as observed by his Honour in his judgment, shifted upon the defendant, who was then bound to prove the validity of the transaction. If a deed obtained by undue influence be afterwards assigned to a purchaser for value without notice, he holds it, as a general rule, discharged of the infirmity; Blackie v. Clark, 15 Beav. 595; Corbett v. Brock, 20 Beav. 524. The case of Parker v. Clarke establishes that mortgages form an exception to this general rule of equity.

Correspondence.

CONVEYANCE—FORM OF HABENDUM.

I cannot but think that the answer of "Another Subscriber" to the query of "A Subscriber," which appeared in your number for the 14th September, treats the matter in question somewhat too cavalierly, and that the effect of his note is rather to prevent inquiry than to answer it, and may prove a great discouragement to inquiring minds, whether those of actual students or young practitioners. Here allow me to take the opportunity of thanking you for the important assistance which the correspondence section of your valuable Journal afforded me as a student. The recollection of this aid renders me very desirous that no check beyond that which your experience can be safely trusted to impose may be given to the free circulation of queries, even though to the more advanced lawyer some of the points mooted may appear but trifling.

In the present case, while I am so far in agreement with "Another Subscriber" as to have been willing to rest satisfied with the ordinary form of conveyance, which, I believe, retains the limitation of a use in the case supposed, yet I was pleased to see the doubt propounded, as, some time since, the limitation was by mistake omitted in the engrossment of a deed which came under my notice after execution, and I was at first uneasy as to the effect of its omission, but, on due consideration of the principles involved, I was of opinion that there was no mis-carriage. I cannot, however, agree with "A Subscriber" in attributing the non-necessity for the limitation to the operation of the Act 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, as quite independently of that Act, the limitation would seem to be unnecessary for the purpose of passing to the purchaser the absolute fee-simple (the nature of the proposition excludes any limitations in bar of dower, &c.), and I imagine that in the simple case supposed, the practice of adding the limitation of the use originated, ex abundanti cautela, in the desire to exclude the possibility of a resulting use, as to which, however, it may be fairly answered that it is rebutted by the nature of the transaction (see Hayes' Con.); and I cannot but think that "A Subscriber" shews a little forgetfulness of his principles of conveyancing in his antithetical reference to the conveyance by lease and release. The limitation under consideration was no more necessary to pass a fee-simple by lease and release than it is now where the conveyance is by grant. The lease for a year, operating as a bargain and sale, under the Statute of Uses, transferred to the lessee the actual possession, and upon his taking a release to him and his heirs the absolute fee-simple passed to him without any limitation of a use. The doctrine of uses was required to effectuate the former, but not the latter of the two deeds. I remember, when first studying law, the difficulty of applying my reading to practice was considerably enhanced by the loose terms in which my "reverend signiors" expressed themselves in reference to the lease and release respectively as the efficient means of bringing the Statute of Uses into play so as to secure the passing of the fee.

I must apologize for the length of these observations, and trust they may call forth any necessary correction from those who are better qualified to instruct than

A YOUNG SOLICITOR.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ACT.

By the 71st section of the Bankrupt Act, 1861, if any debtor arrested for debt lie in prison, being a trader, for fourteen days, or non-trader, for two months; or having been arrested for any cause, shall lie in prison as aforesaid, upon any detainer for debt lodged against him and not discharged, he shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy. It then proceeds, "but no such debtor shall be adjudged bankrupt on the ground of having lain in prison as aforesaid, unless, having been summoned, he shall not offer such security for the debt or debts in respect of which he is imprisoned or detained, as the commissioner or registrar, whose duty it would otherwise be to adjudicate, shall deem reasonably sufficient."

By sect. 100, gaolers are to make returns of prisoners for debt in their custody. Sect. 101 provides that "the commissioner or county court judge, as the case may be, shall, on receiving such return, order the registrar to attend at the gaol as therein specified." It then proceeds, "on the day named in the order the registrar shall attend at the prison and examine every prisoner included in such return who shall have been in prison, being a trader, for fourteen days, or not being a trader, for two months, touching his effects, debts, dealings, and transactions." . . . "The registrar shall have power to make an order of adjudication in bankruptcy against every such person, and to grant him protection and to make an order for his release from prison," &c. In the latter section nothing is said about the debtor being summoned in order that he may give security; yet by section 71 he cannot be adjudged bankrupt until he has been so summoned.

Is it meant in sect. 101 that the registrar is only to examine those prisoners who have been summoned under the proviso in sect. 71, or is that section meant to apply only to those persons who may happen to be in custody for debt, at the time of the commencement of the Act, and the other section to those imprisoned subsequently? The direction to the registrar in sect. 101 is absolute—that he examine every prisoner included in the return who shall have been in prison, being a trader, for fourteen days, or not being a trader, for two months.

It appears to me that there is a conflict between the two sections, and I shall be glad if you or some of your readers will express an opinion upon them.

G.

The "Finance accounts" show that there was paid last year from the Consolidated Fund £323,000 for salaries of judges, and £65,000 for pensions to retired judges. In view of these figures it is well that it was finally determined by Parliament not to add another £5,000 a-year to the account until it is seen whether the changes in the Bankruptcy Court will really require it.

Reviews.

The Law of Bankruptcy and Insolvency, as founded on the Recent Statute. By JOHN FREDERICK ARCHBOLD, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. London: Simpkin Marshall, & Co.

The Bankruptcy Act, 1861, incorporating so much as remains in force of the 12 & 13 Vict. cap. 106; Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849; of the 15 & 16 Vict. cap. 77; and of the 17 & 18 Vict. cap. 119; with an Appendix and Notes. By WILLIAM HAZLITT, Esq., a Registrar of the Court of Bankruptcy, and HENRY PHILIP ROCHE, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. London: Stevens & Sons; Sweet; and Maxwell.

Treatises on the new law of bankruptcy are multiplying around us. Shortly after the publication of Mr. Lewis's manual appeared the work of Mr. Archbold, which has now been followed by the ample compilation of Messrs. Hazlitt and Roche. The aim of each and all of these learned editors has been to a great extent the same, that is to say, to combine the provisions of the new Act with the unrepealed portions of former statutes; and thus to present the law under every branch of the subject in a compact form. The practitioner is hereby furnished with the statutory materials for forming an opinion on those questions of procedure which must necessarily arise, but which it is impossible to anticipate; whilst the problem of consolidation is practically solved by a variety of arrangements, each of which approximates more or less to perfection. From these attempts, aided by the experience which time will furnish of the working of the Act, the task of preparing a comprehensive measure will at some future day be easy, and the subject, when rendered familiar to the profession and the public, and freed from some of its complexities, will be in a condition to be dealt with by the legislature as a whole. Mr. Archbold offers his acknowledgments to the Lord Chancellor for some "admirable improvements" which have been effected by the new statute, and points out the impracticability of passing a larger measure through a committee of the House of Commons. He then refers to his arrangement, the peculiar feature of which is, that the subject is scientifically arranged under the following headings:—

1. Jurisdiction.
2. Who may be bankrupts, and in what cases?
3. The petition and adjudication.
4. The meeting of creditors and appointment of an assignee.
5. The property, how collected and realised.
6. The property, how applied and distributed.
7. Rights and privileges of bankrupts.
8. Agreement with creditors without bankruptcy.
9. Appeal to the lords justices.
10. Courts of bankruptcy auxiliary to other courts.

Each of these heads is afterwards subdivided and dealt with in detail. Thus the whole of the matter is digested into a system easy of reference and recommending itself to the student by its accessibility and simplicity. In the body of the work the sections are placed together in a narrative form, which does not however depart from the language of the enactments. No cases have been cited, on the ground that it is wholly uncertain how far any of the old decisions can be deemed authorities for the exposition of the law as it stands at present. In the appendix are printed the Act of 1861, and the unrepealed portions of the Act of 1849, with the schedules. These with an index complete the volume. To Mr. Archbold belongs the merit of having been the first to methodize this hitherto unwieldy mass of materials.

The work of Messrs. Hazlitt and Roche has recommendations of another kind. The learned compilers having been, as they state in their preface, "employed under the direction of the Lord Chancellor in the mechanical preparation" of the present Act, and of the Bill of 1860, are in a position to speak authoritatively as to the history of the measure, and its progress through Parliament; and even of its amendments in the Committee of the House of Lords. The notes which are furnished on this last subject are founded on the observations of one of the editors, who attended the meetings of the Committee. Much incidental light is thus thrown upon the origin of parts of the measure, which are not amongst the clearest in meaning and application. To some of the more important of these we may at once refer.

Section 114, a clause which empowers the Court to dispose, for the benefit of the creditors, of the copyholds and customary lands of a bankrupt, was inserted in the Lords' Committee by Lord St. Leonards, in substitution of section 209 of the Consolidation Act of 1849. The object of the section is to render only one deed necessary, instead of two, as formerly.

Section 115 of the new Act provides that the life estate in remainder of a bankrupt non-trader is not to be sold before it falls into possession, without the leave of the Court. This provision, it seems, was introduced in the Select Committee by Lord St. Leonards, in order to prevent sales of such interests for inadequate prices, which Lord Derby, in committee, shewed, from the calculations of an actuary, would necessarily be the case, if the life estate were disposed of during the existence of the previous estate.

Sect. 152 was introduced by Sir Hugh Cairns in order to put a final termination to the questions which have given rise to litigation on the question of double proof. Of these Goldsmid v. Casanova, decided by the House of Lords in 1859, 29 L. J. Bkcy. 17, is one of the latest examples. Other cases on the point are collected in "Tudor's Leading Cases on Mercantile and Maritime Law." Sect. 153, which provides that unliquidated damages in respect of a contract broken by the bankrupt at the time of his adjudication, shall be assessed by a jury and proved like an ordinary debt, is intended to meet cases like those of Boorman v. Nash, 9 B. & C. 145; and Green v. Bicknell, 8 Ad. & Ell. 701.

Sect. 154 was inserted with reference to the decision of the Queens' Bench in Warburg v. Tucker, 24 L. J. Q. B. 317, in which it was held that the certificate in bankruptcy was no bar to a claim in respect of a covenant to pay premiums on a policy of assurance, which had become due since the bankruptcy.

In sect. 159, rule 1, occur words which have given rise to much speculation—"if the bankrupt consent thereto." This is with reference to the bankrupt's prosecution before the Commissioner. These words were introduced in the House of Lords, and disagreed to by the Commons, and were, as the editors believe, inadvertently retained in the printed Act. Their effect probably will be to enable the bankrupt to decline to be tried by the Court of Bankruptcy on a charge of misdemeanour. This power, the learned editors think, will rarely be exercised by the bankrupt, inasmuch as it is competent to the Court to direct him to be indicted and prosecuted in one of the ordinary courts. This course, they add, is inexpedient from its costliness; but this is manifestly a consideration which will weigh with very few bankrupts of the class who are likely to be prosecuted for misdemeanours. The power of the bankrupt to inflict additional expense on the estate is rather likely to throw an impediment in the way of an indictment on the part of the creditors.

We are reminded (p. 182) that section 160, which enables persons heretofore bankrupt, and whose certificate of conformity has been refused to apply for an order of discharge, was "mercifully" introduced by Mr. Malins.

With reference to the trust deed clauses, sections 192—200; it is stated, on the authority of a Parliamentary return, that, upon an average of ten years up to 1857, the number of composition, arrangement, and inspectorship deeds out of court was 9,000 per annum.

Practitioners are reminded that section 207 will render great facilities for the swearing of affidavits with reference to bankruptcy proceedings in Scotland and Ireland. There will no longer be any necessity to resort to the Irish Affidavit Office in Southampton-buildings, or to special offices, as the Mansion-house and others, in the case of Scotland.

In one of the appendices will be found the Act introduced in 1860 by the Lord Advocate, to prevent English debtors from taking advantage of the Scottish bankrupt laws to the detriment of their English creditors; and in connexion with this subject some valuable notes prepared by Mr. James P. Falkner, solicitor at Edinburgh, for the purpose of giving assistance to English solicitors in the recovery of debts, or the prosecution of bankruptcies. The Act of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 70 is also given at length, and in addition, such of the rules and orders of 1852, as will, it is presumed, for the present remain applicable to the procedure of the Court—in other words, such of them as will remain untouched by the forthcoming orders. The principle of Messrs. Hazlitt and Roche's arrangement is to follow the order of clauses in the new statute, interpolating the corresponding portions of the old unrepealed law in a different type, a system which possesses very obvious advantages.

The specimens we have given above will show the importance of the annotations and other materials which are assembled in this volume. The particulars here stated are only to be found elsewhere, if at all, by searching files of Parliamentary papers, or the unauthorized, it may be defective, and even erroneous, newspaper reports of proceedings in Parliament; whilst of the details of what passes in a House of Lords' Committee the public has no record whatsoever. To the information thus collected by the learned editors, the official position of one of them, and the fact of their having been the draughtsmen of the Act under the superintendence of the Lord Chancellor, lend an especial authority and guarantee of authenticity.

RAILWAY BILLS.—Resolutions of both Houses of Parliament were passed last session discontinuing the system of engrossing Bills, and providing that in future every Bill shall be printed immediately after it shall have been passed in the House in which it originated. When a Bill has passed both Houses a print on vellum is to be furnished to the House of Lords before receiving the royal assent. The Master of the Rolls is also to receive a copy, and as it is considered expedient with a view to economy, convenience, and despatch, and diminution of the chances of error, that one printer should print the public general Bills for both Houses, and as the Queen's printer is, by virtue of his office, bound to print the Acts of Parliament, it is deemed advisable that the Queen's printer should be employed for that purpose by both Houses in future.

A new entrance to the Temple from the bottom of Essex-street, Strand, has been completed. It opens opposite to the new Library-chambers, and is built of Portland stone, in the same style of architecture; the old wall facing the west front of the Library is being paved with Portland stone, and a wall of the same material, extending from the porter's lodge of the new entrance to the river, has been built. This means of ingress and egress to persons having business in the Library, or Garden-court, will be very convenient.

Admission of Attorneys.

Queen's Bench.

NOTICES OF ADMISSION.

Michaelmas Term, 1861.

[Candidates' names appear in Small Capitals, and Solicitors to whom articles or assigned in ordinary type.]

AMOS, GEORGE PEMBROKE.—G. Amos, Wye; G. L. P. Eyre, 1, John-street, Bedford-row.
 ANSDALL, THOMAS FERGUSON.—J. Ansdall, St. Helen's, Lancaster; J. Walker, Chester.
 ANTHONY, WILLIAM HENRY.—R. Norris, sen., Liverpool; P. Simpson, Liverpool.
 ASHWIN, STEPHEN GODFREY.—T. S. Ashwin, Stratford-upon-Avon; D. Harrison, 5, Walbrook.
 BANNISTER, CHARLES ALBERT.—Charles Pearson, Guildhall; J. Davidson, Weavers' Hall.
 BLAKE, EDWARD FREDERICK.—F. Blake, Newport, Isle of Wight.
 BLEW, JOHN CARDALL.—T. M. Whitehouse, Wolverhampton.
 BONVILLE, JOHN.—W. Lloyd, Carmarthen.
 BOYS, ATHELSTAN HERVEY.—J. H. Boys, Margate.
 BRADLEY, HENRY BARRELL.—R. Galsworthy, Ipswich.
 BRAIN, ALFRED JAMES.—William Matthews, Gloucester.
 BRETON, ALEXANDER GORDON.—P. Karlake, Regent-street.
 BREWIS, THOMAS.—J. Fleming, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
 BRICE, RICHARD.—Dyne & Harvey, 61, Lincoln's-inn-fields; H. Dyne, Bruton.
 BROOKS, ARTHUR.—R. H. Tarleton, Birmingham.
 BROWN, RICHARD.—T. Swainson, Lancaster.
 CARR, ALFRED.—S. Davidson, Basinghall-street; B. Hardwick, Basinghall-street.
 CHAMBERS, JOHN H. BROUGHAM.—J. W. H. Richardson, Leeds.
 CHIDLEY, SYDNEY.—J. R. Chidley, Old Jewry.
 CLARK, JAMES.—E. F. Slack, Bath.
 CLIFTON, GEORGE HENRY.—F. Smedley, 14, Jermyn-street, St. James's.
 COLLINS, JOHN.—John Atkinson, Whitehaven.
 CORNISH, HERBERT HENRY.—H. Cornish, Tavistock; T. Cornish, Penzance.
 COTTERELL, GEORGE.—S. Wilkinson, jun., Walsall.
 CUDON, GEORGE JOHN.—C. Blount, Usk; W. Blackmore, Liverpool.
 DALTON, HENRY.—R. Radcliffe, South Liverpool.
 DAUNCEY, OSBORNE.—R. Bracey, Wotton-under-Edge.
 DAWSON, WILLIAM.—J. Bevan, Cowbridge, Glamorgan.
 DIMBLEBY, DAVID.—T. Slaney, Birmingham.
 DUERDIN, JAMES.—J. Hollams, Commercial Sale Rooms, Mincing-lane.
 EDELSTON, THOMAS.—T. Harris, Preston.
 EMERSON, MATTHEW SALLITT.—W. Massey, Watton.

FARDELL, JOHN WILSON.—J. H. Hearn, Newport, Isle of Wight.
 FIELD, HENRY HARRISON.—W. Daggett, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
 FLINT, REST WILLIAM.—E. Knocker, Dover.
 FLOYD, ROBERT AARON.—C. S. Floyd, Huddersfield; N. Learoyd, Huddersfield; W. Janeway, Bedford-row.
 GARWOOD, CLIFTON RAMSAY.—W. Garwood, York.
 GIBSON, WILLIAM, jun.—R. H. Speed, Nottingham.
 GILL, THOMAS JOSEPH.—Richard Radford, Manchester.
 GREY, JOHN WILLIAM BACON.—S. Newinan, Newport Pagnall.
 GROVER, JOHN NIGHTINGALE KEY.—J. W. Weston, Manchester.
 GUSH, WILLIAM FREDERICK.—L. Walters, 36, Basinghall-street.
 HARDING, CHARLES.—W. S. Harding, Birmingham.
 HEAVEN, ARTHUR.—C. G. Heaven, Bristol.
 HEMMING, JOHN JOSEPH.—J. H. Warman, Ebley House, Stroud.
 HERBERT, CHARLES HENRY.—F. Herbert, 20, Royal Avenue-terrace, Chelsea.
 HERBERT, MONTAGUE BERTIE.—R. Nicholson, Old Palace-yard, and Spring-gardens.
 HINDE, WILLIAM GREGSON.—Kennaway and Buckingham, Exeter.
 HIPWOOD, LACY.—E. Thompson, Salters' Hall.
 HODGSON, CHARLES BRAY.—W. S. Allen, Birmingham; F. Turner, Aldermanbury.
 HOLMES, JOHN.—A. Croaley, 34, Lombard-street.
 HORSELL, HENRY.—J. Pratt, Wootton Bassett.
 HULME, WILLIAM ODYERNE.—W. Simons, Merthyr Tydfil.
 JACKSON, NORFOLK BARSTOW.—J. Richardson, York; J. Williamson, jun., Great James-street, Bedford-row.
 JACKSON, ROBERT LONDON.—H. A. Palmer, Bristol; A. H. Wansey, Bristol.
 JEFFERY, ALFRED JOHN.—J. Jeffery, Northampton.
 KELLY, THOMAS THELWELL.—A. T. Roberts, Mold.
 KEMPTHORNE, JAMES.—Alex. Cuthbertson, Neath.
 KING, THOMAS, jun.—A. R. Bristow, Greenwich.
 KNIGHT, JAS. HENRY.—R. Underwood, Castle-street, Hereford.
 KNOWLES, JAMES HARDCASTLE.—J. Knowles, Bolton.
 KNOWES, ROBERT ANDREW.—J. Knowles, Bolton.
 KYNASTON, JOHN, jun.—H. Nicol, 8, Queen-street, Cheapside.
 LACE, WILLIAM HENRY.—Robt. Norris, Liverpool, T. Rigge, Liverpool; A. Lace, Liverpool.
 LAKE, BENJAMIN GREENE.—H. Lake, 10, New-square, Lincoln's-inn.
 LAY, JOS. BLACKBURN.—J. C. Fenton, Huddersfield; J. J. J. Sudlow, 20, Chancery-lane.
 LEE, BARNARD.—C. V. Lewis, 2, Raymond's-buildings, Gray's-inn.
 LEE, HENRY.—J. Lee, Whitechurch.
 LEWIS, LOUIS.—J. G. Lewis, 10, Ely-place.
 LITTLE, WILLIAM.—L. Harrison, Penrith.
 LOWTHIAN, ISAAC.—D. McAlpin, Carlisle.
 LUMB, ALFRED.—L. Harrison, Penrith.
 LYUB, GEO. ORMISTON.—G. Lys, Diss, Norfolk.
 MALLORY, DANIEL.—B. Bubb, Cheltenham.
 MARSHALL, BENJAMIN JOHN.—J. H. Marshall, 12, Hatton-Garden.
 MARTIN, GEORGE.—J. Bush, Bradford, Wilts.
 MATHEWS, JAMES LLEWELLYN.—W. Walton, 30, Bucklersbury.
 MAXFIELD, HENRY OATES.—W. Esam, East Retford, Notts.
 MAYHEW, SYDNEY.—A. Mayhew, 26, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields; H. White, 7, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury.
 MAYNARD, CROFTON.—T. C. Maynard, Durham.
 MILWARD, ROBERT HARDING.—W. P. Allcock, Birmingham.
 MORLEY, CHARLES EDWARD.—J. Loxley, 80, Cheapside.
 MORTON, ROBERT.—E. Willoby, Berwick-upon-Tweed.
 NORRIS, GEORGE.—P. Simpson, Liverpool; R. Norris, Liverpool.
 NOTT, JOHN.—W. Burridge, Wellington.
 NUNN, JOHN BRIDGES.—A. Dixon, 3, King's-bench-walk, Temple; G. M. Arnold, Gravesend; R. H. Burne, 1, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn.
 PALMER, FREDERICK DANBY.—C. J. Palmer, Great Yarmouth.
 PARKER, FREDERICK.—J. Parker, 40, Bedford-row.
 PERKINS, EDMUND.—W. S. Perkins, Sutton Coldfield; J. J. Simpson, Derby.
 PHELPS, PHILIP EDMUND.—W. Hobbs, Reading.
 PIFFARD, ALBERT.—R. Wilson, 1, Copthall-buildings.
 PINFIELD, WILLIAM HENRY.—J. North, Liverpool.

PRIDHAM, GLINN.—G. Pridham, Plymouth.
 PRITT, GEORGE ASHBY.—E. Bailey, 5, Berners-street, Oxford-street.
 PURRIER, VINCENT JNO.—T. Purrier, 35, New Broad-street.
 RAWLINSON, ABRAM CRESWICKE.—A. L. Rawlinson, Chipping Norton.
 RAY, WALTER BLUETT CARPENTER.—H. C. Ray, Bristol.
 RANARD, FREDERICK.—J. White, 13, Barge-yard-chambers, Bucklersbury.
 ROGERS, CHARLES LACEY.—W. H. Peacock, Barnsley.
 SCATCHERD, OLIVER.—T. Taylor, Wakefield.
 SHAFT, GEORGE THOMAS.—A. R. Bristow, Greenwich.
 SHEPHERD, WILLIAM CONNING.—H. De Jersey, 13, Gresham-street.
 SMITH, HORACE WILLIAM.—J. Crowdy, 17, Serjeant's-inn, Fleet-street.
 SMITH, RENTIN.—R. H. Anderson, York; G. H. Smith, York; R. E. Smithson, York.
 SOBEY, GEORGE FERRIS.—H. W. Hooper, Exeter.
 SPILLER, JAMES ROBERT.—J. R. White, Bruton; E. F. Burton, 25, Chancery-lane.
 STEVENS, HENRY.—R. T. Jarvis, 23, Chancery-lane.
 STRETTON, ALBERT.—C. Stretton, Leicester.
 TAYLOR, JAMES PARKINSON.—J. W. Taylor, 28, Great James-street, Bedford-row.
 THOMAS, CHARLES.—H. Thomas, 35, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
 TILL, WALTER JOHN.—G. J. Till, Croydon.
 TILLET, WILLIAM HENRY.—J. H. Tillet, Norwich.
 TOWNEND, JOHN.—W. M. Perfect, Blackburn; and D. Robinson, Clitheroes Castle.
 TRAFFORD, JOHN LEIGH.—C. W. Potts, Chester.
 TURNBULL, HENRY.—J. Uppleby, Scarborough; J. J. P. Moody, Scarborough.
 WEBB, ANTHONY EDWARD.—E. Webb, Bath; T. Skinray, Bath; A. Warner, 7, Golden-square.
 WEBSTER, HENRY.—T. Price, 24, Abchurch-lane.
 WHATLEY, TOM.—G. L. Whatley, Mitchel Dean.
 WHITE, THOMAS BLACK.—W. Billson, jun., Leicester.
 WHITE, WILLIAM HENRY.—H. White, Williton, Somerset.
 WHITTON, WILLIAM, jun.—J. Becke, Northampton; J. M. Dale, 3, Gray's-inn-square.
 WIGHTON, WILLIAM.—C. Rice, Boston.
 WILLIAMS, THOMAS.—W. R. Smith, Merthyr Tydfil.
 WILLIS, THOMAS PRICE.—T. D. Willis, Winslow.
 WILMER, CHARLES PONSONBY.—G. H. Kinderley, 6, New-square; W. H. Domville, New-square.
 WILTSHIRE, CHARLES HENRY.—G. E. Sharland, Gravesend.
 WOOD, HENRY FRANCIS.—J. Taylor, Bradford; H. Roscoe, 36, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
 WOODALL, JAMES WILLIAM.—J. Parry, Manchester; F. Marriott, Manchester.
 YATES, JOHN JOSEPH.—J. Yates, jun., Liverpool.

Michaelmas Term, 1861, pursuant to Judges' Orders.

ADDISON, JOSEPH.—J. Linklater, 7, Walbrook.
 BLUNT, FREDERIC WILLIAM.—J. Blunt, 13, Austin-friars; A. H. Shadwell, 13, Austin-friars.
 BRAITHWAITE, WILLIAM JOHN.—J. Watson, Nottingham.
 PULLEN, THOMAS JAMES.—J. Robinson, 17, Ironmonger-lane.
 SMITH, CHARLES AUG. WOLSTON.—C. A. Smith, Greenwich.
 SMITH, LEIGH DELVES BROUGHTON.—H. Smith, Richmond; C. J. H. Fletcher, 31, Abingdon-street, Westminster.
 TILLET, ABEL.—W. L. Mendham, Norwich.

Public Companies.

REPORTS AND MEETINGS.

EPSON AND LEATHERHEAD RAILWAY.

At a special meeting of this company held on the 30th ult., a dividend of 5s. per share was declared.

GLASGOW, DUMBARTON, AND HELENSBURGH RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 25th ult., a dividend at the rate of £5 10s. per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

PERTH, ALMOND VALLEY, AND METHVEN RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 27th ult., a dividend of £2 per cent was declared for the past half-year.

PERTH AND DUNKELD RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 27th ult., a dividend at the rate of £2 per cent. per annum was declared for the past half-year.

SCOTTISH CENTRAL RAILWAY.

At the half-yearly meeting of this company held on the 27th ult., a dividend at the rate of £6 per cent. per annum, was declared for the past half-year.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

STOKER—On Sept. 30, at No. 4, Hereford-road, Westbourne-grove, the wife of W. C. Stoker, Esq., of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

HEATH—EVANS—On Oct. 1, John Carlen Heath, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, to Mary Jane, youngest daughter of the Rev. Henry Evans, rector of Lyng.

TIPPETTS—LUCAS—On Sept. 26, Theodore George Tippetts, Esq., of Chelsea, Solicitor, to Elizabeth Susan, daughter of William Lucas, Esq., of Hartsill.

WILLS—TAYLOR—On Oct. 1, Alfred Wills, Esq., of the Inner Temple, and of Esher, Surrey, Barrister-at-Law, to Bertha, third daughter of Thomas Lombe Taylor, Esq., of Starston, Norfolk.

WOOD—DICKIN—On Sept. 25, Edmund Burke Wood, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, to Elizabeth Sarah, daughter of the late S. Dickin, Esq., of Moreton Hall, Shropshire.

DEATHS.

BOXER—On Sept. 26, at 12, Pelham-place, Brompton, Caroline, relict of the late Jas. Boxer, Esq., Solicitor.

CHUBB—On Sept. 27, at Redlands, Reigate, Emily Sarah, the beloved wife of Wm. Chubb, Esq., of No. 14, South-square, Gray's-inn, Solicitor, aged 33.

PLOMER—On Sept. 28, Anne Hamilton, the beloved wife of J. G. Plomer, Esq., Solicitor, Helston, aged 46.

SMITH—On Sept. 29, at Nailsworth, Gloucestershire, aged 53, William Smith, Esq., Solicitor.

London Gazettes.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

TUESDAY, Oct. 1, 1861.

DUTTON, WILLIAM HENRY, & JOHN EDSWORTH, Attorneys and Solicitors, Walsall and Wednesbury, Staffordshire. By mutual consent. Sept. 30.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Oct. 1, 1861.

CHURCH, ANN, Widow, formerly of the Rising Sun Public House, Commercial-road, Finsbury, Middlesex, and late of 50, Holywell-street, Westminster. Sols. Mackeson & Goldring, 59, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Oct. 30.

GLOVER, LOUISE, Spinster, Brighton. Sol. Barron, 96, Guildford-street, Russell-square, Middlesex. Nov. 19.

GRANT, ROBERT, Tailor and Draper, Bideford, Devonshire. Sol. Burnard, Bideford. Nov. 9.

HUGHES, MARY, Widow, Bath. Sol. Crutwell, 5, Westgate-buildings, Bath. Nov. 17.

LICKFOLD, CHARLES, Cheesemonger, 6, Queen's Head-row, Lower-street, Islington, Middlesex. Sols. Boulton & Sons, 21a, Northampton-square. Nov. 1.

LOCK, JOHN, Glass and China Ware Dealer, Grafton House, Tunbridge Wells, Kent. Sols. Howard, Halse, & Trustram, 66, Paternoster-row, E.C., and Tunbridge Wells. Dec. 28.

SHELLY, RICHARD, Butcher, Nottingham. Sol. Brewster, Nottingham. Oct. 30.

SMITH, RICHARD, Porter, 12, St. John's-place, Grange-lane, Birkenhead, Chester. Sols. Drew & Serjeantson, Walmer-buildings, Water-street, Liverpool. Oct. 31.

WHITE, STEPHEN, Gent., Church-street, Warminster, Wilts. Sol. Pullen, Warminster. March 1.

FRIDAY, Oct. 4, 1861.

BRYAN, JONATHAN WAGSTAFF, Esq., 17, Clement's-inn, Middlesex. Sol. Turner, 13, Clement's-inn, London. Dec. 9.

BURBIDGE, WILLIAM, Wholesale Hat Manufacturer, 27, Bridge-street, Southwark, Surrey. Sols. Young & Piewa, 29, Mark-lane, London. Nov. 30.

CATTERNS, FRANCES, Spinster, Queen's Head-lane, Islington, Middlesex. Sols. W. & J. Sparling, 1, King's-road, Bedford-row, Dec. 6.

CROSS, ANNE, Widow, Liverpool. Sols. Eden & Stanistreet, Liverpool. Oct. 31.

HATFIELD, REV. JOHN HANSON, Clerk, Chaplain to the Chorlton Union Workhouse, Withington, Lancashire. Sol. Jackson, Chancery-place, Manchester. Oct. 13.

JONES, THOMAS JOHN, otherwise THOMAS JONES, Atkins-road, Clapham-park, Surrey. Sols. Madox & Wyatt, 30, Clement's-lane, Lombard-street, London. Dec. 25.

LOCKWOOD, GEORGE BROCKMER, Banker's Clerk, formerly of Retford, Nottingham, and late of Ordsall, Nottingham. Eliza Lockwood, Widow, Ordsall, and John Marshall Dewick, Grocer, East Retford, Executors. Nov. 16.

SCOTT, FRANCIS EDWARD, Wine Merchant, 22, St. Swithin's-lane, London. Sols. J. & T. Gole, 49, Lime-street, Leadenhall-street, London. Oct. 31.

SIMPSON, WILLIAM BOOTHMAN, Commission Agent, Leeds. Sols. Snowden & Son, 36, Bond-street, Leeds. Nov. 12.

WALKER, ABRAHAM, White Abbey, Bradford. Sols. Rawson, George, & Wade, Kirkgate, Bradford. Dec. 2.

WHITE, RICHARD, Gent., Priors Halton, near Ludlow, Salop. Sol. Newill, Wellington, Salop. Dec. 2.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

Last Day of Proof.

TUESDAY, Oct. 1, 1861.

(County Palatine of Lancaster.)

TOMKINSON, JOHN, Salt Proprietor, formerly of Liverpool, but at the time of his death of Wotton-cum-Twambrookes, Chester. Tomkinson v. Lowe, Office of Registrar, 1, North John-street, Liverpool. Oct. 24.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors

TUESDAY, Oct. 1, 1861.

CHAPMAN, EDWARD, Merchant, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sol. Monds, 98, Coltman-street, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sept. 11.

CHAPMAN, JOHN, Veterinary Surgeon, Gainsborough. Sol. Burton, Gainsborough. Sept. 23.

NOTTALL, ROBERT, Manufacturer and Grocer, Bury, Lancashire. Sols. T. A. & J. Grundy & Co., Manchester. Sept. 6.

PHILLIPS, EDWARD, Grocer, Rawmarsh, Yorkshire. Sols. Hiddals & Craddock, 8, Gray's-inn-square. Sept. 19.

PRICE, THOMAS DAVID, & GEORGE ASHBY SWANN, Warehousemen, 45, Friday-street, Cheapside, London. Sols. Linklater & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London. Sept. 5.

SCOTT, HORATIO WILSON, & GEORGE PARKINSON WRIGHT, Woollen Warehousemen, Vigo-street, Middlesex. Sols. Bell, Brodrick, & Bell, 9, Bow Churchyard, London. Sept. 17.

FRIDAY, Oct. 4, 1861.

BELTON, THOMAS STOREY, Malster, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sol. Shackles & Son, 7A, Land of Green Ginger, Kingston-upon-Hull. Sept. 16.

COPPEN, EDMUND, Baby Linen Warehouseman, 9, Sussex-terrace, Westbourne-grove, Middlesex. Sol. Burkill, Currier's-hall, London-wall, London. Sept. 6.

LAKEMAN, JOHN, and JANE EDWARDS, Hosiery and Drapers, 11 and 12, High-street, Barnstaple, and Torrington, Devonshire. Sols. Smith, 1, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, London. Sept. 12.

MARSH, EDMUND ALFRED, Grocer, 8, Gloucester-place, Old Kent-road, Kent. Sols. Wilde, Rees, Humphrey, & Wilde, 21, College-hill, London. Sept. 11.

MILLS, CHARLES, JUN., Tailor and Woollen Draper, Stratford-upon-Avon, Warwickshire. Sol. Hobbes, Stratford-upon-Avon. Sept. 26.

PARRY, EVAN, Carrier, Leather Dealer, and General Shopkeeper, Llangeftul, Anglesey. Sol. Owen, Llangeftul. Sept. 23.

PROFFITT, THOMAS, Collar Maker, 28, Clifton-street, Finsbury, Middlesex. Sol. Peverley, 19, Coleman street, City. Sept. 6.

WESTON, JAMES, Miller, Ticehurst, Sussex. Sol. Tournay, Ticehurst. Sept. 5.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Oct. 1, 1861.

BRADLEY, RICHARD, Broker, Handsworth, Staffordshire. Com. Sanders: Oct. 16 and Nov. 11, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Hodgson & Allen, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 24.

BUTTERFIELD, WILLIAM, & JAMES BUTTERFIELD, Earthenware Manufacturers, Tunstall, Staffordshire. Com. Sanders: Oct. 14 and Nov. 6, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Lichfield, Newcastle-under-Lyme; or James & Knight, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 9.

EMINTON, JOHN, Leather Seller, Salisbury. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 12, at 11.30; and Nov. 13, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Kelsey, Salisbury; or Bothamley & Freeman, 39, Coleman-street, London. Pet. Sept. 27.

GOLDENITH, THOMAS, Baker, Confectioner, and Dealer in Flour, Malt, Hops, Corn, and Seed, and British Wines and Tea, St. Stephen's-street, Norwich. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 12, at 12; and Nov. 14, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Storey, 6, King's-road, Bedford-row, London; or W. Ladd, Jun., Norwich. Pet. Sept. 30.

HARRIS, CHARLES, Ironmonger, Stratford-le-Bow, Essex. Com. Fane: Oct. 11, at 2; and Nov. 8, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 68, Aldermanbury. Pet. Sept. 20.

FRIDLINGTON, JESSE, Miller and Farmer, Southorpe Mill, Northamptonshire. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 12, at 11; and Nov. 14, at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Wright & Bonner, 15, London-street, Fenchurch-street, London; or Law, Stamford, Lincolnshire. Pet. Sept. 30.

LEAVELEY, THOMAS, & HENRY LEAVELEY, Silk Dyers, Coventry (Leavesley & Son). Com. Sanders: Oct. 11 and Nov. 7, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. E. & H. Wright, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 27.

LORD, THOMAS, Cotton Spinner, Vale Mill, Todmorden, Lancashire. Com. Jemmett: Oct. 11 and Nov. 1, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. Leigh, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 27.

NIXON, JAMES, Merchant and Commission Agent, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, and Liverpool, England (Alfred Nixon & Co.). Com. Perry: Oct. 3 and 23, at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sol. Yates, jun. Fenwick-street, Liverpool. Pet. Sept. 20.

ROBINSON, WILLIAM, Grocer and Tea Dealer, Bradford. Com. Ayrton: Oct. 18 and Nov. 11, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sols. Richardson, Old Jewry-chambers, London; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Sept. 18.

SPENCER, WILLIAM, & BENJAMIN SPENCER, Stage Carriage Proprietors, Stanley-street, Bury, Lancashire. Com. Jemmett: Oct. 16 and Nov. 13, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sol. Hewitt, Manchester. Pet. Sept. 20.

WORMALL, JAMES, Licensed Victualler, Brierall Head, near Rochdale. Com. Jemmett: Oct. 15 and Nov. 5, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hornaman. Sol. Standring, jun., Rochdale. Sept. 23.

FRIDAY, Oct. 4, 1861.

BANKS, CHARLES WATERS, Printer & Publisher, Chapter-house-court, City, and 162, Dover-road, Southwark (R. Banks & Co.). Com. Goulburn: Oct. 14, at 2, and Nov. 14, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Mote, 33, Bucklersbury, London. Pet. Oct. 3.

BUTTERTY, CHARLES, Draper, Collier-gate, York. Com. Ayrton: Oct. 14 and Nov. 11, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, Aldermanbury; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds. Pet. Sept. 20.

DUFF, CHARLES, Printer, Park-house, Park-road, Peckham, Surrey, and 11, Crane-court, Fleet-street, London. Com. Evans: Oct. 15 and Nov. 14, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Kemp, 40, Henrietta-street, Covent-Garden. Pet. Aug. 30.

GRAY, JAMES BREWSTER, Draper & Milliner, 3, Grundy-street, Bromley, Middlesex. Com. Fane: Oct. 17, and Nov. 8, at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Prall & Nickinson, 19, Essex-street, Strand. Pet. Oct. 3.

KELLY, HENRY, Builder and Contractor, Dale-place, Wandsworth, Surrey. Com. Evans: Oct. 15, at 11, and Nov. 14, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Proudfoot, 24, John-street, Bedford-row. Pet. Oct. 1.

LEA, WILLIAM BROWN, Brewer, Bridge End Brewery, Leek, Stafford. Com. Sanders: Oct. 18, and Nov. 7, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sol. Richardson, 15, Old Jewry-chambers, London; or Southall & Nelson, Birmingham. Pet. Sept. 28.

MANDERS, ROBERT, Tailor, Exeter. Com. Andrews: Oct. 17, and Nov. 21, at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sol. Willesford, Exeter. Pet. Oct. 2.

NOTT, JAMES, Silvermith and Jeweller, 28, Cheapside, London. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 19, at 12.30; and Nov. 14, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Solomon, 22, Finsbury-place, London. Pet. Sept. 24.

PETERS, JOEL, Builder, Lee, Kent. Com. Evans: Oct. 17, at 11; and Nov. 21, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Mote, 33, Bucklersbury. Pet. Oct. 3.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, Scrivener, Norwich. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 19, at 1; and Nov. 20, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 68, Aldermanbury, London; or Miller, Son, & Bugg, Norwich. Pet. Sept. 25.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

FRIDAY, Oct. 4, 1861.

JAMES WILLIAM CONWAY, Tin-plate Manufacturer, Pontnewydd Tin Works, Llanyrechva Lower, Monmouthshire. Oct. 3.

ROBERTSON, ELEANOR PENGREX, Innholder & Vintner, Royal Hotel Spa, Gloucester. Sept. 23.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Oct. 1, 1861.

JOHN TURNER, Licensed Victualler, 5, Little Ormond street, Middlesex. Oct. 30, at 1.30; Basinghall-street.

FRIDAY, Oct. 4, 1861.

ELIAS MANSFIELD, Boat Wright, Timber Dealer, and Publican, Chertsey, Cambridgeshire. Oct. 31, at 2; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS LEES, Contractor, Norwood, Surrey. Oct. 18, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—ARTHUR DUFFIE KIDD, Straw Hat Manufacturer, 19, Fore-street, and 11, Cripplegate-buildings, London (Archibald Duffie). Oct. 16, at 12; Basinghall-street.—FREDERICK WARNE FITT, Machinist, Selbourne, near Alton, Hants. Oct. 16, at 11; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH JOHN CONNIBAN, & MAXIMILIAN LINDT, 140, Fenchurch-street, London. Oct. 22, at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—NATHAN AARON JOSEPH, Importer of Foreign Goods, 19, Vine-street, Minories, London (N. A. Joseph & Co.). October 16, at 2; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH SAMUEL PARSONS, Watch Maker and Leather Seller, High-street, Brentford, and London-street, Uxbridge, Middlesex. Oct. 18, at 12; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE BARNETT, Butcher, 21, Felix-terrace, Liverpool-road, Islington, Middlesex. Oct. 18, at 12; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM JAMES EPPS, Nursery and Seedsman and Hotel Keeper, Maidstone, Kent. Oct. 19, at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS EDGE, Gas Meter Manufacturer, 89, Great Peter-street, and 39, Vincent-square, Westminster, Middlesex. Oct. 16, at 1; Basinghall-st.—JAMES RANDALL, Victualler, Byfleet, near Cobham, Surrey. Oct. 22, at 1; Basinghall-st.—WILLIAM BUDDLE, Builder, Delamere-terrace, Paddington, Middlesex. Oct. 29, at 12; Basinghall-street.—ALFRED SPENCER, Paper Manufacturer, Postford Mills, Chilworth, near Guildford, Surrey. Oct. 29, at 12; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM SETMOOR MARSHALL, Cooper and Hardwareman, Durham. Oct. 22, at 11; Newcastle-upon-Tyne.—JAMES BOLTON ROBERTSON, Draper, South Shields, Durham. Oct. 21, at 11; Newcastle-upon-Tyne.—JOHN WATSON HAMILTON, Stock and Share Broker, Birmingham. Oct. 31, at 11; Birmingham.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

* * Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, OCTOBER 12, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

This day is signalised by the commencement of "The Bankruptcy Act, 1861," the time appointed in the Act being "from and after the eleventh day of October." Proceedings pending in the Court are not affected by this Act, and will be carried out under the previous law; but every petition filed on or after the present day will call into action the new law, and must be prosecuted accordingly. It may be useful on this occasion to recall to mind some of the principal matters under the new procedure, to which it will be necessary for practitioners, and all others interested in bankruptcy proceedings to direct especial attention. It should be remarked, once for all, that the new Act is an amendment of the law of Bankruptcy, and not the substitution of a new system; and therefore our readers who are already familiar with the law as hitherto administered, may confine their attention only to the changes which are now introduced. The system of insolvency is henceforth abolished altogether, and bankruptcy is now extended over the province previously occupied by that system; so that all debtors, whether traders or not, are now brought within the jurisdiction of bankruptcy. In its effects upon non-traders the Act will probably exhibit its most novel results in the eyes of the public. Non-traders thus rendered, for the first time, amenable to bankrupt law are, however, placed on a separate footing with respect to acts of bankruptcy and the process required to obtain adjudication. Acts of bankruptcy by a non-trader comprise departing the realm; remaining abroad; making a fraudulent conveyance of his estate; with intent to defeat or delay his creditors. But these acts can only be followed by adjudication upon certain conditions, providing that personal service of the petition shall be effected on the non-trader, or that the attempt to serve it should come to his knowledge and be evaded by him, and that sufficient time shall be secured to him to appear to it.

The acts of bankruptcy by a trader remain for the most part as defined in the Act of 1849, but in a few respects they are altered and modified. An act of bankruptcy made applicable to both traders and non-traders, consists in lying in prison, the former for fourteen days (previously the time was twenty-one days), the latter for two months. Another consists in filing a declaration in writing of inability to meet his engagements. A new act of bankruptcy is created for traders by suffering execution, by seizure and sale of goods upon a judgment debt exceeding £50. All judgment debtors for a debt of £50 are made liable to be summoned by their judgment creditors, and upon default of appearance or of settling, the debtor may be adjudged bankrupt without petition for adjudication or other proceedings.

A new provision is made for a species of gaol delivery of debtors in prison. The gaoler of every prison is to make a monthly return to the Court of the prisoners for debt and the particulars of their imprisonment; and the registrar of the court is to attend at the gaol and inquire into each case, with power to make an order of adjudication and to grant protection and order release. Besides this provision, pauper prisoners for debt are enabled to petition for an adjudication in forma pauperis. These provisions will go far to abolish prolonged imprisonment for debt.

As to the process of obtaining adjudication, every petition must be filed in the court within the district where the debtor has resided or carried on business for the previous six months, subject to a power in the London court to order the petition to be transferred to any district. The provisions relating to the petitioning creditors' debt have been entirely re-cast upon the same basis as before as to the amount of the debts, but with considerable alterations in the description and computation of the debts framed with a view of settling the law on many points, and increasing the facility of the creditor to petition. The non-trader can only be petitioned against in respect of debts contracted after the passing of the Act. Any debtor may petition for an adjudication against himself, and the filing of his petition is an act of bankruptcy without any previous declaration of insolvency.

The proceedings upon the petition and the adjudication are carried on for the most part under the previous law. So likewise with the surrender and examination of the bankrupt. The bankrupt is required before his last examination to prepare or file a statement of accounts, which is to be open to all the creditors. In preparing it, he is to be assisted and checked by the official assignee, who is also to report upon the state of the bankrupt's affairs.

At the first meeting of creditors the majority in number and value of the creditors present may transfer the proceedings into the county court; also at the same meeting or at an adjournment, a majority in number and of three-fourths in value of the creditors may agree to an arrangement with the bankrupt and stay proceedings in bankruptcy. Immediately upon adjudication the estate of the bankrupt vests in the official assignee, as before, but with a discretion in the court to leave possession in the bankrupt. At the first meeting of creditors the majority in value appoint the creditors' assignee, and immediately upon the appointment of the creditors' assignee all the estate of the bankrupt devests out of the official assignee, and vests in the creditors' assignee. It is the duty of the creditors' assignee to manage and realise the estate, and convert it into money; but with respect to debts not exceeding ten pounds in amount the official assignee remains sole assignee, and it is his duty to collect and recover them. Provisions are introduced for securing the accuracy of the accounts of the two assignees, chiefly by a system of mutual checks; the creditors' assignee may also be required to give security. The collection, management, and disposal of the bankrupt's estate, and the rights and duties of the assignees, remain regulated, for the most part, under the provisions of the Act of 1849, with the exception that instead of the assignees therein mentioned, the sole assignee appointed by the creditors is substituted, and with some minor exceptions in matters of detail. The transactions and dealings of the bankrupt, which have hitherto been exempted from the consequences of bankruptcy, also remain adjusted as before.

The application and distribution of the bankrupt's property is not materially altered, the charges made being directed to the amendment of certain recognised defects, such as the cases of debts due by instalments, future premiums on policies of insurance, apportionments of rent and other fixed payments, and claims for unliquidated damages, all which are now included as provable debts. Increased facilities are given for the formal proof of debts by the transmission of documentary evidence through the post-office and otherwise. Within four months of the adjudication a meeting of creditors is to be held for the purpose of examining the statement of accounts presented by the creditors' assignee and declaring a dividend; it is the duty of the official assignee to audit the accounts. Like proceedings for making-up and auditing the accounts are to be repeated at intervals of four months, until the estate is exhausted. Unclaimed dividends are to be transferred to "the unclaimed dividend account."

Certificates with their threefold classification are abolished, and in their place may be granted an "order of discharge." The Court may suspend the order of discharge, or may grant it subject to conditions touching after-acquired property. If any charges of misdeemeanour are made against the bankrupt in answer to his application for an order of discharge, provision is made to secure him a fair trial, which may take place before the Court with the consent of the bankrupt, but which may be referred by the Court to the ordinary criminal tribunals.

The order of discharge discharges the bankrupt from all debts and demands provenable under the bankruptcy, and may be pleaded in a general form to any such cause of action accrued before the bankruptcy.

The greatest improvement in the Act will perhaps be found in the increased facilities afforded to debtors and creditors to arrange their affairs by agreement without the intervention of the Court. The complicated arrangements under the Act of 1849 are entirely done away with, and are replaced by one simple mode of agreement. A simple deed or instrument of agreement may be made and becomes binding on all the creditors if it satisfies the conditions that a majority of three-fourths in number and value of the creditors shall signify their approval in writing; that the trustees, if any, shall execute it; that the execution by the debtor shall be attested by an attorney; and that the deed shall be registered. Upon registration the agreement is made public in the Gazette, and all parties interested become subject to the jurisdiction of the Court in order to secure and carry out its provisions. The ordinary proceedings in bankruptcy may, as we have already noticed, be superseded by an agreement of this kind between the bankrupt and three-fourths of his creditors.

The above are amongst the most material changes in the law and practice of bankruptcy introduced this day. We sincerely hope that they be found as beneficial an amendment of the procedure in bankruptcy as we have recently seen effected in the courts of common law. The jurisdiction in bankruptcy, unlike that of the common law courts, is administrative and not litigious, and constitutes a most important instrument in commercial affairs. The test of efficiency is, therefore, comparatively simple, as the result of its operations can be ascertained with precision. The last returns showed the very unsatisfactory result that the process of administration involved an expense of more than thirty per cent. of the sum administered. The returns for the next year will, after all, furnish the only reliable test of the success of the new measure.

The General Orders made in pursuance of the new Act not being published until to-day, we must defer any further notice of them until next week.

Our attention has been frequently called of late to the apparently increasing practice of toutting for law business by advertisements and circulars. We have always refrained as much as possible from any public discussion of this offensive subject, from a belief that such a course was most conducive to the true interests and dignity of the profession. What we are powerless to prevent we would willingly ignore. We have always been of opinion that the practice is comparatively unimportant as affecting the pecuniary interests of the profession, but that it is of vital consequence to its honour and social position. In order, however, to prevent the possibility of the practice in question deriving the least encouragement from even the semblance of toleration on our part, we deem it our duty, however unpleasant it may be, to call attention to the following specimen. We have selected it from amongst others forwarded to us, as being equal to any in infamy, and superior in pretension, and calculated especially to convey a downright insult to those members of the profession amongst whom it has been circulated, by supposing them capable of countenancing such a practice. It seems superfluous to add that men who can thus openly display an utter disregard of the character both of themselves and of their profession prove themselves quite unworthy of being entrusted with business of any kind.

— street, London, E. C.
September, 1861.

Sir,—As a solicitor of 30 years' standing, at — in Suffolk, and in the metropolis (where I have acted as agent for several country attorneys), my attention has been more exclusively directed of late years, to the law of joint stock companies, bankruptcy and common law. Permit me to hand you the terms upon which I am transacting business for legally qualified country practitioners. My present place of business is most centrally situated, being within an easy distance of the Bank of England, Bankrupt and Insolvent Courts, Somerset House, Doctors Commons and the joint stock companies, chancery and other offices in and near the Temple. In the advocacy of several heavy and difficult cases as plaintiff in person, I have appeared both in banco and in the courts of equity on several occasions.

The agency fees will in no case exceed one third of the amount chargeable to the country attorney's proper client.

Apologising for thus troubling you, I am, Sir, most obediently yours.

s. d.

Writ of Summons, including the payment for signing, sealing, and transmitting to the country, whether above £20 or under that amount. If on a bill of exchange or note, a copy to accompany instructions	8	4
Appearance fee, including the payment.....	4	4
Attendance at any public office to make search, and bespeak extracts and afterwards, and for transmitting same	2	2
Attending counsel with, and several times for, case or papers, and transmitting	3	4
Attending and conducting hearing or opposition in Bankruptcy, local court, or where attorney entitled to appear, exclusive of omnibus fare to and from such court.	10	6

N.B.—No letters to country solicitors or term fees of any kind will be charged. In no case will the agency charges exceed one-third of those allowable between solicitor and client.

THE LIABILITIES OF RAILWAY COMPANIES AS CARRIERS.

The plain and simple principles of the common law have been severely tried in their application to the enormous extension of traffic and complicated transactions produced by the railway system. Contracts and wrongs, the two main branches of common law jurisdiction, appear in new shapes not easily recognised by the light of ancient rules and authorities. The law of carriers, occupying as it does an anomalous position with reference to this division of common law jurisdiction, not being exclusively assignable to either branch, or, in modern statutory language, "partaking of the character of both," was always, for this reason, a complex and embarrassing subject and required a liberal use of fictions and technicalities to preserve it from confusion in its administration. The native complexity of the subject, however, has been extraordinarily aggravated by the novel complications which have called for an application of the law; and in several instances extraordinary remedies have been devised to meet the emergencies which have arisen in the progress of railway traffic.

The duties and liabilities of railway companies as carriers of goods have been brought to something like a settlement by the Railway and Canal Traffic Act of 1854. Under this Act a quite new common law jurisdiction was instituted—not remedial, but mandatory, exercising a regulative supervision over the action of railway companies as carriers, for the purpose of securing to the public all reasonable facilities for traffic upon equal terms, and of preventing any undue favour or preference. The Act also restricts the common law right which carriers, by railway or canal, equally with the rest of the world formerly enjoyed of making what special contracts they might think fit, by annexing the statutory proviso that the terms of their contracts must be such as, if called in question, a judge shall deem to be just and reasonable. Their position, as goods carriers, may be described broadly as still resting on the basis of the common law, with the restrictive incidents thus imposed by the statute, that they must deal on equal terms with all, and that the limitations of their liability by special terms and conditions must be reasonable. One the whole, the system appears to act well, and certainly abundant liberty is reserved to the companies for the protection of their interests.

As carriers of passengers, the duties and liabilities of railway companies show similar deviations from the common law. It is remarkable that this branch of traffic was considered by the original projectors of railways of far less importance than the carriage of goods; but on the opening of railways was at once found to constitute their chief and most lucrative business. This unforeseen extension has given birth, in a corresponding manner, to unforeseen difficulties in its legal incidents, which have not yet been fully recognised or adequately provided for. The Railway and Canal Traffic Act applies equally to the traffic in passengers and to the traffic in goods; and its operation seems equally necessary and salutary in both cases. But besides this Act, Lord Campbell's Act for compensating the families of persons killed by accident, imposes a new and serious liability upon railway companies in regard to their passenger traffic. The recent fatal collisions on the London and Brighton and North London Railways have unfortunately given a wide field for the operation of this statute, and have directed an unusual degree of attention to its provisions. A few observations upon its policy and results will therefore, it is hoped, at this time be found not inappropriate.

The common law was not so stringent with carriers of passengers as with carriers of goods. The passenger carrier was bound to carry all comers who tendered themselves in a suitable state, both as to person and pocket, so long as he had accommodation to carry them; but beyond this there was no duty or liability except as provided by the terms of the contract. The carrier of goods was under a similar liability to carry, and was also an insurer of the goods received for carriage, which he was bound to make good if they were damaged or lost from any cause during the transit. The carrier of passengers was not an insurer, and was only liable for injuries to the passenger occasioned by the carrier's negligence; and in case of the death of the passenger all liability for negligence died with him. In theory the law remains unaltered in respect of the passenger carriers being liable for negligence only; but under the railway system the practical impossibility of a railway company escaping the imputation of negligence, combined with the extended consequences of negligence imposed by Lord Campbell's Act, render the railway carrier of passengers in effect an insurer; at least, every passenger may travel with a well-grounded confidence that in the event of accident his life is insured for the benefit of his family.

Lord Campbell's Act has now been tested by an experience which for a modern statute may be pronounced long. The result of this experience, and of much consideration of the statute itself leads us to the belief that however valuable it may have proved as a palliative for a pressing evil, it is not sufficiently complete and comprehensive for permanent use, or at least is capable of considerable amendment. We say this not in any spirit of disparagement of its late distinguished author, to whom is due the credit of having provided some practicable remedy for an evil of present urgency, but as a comment upon the Act considered as a piece of legal mechanism which we are induced to make in the interests of law, and which we think will be found to be justified by fair argument and criticism. This statute, however, may be referred to in passing, as a characteristic specimen of the rough and ready, but not always scientific workmanship of its author, while the great popularity with which it has been received may be also noticed as an appreciation of his services. As, however, the tendency of the enactment is all in favour of the public and against railway companies, its popularity is sufficiently accounted for without accepting it as any proof of the strict equity of the measure, still less of its perfection as a specimen of jurisprudence.

In criticising the act as the work of the Legislator, common fairness requires that a due regard should be paid to the antecedent state of the law, and the occasion which called for it. It was professedly a substitution for the ancient system of deodands. By the ancient common law, in case of death by accident, the instrument of death was forfeited as a deodand, to be disposed of for the benefit of the soul of the deceased. The specific deodand was gradually converted into a pecuniary fine assessed by the jury as the value of the instrument, in place of which it was paid; and this fine became forfeited beneficially to the crown, or the lord of the manor, after the ulterior purpose to which it was formally applied had been declared superstitious. Juries, however, were naturally disinclined to inflict a fine in this manner and with this destination, and gradually took upon themselves to diminish the amount, until the practice prevailed of assessing the deodand at an amount merely nominal. Upon the introduction of railways, however, their feelings were excited in an opposite direction, and they vented their indignation at the supposed negligence of railway companies by an exercise of their long dormant power of assessing the deodand at a substantial amount. This attempt to revive deodands was found to be quite alien to the spirit of the age, and quite inadequate to the requirements of the occasion; and at the same time the novel apprehensions excited by railway accidents called urgently for some legislative interposition. Accordingly, deodands, which had become practically obsolete, were abolished by statute, and in their stead was enacted the statute, which now passes by the name of the late Lord Chancellor, which was thus inspired by the twofold intention of providing a suitable penalty in place of the deodand, for the cause of death, and of appropriating the amount of the penalty by way of compensation to the relatives of the deceased.

The statute is now no longer to be considered on historical grounds, and only with reference to the purpose which called it forth. It retains a prominent place in our statute book, and occupies a position of serious importance in our social system. It must stand or fall by its own merits or demerits with respect to the circumstances of the present day, and by its intrinsic capacity to fulfil the functions which it undertakes to discharge. In this view we propose to discuss it, and we may fairly take as a test its manner of dealing with the relation between railway companies and their passengers, which is by far the most important and frequent subject of its operation, and that which it was most particularly designated to regulate. As the subject, we find, is too extensive for our present limits, we must reserve our observation on the details of the measure for another week, and confine our attention at present to a single point. It is a point, however, of vital importance, as it touches the very groundwork and principle of the statute.

Before this act came into operation, the action for damages caused by negligence, which resulted in death, was barred by the maxim of the common law: "actio personalis moritur cum personâ." This maxim was originally universally applicable to all actions for wrongs, whether to person or property; but the superior wisdom of after ages appear to have interpreted it as exposing the deficiency rather than expressing the policy of the common law, and to have arrived at the conviction that in common justice every vested right of action, so far as practicable, should pass to the representatives of the deceased party entitled. Rights of action in respect of injuries to property, real and personal, had already been thus secured to the deceased's estate by successive enactments; but rights of action in respect of injuries to the person had remained hitherto extinguished, as at common law, by the death. Was it then the policy of the statute to supply this defect of the common law in a similar manner in respect of rights of action for personal injuries? Does the statute in effect operate by transferring the deceased's right of action to his estate or representatives? or does the statute leave the common law untouched, and create an entirely new cause of action? The language of the enactment will be found most undecided and ambiguous upon this point, which nevertheless we venture to suggest is a point of serious importance, and one which goes to the very root of the claim. The question has on one occasion been incidentally mooted, but not in a manner to require a decisive examination. It may be safely predicted, however, that it will one day again present itself to the judges in a manner which will demand a solemn decision. We have only to suppose the very probable case, that a person injured in a railway accident should accept compensation from the company in satisfaction of the cause of action, and after receiving satisfaction should die of the injury, and that the claim under the statute in respect of his death should afterwards be preferred by his representatives against the company. The question might then be raised; would the right of action against the company for their negligence be wholly discharged by the satisfaction made to the deceased? or would the representatives of the deceased acquire a new and distinct cause of action notwithstanding the satisfaction?

In whichever way the point is decided, the results will be remarkable; if the action in question is that of the person injured, the company by a speedy adjustment of the claims for compensation may often avoid the more serious liability arising upon the death; if on the other hand the action is that of the representatives, the company may be actually compelled to pay full compensation to the deceased, and yet remain liable for damages to his relatives, who, at the same time, may be the very persons who have become entitled by the death to the previous compensation.

The fact that this question is left open to argument on the face of the statute is a conclusive proof that in framing its provisions their bearing upon the previous state of the common law did not receive a due measure of consideration. Attention appears to have been directed too exclusively to the avowed objects of replacing the ancient deodand by another form of penalty and providing for its distribution amongst the family of the deceased. It appears to have been overlooked, that the party injured, if he survived a sufficient time for the purpose, might himself have his action for the negligence of the company, and recover compensation, which, in case of serious injury might and probably would be greater in amount than that assessed upon his death. It could scarcely have been intended that the company should suffer the penalty for their negligence twice over; nor on the other hand that by a speedy settlement with persons slightly injured they should be enabled to escape the risk of ultimate liability to the family in case of death. The liability of the company ought at any rate to be adjusted on such terms as would avoid these uncertainties; and the statute requires a corresponding amendment. What particular form of amendment is expedient, and upon what principles the liability of the company should be finally adjusted, are questions to which we can only attempt an answer after a full consideration of all the provisions of the statute, which we are compelled by our present limits to postpone to a future occasion.

Correspondence.

USAGES OF THE PROFESSION.

I observed in the number of the Solicitors' Journal for the 28th ult., the Report of the Committee of the Incorporated Law Society, in which they mention that during the last year they have decided several points of practice and usage, such as the mortgagee's solicitor's charge for receiving notice of incumbrance and communicating it to his client, &c. These decisions are entered in a book, and may be inspected by members; but as very few members are likely to take the trouble to search this book when they are in doubt on any point of professional usage, or as to the proper charge for any business, and as the decision of the Committee would in most cases satisfy the parties to any dispute on the subject, the publication of these decisions would be very useful, not only to the members of the society, but to the profession at large.

Would you therefore permit me to suggest that in future the Committee should either print a short abstract of each point decided, along with their Report, or should furnish the Solicitors' Journal with a copy thereof, which I have no doubt you would be willing to print for the information of your readers.

Q.

[In the report of the Council of the Society for 1859 it is stated that as soon as a sufficient number of the above points had been collected to be generally useful to practitioners the Council would take into consideration the expediency of revising and publishing them. We have no means of access to the books alluded to by our correspondent, but should be glad to render any assistance to our readers on the subject by publishing abstracts of such cases, if favoured with them.—ED. S. J.]

GIFT OR SETTLEMENT OF PERSONALTY.

I think there can be no question that the deed of assignment mentioned by R. E. J. in your number for the 28th September last, would require to be registered pursuant to the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36. It is clearly laid down in the case of Fowler v. Foster, Q. B., 23 Jur. 99, that the exception of a "marriage settlement" in sect. 7 of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, does not apply to a post-nuptial settlement made in consideration of natural love and affection; and as the property would most probably remain in the possession of the assignor, the deed of assignment would be held to be in the nature of a "declaration of trust without transfer," which, by sect. 7 of that Act, is included in its provisions.

T. T. C.

The Provinces.

BRADFORD.—In addition to the salary of £800 per annum which Mr. Joseph Rayner, the newly-elected town clerk, will receive in that capacity, he is allowed to continue his private practice as a solicitor in offices provided by the corporation.

BRISTOL.—On the 23rd of September last, George Gale, collector of tolls at the White Ladies turnpike gate, Bristol, was summoned before the magistrates of that city by Mr. Shipton, solicitor, a member of the Bristol Volunteer Artillery Corps, for having demanded toll of him, he being in the uniform of a Volunteer Artilleryman, and being on his way to the practice ground of the corps, near the mouth of the Avon. Mr. Shipton was accompanied by other volunteers, but it was admitted that there was a civilian in the carriage with them, and owing to his presence the defendant insisted on the toll being paid. On the 5th inst., the magistrates delivered a lengthened judgment, in which, after having reviewed the points raised by the information, which depended mainly on the construction of the Act 24 & 25 Vict. c. 126, they came to the conclusion that exemption from toll for carriages conveying Volunteers could be claimed for carriages employed only in carrying or conveying Volunteers, and that for this reason the exemption claimed in the case before them could not be allowed. Judgment was therefore given for the defendant.

Mr. Robert Handsley, of Burnley, Lancashire, has been appointed a perpetual commissioner for taking the acknowledgments of deeds by married women, for the county of Lancaster.

Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association.

This Association held its ninth annual provincial meeting, in the lecture room of the Worcester Natural History Society, at Worcester, on the 8th and 9th inst., at which John Smale Torr, Esq., the Chairman of the Association, presided. The meeting was attended by a large and influential body of the profession practising in the provinces and the metropolis.

Among those present were Messrs. W. Shaen, P. Rickman, London; W. Matthews, Gloucester; J. Burrup, Gloucester; H. Harris, Gloucester; E. Banner, Liverpool; C. A. Smith, Greenwich; W. Radcliffe, Liverpool; J. Bulmer, Leeds; J. H. E. Gill, Liverpool; J. Eden, Liverpool; J. Rawlings, Birmingham; H. Holden, Worcester; G. Stallard, Worcester; R. A. Payne, Liverpool; T. Hodgson, York; E. Ball, Pershore; R. Wood, Worcester; T. Avison, Liverpool; R. T. Brockman, Folkestone; E. Benham, London; J. Case, Maidstone; J. R. Shaw, Leeds; T. P. Bunting, Manchester; H. G. Taylor, Saint Helena; J. Street, Manchester; J. Anderton, London; J. Jones, Worcester; A. Ryland, Birmingham; T. Dry, London; S. Tomba, Droitwich; G. Bower, London; J. Turner, London; H. T. Sankey, Canterbury; A. Harper, Worcester; T. Hyde, Worcester; A. Day, Kidderminster; J. G. Hepburn, London; G. Perry, Stourbridge; E. Corles, G. Clark, J. Parker, W. G. Goldingham, W. Allen, E. Gillam, S. M. Beale, W. Meredith, and W. C. Quarrell, Worcester; J. Ridley, Liverpool; G. Bower, London; J. W. Garrold, Hereford; J. H. Jones, Worcester; J. Anderson Rose, London; and J. Hill, Worcester. The proceedings were opened by the Chairman, who delivered the following talented and interesting address. He said—

Gentlemen,—In opening the proceedings of this, our ninth annual provincial meeting, I ought in the first place to congratulate the Association on the fact of our being now assembled at Worcester on the invitation of our professional brethren of this city and neighbourhood, because it seems to be an indication that the appreciation of the importance and necessity of the organization and union of our profession, which has for years actuated its members who practise in the great commercial towns, is extending itself to those whose lot is cast in the more agricultural districts of our country. The chief supporters and even organizers of our Society have been hitherto, as you are aware, the solicitors of the manufacturing and commercial localities. They, many years ago, shrewdly foresaw that the great changes which had taken, and were taking, place in the political and commercial worlds, and in our social system, must necessarily give rise to and be followed by important and possibly fundamental alterations in our laws, and in the administration of them. They felt that, unless the practical information and experience in connection with our legal system, which was possessed solely by the solicitors of England, could be imported into the arrangement of these alterations, all legislation on them must necessarily be crude, to a great extent impracticable, productive of mischief to the community at large, and in all probability needlessly injurious to our professional body; and they well knew that unless our profession itself cared for, and looked vigilantly after, its own interests in the course of these alterations, those interests and the prospects of the profession generally must be sacrificed; as the solicitors, although forming so important a body, and so influential in many instances as individuals, were comparatively unrepresented in the Legislature, and had no reason to expect sympathy or protection from those who were likely to be the promoters of the anticipated changes. They well knew, too, that the individual efforts of a member here and there of our profession, or even of a local law society, would avail but little where there was no unity of effort or action in the body generally, and that whilst the solicitors remained disunited, and, as it were, a mere rope of sand, the Legislature would not be likely to provide for or heed their interests or wishes. The promoters of this Association, therefore, determined on endeavouring to unite the scattered and unconnected members of the profession in an entire body, to the intent and in such manner that the force and influence of the whole should be collected and centred in one powerful focus of action. And they started this Association upon the principles and with the objects which are stated in our prospectuses—viz., that “The objects of the Association are to unite and organize the influence of practising attorneys and solicitors throughout England and Wales; to promote the better administration of the law; and to protect the rights, and increase the usefulness of, the profession.” The success of the Association has fully justified the foresight and efforts of its founders. The benefits attained, the mischiefs averted, and the useful influence of the Association upon passing events connected with the enactment and administration of our laws, have been numerous and important in a variety of modes and directions, as proved by the contents of the several annual reports of the proceedings of this Association from the period of its foundation to the present time. Much, however, still remains to be accomplished; and there is great reason to apprehend that measures will in future years, and perhaps at an early period, be attempted in the Legislature which will require the most vigilant attention of the Association, and the utmost exertions of its members to resist or modify, and it is possible that some of those measures may affect as seriously, if not more so, our brethren of the agricultural districts as those of the commercial ones. It is, therefore, particularly satisfactory to see the just appreciation of the necessity and usefulness of the Association which some of our professional brethren of Worcester and its neighbourhood have shown in inviting us here on this occasion to explain the objects of the Association, and to state what it has succeeded in doing for the benefit of the profession, and what it proposes for the future. We gladly avail ourselves of the invitation, and trust that the result will be as satisfactory in the way of increasing our numerical strength and consequent usefulness and power as our provincial meetings have hitherto proved in other localities; and further that Worcester may prove an example which may be followed by the solicitors of other comparatively agricultural districts for their own benefit as well as that of the Association and of the profession at large.

I will now, then, proceed, with your permission, to discharge my principal duty in opening these proceedings—viz., that of narrating to you the operations of your Committee of Management since the last meeting, and their results, that all the members may, before proceeding to a discussion, be in full possession of all that has been done by the Committee since the meeting in April last up to the present time. You have all received, and, I doubt not, will be willing that I should assume that you have read and are acquainted with the contents of the Report which was presented at that meeting, and that you will not desire to have repeated now any of the facts and circumstances therein stated.

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION.

I fully anticipate your approval in taking first in order our proceedings relative to the education of the future members of our profession, as it is a subject in which so much interest has been evinced by so many of our members, and one which is likely to affect to so important, and I trust beneficial an extent, the future of the profession to which we belong. You will be aware, from the report presented at the general meeting in April last, that the judges were then about to make regulations respecting preliminary examinations in general knowledge, and intermediate examinations in legal knowledge, in accordance with the provisions of the Attorneys, Solicitors, Proctors, and Certificated Conveyancers Act of 1860. It will be recollected by most, if not all, of you, probably, that in the regulations for conducting the examinations under the said Act, which were originally proposed to be submitted for adoption by the Council of the Incorporated Law Society to the judges, it was contemplated that all the examinations under it should be held exclusively in London, and none in the provinces. Your Committee were strongly of opinion that facilities should be offered for conducting the preliminary examination, before articles at least, as well in the country as in London, as they considered it would be highly objectionable, and attended with unnecessary expense and peril, to compel youths residing in the provinces of only sixteen years of age, and fresh from school, to take a journey to London merely for the purpose of passing the brief, simple, and non-legal preliminary examination proposed, which it was manifest could be conducted with equal efficiency at any place in England at which there happened to be a schoolmaster as in London. Your Committee consequently proceeded to consult the various provincial law societies and many individual solicitors of experience practising in the country upon the subject, and finding their opinions to coincide with those of your Committee, they proceeded to lay their views before the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, and at the same time suggested for consideration a simple and, as they believed, satisfactory method for conducting the provincial examinations. The suggestions of the Committee were so far approved that in the amended proposed regulations, which were framed by the Council on the 18th of April last, it was no longer declared that the preliminary examinations should necessarily be held in London, but that they should be held "at such places as the examiners should from time to time appoint," and some other suggestions of your Committee were at the same time likewise adopted. To these amended regulations, however, was still appended the expression of the opinion of the Council that all the examinations had better be held in London, and it was proposed that the fee to be paid by each examinant on the preliminary examinations should be only £1. Your Committee apprehended that such a small fee might be found inadequate to defray the cost of an examination in the provinces, particularly if held by special examiners, and thereby prevent the examiners from appointing under the discretionary clause any "places" in the country for the holding of their examinations; and your Committee therefore wrote to the Council to suggest that power should be taken in the proposed regulations to double or treble this fee if found needful, and suggested that an account should be kept of the receipts and application of such fees, which should be open to the inspection of the profession, so that application might afterwards be from time to time made, if thought fit, to the judges to increase or diminish the amount of the same under the power given to them by section 20 of the Solicitors Act (23 & 24 Vict. c. 127). No decided answer was received to this communication; and at a meeting of the Committee held shortly afterwards, it was resolved that a memorial should be presented to the judges themselves, requesting them to order, by the regulations then about to be made by them, that the fee to be paid by each person on receiving his certificate of having passed the preliminary examination, should be sufficient to admit of the expense of a country examination being incurred, and suggested that it should be two guineas at the least, it being, in the opinion of the meeting and of all the provincial Law Societies and members of the association who had been consulted, most desirable that facilities should be offered to young men of passing such preliminary examination at or near their own homes, instead of being compelled, at such early ages, to travel to London for the purpose. A memorial to this effect was accordingly prepared and presented to the Lords Chief Justices, the Master of the Rolls, and the Lord Chief Baron, and a letter was afterwards written to the Master of the Rolls requesting him to receive a deputation of your Committee on the subject. For this his Honour immediately fixed a time, when he was waited on by Mr. T. H. Bower, Mr. Field, Mr. W. Shaen, myself, and your secretary, and the result of the somewhat lengthened conference that ensued was, that Sir J. Romilly appeared fully to approve of the above and other suggestions made to him by your Committee. The entire success of these efforts of the Committee will appear from the following extracts from the recently published regulations issued by the judges. The preliminary examination under the 8th section of the Act is thereby directed to be held at such times and places as the examiners shall from time to time appoint, "and either by themselves or under their direction, in case the examination shall be conducted in the country," and again "with respect to candidates residing in the country, their examination may be conducted by the transmission by the examiners of papers to some person or persons to be appointed by them for that purpose in certain towns to be selected in England and Wales, who shall call the candidates before them at convenient times, to be fixed by the examiners, and require them to give written answers in the presence of the persons so appointed who shall then seal up and send to the examiners in London the answers so written." This portion is nearly in the very words of the suggestion of the committee. Again, the regulations continue—"The persons so appointed to be remunerated out of the fees to be paid on receiving their certificates by the candidates examined in the country. Each person examined in London, on receiving his certificate, to pay the fee of £1, and each person examined in the country, on receiving his certificate, to pay the fee of £2, to the Council of the Incorporated Law Society." The intermediate examinations are also, as suggested by your Committee, to be conducted at such times and places as the examiners shall from time to time appoint. Other suggestions of your Committee of less importance are also found adopted in the judges' regulations. Your Committee have laboured for many years to obtain the adoption of a more perfect system of examinations, happily secured at last by the late Act, in which the views and wishes of your Committee were to so great an extent approved and adopted by the Legislature; and it is further gratifying to the Committee to find that their views on the details and practical working of the examinations under the Act have met with the approval of, and been adopted by, the judges in the regulations for carrying that Act into effect. Your Committee will watch with great interest the development of these newly-established examinations, and not fail to endeavour to secure the adoption of any further measures relating to them which practical experience may show to be requisite.

THE CHANCERY FUNDS.

I will next touch upon the subject of the management of the chancery funds, which is one in which this Association has also for many years taken a great interest, and frequently petitioned the Legislature respecting it. The nature of the memorial which the Committee presented to the then recently appointed Chancery Funds Commissioners, at the very outset of their labours, as to the matters complained of in the practice of the Accountant-General's Office, was fully described in the last report. That memorial was received by the Royal Commissioners at their first meeting. It was immediately ordered by them to be printed, and the important suggestions which it contained were at once taken by them into consideration, and have since constituted, it is believed, a large share of the Royal Commissioners' labours, your Committee having stood somewhat in the light of prosecutors of the enquiry before them. I subsequently received a letter from the Secretary to the Commission, inviting me to procure, either from such individual members of the Association as might be willing to assist the Commission, or from a sub-committee, a further expression of their opinion in reference to the matters of complaint alleged to exist in connection with the Accountant-General's department, and the best means of remedying the same. Accordingly, I immediately convened a meeting of the sub-committee already appointed to consider this subject. It held numerous meetings, and discussed fully the details and mode of effecting the reforms which had been proposed by our memorial; and an elaborate paper of "observations and suggestions" was prepared by the sub-committee, and laid before the Royal Commissioners in July last, and which has also been ordered by them to be printed, and is now under the Commissioners' consideration. Your Committee anticipate with great confidence the adoption by the Royal Commissioners of many, if not all, of the important reforms proposed by the sub-committee.

PRACTICE AND COSTS.—PROBATE DISTRICT REGISTRIES.

Another subject of interest is that which relates to the recent changes in the practice and costs in the Probate Court District Registries. Your Committee have been for some time past endeavouring to discover means to get rid of the great anomaly of Probate Court District Registrars being permitted to practise in their own courts, and thus to be themselves the preparers of the evidence of which they were afterwards to be the quasi judges. On the 16th April last, in order to carry out a plan for payment of these registrars by salary instead of by fees (which were thenceforth to be taken in stamps and paid over to Government) enunciated in a previous treasury minute, drawn up in pursuance of the power given in the 111th section of the Probate Act of 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 77), regulations were issued by the judge of the Probate Court, directing that from and after the 1st May last it should be part of the duty of the District Registrars of the Court of Probate to prepare affidavits and all other necessary documents for parties applying to them in person for grants of probate or letters of administration. To this order is appended a table of fees to be taken (in addition to the ordinary fees, and also in stamps, and for the use of Government) when applications are made by parties in person, and not through a proctor, solicitor, or attorney. These additional fees are considerably less than (in most cases about one-half) the fees directed by the rules and regulations of the court to be taken for their own use by attorneys, solicitors, or proctors, when applications are made through them. Thus, Government offices have, in effect, been established in all the district registries to compete, and at lower charges, by means of salaried lawyers, with the provincial solicitor for the whole of his common form probate business. The credit of the first move to obtain a remedy of this unfair proceeding on the part of Government is due to the Manchester Law Association. They first prepared a memorial to the judge of the Probate Court, setting forth the grievances of the country solicitors in the matter; and it was arranged that a memorial from this Association to a similar effect should be sent in, and also that memorials from the provincial law societies should be collected by your secretary, and forwarded with the Manchester memorial and our own en masse to Sir C. Cresswell. Accordingly, memorials from the Liverpool, Birmingham, Hull, Kent, Leicester, Lincolnshire, and Yorkshire, Law Societies, and from eighty-five solicitors practising in Bristol, were presented with the two others to the judge of the Court of Probate, who appointed to receive deputations on the subject on the 29th of June last. He was accordingly waited upon by Mr. Street, the President of the Manchester Law Association, and Mr. Baker of Manchester; Mr. Jones, the Vice-President of the Birmingham Law Society; Mr. Hebb, of Lincoln; and Mr. T. H. Bower, Mr. W. Shaen, myself, and your Secretary. I will just notice en passant another instance and mark of the uniform courtesy and consideration which the representation of the interests of a large number generally procures, that Sir C. Cresswell had appointed to receive the deputations at the rising of his Court, which his secretary informed yours would (it being a Saturday) probably take place at 2.30, but a long case being on at that time, the judge very kindly suspended the proceedings in order to avoid detaining the members of the deputations, and retired with them to his private room, heard patiently all they had to set forth, and fully discussed the questions with them. His lordship admitted the force of the objection that those who prepared documents should not also be the judges of their sufficiency, and stated that before the issuing of the recent rules he had desired to prevent district registrars from practising in their own courts, but had not power to do so. He considered that the new regulations effected a great improvement in this respect, as the registrars would not, now that they are paid by salaries, have any pecuniary interest in the work, and, therefore ("being human," to use his words), would not be likely to seek it. He thought the change in 1857 had largely benefitted the solicitors, and that the public ought to be admitted to share in that benefit. He also mentioned that a similar arrangement would soon be adopted in London. We suggested that if the order could not be entirely rescinded, at least the fees to be taken by the Government should be raised to the same amount as those prescribed to be taken by solicitors, to get rid of the unfairness of the Government not only entering into competition with, but underselling a profession which it taxed beyond all others, and which was consequently rather entitled to protection than invasion of its rights and privileges. As to altering the fees, however, his Lordship intimated that any proposal for that purpose, to be successful, must receive the previous sanction of the Lords of the Treasury, who had suggested the present scale of fees, and who had made definite arrangements with the district registrars for the payment and amounts of their salaries out of them; and he intimated that the low scale of fees to be taken by the Government was fixed he believed, entirely without reference to the question whether it would or would not undersell or injure the solicitors, and only with regard to the amount that would probably remunerate the Government for the additional salaries which it was in future to pay to the district registrars. In accordance with this intimation a memorial setting forth the case of the provincial solicitors more fully, was presented to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury by the Committee, after which it was printed and copies forwarded to all the provincial law societies, with a request that they would (if they approved) also address similar memorials to the Treasury. The memorials both to Sir C. Cresswell and the Treasury, were also published in the Solicitors' Journal and other law newspapers, which urged upon the profession generally a vigorous course of similar action. Further memorials have since been presented by the Committee to the Lord Chancellor and to Sir A. E. J. Cockburn, whom (his signature being appended to the order complained of) we thought it right also to put in possession of the facts shewing the grievance which the order had created. We have since received a letter from the Lord Chancellor's principal secretary, assuring us that the subject shall receive the careful consideration of his lordship. Memorials to the Treasury from the Liverpool, Hull, Birmingham, Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and Gloucestershire Law Societies, and to Sir C. Cresswell from the Leicestershire Law Society, have been forwarded to your secretary, and presented by him. The Manchester Law Association memorialised the Treasury through Mr. Massey, M.P.; and Mr. Ingham, M.P., had an interview with Sir C. Cresswell to communicate the views of the Newcastle and Gateshead Law Society. The matter now awaits the decision of the Treasury and the other authorities.

AS TO CUSTODY OF WILLS.

It was lately brought under the notice of the committee that the wills and other documents deposited in one of the archdeaconal registries had not yet been transmitted to the proper registry in accordance with the provisions of the 89th section of the Probate Act of 1857 (20 & 21 Viet. c. 77); that the ecclesiastical registrar was pensioned off under the Act, and that his deputy, who had the charge of such wills, &c., had died, whereby inconvenience was occasioned, and the safety of the wills, &c., endangered. The Committee lost no time in communicating with Dr. Bayford, the Principal Registrar of the Court of Probate, on the subject, and (it being understood that there were also other cases of documents untransmitted) suggested that requisitions, under the seal of the Court of Probate, might be at once issued to all persons having the custody of such documents, requesting them at once to transmit the same to be deposited and arranged as directed by the Act. In reply, Dr. Bayford stated that the reason why some of the wills which were to come to the Principal Registry had not already been transferred there was that the Government had not yet afforded accommodation for them, thus giving another instance of the gain which will be afforded to the public by the carrying out of the plan for the concentration of the metropolitan courts and offices; for, with this comprehensive scheme in view, it is not probable that Government can be induced to add to the already great number of sparsely situated offices by engaging an additional building for the deposit of testamentary papers. Dr. Bayford added that, saving as to the metropolitan district, all the wills, excepting some at York and Lichfield, were already lodged in their proper depositories.

USAGES OF THE PROFESSION—MORTGAGE COSTS.

A short time since the opinion of the Committee was sought by a member practising in a large provincial town, as to what other charges in cases of mortgages were made in London when the procuration fee was charged. Their reply was, that in London the procuration fee, when charged by the lender's solicitor, is supposed to cover all preliminary expenses for the negotiation of the loan, such preliminary expenses including all attendance and other charges up to the receipt of the abstract; the charge for perusing which should then form the first item of the mortgagee's solicitor's bill of costs, which is otherwise unaffected by the charge of the procuration fee.

The learned Chairman then proceeded to state to the meeting what had been the operations of the Association in connection with the several important parliamentary measures of last session affecting the interests of the profession, including the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Bill, the Excise and Stamps Bill, the Courts of Justice Building and Money Bills, the Parochial Assessments Bill, the East India High Courts, and the Income Tax Act.

REGISTRATION OF DEEDS OR TITLE.

On this subject the learned gentleman said—

Nothing has been attempted during the past session on the great subjects of deeds or title registries; but I fear we must not, on that account, lull ourselves into any fancied security against invasion of our present privileges, as the spirit of change in that direction is still alive, and as the new Lord Chancellor is supposed to be an advocate of a fundamental reform in the present system of conveyancing. Should we fail on other points, at least we shall lay claim to compensation as the proctors did, seeing how highly and exceptionally we are taxed for the privilege of practising. If the Government is charged with the care of all classes of her Majesty's subjects, surely it must not be allowed to ignore, and even injure a class of them, numbering 10,000 individuals, who have been expensively educated purposely for the work, which the Legislature would be asked to sweep away, and on whom the nation draws so largely in taxation. It ought to be kept well before the view of Government and the Parliament, that our existing body has already, in mere articles and admission stamps, contributed towards the general expenses of the country (and in exoneration to that extent, of course, of the general body of tax-payers) nearly a million and a half sterling; and that in addition we continue to pay above £50,000 a-year in certificate duty, besides bearing our full share in all other respects of the ordinary taxes of the Kingdom. If any class has earned a claim to compensation for losses which Parliament may think it for the general good to inflict upon it, ours has surely pre-eminently done so.

THE SECRETARY.

In alluding to this gentleman the Chairman said—

It will be a great satisfaction to you to know that a second year's experience of the services of your secretary enables the Committee to confirm the anticipations of his eminent qualifications for the office which were formed at our last provincial meeting. His intelligence and vigilance, coupled with his earnest desire at all times to promote the welfare of the Association and guard the rights and interests of the profession, entitle him to the highest commendation, and make it a subject of congratulation to the Association that they have been so fortunate as to secure the services of so efficient an officer. In the financial department of your affairs the secretary has proved himself most valuable, for he has managed to reduce and keep the annual expenditure to a point below the amount of the annual income; so that there has been no necessity during the last year to call again in aid of our expenses any portion of our small remaining funded capital; and if the subscriptions keep up to only their present extent, the continuance of the existence of the Association is assured, though it would much increase its efficiency and means of usefulness if a great number of subscriptions could be procured, as considerations of expense frequently deter the Committee from undertaking that vigorous though more expensive course of action which it often appears to them would prove most conducive to the ends and objects of the Association. The great expense of printing and postages often deters the Committee from communicating with and endeavouring to rouse into action the members of the association and the profession generally, when danger to their interests happens to threaten; and occasionally mischievous measures of a minor character are allowed to pass, and have to be submitted to, because the Association cannot afford to print and circulate statements of the facts relating to them, and explain the necessity of opposition, to the professional body at large.

The learned gentleman concluded his long and able address with the following observations:—

I trust you will agree with me in thinking that the Association has effected some good and averted much mischief during the last year, and that the experience of the past, as well as apprehensions of the future, strongly call for and warrant our further and best exertions in uniting not only to keep the Association on foot, but in endeavouring to raise it to, and maintain it in, a still higher state of efficiency. To effect this, further funds are, above all things, requisite. These are to be obtained by an increase in the number of our members, and consequent augmentation of the aggregate amount of our annual subscriptions; and I would impress upon all of you present that one of the most effectual methods of promoting the usefulness of the Association that you can adopt is, each one of you to canvass in your respective localities for fresh members. The Committee, in order to act effectively, ought at all times upon measures of importance to possess the means of communicating to and with all the members of the Association at least, if not of the profession generally, and endeavouring to obtain their co-operation, through their members in the Legislature and otherwise, in the course which it may seem expedient for the interests of our profession to adopt; and I believe it would prove greatly for the benefit of every individual solicitor in the kingdom if this Association were raised to a state of greater efficiency. Let it be the object and effort, therefore, of each and all of you who are also of that belief, to do your utmost to assist in increasing the usefulness and practical influence of the Association in the way I have suggested, and to lose no opportunity of obtaining for it all the additional support which you believe it to merit and require.

Solicitors' Benevolent Association.

The half-yearly provincial general meeting of this institution was held in the lecture room of the Worcestershire Natural History Society, Worcester, on Wednesday last, the 9th inst., in the presence of a numerous body of solicitors from all parts of the kingdom.

Mr. J. Anderton, of London, Chairman of the Board of Directors, was called to the chair.

The Secretary (Mr. Eiffe) read the following report of the directors:—

"The directors have to state that the institution continues to increase its numbers, 85 members having joined since the general meeting in April last. The aggregate number of solicitors now enrolled in the Society is 1,090, of whom 408 are life members, and 682 are members from year to year, by annual subscription; amongst the former being eight gentlemen who, in addition to their payment as life members, subscribe annually. The entire receipts during the half-year have amounted to £755 11s. 4d., out of which the directors have invested the sum of £500. The funded capital of the Society, standing in the names of the trustees, now amounts to £5,159 9s. 11d. Three per Cent. Consols, the annual dividend arising from which, being the only fund at present applicable to the purposes of relief, and necessarily limited to the claims of distressed members and their families, is £154 16s. In pursuance of the resolution of the last general meeting, the directors have made the necessary preliminary arrangements with respect to applications for aid from distressed members and their families, and have already awarded temporary relief in one case which seemed to be of an urgent character. The directors take this opportunity of renewing their earnest appeal to those members of the profession who, as yet, have borne no part in the promotion of the institution, to contribute their share of pecuniary assistance to its funds, in order that its benevolent objects may be carried out to their fullest extent."

A discussion took place on the subject of the investments of the society. It was said that it would be much better to obtain a higher rate of interest than that of the Three per Cent. Consols, and that this could be done by investing the funds on mortgage security, or in other ways yielding a higher rate of interest.

The Chairman said the directors had power to carry out this suggestion, and he had no doubt that at the next meeting of the Committee in London, the matter would receive their consideration. He impressed the claims of the society on the meeting, and called upon the gentlemen present to use their influence to obtain additional subscribers. The medical profession and the clerical body had institutions for the relief of indigent members, or their wives and families, and so had most bodies throughout the country. As the members of the legal body were likewise exposed to vicissitudes of fortune, it was their duty to provide for the support of any of their body who might not be so successful as the generality of the profession. He concluded by moving the adoption of the report.

Mr. Hope Shaw, of Leeds, seconded the resolution, which was put and carried.

Mr. E. Ball, of Pershore, moved the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Eden, of Liverpool, and carried: "That this meeting very earnestly commends the society to the support of every member of the profession."

Mr. Gill, of Liverpool, moved the next resolution: "That the present board of directors, with the exception of Mr. Bromehead, of Lincoln, who retires, be elected for the ensuing year."

Mr. Pidcock, of Worcester, seconded the resolution. He urged upon the directors to commence distributing the funds of the society, as he thought this would be one means of increasing the interest in the society. The resolution was carried.

Mr. Rawlins, of Birmingham, moved "That the name of Mr. Slater, of Princess-street, Manchester, be added to the Board of Directors, in the place of Mr. Bromehead."

Mr. Stallard, of Worcester, seconded the resolution, which was also carried.

The re-appointment of the auditors, Messrs. Stephen Williams and Henry Kimber, was carried on the motion of Mr. C. A. Smith, of Greenwich, seconded by Mr. Radcliffe, of Liverpool.

A vote of thanks to the directors and auditors was moved by Mr. Hodgson, of York, seconded by Mr. Ryland (Mayor of Birmingham).

Mr. W. Shaen, of London, acknowledged the compliment paid to the directors.

Mr. Banner, of Liverpool, moved the thanks of the meeting to the President and Council of the Worcester Natural History Society for allowing the meeting of the Association in that room.

Mr. Torr (of London) seconded the resolution, which was carried.

Mr. Case (of Maidstone) moved a vote of thanks to the Chairman for his kindness in presiding.

Mr. Bunting (of Manchester) seconded the resolution.

In acknowledging the compliment, the Chairman alluded to suggestions which had been made by the meeting as to canvassing the large towns for new subscribers. He said he should himself be happy to do something in that way himself, and it was agreed that he should visit the gentlemen of Worcester not subscribing, after the meeting, and he also volunteered to do the same in Oxford on Saturday.

THE TEMPLE CHURCH.

On Sunday morning last this magnificent church, which has been closed since the commencement of the long vacation, was re-opened for Divine service. There was a full congregation.

We extract the following article upon this interesting structure from a recent number of the Building News :—

Charles Lamb considered the Temple the "pleasantest spot in all London." With a purified, or rather unpolluted, river, it might still deserve the proud distinction. A crowd of pleasant memories press upon us immediately we pass through the low portals which divide it from Fleet-street. One bids us linger over the spot where Johnson lived, another on which old Goldie somehow rested. The banqueting hall recalls the memory of Shakespeare's play rehearsed there; the church reminds of the "poor Christian warriors" who owned nine thousand manors, who carved their names with their trusty swords in England's early history, and who, when poor, combined the best specimens of piety and valor. Yet

"All is great and all is strange,
In this boundless world of unending change."

The home which Heraclius founded for the warrior knights, on the north bank of the Thames, has been converted into a legal rookery. The cause thereof is well known. The modern templars have, however, shown a praiseworthy zeal in the conservation of the most valued relic of their predecessors. The church, which proclaims, by its half fortress appearance, the character of its founders—men who had to sleep in "complete mail," with their swords by their sides—has always been well maintained. Even when the wainscot screens, the Corinthian pilasters and whitewash were applied to it, the work was done to improve its condition, and no one knew better in those days. Twenty years ago they restored it in the best way then possible, and spared no funds to render the church worthy of its high renown.

On the north side the Norman porch, and a portion of the round church, was connected with a row of houses, which formed the eastern side of Inner Temple-lane. These buildings could not then be removed. Within the last few weeks the whole have, however, been demolished, to make room for new chambers. Goldsmith's house (No. 5) has soon followed that of Doctor Johnson. Fancy and agreeable associations lose something by the change, but it is compensated for by the enlarged view of the noble round church. The old brick houses, whatever their associations, were all virtually condemned when once a portion of them were pulled down to be re-erected on a more commodious plan. The better built and better arranged chambers were so eagerly sought after, that others were certain to be provided. The nine houses opposite Dr. Johnson's buildings have consequently been taken down; a new range of chambers has been built at right angles with those they have displaced, and facing the north walls of the Temple Church, and a large open terrace has been retained between them, opening a good north-west view of the church. The last of these nine houses projected over and completely hid the old porch of the church. The demolition has thus revealed the side wall and laid bare the vaulting. Two lovely capitals, one on either side the archway, still remain in good preservation, and the coping stones, marking the line of the gable, is visible on one side. A wheel window of rare beauty has also been exposed to view over the porch. It is curious, and it ought to be profitable, to remark that the stone sculptured seven hundred years ago—the God-stone fire-stone—is in splendid condition, with scarcely any traces of decay, whilst the Caen stone used twenty years ago in the restoration has in places gone literally to powder. Several coffins have been found in taking out the walls of the cellars of the demolished houses. A temporary roof has been thrown over the old porch, and this, with the unquestionably old half-ruinous walls beside and beneath it, and the half-demolished adjoining houses make a remarkably picturesque composition. It is doubly interesting also from the fact that no restoration has veiled the whole work, and we can see what the old masons actually did instead of copies of what they executed. A good deal must be done to prevent further ruin, but we trust the Templars—who apparently have not decided yet what to do—will not obliterate every trace of the old stones, either by cement as formerly or by new building stones, in their zeal for having it "well done" (which means overdone). The man who had first a new handle and then a new blade put to an old knife, and then insisted on its antiquity, finds plenty of church restorers of the same way of thinking. A trifling damage to a moulding, string-course, or piece of carving, is of no account. By removing it and substituting new, a page is torn from the church's history. It should be borne constantly in mind that in restoring a church such works only should be executed as will keep the building from falling into ruin, or as consist in clearing it of inconsistent additions which hide its original beauties. We are even heretical enough to think that many of the old parish churches have been denuded of much picturesque beauty by the wholesale clearance which the modern restorers have made. What, then, we would urge on the modern Templars is to preserve the church as much as possible, and to disregard the wishes of those who would have it "restored" to such an extent that we might imagine the old knights still occupying it. We would not have one of those scars, which tell of its battles through seven centuries, effaced. What work is needed to ensure future stability should be done in the same kind of stone as the church is built with, and above all things the whole should not be flayed to one monotonous tone, obliterating the delicate and varied tints which form half the charm of many buildings.

A calendar of the wills and administrations of the year 1858 (at least, from the 10th of January) was published some short time since, and the Registrar-General has made some interesting calculations founded upon it, making an estimate for the omitted ten days, so as to complete the year. 210,972 adults died in the twelvemonth, and 30,823 persons left personal property behind them; 21,653 had made their wills; the other 9,170 had made none, and letters of administration had to be taken out. 89 persons with more than £10,000 (one worth above £100,000) died without making a will. The aggregate amount of property left by all these persons is estimated at £71,860,792, averaging £2,331 each. Distinguishing between the men and the women, we find that 102,049 adult men died in the year, and 21,454 left personal property—for one who left any four leaving none; 108,923 adult women died, and 9,369 left personal property. The average amount left by the men was £2,751; by the women, £1,371. Omitting now any estimate for the first ten days of the year, and dealing only with the actual wills and administrations of the rest of the twelvemonth, the personal property of those who died leaving any, 29,979 in number, amounted to £69,893,380, of which £57,396,350 was left by the men, and £12,497,030 by women. The stream of wealth flowed thus:—

Persons.	Dying Worth.	Left.
22,513 ..	Less than £1,000	£5,762,880
8,377 ..	£1,000, but less than £10,000 ..	30,010,300
1,020 ..	£10,000, but less than £50,000 ..	21,960,000
102 ..	£50,000, but less than £100,000 ..	7,100,000
67 ..	Above £100,000	15,060,000
29,979		£69,893,380

Only one property was sworn so high as £900,000 and under £1,000,000; 1,935 were under £20. The property divides nearly equally at £20,000. About £35,000,000 belonged to 29,392 persons, none having more than £20,000, and the other £35,000,000 belonged to 587 persons, fifty times fewer than the former company. Of those who left above £100,000, 37 were described as esquires, a term which would include men who had made their fortunes by trade or commerce; ten were titled personages, five were bankers, four merchants, three clergymen, one cotton manufacturer, one corn merchant, one hotel keeper, one was in the navy, one in the Indian army, one in the Indian Civil Service, one was a spinster. Three medical men left more than £50,000. A person described when he made his will as a commercial clerk left above £30,000; 17 "labourers and mechanics" above £1,000. Of 75 lawyers 15 died without making their wills. The foregoing statements, which must be taken as approximations rather than an absolute accuracy, relate to England alone. In the year ending March 31, 1859, legacy duty was paid in the United Kingdom on £65,441,611, but that does not include property passing from husband to wife or the converse, no legacy duty being then payable; succession duty on real property was paid upon £29,242,630, and estimating that to be taxed to the next successor at half its saleable value, it will amount to £58,485,260. On this assumption £123,923,871 passed by death to another generation of successors. It is certainly a remarkable fact, that (upon an average) on every death, including alike men, women, and children, more than £100 of property paying legacy duty, and perhaps £187 of property of every kind, is left for the benefit of the successors in the united kingdom.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

JACKSON—On Oct. 4, the wife of Joseph Jackson, Esq., of Gray's-inn, of a son.

MACPHERSON—On Oct. 10, at 48, Inverness-terrace, the wife of William Macpherson, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, of a daughter.

POTTER—On Oct. 4, the wife of H. Cipriani Potter, Esq., of 42, Torrington-square, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

BELL—SMITH—On Oct. 5, Harry Bell, Esq., of Bedford-row, to Charlotte Maria Wilhelmina, daughter of Samuel Smith, Esq., of Calcutta and Westbourne-terrace-road, London.

DAW—MERRIFIELD—On Oct. 3, the Rev. C. H. T. Wyer Daw, rector of Otterham, Cornwall, to Emily Katherine, daughter of John Merrifield, Esq., of Brighton, Barrister-at-Law.

HOWLETT—LEWIS—On Oct. 2, James Warnes Howlett, Solicitor, Brighton, to Marianne Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Carne Lewis, Esq., of Brentwood.

MOSES—SIMON—On Oct. 2, Samuel Henry, son of Henry Moses, Esq., of No. 2, Park-square west, Regent's-park, to Zillah, daughter of John Simon, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

WRIGHT—SUTTON—On Oct. 8, John Lawrance Wright, Esq., of South-square, Gray's-inn, to Elizabeth, daughter of the late William Sutton, Esq., of Mepal, Isle of Ely.

DEATHS.

BROWN—On Oct. 3, Sophia, the wife of William Brown, of Gray's-inn, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

HART—On Oct. 5, the Rev. W. H. Hart, M.A., Demy of Magdalen College, Oxford, and Chaplain to the Hon. Society of Gray's-inn, aged 30.

MORRIS—On Oct. 4, John, son of John Morris, Esq., of the Old Jewry, aged 6 years and 3 months.

MURRAY—On Oct. 2, at Strachur-park, Argyleshire, Lady Murray, relic of Lord Murray, one of the senators of the College of Justice.

ROWE—On Oct. 2, at No. 6, Addison-terrace, Notting-hill, Mary, daughter of the late William Henry Rowe, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

Unclaimed Stock in the Bank of England.

The Amount of Stock heretofore standing in the following Names will be transferred to the Party claiming the same, unless other Claimants appear within Three Months:—

CHARLEVILLE, CATHERINE MARIA, Dowager-Countess of, Widow, Cavendish-square, £5,708 : 4 : 6, 3½ per Cent.—Claimed by CATHERINE LOUISA AUGUSTA MARLAY, Widow, the surviving executrix.

EYRE, PRUDENCE BARBARA, wife of Daniel Eyre, Esq., late of Salisbury, £1,800 Consols.—Claimed by REV. DANIEL JAMES EYRE, the administrator.

WIGLESWORTH, THOMAS, Gent., Gray's-inn, and REV. JOHN HEADLAM, Wycliffe, Yorkshire, £691 : 10 : 3 Consols.—Claimed by MORLEY HEADLAM, acting executor of the said Rev. John Headlam, who was the survivor.

London Gazettes.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Oct. 8, 1861.

ACOME, JOHN, Alpha Villa, Russell-terrace, Leamington Priory, Warwickshire, Esq. Nov. 16. Sols. Haynes & Moore, Jury-street, Warwick.

DAVIS, THOMAS HENRY, 7, Hart-street, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square, Middlesex, Coach Lamp Manufacturer. Nov. 10. Sol. W. R. Buchanan, 13, Basinghall-street, London.

DRAFFAN, JOSEPH WRIGHT, 78, Cambridge-terrace, Hyde-park, Middlesex, Esq. Nov. 20. Sols. Bockett, Son, & Barton, 60, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

HOW, ELIZABETH, Anchor-inn, Liphook, Bramshott, Hants, Widow. Nov. 10. Sol. R. E. Mellersh, Godalming, Surrey.

PALMER, ANN, formerly of Jacob's Well Tavern, Jacob's-passage, Barbican, London, and late of Ropemaker-street, Finsbury, Middlesex, Widow. Dec. 4. Sols. Taylor & Jaquet, 15, South-street, Finsbury-square.

PICKIN, ELIZABETH, Coventry, Widow. Nov. 8. Sol. T. Browett, 23, Bayley-lane, Coventry.

RATHBONE, WILLIAM, Newbold-upon-Avon, Warwickshire, Builder and Grocer. Oct. 20. Sols. Wratislaw & Fuller, Rugby.

SCOTT, ELIZABETH, formerly of Norwich, and late of 47, Lansdown-crescent, Cheltenham. Nov. 1. Sols. Winterbotham, Bell, & Co., Cheltenham.

SMELLEY, RICHARD, Nottingham, Butcher. Oct. 30. Sol. J. T. Brewster, Nottingham.

TATE, LOUISA PINFOLD, 77, Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square, Middlesex, Spinster. Nov. 20. Sols. Bockett, Son, & Barton, 60, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

WALLACE, HILL, Camden Lodge, Cheltenham. Dec. 1. Sols. Winterbotham, Bell, & Co., Cheltenham.

WILLIAMS, THOMAS, Devonport, Victualler. Dec. 5. Sol. E. O. Gard, 20, St. Aubyn-street, Devonport.

FRIDAY, Oct. 11, 1861.

BROWN, Rev. HUMPHREY, Kirkheaton, Northumberland, Clerk. Nov. 18. Sol. R. R. Dees, Pilgrim-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BUSHNELL, Mrs. CATHERINE, Westbourne-park, Paddington, Middlesex, Widow, sometimes called Madame Catherine Hayes Bushnell. Dec. 1. Sols. Baker, Baker, & Forder, 52, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

CLARK, JOHN CHORLEY, formerly of the City of Rome Public-house, Roman-road, Barnsbury, Middlesex, Licensed Victualler. Nov. 10. Sol. E. M. Dimmock, 2, Suffolk-lane, London.

CLIFFORD, RICHARD, 11, Park-street, Kennington-cross, Surrey, Laundryman. Nov. 23. Sol. J. Kempster, 1, Portsmouth-place, Lower Kennington-lane, Lambeth.

COLQUHOUN, WILLIAM JAMES HILLERSON, Elstow, Bedfordshire, Esq. Nov. 30. Sols. Paine & Layton, Gresham-house, London, E.C.

CULPECK, JOHN, Britannia Tavern, City-road, Middlesex, Licensed Victualler. Nov. 11. Sols. Morris, Stone, Townson, & Morris, Moorgate-street Chambers, Moorgate-street, London.

PICCO, WILLIAM, Broad-street, Birmingham, Blacksmith and Wheelwright. Nov. 3. Sol. W. Cottrell, 22, Bennett's-hill, Birmingham.

PLEWS, JOHN, 14, Grosvenor-place, Camberwell New-road, Kennington, Surrey, Gent. Nov. 30. Sol. R. Plews, 29, Mark-lane.

TURNER, HENRY, 2, Northumberland-street, Strand, and Stamford-hill, Middlesex, and formerly of Chigwell, Essex, Army Clothier. Nov. 11. Sols. Morris, Stone, Townson, & Morris, Moorgate-street Chambers, Moorgate-street, London.

WRIGHT, JOHN, formerly of Orchard-street, Sheffield, Scissors Grinder, and late of Handsworth, Woodhouse, York, Gent. Nov. 21. Sol. J. Dixon, 8, Norfolk-row, Sheffield.

Creditors under Estates in Chancery.

Last Day of Proof.

TUESDAY, Oct. 8, 1861.

COX, HENRY, Greville Cottage, Kentish-town, Middlesex, Gent. Cox v. Healey, V. C. Stuart. Nov. 7.

CRICKMORE, JOHN, Weybread, Suffolk, Farmer. Crickmore v. Crickmore, V. C. Wood. Oct. 30.

MARES, WILLIAM HENRY, Bath. Austin v. Cautle, V. C. Stuart. Nov. 14.

FRIDAY, Oct. 11, 1861.

SLATER, WILLIAM, Bentley Farm, Mavesyn Ridware, Staffordshire, Farmer. Slater v. Slater, M. R. Nov. 2.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors.

TUESDAY, Oct. 8, 1861.

BOTTOM, DAVID, Paddock, Huddersfield, Grocer and Shopkeeper. Sept. 12. Sol. T. Robinson, Huddersfield.

BAWEN, JOHN, Marsden-street, Manchester, Dealer in China Clay. Sept. 20. Sol. R. W. Stend, Bank-chambers, Essex-street, Manchester.

FLETCHER, ROBERT, Whitehaven, Cumberland, Mercer and Draper. Sept. 25. Sols. Brockbank & Helder, Whitehaven.

HOLDWORTH, JOHN, Cleckheaton, Yorkshire, Woollen Cloth Manufacturer. Sept. 2. Sol. W. Lancaster, Bradford.

RODHAM, JOHN, Guilsbrough, North Riding, Yorkshire, Draper and Grocer. Sept. 27. Sols. Newby, Richmond, and Watson, Stockton-on-Tees.

FRIDAY, Oct. 11, 1861.

BUNTING, WILLIAM, King-street, Covent-garden, Middlesex. Oct. 1. Sol. A. Jones, 15, Sise-lane, London.

BUTCHER, JOHN, Dalton, Harrow, Lancashire, Grocer. Sept. 23. Sol. J. Park, Cavendish-street, Ulverston.

COWLSHAW, JOSEPH, Stratford-upon-Avon, Warwickshire, Corn and Coal Merchant. Oct. 4. Sols. Hobbes & Slatter, Stratford-upon-Avon.

GATE, JAMES, 129, Strand, Middlesex, Hosier. Sept. 26. Sols. Davidson, Bradbury, & Hardwick, Weavers' Hall, 22, Basinghall-street.

LANSDOWN, ISAAC, SENR., ISAAC LANSDOWN, JUNR., and WILLIAM CARTER LANSDOWN, Wootton Bassett, Wilts, Carpenters and Builders. Oct. 2. Sol. T. H. Smith, 1, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry.

MESSER, JOHN, Liverpool, Draper. Sept. 14. Sols. Evans, Son, & Sandys, Commerce-court, Liverpool.

MORLAND, ISAAC, Arthur-street, Penrith, Cumberland, Joiner and Builder. Oct. 1. Sols. Cant & Fairer, Penrith.

ROSS, JOHN CHAD, & JOHN HENRY COCHRANE, Torquay, Devonshire, Ironmongers. Oct. 4. Sol. W. Smith, Dartmouth.

WILLIAMS, FREDERICK, 1, Royal Oak-terrace, Rayswater, Paddington, Middlesex, Hosier and Glover. Oct. 9. Sol. T. H. Smith, 1, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Oct. 8, 1861.

CASE, RICHARD, 60, Bethnal Green-road, Middlesex, Builder. Pet. Oct. 7. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 21 at 1, and Nov. 20 at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. J. F. Holmes, 8, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury, London.

CLOUGH, WILLIAM, 164, Cleveland-street, Birkenhead, Cheshire, Tailor and Draper. Pet. Oct. 5. Com. Perry: Oct. 21 and Nov. 8 at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sol. A. S. Samuel, Liverpool.

CORKE, HENRY, Taubridge Wells, Kent, Tailor and Clothier. Pet. Oct. 4. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 19 and Nov. 20 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. J. & J. H. Linklater & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London.

ELLIARD, WILLIAM, Bradford, Yorkshire, Stuff Merchant. Pet. Oct. 5. Com. West: Oct. 25 and Nov. 14 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. T. A. Watson, Bradford, or Bond & Barwick, Leeds.

HOWARD, THOMAS, Ormskirk, Lancashire, Earthenware Dealer. Pet. Oct. 2. Com. Perry: Oct. 21 and Nov. 11 at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Morgan. Sols. Forshaw & Goodman, Sweeting-street, Liverpool.

HULBERT, WILLIAM OLIVE, 29, Eastgate-street, Gloucester, Tailor and Draper. Pet. Oct. 4. Com. Hill: Oct. 21 at 12, and Nov. 16 at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Actman. Sols. Lovegrove & Son, Gloucester.

JONES, HENRY WILLIAM, Wrexham, Denbighshire, Draper. Pet. Oct. 4. Com. Perry: Oct. 21 and Nov. 8, at 12; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Bird. Sols. Evans, Son, & Sandys, Liverpool, and J. Buckton, Wrexham.
 MARRIOTT, WILLIAM EDWARD NEEVE, Swaffham, Norfolk, Tailor. Pet. Oct. 8. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 23 at 11, and Nov. 22 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. J. V. P. Plimsaul, 7, South-square, Gray's-inn, London.
 NELSON, EDWARD, Birmingham, Coal Dealer. Pet. Oct. 4. Com. Sanders: Oct. 18 and Nov. 7 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Southall & Nelson, Birmingham.
 PAICE, JOSHUA HENRY, 137, Fenchurch-street, London, Hosier and Shirt Maker. Pet. Oct. 5. Com. Evans: Oct. 17 and Nov. 15 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Pook, Basinghall-street.
 TAYLOR, JOSEPH, Hanging Ditch, Manchester, Grocer and Tea Dealer. Pet. Sept. 28. Com. Jemmett: Oct. 19 and Nov. 22 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sol. J. Richardson, Manchester.
 TURE, WILLIAM FFWORTH, 2, St. Dunstan's-hill, London, Wine Broker. Pet. Oct. 5. Com. Fane: Oct. 19 at 11.30, and Nov. 15 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Crosley & Burn, 34, Lombard-street.
 WEBBER, BERNARD JAMES, Newton Abbott, Devonshire, Smith and Engineer. Pet. Oct. 4. Com. Andrews: Oct. 23 and Nov. 27 at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzell. Sol. M. Fryer, St. Thomas, Exeter.

FRIDAY, Oct. 11, 1861.

BOND, WILLIAM, Broad-street and Tower-hill, Bristol, Victualler, Engineer, and Iron Founder. Pet. Sept. 30. Com. Hill: Oct. 22 and Nov. 23 at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sols. Clifton & Benson, Bristol.
 CHILD, WILLIAM HENRY, 7, Borough-street, Brighton, Builder. Pet. Oct. 10. Com. Fane: Oct. 24 at 11.30, and Nov. 22 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. F. W. Snell, 1, George-street, Mansion House.
 CULVERHOUSE, WILLIAM HENRY, 126, Banhill-row, Finsbury, Middlesex, Manufacturing Joiner. Pet. Oct. 11. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 23 at 1, and Nov. 27 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Lawrence, Flew, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, Old Jewry, London.
 DAVIS, ISAAC NOAH, Brentford Distillery, Brentford, Middlesex, Distillers. Pet. Oct. 7. Com. Evans: Oct. 17 and Nov. 15, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Nicholson, 48, Lime-street, City.
 JUDD, FRANK, 11, Charing cross, Middlesex, Tobacconist. Pet. Oct. 1. Com. Fane: Oct. 24 and Nov. 22 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. M. Abraham, 17, Gresham-street.
 MENGER, WILLIAM, Rossett, Denbighshire, Brewer and Malster. Pet. Oct. 10. Com. Perry: Oct. 23 and Nov. 11 at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Bird. Sols. Evans, Son, & Sandys, Liverpool, or John Jones, Wrexham.
 RACCH, GUSTAVUS FREDERICK, Huggin-lane, Wood-street, London, Warehouseman. Pet. Sept. 26. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 23 at 12.30, and Nov. 22 at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. M. Abraham, 17, Gresham-square, London.
 WADE, ROBERT, 11, Devonshire-terrace, Notting-hill, Middlesex, Grocer and Tea Dealer. Pet. Oct. 7. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 23 at 12, and Nov. 22 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Mathews, Carter, & Bell, 102, Leadenhall-street, London.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

TUESDAY, Oct. 8, 1861.

RONALD, WILLIAM, Manchester, Warehouseman. Sept. 30.

FRIDAY, Oct. 11, 1861.

CANNON, EDWARD WILLIAM, 3, London-road, Croydon, Surrey, Auctioneer. Oct. 5.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Oct. 8, 1861.

JOSEPH RUSSELL, Larkhall-lane, Clapham, Surrey, Job and Fly Master. Oct. 31 at 11; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS LEWIS INGRAM, formerly of Bathurst, River Gambia, Western Africa, afterwards of 6, Moreton-place, Pimlico, and subsequently of 54, Lupus-street, Pimlico, Middlesex, Merchant. Nov. 7 at 1; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS DEAN, formerly of Staples-inn, Holborn, Middlesex, afterwards of St. Swithin's-lane, London, and now of Barnes, Surrey, and 7, King's Bench walk, Temple, London, Scrivener. Oct. 30 at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—JOSHUA LE MARE & WILLIAM CLOSE CURRIE, 9, Broad-street-buildings, London, Merchants and Commission Agents (J. Le Mare & Co.). Oct. 30 at 12; Basinghall-street. Separate estate of each.—CHARLES JACOB, Ingram-court, Fenchurch-street, London, Merchant. Oct. 30 at 12.30; Basinghall-street.

FRIDAY, Oct. 11, 1861.

HENRY HUBBARTON, 48, Friday-street, and also of 14, Watling-street, London, Merchant. Nov. 1 at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—RICHARD JURY BAYFIELD & JOSEPH VERNON NEEDHAM, Birmingham, Gun Manufacturers. Nov. 4 at 11; Birmingham.

BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT, LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited).

17, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.
 Capital, £300,000, in 30,000 shares of £10 each. £3 per share paid.

CHAIRMAN.

METCALF HOPGOOD, Esq., Bishopsgate-street.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. PATTESON & COBOLD, 3, Bedford-row.

MANAGER.

CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Esq., 17, New Bridge-street.

INVESTMENTS.—The present rate of interest on money deposited with the Company for fixed periods, or subject to an agreed notice of withdrawal, is 5 per cent.

LOANS.—Advances are made, in sums from £50 to £1,000, upon approved personal and other security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over any period not exceeding 10 years.

Applications for the new issue of Shares may be made to the Secretary, of whom Prospectuses, the last Annual Report, and every information can be obtained. JOSEPH K. JACKSON, Secretary.

To Landowners, the Clergy, Solicitors, Estate Agents, Surveyors, &c.

THE LANDS IMPROVEMENT COMPANY is incorporated by special Act of Parliament for England, Wales, and Scotland. Under the Company's Acts, tenants for life, trustees, mortgagees in possession, incumbents of livings, bodies corporate, certain leasees and other landowners, are empowered to charge the inheritance with the cost of improvements, whether the money be borrowed from the Company or advanced by the landowner out of his own funds.

The Company advance money, unlimited in amount, for works of improvement, the loans and incidental expenses being liquidated by a rent-charge for a specified term of years.

No investigation of title is required, and the Company, being of a strictly commercial character, do not interfere with the plans and execution of the works, which are controlled only by the Enclosure Commissioners.

The improvements authorised comprise drainage, irrigation, warping, embanking, enclosing, clearing, reclaiming, planting, erecting, and improving farm-houses, and buildings for farm purposes, farm roads, jetties, steam-engines, water-wheels, tanks, pipes, &c.

Owners in fee may effect improvements on their estates without incurring the expense and personal responsibilities incident to mortgages, and with out regard to the amount of existing incumbrances. Proprietors may apply jointly for the execution of improvements mutually beneficial, such as a common outfall, roads through the district, water-power, &c.

For further information, and for forms of application, apply to the Hon. WILLIAM NAPIER, Managing Director, 2, Old Palace-yard, Westminster.

EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST

SOCIETY, 10, Lancaster-place, Strand.—Persons desirous of disposing of Reversionary Property, Life Interests, and Life Policies of Assurance, may do so at this Office to any extent, and for the full value, without the delay, expense, and uncertainty of an Auction.

Forms of Proposal may be obtained at the Office, and of Mr. Hardy, the Actuary of the Society, London Assurance Corporation, 7, Royal Exchange.

JOHN CLAYTON, } Joint Secretaries.
 F. S. CLAYTON, }

AN INDISPUTABLE LIFE POLICY IS ALTOGETHER DIFFERENT FROM AN ORDINARY LIFE POLICY.

It is different in meaning, construction, and effect, being really a LIFE-DEBENTURE, as shown by the Opinions of the Attorney-General, and the Lord Advocate of Scotland, copies of which, and Prospectuses, forwarded to applicants.

INDISPUTABLE LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF SCOTLAND.

EDINBURGH—13, QUEEN STREET.

ALEX. ROBERTSON, Esq., Manager.

LONDON—54, CHANCERY LANE.

JAS. BENNETT, F.S.S., Resident Secretary.

AGENTS WANTED in Places where the Company is not already represented.

Will be ready on the 14th instant.

THE NEWSPAPER PRESS,

(Extracts from.)

AND OPINIONS OF ENGLISH, SCOTTISH, AND IRISH COUNSEL, on the expediency of making Life Insurance Policies Indisputable Documents, when required in connection with Money Transactions, or as Family Provisions; being Appendix to Third Edition of Letter, "The Manager of the Indisputable Life Assurance Company of Scotland, to the Manager of the Standard Life Assurance Company."

Letter and Appendix forwarded on receipt of six postage stamps.

Edinburgh: T. & T. CLARK, George-street.

LIFE POLICIES as SECURITIES.—The policies

granted by the LIFE ASSOCIATION OF SCOTLAND (founded 1838), under their new scheme (Class B.) of unconditional assurance on life, are wholly free from the restrictions attaching to policies on the ordinary system of other offices, and are specially adapted for securities in connexion with debts, family provisions, leases on lives, and the purchase of reversions. No restriction is imposed as to occupation or residence, and no extra premium can ever be payable.

A medical officer in attendance daily, at half-past 12 o'clock.

ON 5TH DECEMBER

The Scheme will be closed for the current year. Entrants to the Profit Class will be entitled to a FULL YEAR'S BONUS more than later Entrants.

THOS. FRASER, Resident Secretary.

No. 20, King William-street, E.C.

LONDON INVESTMENT COMPANY.—Forty

£10 Shares for Sale, £2 paid. May be had a bargain. Interest at the rate of 10 per cent. received the last three years.

Apply by letter, N. & B., 39, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn.

AGENTS' REGISTER: Being a complete Alphabetical Index of the Principal Towns of the United Kingdom, with space for inserting the Names of Agents, &c., for the use of Insurance and other offices. Large Post Folio, price £2 2s.

London: YATES & ALEXANDER, Horsehoe-court, 32A, Ludgate-hill.

LAW FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY,

Chancery-lane, London.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL, £5,000,000.

TRUSTEES.

The Right Hon. LORD CHELMSFORD.
 The Right Hon. LORD TRURO.
 The Right Hon. the LORD CHIEF BARON.
 The Right Hon. the LORD JUSTICE Sir J. L. KNIGHT BRUCE.
 The Right Hon. the LORD JUSTICE Sir G. J. TURNER.
 The Right Hon. JOHN ROBERT MOWBRAY, M.P.
 WILLIAM BROUGHAM, Esq.

Insurances expiring at Michaelmas should be renewed within 15 days thereafter, at the Offices of the Society, or with any of its agents throughout the country.

This Society holds itself responsible, under its fire policy, for any damage done by explosion of gas.

E. BLAKE BEAL, Secretary.

IN CHANCERY.—Burt and Others v. Burnham and Others.—LEASEHOLD ESTATES of the late John Burnham, Esq.—Messrs. DENT and SON are instructed to offer by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, Bartholomew-lane, on WEDNESDAY, the 6th day of NOVEMBER, 1861, with the approbation of his honour Vice-Chancellor Sir John Stuart, the following LEASEHOLD HOUSES and ESTATES, in Lots, viz.:—

No. 15, Spann's-buildings, St. Pancras, let at £30 16s. per annum (less taxes). Held for 29 years, at £3 2s. per annum ground rent.

Nos. 16, 20, 25, 28, and 30, Church-row, St. Pancras, let at rents amounting to £137 14s. per annum. Term 30 years, at £3 3s. per house.

No. 12, Aldenham-terrace, St. Pancras, let at £35 per annum, held for 30 years, under the Brewers' Company, at £3 3s. per annum.

No. 17, High-street, Camden-town, let at £50 per annum, held for unexpired term of 28 years, under the Camden Estate, at a ground rent of £4 4s. per annum.

No. 5, Upper Grenville-street, Somers Town, let at £22 per annum, held for an unexpired term of 30 years, at a peppercorn.

An Improved Leasehold Ground Rent of £17 17s., secured upon Nos. 6, 7, and 9, Upper Grenville-street, held for an unexpired term of 29 years or thereabouts, at a peppercorn.

No. 8, Upper Grenville-street, let at £17 per annum, held for 29 years at a peppercorn.

No. 10, Upper Grenville-street, let at £13 per annum, held for 29 years at a peppercorn.

Five Messuages, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, Watford-street, St. Pancras, let at rents amounting to £113 per annum, held for 33 years, at £5 9s. 6d. each house.

No. 31, Perry-street, let at £22 per annum, held for 30 years, at £1 per annum.

An Improved Leasehold Ground Rent, on 20 and 21, Perry-street, of £32 10s. per annum, held for 29½ years at £5 per annum.

No. 35, Brewer-street, let on lease at £15, held for 30 years at £5 ground rent.

No. 36, Brewer-street, let at £26, held for 30 years at £5 ground rent.

No. 50, Brewer-street, let at £24, held for 30 years at £4 10s. ground rent.

Full particulars and conditions of sale to be had on the several premises, at the place of sale, at the Estate Exchange, of Messrs. FYSON, TATHAMS, CURLING, & WALLS, of No. 3, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, and of Messrs. DENT & SON, 34, Great James-street, Bedford-row.

ALFRED HALL, Chief Clerk.

IN CHANCERY.—Burt and Others v. Burnham and Others.—FREEHOLD ESTATES of the late John Burnham, Esq.—Messrs. DENT & SON are instructed to submit by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, Bartholomew-lane, on WEDNESDAY, the 6th day of NOVEMBER, 1861, at TWELVE o'clock, with the approbation of his honour the Vice-Chancellor Sir John Stuart, the following FREEHOLD HOUSES:—

A Capital Brick-built Messuage and Premises, No. 58, Red Lion-street, Clerkenwell, in substantial repair, let on lease for 21 years from Michaelmas, 1856 (determinable by either party), at the annual rent of £34 14s.

Also a Messuage and Butcher's Shop, with Slaughterhouse, No. 6, Drury-lane, in substantial repair, let on lease for 21 years from Christmas, 1856, at the rent of £50.

Also No. 31, Brydges-street, Covent-garden, on lease for 21 years from Midsummer, 1851, at the rent of £47 per annum.

Further particulars and conditions of sale to be had on the several premises, at the place of sale, at the Estate Exchange, of Messrs. FYSON, TATHAMS, CURLING, & WALLS, 3, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, and of Messrs. DENT & SON, 34, Great James-street, Bedford-row.

ALFRED HALL, Chief Clerk.

YATES & ALEXANDER,

6, HORSESHOE COURT, LUDGATE HILL, E.C.

Printers of the Solicitors' Journal and Weekly Reporter.

Possessing a large and efficient staff of men thoroughly accustomed to all kinds of LAW PRINTING, are enabled to offer to the Profession the advantages of the greatest accuracy and despatch in the printing of Bills, Answers, Claims, &c.

OFFICES—6, HORSESHOE COURT, LUDGATE HILL.

(Entrance between No. 32, the State Fire Office, and No. 33, Benson's, Silversmith.)

TYLER AND COMPANY,

(Late GOODCHAP, TYLER, & Co.)

ACCOUNTANTS AND AUDITORS,

19, GRESHAM STREET, E.C., LONDON.

Established upwards of Twenty Years. Rates of charge moderate.

LAW STATIONER'S OFFICE, in CAREY-STREET, Lincoln's Inn-fields.

Excellent position and low rent.

Apply at No. 15.

TO SOLICITORS AND OTHERS.—LOCAL

MANAGERS WANTED for the Professional and General Trade Protection Offices. Commercial information afforded and debts recovered upon advantageous terms. District Managers are also wanted for the new Loan Company now forming in connection with the Society.

Apply to SECRETARY, Chandos Chambers, Buckingham-street, Strand, W.C.

Now ready, in one volume, crown 8vo, price 3s. in cloth.

A TREATISE ON THE ENGLISH LAW OF DOMICIL. Dedicated, by permission, to Vice-Chancellor Sir RICHARD TORIN KINDERSLEY. By OLIVER STEPHEN ROUND, Esq. of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law.

London: WILLIAM DRAPER, 59, Carey-street, Lincoln's Inn, and of all Booksellers.

Now ready,

BEETON'S ILLUMINATED FAMILY BIBLE.

Part 1., 2s., with Illustrations by Bendemann, Overbeck, Rethel, Schnow, &c. The Ornamentation by Noel Humphreys. A Specimen Part sent Post Free for 24 Stamps.

London: S. O. BEETON, 248, Strand, W.C.; and all Booksellers.

THE QUEEN, a new Journal and Review. 6d. Weekly. Prospectuses now ready. London, 248, Strand, W.C.KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER

AND CORK FLOORCLOTH. Warm, noiseless, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

F. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Walbrook, London, E.C.

Manufactory—South London Works, Lambeth.

TRELOAR'S CORK FLOOR CLOTH, or KAMP-

TULICON, COCOA NUT MATTING, and DOOR MATS. Best quality and moderate prices.

T. TRELOAR, Manufacturer, 42, Ludgate-hill, London.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S TWO GUINEA BIN-

OCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS sent carriage free, on receipt of post-office order, to any part of the United Kingdom. The extraordinary power of this instrument renders it adapted to answer the combined purposes of telescope and opera glass. It will define objects distinctly at ten miles distance; is suitable for the theatre, race-course, sportsmen, tourists, and general out-door observations. Only to be obtained of KEYZOR and BENDON (successors to Harris and Son), Opticians, 50, High Holborn, London, W.C.

Illustrated Price List of Optical and Mathematical Instruments free, on receipt of two stamps.

PICTURE FRAMES.—Cheap and Good Gilt Frames

for Oil Paintings, 24 by 24, 4 inches wide, 20s. Ornamental Frames for Drawings, 14 by 10, 4 s. each. The Art Union Prints, framed in a superior style, at the lowest prices. Neat gilt frames, for the Illustrated Portraits, 1s. 6d. each. Gilt Room Bordering at 4s. per yard. (Oil paintings cleaned, lined, and restored; old frames re-gilt equal to new. The trade and country dealers supplied with gilt and fancy wood mouldings, print, &c. German Prints 5s. per dozen. Neat Gilt Frames, 17 by 13, with glass complete, 1s. 6d. each. CHARLES REES, Carver, Gilder, Mount Maker, and Print Seller, 36, Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

MODELS of SHIPS or BOATS made to Scale or

Order. Blocks, deadeyes, anchors, cannon, flags, figure-heads, &c. and every article used in fitting up models of ships, cutter and schooner yachts, screw and paddle boats. Models cleaned and repaired. Models of any description made for evidence in actions at law. Ensigns, bargees, and signal flags made to order.

W. STEPHENS, the Model Dockyard, No. 23, Trinity-square, Tower-hill, near Barking Churchyard, E.C.

ALBION SNELL, Watchmaker and Jeweller, has removed to his New Premises, 114, High Holborn, seven doors east of King-street, where he respectfully solicits an inspection of his new and well-selected stock.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street,

has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from 10 till 5.

MR. HAYES, SURGEON DENTIST, 42, St.

Martin's-lane, supplies the best teeth on the best principles, by self-adhesion, and may be consulted on all dental cases, at moderate charges —42, St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

 Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.*

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, OCTOBER 19, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

The new law of bankruptcy is now in full operation, and already several obvious points have arisen, chiefly relating to the transition state of the law, which do not reflect much credit on the machinery of legislation. Some of these points of especial importance seem worthy of notice.

The first question under the new Act involved the important point whether the Legislature had not inadvertently abolished the classification of the certificates which remain still to be granted under the old law, and left the certificates to be granted without any accompanying classification. Certificates were abolished in future by the simple and approved process of repealing the enactments under which they were granted, subject to the general reservation as to proceedings pending. The new system of orders of discharge were introduced by entirely new enactments. It would seem, therefore, to have been superfluous to make any further mention of certificates or their classification. But the section 157, one of the sections relating to the discharge of the bankrupt, contains the enactment that "From and after the commencement of this Act all classification of certificates shall be abolished;" and then proceeds to prescribe the modifications of form in the order of discharge analogous to the classification of certificates where the order of discharge is made subject to suspension or imprisonment. How is this unqualified abolition of the classification of certificates to be reconciled with the general reservation of the old law as applicable to pending proceedings, including, as it does, certificates, together with their classification. Is the enactment wholly inoperative and superfluous, or does it abolish the classification and leave only the certificate? This is the question which has embarrassed the commissioners. The real state of the case is plain. The whole of section 157 applies to the new order of discharge, and the abolition of classification appears to have been inserted as a mere introductory flourish, without any thought or regard for its possible consequences.

Another question of very extensive import has been left in doubt by the terms of the new Act. The 150th section enables persons entitled to rents and other payments falling due at fixed periods, to prove for an apportionment up to the day of adjudication; and the question has been raised, in the case of a claim by a landlord for rent, whether this section applies to the bankruptcies pending under the old law. The Commissioner thought it applicable, and admitted the proof; but this decision does not appear to be quite unexceptionable. The repeal of the old law, whether express or by matter inconsistent, it is provided shall not affect pending rights and proceedings. The new law on this point, it is true, is an extension rather than a repeal of the old law in respect of the admission of debts to proof, but does it not virtually repeal, and is it not inconsistent with, the old law which prohibited such proof. The language of the section, moreover, seems to be prospective; but in this, of course, lies the whole question, which, to say the least, has been left in some doubt by the framers of it. The same question, it appears, will arise with respect to all the new descriptions of debts admitted to proof by the new Act; and the judgment of the Commissioner apparently decides that they are all admissible under pending bankruptcies.

In the Insolvent Debtors Court an extraordinary number of petitions for protection were filed during the last days of its existence, with a view to secure the prosecution of them under the old law. The powers of the Court were in abeyance for some days for want of an order of the Lord Chancellor, required by sect. 23 of the new Act, to give authority to the Court to continue the pending business.

The able and interesting address of the Chairman of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, published in our last week's impression, brought again to notice the grievance under which the profession throughout the country is at present suffering in consequence of the new regulations in the district registries of the Probate Court; enabling all persons applying in person to get their probate and administration business done for them by the officers of the Court at a reduced rate.

The Chairman recapitulated the exertions made on the part of the profession to obtain redress; and the various memorials presented to the authorities, all which have been recorded from time to time in this journal. He also gave an interesting account of the reception of the deputations from the profession by Sir Cresswell Cresswell, who supported the new regulations on the ground of the public benefit intended by them, and further intimated the speedy adoption of a similar arrangement in London. The Lord Chancellor and the Chief Justice appear to share the responsibility of the authorship of these regulations, while the Treasury have a voice in the matter of salaries and fees. Memorials have accordingly been presented to all these authorities, and the whole matter now remains under consideration.

All proper steps seem to have been taken by the profession in order to secure a fair attention to this question, and it is unnecessary to repeat the abundant arguments which have been brought to bear upon it. Our special object in returning to it, before it is too late, is to expose the fallacy that these regulations are conceived with a just appreciation of the real interests of the public. The scheme, indeed, bears a specious semblance of benefitting the public, which was probably deemed sufficient to satisfy the purpose it was designed to fulfil, and is certainly calculated to blind the eyes of the public to their own true interests. But we maintain that an enlightened regard for the true interests of the public in this matter is perfectly consistent and even coincident with a due and just regard to the claims preferred by the body of solicitors.

It may be remembered that in establishing the new Probate Court a strong feeling was expressed that the procedure should be so simplified as to bring it, if possible, within the capacity of the public without the intervention of professional assistance; and it was understood that the power of making rules and orders was to be exercised to the intent and purpose that the procedure and practice should be reduced to the most simple and expeditious character. The province of the practitioners, both old and new, and their relations to the Court and the public were at the same time settled, after great deliberation, by Parliament itself. The present scheme, however, goes much further than the mere regulation of procedure, and trenches widely on the province of the practitioners. It does not operate by simplifying the procedure to the level of the public; but it simply relieves the public altogether of their part of the business by doing it for them. Now, we would be the last to deny the liberty to every man of doing his own business for himself, if he wishes and thinks himself competent to do so. We admit that any restriction, other than such as arises from the inherent difficulties of the work, requiring skilled and professional assistance, would be an unnecessary obstruction, and would tend to a system of protection of the interests favoured by it. We further willingly agree that all law business should be simplified as much as the process will admit, with a view of rendering it as plain and easy as possible to the public. Then let every person do his business for himself, or employ a solicitor, as he thinks fit. We do not dispute the principle in question, or deny the liberty of every man to do everything for himself if he is foolish enough to decline the assistance of those who can do it better. A man may make his own clothes if he is not particular about expense and appearance; or he may perform his journey on foot instead of travelling by train, if he is not particular about time. The fallacy consists in the pretence held forth to the public, that the present mode of doing business in the registries is a simplification of the business, or a performance of their own business by themselves.

It is no such thing; the same business is done for them just as completely and in the very same way that it would be done for them by a solicitor. The only difference is that the fees charged in the registries are only half in amount of those which are allowed as the fair and reasonable remuneration of a solicitor for doing the same business—that is to say, only half the real value of the services rendered. How, then, is the other half paid; for it is absurd to suppose that it is not paid for somehow. It necessarily follows that it is paid by the public in the shape of increased charges or diminished returns from the Court. It becomes a general charge on the public at large, to the relief of those individuals who require the services of the Court. Now, whatever ground there may be for the position that law costs should be a charge on the country in the case of courts of justice, properly so called, established for the settlement of the law and the peace of society, and which are for the benefit of all, there is not the least ground for such a contention in the case of a so-called Court, which is merely an administrative machine for the distribution of property. In common justice it should be remembered that the public revenue is drawn from all classes of the community for purposes common to all, while the gratuitous services thus rendered by the registry office, at the public expense, is for the exclusive benefit of those who have private property to administer. The arrangement, therefore, is unjust to the public, and violates the first principles of social jurisprudence. Like every violation of principle, it is unjust and unequal in all its practical bearings; and not the least flagrant manifestation of its injustice appears in its bearing upon the profession of solicitors, whose appropriate office it is to perform these services for the public. The gratuitous performance of them by the registry office virtually annihilates this branch of the business of the profession. It became, therefore, the especial duty of the profession to seek redress for this grievance, though the grievance is also a public one; and in fulfilment of this duty we offer the above observations to those who, we feel sure, will be influenced by public and political views of the matter while it is still under consideration.

The Lord Chancellor has caused the following answer to be returned to a memorial presented to him by the Liverpool Law Society, on the subject of the qualifications of persons to be appointed to the new offices created under the New Bankruptcy Act:—

House of Lords. Oct. 7, 1861.

Sir,—I am desired by the Lord Chancellor to acknowledge the receipt of the memorial from the Liverpool Law Society on the subject of new offices to be created under the Bankruptcy Act of 1861; and in reply to inform you that it is not the intention of his Lordship to make any new appointments under the said Act until it shall become manifest that the present staff of the officers of the Bankruptcy Court is insufficient to perform adequately the duties imposed on them by the new Act.—I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant,

To the President of RICHARD BETHELL, Prin. Sec.
The Liverpool Law Society.

THE LIABILITIES OF RAILWAY COMPANIES AS CARRIERS—LORD CAMPBELL'S ACT.

Before resuming the consideration of this statute we may recall to mind that in our previous notice of it, as forming an important item amongst the liabilities of railway companies as carriers, we pointed out the uncertainty of its relative bearing upon the rest of the law with regard to the title and foundation of the action defined by it—that is to say, whether the action under the statute is given by vesting the right of action of the deceased in his representatives, or whether it is the creation of an entirely new cause of action. We now proceed to consider the positive provisions of the statute.

The defective procedure of the common law which restricted the right of action for wrongs to the lifetime of the party injured, and gave no remedy after his death, as expressed in the maxim, actio personalis moritur cum persona, was open in most cases to the easy and obvious amendment of transferring the right of action to the representatives of the deceased for the benefit of his estate. This amendment was effected for injuries to personal property as early as the 4 Ed. 3; and, after a long interval, a similar amendment was supplied for injuries to real property by the Common Law Amendment Act, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. There is one case, however, in which, no doubt, some difficulty opposes the application of such an amendment—that is, where the death which extinguishes the right of action is the very damage complained of, for then the awkward question arises, how is a life to be dealt with as a measure of damage? and upon what principle is it to be estimated? Is the value of the life to the man himself, or to his estate, or to his relatives, to be accepted as the mode of valuation? The value to the man himself is, of course, out of the question; but there is no impossibility in forming an estimate of the value either to the estate or to the relatives. Now this is the very case which the statute operates upon and undertakes to provide for—namely, the recovery in an action of the damages caused by the death; and without adopting either of these principles of valuing, it combines all the difficulties which are comprised in both of them. The jury is called upon to assess, not the value of the life, but the pecuniary expectations of certain relatives from the life, an enquiry which necessarily involves an estimate not only of what the life was likely to produce, but also of the chances of participating in its produce. It has been held that funeral expenses cannot be claimed under the statute, so that these expenses may fall upon one person while another carries off the whole of the compensation. Nor can any damages be given as solutum for wounded feelings; but the damages are restricted to expectations of a pecuniary nature. These expectations, however, not being measured by any legal rights or subject to any legal rules of limitation, seem to admit of any degree of uncertainty or extravagance according to the fancy of juries—for example, a jury was allowed to give a father a large sum for the pecuniary expectations he entertained from his son's liberality, who was in the habit of giving his father occasional presents of tea and sugar, and other domestic luxuries. In another case a sum of £13,000 was exacted from a railway company in one verdict, chiefly in compensation for the expectations of children from realised property over which the deceased parent had a power of appointment, which he had not thought fit to exercise in their favour.

The Act further restricts the claim to the husband, wife, parent (including in this term grandfather and stepfather), and child (including in this term grandchild and stepchild) of the deceased; and the extraordinary result follows, that where there are no such relatives, and even where there are, but they cannot show any expectations of pecuniary advantage, no action lies, and the company escapes with impunity. A remarkable instance of this occurred recently upon the death of Dr. Baly, the Queen's physician, by a railway accident, leaving no relatives entitled to claim. The life of an eminent physician would seem to be peculiarly assessable; an established professional position, a reputation fixed on the basis of professional skill and science, a certain professional income, give more certain data for calculation of the pecuniary loss than can generally be obtained. Yet if there be no relative within the statutory description with pecuniary expectations, however many other dependent relations there may be reduced to penury by the loss, no liability is incurred for the death, though occasioned by the grossest negligence.

We cannot discover any principle upon which the existence of a dependent family can properly be made the test of the liability of a railway company or other party guilty of negligence; but granting this for the moment, what possible ground can there be for drawing such an arbitrary line amongst the relations. If dependence alone was the test, or if relationship alone was the test, the motive of the statute would, at least, be intelligible; but what can have been the motive of restricting the claim to such peculiar classes only amongst the dependent relations. Has not a dependent sister as strong a claim for compensation as a grandfather or a stepfather; and what can make it right and expedient, as the statute says, to give it to the latter and to refuse it to the former?

But we have hitherto failed in discovering any legitimate principle on which to ground any claim by relatives at all, except indirectly through the estate of the deceased, and according to the proportions in which he has thought fit to provide for them either by will or distribution. No relation has any legal right to share in the property of a living person, which can properly be treated as infringed by his death. The support even of a child by a parent, or of a parent by a child, is a duty of moral or imperfect obligation only, and is not invested with the sanction of the civil law, nor has it ever been recognised before this Act, except to the limited extent required by the poor law on grounds of public policy. A man may, indeed, recover damages for an injury to his wife, son, or daughter, but this is admitted on the principle of his having a vested right to their services; and, upon the same principle, he may recover damages for an injury to a mere servant who is under contract to serve him.

Again, have creditors no expectations from the lives of their debtors, nor any dependence upon their exertions? Why should their claims be here set aside in favour of those of relatives, when, on every other occasion, where they conflict, the claims of creditors are preferred. Surely railway companies ought to be made to pay the debts of the passengers whom they have killed, before they are called upon to make a provision for their grandfathers and grandmothers.

The chief occasion of the Act was the protection of the public from the dangers of railway travelling, and therefore it is chiefly with reference to railway companies that its effects are to be considered. It seems probable, after all, although the interests of the public were most consulted in the matter, that the inequalities of the law just referred to fall more on the public than the companies. The pecuniary dependence of certain near relations as an essential ingredient of the right of action leaves it quite uncertain beforehand which among the passengers are insured and which are not; therefore no distinction can be made in the fares, or in the care with which the passengers are treated. A claim on behalf of railway companies to be informed of the exact particulars of the risk which they incur for the purpose of adjusting their precautionary arrangements accordingly would certainly not meet with much attention, for the public are entitled to all reasonable safeguards from danger under all circumstances. But on behalf of the public the distinction of risk amongst the passengers seems not unimportant. The ordinary liabilities of the company, including compensations, have a direct influence on the fares, which the companies of course rate at a scale proportionate to their total expenses. The fares may thus be considered as partly consisting of the premiums for insurance which are assessed equally upon all, while the insurance is restricted to those who come within the description in the statute. As all the passengers contribute in equal proportion to the payment of the premium, it would seem fair that all should participate equally in the benefit of the insurance. It is true, they benefit equally in respect of the precautions against danger taken by the company, but a startling inequality of benefit appears in respect of the contingent provision for their families in the event of an accident. The individual who has no relations within the favoured degrees derives no benefit whatever, either to his family or estate.

A sufficient reason for the popularity of this law may, perhaps, be found in the fact that the working of it rests mainly in the hands of the public, through the medium of juries. The funds of a company are placed at the disposal of a jury to distribute very much as they please, and there is no individual pecuniary suffering to raise any misgivings as to the justice of their liberality. An impartial consideration of the matter, however, must compel the admission that there always is and always must be a certain amount of risk incidental to railway travelling, quite independent of negligence, either in the general management and regulations of the traffic or in any particular officer or servant. The public knowingly and deliberately incurs this degree of risk, and might fairly be held to stand by the consequences. Practically, however, the public is invested with the power of throwing it all off on the company.

On the whole it would appear that in settling the liability of railway companies as carriers of passengers, in case of death by accident, two points have to be considered and determined. First, on what occasions should the liability of a company arise? and, secondly, when their liability has arisen, for what should they be liable?—in other words, the cause of action, and the amount of damage. The cause of action has hitherto been, theoretically, negligence; but practically, it has been carried to the full extent of a contract of insurance. This practice being inevitable, consistency seems to require that the principle should be made to conform with the practice. The principle, moreover, works well with goods traffic: why should it not with passengers?

The advantages of such a change would certainly be not inconsiderable. There would at once be an end of those long and expensive civil trials turning on the causes of accidents, which occur whenever the cause is more than usually mysterious, and more than usually incapable of a satisfactory solution. What are familiarly known as "running down cases" on common roads, are proverbially recognised as nuisances in courts of justice in consequence of the accumulations of conflicting evidence; and the verdict of a jury in such cases is commonly regarded as a mere toss up, notwithstanding that juries are tolerably familiar with the rules of the road. In railway compensation cases juries have to deal with phenomena of which they are totally ignorant, and the evil is further aggravated by the complicated machinery of railway traffic, and the conflicts of scientific evidence. It is notorious that railway companies are always defeated, though the negligence imputed is often of the most artificial, or what lawyers would call constructive, character. The public are satisfied, with the practical conviction, that the companies are responsible, without inquiring particularly into the reason; the general impression being, that they are paid for the safety of their passengers, and in return undertake the responsibility. We may agree with the public that, on the whole, the companies may be justly held responsible, but would desire to see their responsibility placed on just and reasonable grounds.

The other point for consideration is the measure of damages. The loss of the passenger's life being the damage in fact, the value of the life, in some sense or other, must be the measure of damage. Under the present law, as we have seen, the pecuniary loss incurred by surviving relations is the measure of damage—a measure which involves, first, an assessment of the value of the life; secondly, an assessment of the expectations of the relations; so that whatever difficulty there might be supposed in assessing the value of a life has been already attempted, and has not proved insuperable. If, then, the value of the life were adopted as the sole measure of damage, and were given in all cases, whether the action be grounded on the principle of negligence or insurance, the matter would thereby, at least, be simplified by cutting off the second branch of the inquiry as to the expectations of relatives. The money value of a life, considered apart from any special expectations of advantage from it, is in reality a much simpler subject of valuation than many which juries are at present called upon to assess. Bodily pain and wounded feelings, for instance, seem to constitute a subject much less capable of a pecuniary estimate; yet their valuation by a jury is matter of every-day occurrence. In the case of a passenger losing a hand, the damage to him is compounded of two elements, both of which are the subject of compensation in law—the bodily pain suffered, and the loss of property; and the jury are called upon to grant a solatium for the one and to assess the other. If the passenger is killed, the first element is removed, and there only remains to assess the loss to his estate; and the value of a man's life to his estate is certainly quite as easily assessed as the value of his hand.

We may sum up our observations in the following results—that as railway companies are held, in fact, responsible in nearly all cases of accident, it would be more just and convenient to recognise fully this liability in law than to allow it to be imposed, as at present, at the arbitrary will of juries; that the liability should attach equally in respect of all persons injured, and not only upon the contingency of their having dependent relations; that upon whatever scale the amount of liability should be assessed, whether in proportion to the fare paid, or the loss to the estate, or on any other scale, it should depend only on considerations personal to deceased, and not at all on the dependence or expectations of relations; that the action should vest in the representatives for the benefit of the estate of which the compensation should form a part; that none of the relations should be disqualified from benefiting, but that the compensation, as part of the estate of the deceased, should be distributed under his will or according to the rules upon intestacy; that, in short, the railway companies should be made insurers of the lives of their passengers, either in respect of the money value of their lives to their estates, or in proportion to their fares, or upon some other scale, and subject to such limitations as to amount as might readily be devised and equitably adjusted, upon principles similar to those by which they have always been held insurers of the goods entrusted to them to carry. We think that the legal relations of railway companies as carriers of passengers might thus be settled on terms more certain and equal in their operation, and on a footing more satisfactory, both to the companies and to the public; that the principles of the law might thus be brought more in harmony with the practice, and material relief afforded in its administration, with little substantial variation in its actual results.

The chaplaincy to the Hon. Society of Gray's Inn has become vacant by the death of the Rev. William Henry Hart, who was only appointed last year in the room of the Rev. W. G. Watson, who was killed in the Pyrenees. The appointment is in the gift of the Society.

The Courts, Appointments, Promotions, Vacancies, &c.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN.)

Oct. 12.—Application for discharge.—In the case of a petitioning trader who had this morning been adjudicated bankrupt, under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, Mr. Doria now applied for the discharge from custody.

The COMMISSIONER asked if the bankrupt had been brought up.

Mr. Doria replied in the negative. He referred to the 17th of the new Rules.

The COMMISSIONER said he had only just seen the Rules. It was very unusual to discharge a bankrupt immediately after adjudication.

Application adjourned.

The Bankruptcy Act.—At 2 o'clock there were eleven petitions presented under the Act of 1861, nearly the whole of which were the parties' own petitions. Adjudication was made in almost every case. The average number under the old law was less than three.

Oct. 14.—The Jurisdiction of the Insolvent Debtors' Court.—Mr. Sargood wished to ask whether the provisions of the Insolvent Act were still in force. It appeared to him that the old jurisdiction was at present vested in this Court.

The COMMISSIONER.—Do you mean in insolvency business? The Commissioner to wind up pending matters?

Mr. Sargood.—That is not so at present; the jurisdiction is at present in this Court. The first section appears to give us no alternative.

The COMMISSIONER.—By the 19th section the Commissioners of the Insolvent Debtors' Court are released from their duties, subject to the obligation of performing such duties and services as are thereafter provided; and by the 23rd section the Lord Chancellor may direct such unfinished matters to be proceeded with and completed by the Commissioner of such court.

Mr. Sargood.—Which direction has not been given. I should suggest that the jurisdiction of the Insolvent Court is vested in the Court of Bankruptcy.

The COMMISSIONER.—Well, it is very likely the Lord Chancellor has by this time authorised the Commissioners to proceed. I have no doubt the delay is accidental.

Mr. Sargood.—Under all the circumstances, I do not think it necessary to press the application which I have to make, which is to estreat recognizances and to grant a warrant to arrest an absconding insolvent.

Oct. 17.—The number of adjudications to-day was nine; being about seven in excess of the average number under the old law. It must not be inferred from this that the number of mercantile failures in the country has correspondingly increased. Many of the cases would have gone before the Insolvent Court, and are of the most petty character. One is noticed to be that of a dry fishmonger, who sets forth that his furniture, stock, and all other assets are of the value of £7 only; that books and papers he has none, and that his landlord is in possession of the £7 worth of furniture, &c., for arrears of rent.

COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL.

Oct. 17.—At a court holden this day, a letter, addressed to the Lord Mayor by Mr. Malcolm Kerr, the Judge of the Sheriff's Court, was read, requesting his Lordship to apply to the Council for their approval to his appointing a deputy-judge of the Court. He adverted to the fact that previous applications to the same effect had been made through the Lord Mayor, and that the statute constituting the Court contemplated the release of the Judge from duty for two calendar months annually. He had delayed making the application in order that he might be able to give his attendance on the committee now engaged on the inquiry relating to the duties of the officers of the Court.

The application was unanimously granted.

On the 11th instant Parliament was further prorogued to the 17th December.

Recent Decisions.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

SUCCESSION DUTIES ACT—16 & 17 VICT. c. 51.

Lord Braybrooke v. The Attorney-General, 9 W. R. 601.

A second point decided in the above case was as to the right of a successor, in estimating the amount of duty to which he is liable, to deduct from the value of the property to which he has succeeded, the amount of an annuity which has ceased, or of which he has ceased to enjoy the benefit, upon his succession.

The question turns solely on the application of the 38th section of the Act, which enacts that, "where any successor upon taking a succession shall be bound to relinquish or be deprived of any other property, the Commissioners shall, upon the computation of the assessable value of his succession, make such allowance to him as may be just in respect of the value of such property."

The earliest reported decision on this section is Re Micklethwait (1855), 11 Ex. 452. In this case one C. M. covenanted by deed to pay to a trustee an annual sum of £500 during the joint lives of the petitioner and E. M. his wife, and the life of the survivor; and there was a covenant on the part of the trustee to pay the same to the petitioner during his life, and after his death to E. M. for life; and if the petitioner should, by reason of the death of S. M., without issue, come into the possession of certain estates therein mentioned, then the said covenant on the part of C. M. should absolutely cease and determine. S. M. died on the 3rd of September, 1853, without issue. The petitioner came into possession of the estates, and thereupon the annuity ceased. He accordingly claimed from the Commissioners to have an allowance made to him under the above section, in respect of the annuity. His claim was resisted on the part of the Crown, but the Court of Exchequer held, without much difficulty, that he was entitled to make the deduction. They considered that the annuity was property either which he was "bound to relinquish," or of which he was "deprived."

Some doubt, however, was thrown upon this decision by the Chief Baron and Baron Bramwell, in the case of The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp (1858), 3 H. & N. 424. There, a tenant for life and his son, the remainderman in tail, executed a disentailing deed, and by a deed of appointment, executed the next day, the estates were granted to trustees in trust, subject to the payment of £1,000 per annum to the son during the joint lives of himself and his father, for the son for life, remainder to his sons in succession in tail. On the death of the father the son's annuity ceased, and the Court refused to allow him any deduction in respect of it. The Chief Baron drew this distinction between the case and that of Re Micklethwait. In this case, he said, the value of the annuity of £1,000, calculated with reference to the expectancy, could have been ascertained; and if the son had actually received less than the estimated amount, he might have been allowed an abatement in respect of the difference; if he had received more he might have been charged, but the Act was not in force during the whole time. In this case it so happened, owing to the death of the father taking place when it did, that the son would have had no claim to any abatement. This reasoning, however, did not apply to the case of Re Micklethwait, where the ceasing of the annuity depended not upon the dropping of a life, but upon an uncertain condition—namely, that of the annuitant coming into possession of certain estates. His Lordship did not overrule Re Micklethwait, but he declined to accede to the argument that the Court ought to consider itself bound by that decision, and suffer itself, if wrong, to be reversed by the Court of Error. He considered that Lord Wensleydale (then Parke, B.) and Baron Watson decided Micklethwait's Case on the ground that the Crown had not sufficiently made out their claim. Baron Bramwell agreed with the Chief Baron. He was of opinion that the statute does not contemplate the case of an annuity ceasing. He argued that a man cannot relinquish or be deprived of a thing unless it exists; and that the statute was intended to apply only in cases where a man is bound to relinquish, or is deprived of something which still remains for somebody else to enjoy. He put the supposed case of the father and son having exercised their power of appointment in such a way as to give the £1,000 annuity to the longest liver of the two, and subject thereto to the father for life, remainder to the son for life, &c. In such a case it would have been idle to contend that the son would not have had to pay succession duty, both on the £1,000 and on the estate, less the £1,000. Why then should he be allowed an abatement in respect of an annuity which had actually terminated with the father's life, and was no longer a charge in the estate? Baron Watson was of the same opinion, on the grounds—first, that the son neither relinquished nor was deprived of this annuity. It was created for the life of the father only. There was no election here—no case such as the statute contemplated. Such an election, the learned judge considered, might have arisen in Re Micklethwait, which was, on this ground, distinguishable. He also thought that under the 12th section the annuity of £1,000 came under the class of dispositions made by the successor himself, who was, in this instance, the son. It was not charged under the will of the original settlor; therefore he concluded the son was chargeable at the same rate as he would have been if no such disposition had been made.

The decisions were in this state when the hearing of The Attorney-General v. Lord Braybrooke took place in the Exchequer (1860), 5 H. & N. 588, 8 W. R. 471. The circumstances were little else than a repetition of The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp. The father and son having executed a disentailing deed, afterwards appointed the estates to the use that the son should receive an annual rent charge of £1,200 during the joint lives of himself and his father, and subject thereto to the use of the father for life, remainder to the son for life, with remainders over. The Court shortly decided, for the reasons assigned in The Attorney-General v. Sibthorp, that no allowance could be claimed by the son on the annuity ceasing.

The House of Lords, on appeal, reversed this decision, and by their arguments, no less than by their judgment, confirmed the first case of Re Micklethwait, which the two intermediate authorities had somewhat shaken. The Lord Chancellor (Campbell) drew a distinction between the two expressions, "shall be bound to relinquish" and "shall be deprived of." He thought that the former expression could not be applied to property which did not continue to exist; but he could not say that the son in this case was not "deprived of" the annuity by its coming to an end at the moment when he succeeded to the estates. Lord Wensleydale concurred in supporting his own decision in Re Micklethwait; and Lord Kingsdown was of the same opinion. He thought that a person taking a succession under the Act was to pay a duty only upon its value, and that the value was to be computed by taking into account, not only what he gained but what he lost by the succession. Here the son had lost his annuity, in respect of which he (Lord Kingsdown) agreed with the Lord Chancellor in thinking that he was entitled to an allowance. Thus the elaborate reasonings of the Barons of the Exchequer fell to the ground, and the original view adopted in the year 1855 was supported.

The result seems to be, that in cases where an annuity is covenanted to be paid to A. on condition that if he should, by reason of the happening of a stated event, come into the possession of certain estates, the covenant shall cease and determine; or where lands are limited to the use that a son shall during the joint lives of his father and himself receive an annuity, and subject thereto to the use of the father for life, remainder to the son for life: in either case, on the annuitant coming into possession of the estates, or on the death of the father, he shall, in the estimation of the amount of succession duty to which he is liable, be allowed to deduct from the value of the estates the worth of the annuity of which he has "been deprived."

The above review of the decisions preceding and subsequent to Lord Braybrooke v. The Attorney-General would be incomplete, without reference to a judgment of the Court of Exchequer on the 6th of July last, In re Sir H. Peyton, 9 W. R. 838. The questions raised and decided on this occasion were different from those above mentioned; but there are points on which some of the above arguments have application to the circumstances under which the contest arose in Sir H. Peyton's case. The father, Sir H. Peyton, being seized in fee, settled the estate to himself for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male. A jointure of £1,000 a year was by the same deed secured to Lady Peyton. Shortly after the first son (now Sir H. Peyton, the petitioner) attained twenty-one, he joined with his father in barring the estate tail, and re-settling the property by giving his father an estate for life, then himself an estate for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, with an additional rent-charge of £1,000 a year to his mother, Lady Peyton, after her husband's death, and a joint power of appointment to his father and himself. This joint power of appointment was exercised—first, in making a joint mortgage by the petitioner and his father as for money lent to them jointly, with joint and several covenants for repayment; secondly, in creating a charge of £2,000, of which £1,500 remained due, for a debt of the father, with a covenant or obligation on the son for its repayment; and thirdly, in securing an annuity of £500 to Algernon, the eldest son of the petitioner, for the joint lives of Algernon and of the survivor of the petitioner and his father. Upon the death of his father Sir H. Peyton claimed a deduction of duty in respect of these four incumbrances, all of which had been disallowed by the Commissioners. The 34th section enacts that, "in estimating the value of a succession, no allowance shall be made in respect of any incumbrance thereon created or incurred by the successor, not made in execution of a prior special power of appointment, but an allowance shall be made in respect of all other incumbrances; provided that upon any successor becoming entitled to real property subject to any prior principal charge, an allowance shall be made to him in respect only of the yearly sums payable by way of interest or otherwise on such charge as reducing the annual value pro tanto of such real property."

First, as to Lady Peyton's jointure, counsel for the Crown were instructed to say, that on the above section taken alone, the jointure must be considered an incumbrance created by the successor, and that the present baronet was liable to pay it; but that on reading the 2nd, 5th, 12th, and 34th sections together, they were of opinion Lady Peyton was the person properly chargeable. The Crown therefore conceded to the petitioner an allowance on this incumbrance, and on this point the Court gave no opinion.

Secondly, as to the mortgages and the annuity of £500, the Court held, that as Sir Henry Peyton had taken a succession under a disposition made by himself—that, as he was entitled at the date of the disposition to the property expectant on the death of his father, and his father had died after the commencement of the Act, and during the continuance of the disposition, the petitioner was chargeable with duty under the 12th section, at the same rate as if no such disposition had been made. Up to this point Lord Braybrooke v. The Attorney-General was an authority in point. But then came the question as to the incumbrances and annuity, to which the 34th section seemed to apply. First, were they incumbrances created by Sir H. Peyton? The Court held that they were. In form they were created, no doubt, by both Sir H. Peyton and his father; but they were, in reality and substance, created solely by the petitioner. They were, therefore, incumbrances created by the successor. Secondly, were they made in execution of a prior special power of appointment? The Court thought they were not; and that this particular clause of the 34th section was introduced to protect successors against the hardship of being compelled to pay a tax in respect of an incumbrance which it may have been their duty to have created. The 5th section was held not to apply to the £500 annuity, and accordingly any deduction in respect of either of the three incumbrances was disallowed.

The only member of the Court who dissented from these conclusions was Baron Bramwell. The point on which he differed was with regard to the question whether the incumbrances were created by the successor, Sir H. Peyton? The learned judge said, "that no doubt they were made by Sir H. Peyton in the sense that he was one of the parties making or incurring them; but as they were also made and incurred by the father, in truth they must be considered as having been made or incurred by both. The arguments in favour of the petitioner being the sole maker of these charges are—first, that they could not have been created without his consent; therefore, he alone in substance creates them; secondly, he could have created a power by virtue of which the father could create those charges; in which case he would himself have created them, for limitations created in execution of a power must be read as if they were introduced into the deed creating the power; and Lord Braybrooke v. The Attorney-General is an authority to show that the tenant in tail takes under his own disposition, and consequently is his own predecessor. It is unnecessary to examine the objections to this reasoning which were raised by the learned judge, inasmuch as they did not prevail with the Court; they may be studied, however, as an exercise of argumentative subtlety; 9 W. R. 839.

It only occurs, in conclusion, to observe three points. One, that the judgment in Lord Braybrooke's case, on the above question as to the annuity, has this remarkable bearing on Sir H. Peyton's case; it decides that Algernon Peyton, on the death of the survivor, will be entitled to deduct for the cesser of the annuity of £500, although no abatement in respect of the same has been allowed to his father, the present petitioner.

Secondly, an argument of very specious appearance has been completely demolished by the judgment in Sir H. Peyton's case—namely, that it is a great hardship to compel the successor to pay duty on a larger amount of property than he succeeds to. But why does he succeed to a less amount of property than that on which he is charged? If he has assigned the property the assignee must pay, and he escapes; if he has mortgaged the property, he has simply anticipated it, and cannot justly be said to be exempt from the consequence of his own act. In the present case, also, the petitioner was already liable in respect of the mortgages, and the succession only gave him increased means of paying them. Thirdly, on the other hand, it is going too far to say that it was the intention of the Legislature to charge a successor not only upon that part of the succession which comes to him beneficially, but also upon all property which might have come to him but for his own acts. Had this been so, Sir H. Peyton would have been liable to duty for the annuity created in favour of Lady Peyton; but this claim was abandoned by the Crown as untenable.

[See further on the subject of the Succession Duties Act, a decision of The Attorney-General v. Deane, by the Irish Court of Exchequer, on 7th June last, Ir. Jur.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

VOLUNTARY DEEDS—SETTING ASIDE AT INSTANCE OF VOLUNTEERS—DUTY OF SOLICITOR.

Anderson v. Elsworth, V. C. S., 9 W. R. 888.

This case affords a good example of the sort of mistake that is rectified in equity. The suit was instituted to set aside a deed by which A. B., without reserving to herself a life estate or power of revocation, conveyed all her property at once to her niece. It was alleged in the bill and relied upon in the argument on behalf of the plaintiffs, that A. B., who was seventy-five years old, was of weak mind, and had been, in fact, subjected to undue influence on the part of the niece, to whom she had, as far back as 1843, bequeathed all her property. The deed in question was prepared by a solicitor, who, on being asked by A. B. to point out the difference between a deed and a will, replied that a will was revocable but that a deed was not; and that as to expense, they were much the same in the first instance, but that the costs incurred for probate rendered a will ultimately the most expensive. The Vice-Chancellor considered that the solicitor had not fully explained to A. B. the further distinction between a deed and a will; that she would by the latter have been left in possession of her property during her life, but that by a deed she would be thrown upon the bounty of her niece. His Honour accordingly ordered that there should be a reconveyance to the heir-at-law or such persons as he should direct—the ground of this decision being that the solicitor had not sufficiently explained the nature of the instrument.

The principle upon which his Honour rested his decision precludes any necessity for our noticing the rules observed by a court of equity in setting aside instruments obtained by means of undue influence. All the important cases under this head of equity are given in the notes to Huguenin v. Baseley, 2 W. & Tud. Lead. Cas. p. 406. It is remarkable in the present case, that his Honour did not endeavour to rectify the instrument so as to correspond with the intention of A. B., rather than wholly set it aside in favour of a volunteer. A. B. had resolved to leave her niece all her property, and to leave the plaintiffs nothing. The instrument which she used for this purpose should, no doubt, be set aside, so far as it was in excess of her intention—viz., in not leaving herself a life interest and a power of revocation; and if A. B. had made a subsequent disposition of her property in her lifetime, under the impression that the deed to her niece was revocable, the grantee under the former deed would doubtless have a clear equity against the niece, so as to have a power of revocation inserted in the deed to the latter. But it appears to be a hard case that a deed, which was intended to give almost all, gives nothing. It would appear open to question whether a deed should have been wholly set aside upon the ground of a partial mistake, which only applied to a single clause, and not to the whole instrument. Of course A. B. could indirectly have avoided it wholly, if she so chose, by a sale to a purchaser without notice. The purchaser could then avoid the voluntary grant—not, however, on the ground of mistake, but by force of the statute 27 Eliz. c. 4. A purchaser from the devisee of one who had made a voluntary conveyance in his lifetime is not entitled under that statute to avoid the voluntary conveyance; Newman v. Ruskam, 17 Q. B. 723. An heir-at-law or next of kin is not more favoured in equity than a devisee.

It is not easy, therefore, to perceive the ground upon which the plaintiffs' claim in the present case can be sustained, so as wholly to defeat the voluntary instrument. Is a testator or grantor to be informed of every single legal consequence of the instrument which he is going to execute before the deed can acquire any validity? In the present case the deed actually corresponded with the intention of the grantor. His Honour suggests this difficulty as existing in the case, but does not overthrow it. He rests his decision upon the general ground that a deed, of which the grantor does not fully understand the effect, is inoperative to transfer a right of property. The maxim ignorantia legis neminem excusat, though often pushed rather far, is not without its use, and this maxim the decision in the present case tends strongly to neutralize. The Court will not assist a vendor in defeating a prior voluntary settlement made by himself; Smith v. Garland, 2 Mer. 123. The case of Villars v. Beaumont, 1 Vern. 100, appears to support somewhat the claims of the defendants in the present case, although it is not reported as mentioned in the arguments or judgment. That case establishes the rule that if a voluntary deed be made to a stranger—that is to say, a person not standing in any confidential or fiduciary relation towards the donor—equity will not set it aside, however improvident it may be, if it be free from the imputation of fraud, surprise, and undue influence, and made by the donor with a full knowledge of the facts. In the present case, as already observed, his Honour did not entertain the question of undue influence. In Gibson v. Russell, 2 Y & C. 104, a deed of gift of real estate from an aged and infirm person to his medical attendant was set aside for fraud, one of the circumstances in proof of fraud being that the deed stated, contrary to the truth, a money consideration. These cases, however, are readily distinguishable from the present, inasmuch as those decisions rested upon the ground of fraud or of undue influence having been exercised over the grantor. In Blackie v. Clark, 15 Beav. 595, on the other hand, the grant of annuities by a married woman to her confidential medical attendant was held good against her separate estate. It was held, in the same case, that the onus of proving the invalidity of the grant rested on the grantor or his representatives. It appeared, indeed, in the last-mentioned case that the grantor understood perfectly the nature of the grant. But the main question in Anderson v. Elsworth appears to have been whether a mistake, which did not go to the gist of a transaction, but only applied to the insertion of a particular clause in the instrument used, should be allowed to deprive the deed of all operation, and render it completely void.

It does not appear that the deed in Anderson v. Elsworth was sought to be supported in the argument for the defendants as having a testamentary nature; and yet such a position is perhaps sufficiently tenable. In the case of Habergum v. Vincent, 2 Ves. Jun. 204; s.c. 4 B. C. C. 355, an instrument in the form of a deed poll, whereby the grantor professed to execute a power which he had reserved to himself in a previous will, was held to be of a testamentary nature. Mr. Justice Buller in that case said that the cases had established that an instrument in any form, whether a deed poll or indenture, if the obvious purpose is that it should not take place till after the death of the person making it, shall operate as a will. In one of the cases there were express words of immediate grant; but as, upon the whole, the grantor intended that its operation should be postponed until after his death, it was considered as a will. In the case of the Attorney-General v. Jones, 3 Price 368, the doctrine ut res magis valeat was carried perhaps too far. In that case the instrument used had almost all the characteristics of a deed as distinguished from those of a will. The instrument, nevertheless, was held to be testamentary. The Prerogative Court used frequently to grant probate of the most irregular documents, such as the assignment of a bond by indorsement; Musgrave v. Down, T. T. 1784, cit. 2 Hagg. 247; receipts for stock and bills indorsed; Sabine v. Goate and Church, T. T. 1782, cit. 2 Hagg. 247; marriage articles; Marnell v. Watton, T. T. 1796, cit. 2 Hagg. 247. For striking illustrations of the rule that a deed will sometimes be considered as a will, we refer the reader to Masterman v. Maberly, 2 Hagg. 235, and In re Knight, 2 Hagg. 354. The questions which arose in those cases are not precluded by the statute 1 Vict. c. 26. Thus, in Jones v. Nicolay, 2 Rob. 288, a paper in the form of a bill of exchange was held entitled to probate as a codicil. Also in the case of Doe d. Cross v. Cross, 8 Q. B. 714, a power of attorney was held to be testamentary in certain respects. The Court seemed disposed to think that there was no objection to an instrument operating partly in presenti as a deed, and partly in futuro as a will.

It would appear, therefore, that there was room to contend that the deed in Anderson v. Elsworth could be supported as a will, as the grantor did not intend to deprive herself of all control over her property during her life, and, at the same time, was resolved upon providing for the defendants. The Vice-Chancellor appears to have considered the mistake made by the grantor of the deed in this case to be such as that no interest whatever passed under it—that the deed was wholly void. It would appear, however, open to doubt whether an interest did not at all events pass under it, no matter whether that interest was or was not liable to be overhauled by a bill in equity. Surely, a sale to a purchaser for valuable consideration would have extinguished the plaintiffs' claim, if any. Even if the deed had been confessedly obtained by means of undue influence, it would become good in the hands of a purchaser for value without notice, Blackie v. Clark, ubi sup.; Corbett v. Brock, 20 Beav. 524. The current of decisions appears to be in favour of the proposition that an interest passes in every such case, subject, however, to be defeated by the Court upon a proper case. The decision in Anderson v. Elsworth is, however, opposed to such a doctrine.

Correspondence.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

I shall be glad to know whether any of your readers have heard and can give any particulars of a case of Wardle v. Usher, which I am informed was an action brought by a landlord against his tenant for removal of trees, &c., planted by the tenant for ornament in the ground attached to a private suburban residence, and tried at Nisi Prius two or three years ago. The tenant was not a nurseryman or gardener. The judge is stated to have left it to the jury to determine whether the tenant planted the trees, &c., with the intention of removing them; and thereupon the jury gave a verdict in favour of the tenant. It is laid down that a tenant, in the absence of an agreement, has no such right of removal. Query: whether the planting with the intention to remove makes any difference? B. A.

POWER OF ATTORNEY—FOREIGN COUNTRY.

I should be glad to learn through your columns what formalities (if any) are necessary to render a power of attorney given by a person in this country to be acted upon in a foreign state or colony, a valid legal instrument; in other words, is the city seal necessary, or a notarial verification of the document, or will an ordinary attestation be sufficient? A LAW CLERK.

SUCCESSION DUTY.

In the commentary contained in your number of the 5th inst. on the recent judgment of the House of Lords in the case of Lord Braybrooke v. The Attorney-General, 9 W. R. 601, you draw the conclusion that a "tenant in tail in remainder, when he has the entail, may, if he pleases, alienate the estate, and no succession duty will be payable by him." And the judgment of the late Lord Chancellor warrants this conclusion; but it is at variance with the opinion of the Comptroller of Succession Duties who insists that a tenant in tail in remainder cannot, by any means, defeat the succession duty expectantly payable by him on the decease of a tenant for life, and who, upon the decease of the tenant for life, requires payment of succession duty, although he and the tenant in tail in remainder may have disentailed the estate, and conveyed it to a purchaser. J. W.

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES FRAUDS.

At the recent meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science at Dublin, Mr. D. C. Heron, Q.C., read the following paper on this subject:—

The principle of association has been repeatedly characterised as the most prominent test of an advanced civilisation. The incapacity to combine is at once the cause and effect of a low development of humanity. The faculty of association has received its latest extension in the institution of joint stock companies, enabling communities to accomplish enterprises beyond the means of private capitalists. Adam Smith, more than eighty years ago, named the trades which it seemed to him possible for a joint stock company to carry on successfully without an exclusive privilege. He correctly defined them as those in which all the operations are capable of being reduced to routine, or to such a uniformity of method as admits of little or no variation. He enumerated four trades—banking, insurance, canal companies, and water companies, or the supply of water to a large city. The wonderful progress in material prosperity of the nations which inhabit the British islands has developed during the present century other trades which joint stock companies can carry on with success. Railway companies, steam-boat companies, gas companies, mining companies, companies to supply public amusement, such as the Crystal Palace Company, companies to facilitate communication, like the Electric Telegraph Company. These companies in themselves are only modifications of the principle enounced by Adam Smith, that joint stock companies can carry on successfully those operations in trade which are capable of being reduced to a routine where the capital required is beyond the means of private individuals. Wherever the capital required is within the means of private individuals the trade cannot be carried on successfully by joint stock enterprise. The result of the extraordinary success of the joint stock principle within the last twenty years has been that numbers of persons of humble origin, of indifferent moral principles, have been brought into contact with enormous sums of money, the appropriation of which has been extremely easy, and these persons have appropriated enormous sums, careless about detection and ready to pay the penalty of their liberties or their lives if detection should follow. The first case to which I think it right to call attention is the case of Walter Watts—he was a clerk in the Globe Insurance Company in London, at a salary of £200 per annum. Between the months of August, 1844, and February, 1850, he abstracted £70,000. When he commenced the system of defalcations he was only twenty-five years of age, but the life he led during his six years of public plunder was remarkable. In 1844 the name of Walter Watts suddenly became associated with fashionable and Corinthian life in London. He became a patron of art and pleasure in its most extravagant form; he kept an establishment at the West End and a country house at Brighton; he had one of the best cellars in London, stocked with the rarest vintages; he had some of the best horses in London; he was a devoted attendant at the theatres. During all this time he was only a check clerk in the cashier department of the Globe Assurance Office, with a salary of £200 per annum, having been placed there by his father, who had for forty years filled a subordinate position in the Globe Office. Not content with the extravagance unavoidable in such a course of life, he started as a theatrical manager of two theatres. In 1847 he became lessee of the Marylebone Theatre, and during that year the celebrated Mrs. Warner appeared there as the star of the unsuccessful legitimate drama. During the season of 1848 and 1849 Mrs. Mowatt and Mr. Davenport, two American artists, played at Watt's Theatre. Watts spared no expense. Mrs. Mowatt's dressing-room beneath the stage was fitted up like a bower of the Genii in the Arabian Nights. In fact, the brilliancy of the expenditure on the Marylebone Theatre was the subject of conversation all over London during the year 1849. The only persons who knew nothing about it appeared to be the directors of the Globe Office, in which Watts, spending £10,000 a year, was a clerk at £200 a year. In 1849 he opened the Olympic Theatre, but the extravagant and splendid management of this beautiful temple of 'Thespis' only lasted a few months before his frauds on the insurance office were detected. It is to be regretted that the company published no complete account of the mode in which the frauds were carried on. The first report which was laid before the board, somewhere about the close of the month of March, 1850, is presumed to have been merely of a preliminary character; but it is said to have contained the important facts that the defalcations during the year 1849 alone amounted to upwards of £18,000; that in the receipt department of the office there was no effective check against fraud, although, owing to the integrity of the officials, no fraud had taken place; and that, in the accountant's office, in which Watts was employed, the lax practice prevailed of making the bankers' pass-book the foundation of the entries in the books of the company, instead of the documents referring to the payments ordered; so that if the persons having the custody of the pass-book chose to falsify it, the false entries were transferred to the general books of the office, and thus made to cover abstractions effected through the bankers. Watts, being tried and convicted, committed suicide. The next case of a similar character to which I wish to direct attention is that of John Sadleir. It illustrates another of the two great classes of joint-stock frauds. In one, the servant with the greatest facility embezzles hundreds of thousands of the property of his employers. In the other, the director, entrusted by the shareholders to manage the property, with the greatest facility appropriates it to his own use. John Sadleir, in the year 1836, was admitted as an Irish attorney, and practiced with success in the country and in Dublin. In 1847 he was elected a Member of Parliament. In 1853 he was appointed Lord of the Treasury under Lord Aberdeen. He looked forward to be Chief Secretary for Ireland or Chancellor of the Exchequer, and had a fair chance of either of these great offices. All this splendid position he owed to the fact of being enabled to use the money of the Tipperary Joint Stock Bank. He himself was a man of simple and inexpensive habits, and the only relaxation he took was hunting, which he did not carry on in any extravagant manner. His resignation of his place at the Treasury, and retirement from the Government, were followed by his resignation of the post of chairman of the London and County Bank. His credit was then gone in London. His forgery of the title deeds of the Irish Incumbered Estates Court was detected; and on the 16th of February, 1856, John Sadleir committed suicide at the age of forty-two. From the Tipperary Bank John Sadleir abstracted over £200,000. As chairman of the Royal Swedish Railway Company he issued false shares to the nominal amount of £150,000, the whole proceeds of which he appropriated. The most singular part of John Sadleir's frauds is this—that over a quarter of a million of the money he received is unaccounted for—that there is no tangible method of explaining how the money was spent, or who received it from him. The Royal British Bank was started in the year 1850, with a capital of £100,000, one-half of which was paid up. The board managed its affairs in the way every dishonest board in every joint stock bank can do if they please. Mr. Cameron, the manager, became indebted to the amount of £30,000; Mr. McGregor, £8,000; Mr. Mullins, £7,000; Mr. Gwynne, another of the old directors and original projectors, £13,000, of which no account was rendered to the shareholders, and of which it is extremely problematical whether the creditors have recovered one penny; and one of the auditors, who, it may be presumed, was a little too prying, found it more convenient to accept an advance of £2,000 than to enter into disagreeable questionings of vouchers and cheques. Mr. Humphrey Browne, member of Parliament, on the day he opened his account, paid in £18 14s., and he drew money until he was debtor to the company to the amount of £70,000. The bank stopped on the 3rd of September, 1856. During its existence of six and a-half years it exhausted the whole of the £158,000 subscribed by the shareholders, and left them beside half a million in debt. The British Bank directors were tried for a conspiracy to defraud, and they were convicted. But the heaviest sentence pronounced was imprisonment for one year. Lord Campbell, in pronouncing sentence, said—"I acquit you of having originated this bank with the fraudulent intent to cheat the public; but it is now demonstrated that for years you have carried on a system of deliberate fraud, and have fabricated documents for the purpose of deceiving the public, for your own direct or indirect benefit. It would be a disgrace to the law of any country if this were not a crime to be punished. It is not a mere breach of contract with the shareholders or customers of the bank, but it is a criminal conspiracy to do what inevitably leads to great public mischief, in the ruin of families, and reducing the widow and orphan from affluence to destitution. I regret to say that in mitigation of your offence it was said that it was a common practice. Unfortunately a laxity had been introduced into certain commercial dealings, not from any defect in the law, but from the law not being put in force; and practices have been adopted without bringing a consciousness of shame, and, I fear, without much loss of character among those with whom they associate. It was time a stop should be put to such a system, and this information was properly filed by her Majesty's Attorney-General, and the jury have properly found you guilty. I hope it will now be known that such practices are illegal, and will not only give rise to punishment, but that no length of investigation, no intricacies of accounts, and no devices, will be able to shield such practices." Still, the heaviest sentence was only twelve months' imprisonment. And there are thousands of persons who would submit to twelve months' imprisonment for £50,000. William James Robson has immortalised himself in the annals of crime by his frauds on the Crystal Palace Company. In 1853 he obtained a situation there at £1 per week, and in June, 1854, he was appointed chief clerk in the transfer department at a salary of only £150 per annum. But Robson was a well-educated, refined, and gentlemanlike man, thirty-four years of age, with literary tastes, the author of several plays, and having a large circle of expensive acquaintances in London. The simple plan by which he obtained £27,000 by false pretences was this—Robson directed a Mr. Clement, a stock-broker, to sell one hundred shares in the company, and the broker accordingly sold them, fifty to a Mr. Joseph Lowe, and fifty to another person. For these shares the broker received £295, which he paid over, less commission, to Robson. The document by which these shares were transferred purported to convey the shares from Johnson to the purchasers. The signature to the deed where the name of the transfer should be was that of Henry Johnson, nominally of course written by that gentleman, who, however, had no existence, the whole thing being a forgery on the part of Robson. Opposite to this name were the seal and signature of the attesting witness, "William James Robson, of No. 3, Adelaide-place, London-bridge" (the office of the Crystal Palace Company). Like Watts, Robson lived in a most extravagant style. It is unnecessary to go into details—he was tried and sentenced to be transported for twenty years. Leopold Redpath commenced his career as a lawyer's clerk; he then was appointed a clerk in the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company. Leaving this office he set up business as an insurance broker, but shortly afterwards failed for £5,000. About the age of thirty-five he obtained the appointment of clerk in the service of the Great Northern Railway Company, and in that office exhibited one of the most extraordinary instances of successful swindling combined with high moral reputation and a truly benevolent career. Redpath's simple plan was, like Robson's, to create fictitious shares; and all this while the directors, though they found themselves paying dividends which they could not account for, appeared to entertain no suspicion of the fact that they were daily being robbed to a large extent; nay, so far duped were they, that some three years after Redpath had commenced his swindling, the following document was actually placed upon record by the auditors of the company:—"Accountants' Department, August 7, 1856. To the Chairman and Directors of the Great Northern Railway Company, Gentlemen,—The accounts and books in every department continue to be so satisfactorily kept, that we have simply to express our entire approval of them, and to present them to you for the information of the shareholders, and with our usual certificate of their correctness.—We have the honour, &c. (Signed) John Chapman, J. Cattley, Auditors." Redpath was a public subscriber to all the great charities of London. He had a splendid house at Weybridge, with a noble park and pleasure grounds, fifteen servants, including a courier and a French cook. The anecdote of the occurrence that led to his discovery is remarkable. Mr. Denison, the chairman of the company, was standing on a station platform conversing with Lord D—, when Redpath happened to come up, and lifted his hat to Mr. Denison. The nobleman, however, was on easier terms. Taking Redpath by the hand, "Ah, my dear fellow," said he, "how are you?" Having parted, the Chairman turned to Lord D— and asked what he knew of their clerk? "Oh," said he, "he is the jolliest fellow in life; he gives the most sumptuous dinners and capital balls that I know of." Redpath was tried in January, 1857, and sentenced to be transported for the term of his natural life, stock to the amount of £220,000 having been fraudulently issued by him. Numerous other instances might be given; but the result is this—that nothing appears more easy, either for a dishonest servant or a dishonest director, than to rob a joint stock company. Robson and Redpath's frauds were effected by the manufacture of fictitious shares. In all probability there is this moment in existence a vast quantity of fictitious shares in joint stock companies. In fact, for the last ten years every species of robbery and fraud has been practised on the shareholders and creditors of these bodies. The evil is increasing. The London and Eastern Banking Company was instituted in 1854, on the principle of extending the joint stock banking system to England. Colonel Waugh was one of the first directors, and in two years he, without security, drew £244,000, almost the entire subscribed capital of the company. The bank failed in 1857. Waugh's case resembled Sadleir's in this—there was no tangible account of what became of the money. Many other cases might be given in detail for the last ten years—Pullinger's frauds on the Union Bank to the amount of over £400,000, and divers others. The most recent is the fraud on the Commercial Bank of London, discovered only in February, 1861, and in consequence of which the business of the Commercial Bank was transferred to the London and Westminster Bank. It was discovered that a person named Durden, one of the ledger clerks, at the only branch possessed by the Commercial Bank—namely, that in Henrietta-street, Covent-garden—had defrauded it to the extent of about £60,000. Durden had been twelve years in the bank's service, and during eleven years he acted as ledger keeper. It is believed that he had been robbing his employers during nearly the entire period. It is a remarkable fact that, like Pullinger, he was most assiduous in the performance of his duties, and that during a period of eleven years he had not a single holiday. The iron frame of this man—who, whilst he was a good husband and father, and enjoyed in every way public esteem, was still, for twelve years, daily robbing his employers—succumbed at last. He was seized at his desk with a paralytic fit, and when his duties were temporarily entrusted to another officer of the Bank, it was at once discovered that the sum possessed by the bank was £60,000 less than it purported to be by the books. This is the last instance I shall give. The evil, I repeat, is increasing. How is it to be diminished? Severity of punishment will have very little effect. For a career like Watts' or Robson's many men would cheerfully submit to six or ten years' penal servitude. To any person not supported by a sense of morality, religion, and a consciousness of doing one's duty to God and man, nothing can be more miserable than the situation of a mercantile clerk, with the wretched salary which competition compels him to accept. On the other hand, men like Watts or John Sadleir will commit suicide when detected, so that even death has no terror for the commercial swindler on a grand scale. Joint stock companies received from the Legislature important privileges, which enabled them to accumulate vast capital under the present system. It is very easy to plunder these companies, and the punishment of the swindler is very little consolation for the persons who lose their money. I propose, therefore, that all joint stock companies should be subject to the inspection and audit of a public office, which might be made one of the permanent departments of the Board of Trade. The companies themselves recognise the principle of publicity by holding half-yearly meetings and publishing half-yearly balance-sheets. There could be no sound objection that these should be audited and verified by a Government officer, responsible to the Government for the proper discharge of his duties. Unless some such means be adopted joint stock frauds will increase with the number of joint stock companies. The misery caused by the failure of a bank like the Royal British, the London and Eastern, and the Tipperary Bank cannot ever be estimated. John Sadleir, in his letter written an hour before he swallowed poison, feebly portrayed it:—"I find myself the author of numberless crimes of a diabolical character, and the cause of ruin, misery, and disgrace to thousands—aye, tens of thousands. I weep and weep, but what can that avail?" It is the high function of this great Association to suggest measures to prevent, if possible, the recurrence of such misery and ruin. Prevention is better than punishment. In the words of Mill, speculative philosophy, which to the superficial observer appears a thing so remote from the business of life, is in reality the thing on earth which most influences it, and in the long run overturns every other influence save that which it must itself obey. And I bring this suggestion before the statesmen whom I have the honour to address, hoping it may receive some consideration from them and from the society.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

- ADYE—On Oct. 6, at the Retreat, Hull, the wife of Arthur Abye, jun., Esq., Solicitor, of a son.
EDWARDS—On Oct. 15, the wife of John Edwards, Esq., Solicitor, of 14 and 15 St. Swithin's-lane, London, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

- EDMISTON—LAY—On Oct. 17, G. D. Edmiston, Esq., of Glengall-terrace, Old Kent-road, to Sarah Amelia, daughter of James Lay, Esq., of 44, Poultry, Solicitor.
JAMES—OVERTON—On Oct. 6, Henry Vale James, Esq., Surgeon, son of Henry James, Esq., Solicitor, of Leominster, to Maria Dorothea, daughter of John Overton, Esq., Surgeon, of Coventry.
JOHNSTON—LUCK—On Oct. 16, Thomas Johnston, Esq., of Raymond-buildings, Gray's-inn, to Mary Bridget, daughter of E. T. Luck, Esq., of The Hermitage, West Malling.
LAWRENCE—SMART—On Oct. 15, John Compton Lawrence,

Esq., of Dunsby Hall, in the county of Lincoln, Barrister-at-Law, to Charlotte Gerorgiana, daughter of Major Smart, of Tumby Lawn, in the same county.

DEATHS.

BURT—On Oct. 15, Ann Rebecca, relict of Augustus Henry Burt, Esq., Solicitor, formerly of Essex-street, Strand, aged 57.

COPPINGER—On Oct. 13, at Dublin, aged nine years and seven months, Josephine, daughter of the late Stephen Coppinger, Esq., Barrister-at-law.

LEONARD—On Oct. 10, Robert Leonard, Esq., jun., Solicitor, Bristol, aged 44.

REVEL—On Oct. 10, at Turin, Emily, Widow of Count Adrian Thacon de Revel, Sardinian Minister at the Court of Vienna, and daughter of the late Basil Montagu, Esq., Q.C.

ROBINSON—On Oct. 14, at The Terrace, Settle, Yorkshire, Elspet, wife of Henry Robinson, Esq., Solicitor, aged 44.

SHEE—On Oct. 11, aged 45, Mary, wife of William Shee, Esq., one of her Majesty's Serjeants-at-Law.

TALBOT—On Oct. 9, Frederic Talbot, Esq., of Bedford-row, and John-street, in the 66th year of his age.

London Gazettes.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

TUESDAY, Oct. 15, 1861.

LIMITED IN BANKRUPTCY.

DISTRICT SAVINGS' BANK (LIMITED).—Order to wind-up. Oct. 10.

FRIDAY, Oct. 18, 1861.

LIMITED IN BANKRUPTCY.

CRYSTAL PALACE PRINTING AND PUBLISHING COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up presented Oct. 16, will be heard before Com. Fonblanque, on Oct. 30.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Oct. 15, 1861.

BOTS, JOHN, Margate, Kent, Esq., formerly a Solicitor. Nov. 26. Sols. J. & J. H. Linklater & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London.
LOWTHER, ANN, 7, South-street, Brompton, Middlesex, Widow. Jan. 3. Sol. E. Rye, 16, Golden-square, Westminster.
MORLEY, THOMAS, Barking-side, Essex, Jobber. Dec. 11. Sol. G. Brady, 5, Mitre-court, Fleet-street, London, or Barking, Essex.
STEELEY, RICHARD (and not Shelley, as advertised in Gazette of Oct. 8), Nottingham, Butcher. Oct. 30. Sol. J. T. Brewster, Nottingham.
STYKE, JAMES, Delph-street, Halifax, Yorkshire, late Manager of the Halifax Weighing Machine, and General Dealer. Dec. 16. Sols. Robson & Suter, 16, George-street, Halifax.

FRIDAY, Oct. 18, 1861.

BALDON, WILLIAM, St. Paul, Deptford, Kent, Surgeon. Nov. 30. Sol. W. Kinsey, 9, Bloomsbury-place, London.
COLVER, MARY, Bolsover, Derbyshire. Dec. 1. Sols. Hoole & Yeomans, Meeting House-lane, Sheffield.
COOK, WILLIAM, Kensington, Liverpool, Gent. Dec. 1. Sol. J. B. Lloyd, 34, Castle-street, Liverpool.
FERREMAN, JOHN, Framden, Suffolk, Farmer. Nov. 30. Sol. C. Steward, Museum street, Ipswich.
GILL, THOMAS, Burley, near Otley, York, Esq. Dec. 14. Sols. Wells & Ridehalgh, Bradford.
GILL, WILLIAM, Burley, near Otley, York, Esq. Dec. 14. Sols. Wells & Ridehalgh, Bradford.
HIGGINBOTHAM, JOSEPH, 21, Delamere-street, Ashton-under-Lyne, Attorney-at-law and Solicitor. Jan. 31. Sols. Darnton & Greaves, 45, Old street, Ashton-under-Lyne.
JONES, DAVID, 33, Sherborne-street, New North-road, Middlesex. Dec. 17. Sol. Broughton, 48, Finsbury-square.
JONES, ELIZA, Bedford-place, Old Kent-road, Surrey, Spinster. Dec. 17. Sol. F. Broughton, 44, Finsbury-square.
LEES, THOMAS, Beachfield, Birkdale-park, Southport, Lancaster, Gent. Dec. 10. Sols. J. B. & E. Whitworth, 2, St. James's-square, Manchester.
OAKES, ANN, Bridgnorth, Salop, Spinster. Dec. 1. Sols. Potts, Gordon, & Nicholls, Bridgnorth, Salop.
PONSONBY, Right Hon. WILLIAM Baron, Imokilly, Cork, and lately residing at Rostach, near Tegernsee, Bavaria. Nov. 20. Sols. Walker, Grant, & Martineau, 13, King's-road, Gray's Inn, Middlesex.
RUSSELL, JOHN, Marton, Warwickshire, Gent. Nov. 19. Sol. W. Russell, Leamington Priors.
SCOTT, JOHN, Clinton-place, Sheffield, Book-keeper. Dec. 1. Sols. Hoole & Yeomans, Meeting House-lane, Sheffield.
TURNER, WILLIAM, Slatter-Farm, Billinghamurst, Sussex, Farmer. Nov. 30. Sol. Mant, Storrington.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors.

TUESDAY, Oct. 15, 1861.

ALLDER, EDWARD Louis, Chertsey, Surrey, Draper. Sept. 26. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 68, Aldermanbury, London.
BROWN, THOMAS, St. Helen's, Lancashire, Clogger, and Boot and Shoe Maker. Oct. 5. Sol. H. G. Taylor, St. Helen's.
EDGE, JOHN, Alexandria, Egypt, Merchant. Oct. 4. Sols. Ashurst, Son, & Morris, 6, Old Jewry, London.
ETHEARDON, THOMAS, Bristol, Brewer. Sept. 19. Sol. C. Ryan Bristol.
FRAYER, JAMES, Wincanton, Somersetshire, Common Brewer. Sept. 28. Sol. Y. Cooper, Wincanton.

GUMRELL, HENRY, Cranley, Surrey, Shopkeeper. Sept. 19. Sol. T. A. Curtis, Guildford, Surrey.
PERRY, JOHN, Southwold, Suffolk, Butcher. Oct. 12. Sol. J. R. Gooding, Southwold.
PHIPPS, JAMES, Cheltenham, Gloucestershire, Linen Draper. Sept. 16. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 68, Aldermanbury, London, agents for A. Henderson, Bristol.
SPINDLOE, JOSEPH, Kingston, Ashbury, Berks, Miller. Sept. 28. Sol. C. J. Barnes, Lambourne, Berks.
WILLIAMS, HENRY, Redminster Parade, Bristol, Chandler and Grocer. Sept. 16. Sols. Brittan & Son, Albion Chambers, Bristol.

FRIDAY, Oct. 18, 1861.

BENNETT, WILLIAM, Bishopscotlighton, Devonshire, Limeburner. Sept. 30. Sol. R. W. Templar, Fore-street, West Teignmouth, Devonshire.
CURTIS, ALFRED, Romsey, Hants, Mop, Yarn, and Whiting Manufacturer. Sept. 23. Sol. T. Waters, Winchester.
EALEY, JOHN JOSEPH, Brightlingsea, Essex, Shopkeeper. Sept. 21. Sol. F. Bloomfield, Philbrick, Colchester.
LEATHER, AMOS, Huddersfield, Manufacturer. Oct. 16. Sol. J. Sykes, Market Walk, Huddersfield.
LEVICK, WILLIAM, and FREDERICK POYZER, Nottingham, Stone Masons. Sept. 25. Sol. S. Doubleday, Low-pavement, Nottingham, Conveyancer.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Oct. 15, 1861.

CURTIS, WILLIAM, Great Berkhamstead, Hertfordshire, Rag and Woollen Cutter and Puller. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Oct. 28, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sols. Rhodes, Sons, & Duffet, 63, Chancery-lane.
EUSDEN, JOHN, Broad-street, Ely, Cambridgeshire, Builder and Hatter. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 28 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. C. Richardson, 15, Old Jewry-chambers.
HADLEY, GEORGE, Birmingham, Wholesale and Retail Fruiterer. Pet. Oct. 2. Com. Sanders: Oct. 28 and Nov. 18 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. C. Pemberton, Liverpool, or J. Smith, Birmingham.
HEKETH, THOMAS PEARSON, 3, Newman's-row, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Oct. 26 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Badham, 37, New Bridge-street.
HICKS, ROBERT, 47, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, Middlesex, and 13, Simes-villas, Lewisham, Kent, House and Estate Agent and Surveyor. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Oct. 26 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Lawrance, Flews, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London.
HIRST, WILLIAM, Golcar, Huddersfield, Yorkshire, Woollen Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 7. Com. Ayrton: Oct. 25 and Nov. 25, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sols. Jenson & Drake, Huddersfield, or Bond & Barwick, Leeds.
INGRAM, THOMAS, late of 2, Tower Royal, London, but now of 46, Gloucester-street, Finsbury, Middlesex, Merchant and Commission Agent. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 26 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Linklaters & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London.
JENKINS, EDWARD, Stroud, Gloucestershire, Outfitter. Pet. Oct. 12. Com. Hill: Oct. 28 at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sols. Ravan, Gosling, & Press, Bristol.
LARGE, WILLIAM, Tunstall, Staffordshire, Grocer and Tea Dealer. Pet. Sept. 27. Com. Sanders: Oct. 28 and Nov. 18 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Lawrence, Smith, & Fawdon, 12, Broad-street, London, or James & Knight, Birmingham.
MASON, JAMES, Ware, Hertfordshire, Malster. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Oct. 26 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. G. B. Batchelor, 1, Guildhall-chambers, Basinghall-street, London.
NICHOLSON, EDWARD, 28, Cornhill, London, Stock and Share Broker. Pet. Oct. 4. Com. Fane: Oct. 25 at 12, and Nov. 22 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Greville & Tucker, 26, St. Swithun's-lane.
ORMOND, FRANCIS, Ouston, Leicestershire, Cattle Jobber. Pet. Oct. 10. Com. Sanders: Oct. 31 and Nov. 28 at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sol. S. Maples, Nottingham.
PARTRIDGE, FREDERICK ROBERT, & HENRY EDWARDS, King's Lynn, Norfolk, Attorneys and Solicitors (Goodwin, Partridge, & Edwards). Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. J. & J. H. Linklater & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London.
ULMANN, JOSEPH, 10, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, Middlesex, and 4, Walbrook, London, Merchant. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Oct. 26 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sols. Linklaters & Hackwood, Walbrook, London.

FRIDAY, Oct. 18, 1861.

ALABASTER, HENRY, Stratford New Town, Essex, Baker. Pet. Oct. 9. Com. Fane: Nov. 1 at 1.30, and Nov. 29 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Lawrence, Flews, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers.
ALLAN, JOHN, Durham, Iron and Steel Merchant and Grease Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 10. Com. Ellison: Oct. 29 at 11, and Nov. 20 at 12; New-castle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sol. W. Brignal, Durham, or Hartley, 14, Gray's Inn-square, London.
ARMSTRONG, WILLIAM, 42, Eastcheap, London, Dealer in Colonial Produce. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Oct. 26 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. J. Rae, 9, Mining-lane.
ASTLES, FREDERICK WILLIAM, Smethwick, Staffordshire, Schoolmaster and Agent. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Oct. 28 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. James & Knight, Birmingham.
BLACK, ANDREW, 1, Melbourn-place, Cambridge-road, Bethnal-green, Middlesex, carrying on business there as a Dry Fishmonger, under the name of John Stewart, and having a workshop at No. 9, Helmet-row, Old street, Middlesex, Carpenter and Dry Fishmonger. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. W. W. Eaden, 9, Gray's Inn-square, London.
BURHOUSE, SIDNEY, Brown Mill, Meltham, Yorkshire, Yarn Spinner and Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Oct. 31 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sols. Heap & Owen, Huddersfield, or Bond & Barwick, Leeds.

BUSHBY, JAMES, Aldershot, Hants, Corn and Coal Dealer. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. J. F. Ensley, 10, Lombard-street, London.

CLARKE, OWEN, 1, Lindsay-cottages, Lower-road, Islington, Middlesex, Printer and Publisher, carrying on business at 107, Dorset place, Fleet-street, London. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Treherne & Wolfertan, 17, Gresham-street.

COOPER, WILLIAM, 10, Essex-street, Forest gate, Essex, formerly of the Lion and Lamb Inn, Brentwood, Essex, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Oct. 31 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. W. R. Preston, 15, Broad-street-buildings London.

COWMAN, ROBERT, 9, Lyon-street, Caledonian-road, previously of Hornsey-road, Middlesex, Grocer, Tea Dealer, & Cheesemonger. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. T. Heard, 10, Basinghall-street.

DAVIS, ISAAC NOAH, Brentford Distillery, Brentford, Middlesex, Distiller. Pet. Oct. 7. Com. Evans: Oct. 30 at 12, and Nov. 28 at 1, instead of Nov. 15, as already advertised; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Nicholson, Lime-street.

DEAKINS, FRANCIS HENRY, Feathers Hotel, Ledbury, Herefordshire, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Oct. 28 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. East & Parry, Birmingham.

DREMAN, WILLIAM, 2, Three Colts-lane, Cambridge-road, Middlesex, Baker. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 31 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. W. H. Waller, 2, Duke-street, Adelphi.

DONSON, WILLIAM, 1, Old Gravel-lane, St. George's in the East, Middlesex, Builder. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Brown & Goodwin, 21, Finsbury-place, London.

DOD, WILLIAM EDWARD, 99, Raynor-street, Goswell-street, Clerkenwell, Middlesex, and 42, Great, James-street, Bedford-row, Holborn, Middlesex, Architect and House and Estate Agent. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Oct. 29, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Buchanan, 13, Basinghall-street.

EVENNETT, JAMES, Corn Dealer, High-street, Poplar, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. Hall, 1a, Basinghall-street.

FINLAY, JOHN, Grocer and Cheesemonger, 47, Henry-street, Portland-town, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Oct. 31 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sols. Stevens & King, 6, Gray's Inn-square, London.

GIBSON, NICHOLAS WILLIAM, Ship and Insurance Broker, 4, Austin-friars, London. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Gibbs & Tucker, 17, Clement's-lane, London.

GLASS, GEORGE MICHAEL, Sen., Brandon-street, Waltham, Surrey, Chemist, and Gelatine Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Wells, 47, Moorgate-street.

GOODCHILD, JOSEPH, 239, High-street, Shoreditch, Middlesex, Ham and Beef Dealer. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Beard, 10, Basinghall-street.

GORNLEY, WILLIAM, Portugal-street, Oldham-road, Manchester, Screw, Bolt, and Nail Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sols. Slater & Myers, Fountain-street, Manchester.

GREEN, CHARLES, 185, Western-road, Brighton, Gas-fitter. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 28 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Harrison & Lewis, 6, Old Jewry, London.

GRIFFITHS, THOMAS, Grocer, 50, Lower Rosoman-street, Clerkenwell, Middlesex, also carrying on business at 125, Golden-lane, St. Luke's, Middlesex, Grocer, Cheesemonger, and Chandler. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. Harcourt, 2, King's Arms-yard, Coleman-street.

HANNIBALL, ALFRED, Boot Maker, 35, Great Portland-street, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 3 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Stophor, 36, Coleman-street.

HOBBS, JAMES, Watch Manufacturer, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Lee: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Morgan. Sols. Holt & Rowe, 2, Chapel-walk, South Castle-street, Liverpool.

INGRAM, JAMES GEORGE, 198, Tottenham court-road, Middlesex, Woollen Draper (Nesbitt & Co.) Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Linklaters & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook.

JEALOUS, GEORGE JAMES, 335, Strand, Middlesex, Manager to a Printer, and late of 27, Chichester-place, Gray's Inn-road, Middlesex, Printer. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Oct. 31 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. C. Harcourt, 2, King's Arms-yard, Mortgate-street, London.

JURY, GEORGE, & FREDERICK JURY, Maidstone, Kent, Tailors and Undertakers (Jury & Son). Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sols. Lawrance, Pews, & Boyer, Old Jewry-Chambers, London.

KETLEY, JONATHAN, Birmingham, Coke Merchant and Railway Carriage Builder. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. James & Knight, Birmingham.

LEAVER, JOSEPH CHRISTOPHER, 2, Briar-villas, Shepherd's-bush, Middlesex, Shipbroker and Shipowner. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sols. Leahey, Chapman, & Clarke, 24, Lincoln's Inn-fields.

LOCKWOOD, JOHN, Stowmarket, Suffolk, Innkeeper. Pet. Oct. 1. Com. Goulburn: Oct. 30 and Nov. 27 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Cree & Last, 13, Gray's Inn-square, London.

LOVEBROVE, JOSEPH, Newton House, Vicarage-place, Kensington, Middlesex, Surgeon. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. W. Philip, 36, Bucklersbury.

MCMANARD, EDWARD KINGETT, Pavilion Hotel, North Woolwich, Kent, Hotel Keeper. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. T. Beard, 10, Basinghall-street, London.

NELTHORPE, JAMES, 3, Clarence-terrace, Wandsworth-road, Surrey, formerly of 1, Victoria-road, Islington, Middlesex, Flour Factor. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Oct. 31 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Holt, 35, Bucklersbury.

PRESTON, JAMES, formerly of the Kingsland-gate Bazaar, Kingsland-road, Middlesex, Tobacconist, and Road Director of the London General Omnibus Company (Limited). Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. H. Pook, 27, Basinghall-street, London.

REYNOLDS, THOMAS, 42, Henry-street, Pentonville, Middlesex, Hosiery and Shirt Maker. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. W. R. Buchanan, 13, Basinghall-street.

RIGBY, EDWARD BEVAN, & ENOCH ERASMUS HOLDEN, Widnes, Lancashire, Commission Agents. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Brougham: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 12; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Bird. Sols. Evans & Co., Liverpool, or T. Haddock, St. Helens.

SAYKELL, JOHN DABBY, 11, Blundell-street, Caledonian-road, Islington, Middlesex, Draper. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Bennett & Paul, 1, Size-lane.

SILVERTHORNE, JOHN, Gillingham, Dorset, Corn Dealer. Pet. Oct. 4. Com. Evans: Oct. 28 at 11, and Nov. 28 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sols. Flux & Argles, 9, Mincing-lane, London; or H. W. Dickinson, Poole, Dorset.

SMITH, WILLIAM TAYLOR, & WADE HAMPTON SMITH, Sedgley, Mine Drainers. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Oct. 28 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. Hodgson & Allen, Birmingham.

SPIESBURY, HENRY, Birmingham, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Oct. 30 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. East & Parry, 48, Ann-street, Birmingham.

STEADMAN, ROBERT, 2, King street, Finsbury-square, Middlesex, and Manchester, Hull, and Bradford, Boot and Shoe Warehouseman. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Lawrance, Plewa, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London.

STEAKES, HENRY CATON, 24, Lambeth-walk, Surrey, Cheesemonger. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Higgins: Oct. 28 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. W. R. Preston, 15, Broad-street-buildings, London.

TAYLOR, THOMAS, Hanlith, Kirkby Malhamdale, Yorkshire, Farmer and Dealer in Cattle. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Payne: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sol. Robinson, Settle; or Benjamin Carras, Leeds.

WELLING, WILLIAM, 6, Clipstone-street, Fitzroy-square, Middlesex, Chimney. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Wells, 47, Moorgate-street.

WESTON, HENRY, Eastwood, Nottinghamshire, Dealer in Small Wares and Millinery. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sol. J. Ashwell, Middle Pavement, Nottingham.

WORMAN, ELIZABETH WILLARD, 129, Sloane-street, Middlesex, also late of Erith, but now of Old Charlton, Kent, Widow. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Oct. 28 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Linklaters & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook.

WRIGHT, RICHARD, Hunters-lane, Birmingham, Polisher and Greengrocer. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Wilson: first meeting, Oct. 29 at 12; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. East & Parry, Birmingham.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

FRIDAY, Oct. 18, 1861.

BRADBURY, ASA, Old Church-lane Mill, Oldham, Lancashire, Cotton Spinner and Doubler. Oct. 15.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Oct. 15, 1861.

GEORGE HARRIS, Woking, Surrey, Tailor. Oct. 26 at 11; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM SMITH AND WILLIAM FRANCIS PATIENT, Bermondsey New-road, Surrey, Tanners and Leather Merchants (Smith, Patient, & Smith). Oct. 25 at 11; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM NATHAN STOKES, 49, Wellington-street, Goswell-street, Middlesex, and Pelham-street, Nottingham, Wholesale Tobacconist and Cigar Merchant. Oct. 29 at 11; Nottingham.—JOHN GREENWOOD, Sheffield, Stone Sawyer and Stone Dealer. Oct. 26 at 10; Sheffield.—JOSEPH HOLLINGS, 42, Charles-street, Hampstead-road, Middlesex, Cowkeeper, Carman, and Contractor. Nov. 5 at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM LEVETT, 89, Union-street, Southwark, and 79, Blackfriars-road, Surrey, Patent Wadding Manufacturer. Nov. 7 at 12; Basinghall-street.—MARY ANN PITON JONES, Widow, 2, Buckingham-street, Strand, Middlesex, Licensed Victualler. Nov. 7 at 11; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH MOSS, 149, Houndsditch, London, Wholesale Clothier. Nov. 7 at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—PATRICK BROWN, 3, Paddington-green, and 7, West-place, Islington-green, Middlesex, Lead and Glass Merchant. Nov. 7 at 11; Basinghall-street.—ALBERT ARNOT, 3, Tudor-street, Blackfriars, London, Drysalter and Colourman. Nov. 7 at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—JOHN KING WESTROP, Stanning-lane, London, Glove Manufacturer and General Commission Agent. Nov. 7 at 12; Basinghall-street.—NATHAN MITCHELL, Leeds, Cloth Manufacturer. Nov. 12 at 11; Leeds.—ROBERT JERRAM, Nottingham, and Lambley, Nottinghamshire, Innkeeper and Cattle Dealer. Nov. 12 at 11; Nottingham.

FRIDAY, Oct. 18, 1861.

JAMES NICHOL & ROBERT FRAZIER NORTH, 27, Bishopsgate-street Within, London, Tallow Brokers (Nicholl & North). Oct. 29 at 12; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM SWORD, Dewsbury, York, Draper. Nov. 1 at 11; Leeds.—WILLIAM BARNES & SAMUEL PICKERING, 83, Gracechurch-street, London, late of 127, Brick-lane, Bethnal Green, Middlesex, Wholesale Boot & Shoe Manufacturers. Nov. 14 at 11; Basinghall-street.—THOMAS BURGIN & WILLIAM BURGIN, 26, Great Winchester-street, London, Upholsters and Cabinet Makers (Burgin Brothers). Nov. 8 at 11; Basinghall-street. Joint estate, and separate estate of each.—JOHN BLACKWOOD WILSON, 22, John-street, Penton-street, Pentonville, Middlesex, Draper and Hawker. Nov. 8 at 11; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM ADAM, 34, Great Tower-street, Merchant, and also of Lloyd's, Underwriter, London. Nov. 8 at 11; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE AMES, Sible, Heddingham, Essex, Cattle and Sheep Salesman. Nov. 14 at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE PATRICK ROONEY, Liverpool, Licensed Victualler and Builder. Nov. 8 at 11; Liverpool.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY, AT THE LAW INSTITUTION, CHANCERY LANE.

Members are requested to supply the Committee with Questions for Discussion.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION.

For Tuesday, October 29th, 1861. President—Mr. BRADFORD.

278.—Should the decision of the Court of Exchequer Chamber, that an action for malicious prosecution will not lie under the circumstances of the case of Pitjohn v. Mackinder, 9 W. R. 477, s. c. on appeal, 30 L. J. C. P. 257, be upheld?

Affirmative—Mr. ALLEN and Mr. LUCAS.

Negative—Mr. PEACHEY and Mr. NEWBON.

For Tuesday, November 5th, 1861. President—Mr. HEWITT.

XCIX.—Should recent foreign events be considered as strengthening the position of Conservatism?

Mr. DOWSE is appointed to open the debate, and Messieurs ANDERSON, A. H. MILLER, and BELLANT to speak on the question.

For Tuesday, November 12th, 1861. President—Mr. WINGATE.

279.—Will a parol license when executed pass an incorporeal hereditament as if granted by deed?

Winter v. Brockwell, 8 East 308; Taylor v. Waters, 7 Taunt. 373; Hewlins v. Shippam, 5 B. & C. 221; Liggins v. Inge, 7 Bing. 682; Cocker v. Couper, 1 C. M. & R. 418.

Affirmative—Mr. EYLES and Mr. BEAL.

Negative—Mr. RIDDLE and Mr. OLIVER.

For Tuesday, November 19th, 1861. President—Mr. GREEN.

280.—Ought the decision in Wild v. Harris, 18 L. J. N. S. C. P. 297, that a married man may be sued for breach of promise of marriage to a female, who, at the time of making the contract with him, was ignorant of his being married, to be upheld?

Cooper v. Witham, 1 Sid. 375, 2 Keb. 399; Liverpool Association v. Fairhurst and Wife, 18 Jur. 191.

Affirmative—Mr. POWELL and Mr. ATWOOD.

Negative—Mr. ROOKS and Mr. SHERRING.

For Tuesday, November 26th, 1861. President—Mr. PEACHEY.

C.—Is it desirable to establish a Legal University, exercising the powers of the Inns of Court and the Incorporated Law Society?

Mr. WATERS is appointed to open the debate, and Messieurs SPENCER, BAKER, and GILL, to speak on the question.

THE CHAIR WILL BE TAKEN AT SEVEN O'CLOCK.

Gentlemen requiring Books from the Library are requested to apply for them in the Arbitration Room five minutes before Seven o'clock on the Evenings of Debate.

Copies of the Rules and all requisite information will be furnished by the Secretary, with whom Gentlemen desirous of becoming Members are requested to communicate.

ENTRANCE FEE, 10s. ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, 5s.

GEO. L. WINGATE, Secretary,
9, Copthall-court, E.C.

Now ready,
THE NEWSPAPER PRESS,
(Extracts from.)

AND OPINIONS OF ENGLISH, SCOTTISH, AND IRISH COUNSEL, on the expediency of making Life Insurance Policies Indisputable Documents, when required in connection with Money Transactions, or as Family Provisions; being Appendix to Third Edition of Letter, "The Manager of the Indisputable Life Assurance Company of Scotland, to the Manager of the Standard Life Assurance Company."

Letter and Appendix forwarded on receipt of six postage stamps.
Edinburgh: T. & T. CLARK, George-street.

PELICAN LIFE INSURANCE OFFICE, ESTABLISHED IN 1797.

No. 70, Lombard-street, E.C., and 57, Charing Cross, W.C.

DIRECTORS.

Octavius E. Coope, Esq.
William Cotton, Esq. D.C.L., F.R.S.
John Davis, Esq.
Jas. A. Gordon, Esq., M.D., F.R.S.
Edward Hawkins, jun., Esq.
Kirkman D. Hodgson, Esq., M.P.

Henry Lancelot Holland, Esq.
William James Lancaster, Esq.
John Lubbock, Esq., F.R.S.
Benjamin Shaw, Esq.
Mathew Whiting, Esq.
M. Wyvill, jun., Esq., M.P.

Robert Tucker, Secretary and Actuary.

SPECIAL BONUS NOTICE.

Third Septennial Investigation and Division of Profits to 1st July, 1861. The cash bonus varies from £21 6s. 8d. to £32 6s. 8d. per cent. on the premiums paid in the last seven years on policies of 7, 14 and 21 years' duration.

The equivalent addition to each policy ranges from £28 10s. to £59 13s. 4d. per cent. of such premiums; or from 19s. to £2 7s. per cent. per annum on the sum assured.

LOANS

On Life Interests in possession or reversion; also upon other approved Security in connection with Life Assurance.

•• For Prospectuses, Forms of Proposal, &c., apply at the Offices as above, or to any of the Company's Agents.

UNCONDITIONAL ASSURANCE on LIFE.—

Under the new scheme (class B.) of the LIFE ASSOCIATION of SCOTLAND (Founded 1834) there is no liability to forfeiture or to extra charges, nor are there any restrictions as to residence or occupation. The Policies are therefore peculiarly valuable for almost every purpose.

Prospectuses, containing full explanations, will be forwarded to any part of the country. The premiums required under this new scheme are moderate, and are as follow:—

Rates for Assurance of £100, payable at Death.

Age	Without profits.	With profits.	Age	Without Profits.	With profits.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.		£ s. d.	£ s. d.
25	1 19 8	2 0 4	45	5 12 8	4 1 8
30	2 5 8	2 12 10	50	4 7 8	4 18 6
35	2 12 6	3 0 2	55	5 6 6	5 19 10
40	3 1 2	3 8 10	60	6 10 0	7 6 2

A medical officer in attendance daily, at half-past 12 o'clock.

ON 5TH DECEMBER

The Scheme will be closed for the current year. Entrants to the Profit Class will be entitled to a FULL YEAR'S BONUS more than later Entrants.

THOS. FRASER, Resident Secretary.

No. 20, King William-street, E.C.

UNITED KINGDOM LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

No. 8, WATERLOO PLACE, Pall Mall, LONDON, S.W.

The Hon. FRANCIS SCOTT, CHAIRMAN.

CHARLES BERWICK CURTIS, Esq., DEPUTY CHAIRMAN.

Fourth Division of Profits.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Parties desirous of participating in the fourth division of profits to be declared on policies effected prior to the 31st of December, 1861, should make immediate application. There have already been three divisions of profits, and the bonuses divided have averaged nearly 2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, or from 30 to 100 per cent. on the premiums paid, without the risk of co-partnership.

To show more clearly what these bonuses amount to, the three following cases are given as examples:

Sum Insured.	Bonuses added.	Amount payable up to Dec., 1854.
£5,000	£1,987 10	£6,987 10
1,000	379 10	1,379 10
100	39 15	139 15

Notwithstanding these large additions, the premiums are on the lowest scale compatible with security; in addition to which advantages, one-half of the premiums may, if desired, for the term of five years, remain unpaid at 5 per cent. interest, without security or deposit of the policy.

The assets of the Company at the 31st December, 1860, amounted to £730,665 7s. 10d., all of which had been invested in Government and other approved securities.

No charge for Volunteer Military Corps while serving in the United Kingdom.

Policy stamps paid by the office.

For prospectuses, &c., apply to the Resident Director, No. 8, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall.

By order, E. L. BOYD, Resident Director.

ALBION SNELL, Watchmaker and Jeweller, has removed to his New Premises, 114, High Holborn, seven doors east of King-street, where he respectfully solicits an inspection of his new and well-selected stock.

TRELOAR'S CORK FLOOR CLOTH, or KAMP-TULICON, COCOA NUT MATTING, and DOOR MATS. Best quality and moderate prices.

T. TRELOAR, Manufacturer, 42, Ludgate-hill, London.

KAMPTULICON or PATENT INDIA-RUBBER AND CORK FLOORCLOTH. Warm, noiseless, and impervious to damp, as supplied to the Houses of Parliament, British Museum, Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and numerous public and private offices.

F. G. TRESTRAIL & Co., 19 & 20, Walbrook, London, E.C.

Manufactory—South London Works, Lambeth.

MODELS of SHIPS or BOATS made to Scale or Order. Blocks, deadeyes, anchors, cannon, flags, figure-heads, &c. and every article used in fitting up models of ships, cutter and schooner yachts, screw and paddle boats. Models cleaned and repaired. Models of any description made for evidence in actions at law. Ensigns, burgees, and signal flags made to order.

W. STEPHENS, the Model Dockyard, No. 23, Trinity-square, Tower-hill, near Barking Churchyard, E.C.

HAIR DYE! HAIR DYE! HAIR DYE!—

GILLINGWATER'S ATRAPILATORY is the best Hair Dye in England. Grey, red, or rusty hair dyed instantly to beautiful and natural brown or black without the least injury to hair or skin, and the ill effects of bad dyes remedied.—Sold at all Chemists and Perfumers of repute, and by the proprietor, W. GILLINGWATER, 149, Holborn-bars, and 96, Goswell-road. Sent free to any railway station in the kingdom in cases, 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. each.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

* Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, OCTOBER 26, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Considering how often British juries are told that they are the Palladium of British liberty and the glory of the constitution, they must be rather surprised now and then at the speeches which fall from the minor judicial bench—by which we mean such functionaries as recorders and commissioners at the Old Bailey. The present week furnishes two instances in point, one of which certainly ought not to be overlooked. On Tuesday last a case came before Mr. Kerr, the judge of the city Sheriffs' Court, and who in that capacity is named a commissioner of the Central Criminal Court. The facts were very simple. A young man named Hayes, who was shooting birds in the fields adjoining the London and Brighton Railway line, near Rotherhithe, fired in the direction of a train, and wounded an engine-driver in the face—fortunately, without doing him any serious harm. There could be little doubt that the injury was the result of carelessness, and not of any intention on the prisoner's part. When these facts were proved to the jury, Mr. Kerr expressed an opinion that the case ought not to be proceeded with, because it was manifest that the casualty was the result of accident. Counsel for the prosecution, however, was desirous of "having the opinion of the jury upon it;" upon which slender provocation Mr. Kerr thinks himself justified in casting a universal slur upon English jurymen. We quote from the report:—

"Mr. Commissioner KERR: A British jury can do anything.

"Mr. Sleigh insisted that the case should be proceeded with."

Then arose between the counsel and the judge a curious discussion as to whether the act of the prisoner was criminal or not: the former maintaining that if the prisoner had killed a man under the circumstances the act would amount to the crime of manslaughter; the latter insisting that it would not, as it was clearly an accident. For the conclusion of this interesting case we cannot do better than refer to the report in the morning journals, which is as follows:—

After some further discussion between the learned counsel and the court,

Mr. Commissioner KERR told the jury that they had already heard his opinion on the matter, and he should give them no directions, but they might deal with the case as they liked.

Mr. Sleigh, suggested to the Court that it was a point for the jury that, in fact, at the time of the occurrence the prisoner was trespassing on the company's line.

Mr. Commissioner KERR.—Then bring your action for trespass.

The jury then turned round in their box, and, after a consultation of about a quarter of an hour, returned a verdict of guilty on the second count of the indictment, which charged the prisoner with a common assault.

Mr. Sleigh said he was instructed by the company not to press for heavy punishment, their only object being to protect the public.

Mr. Commissioner KERR remarked that he should like to know, after the great flourish he had heard as to the motives of the company, whether they meant to bear the expenses of this prosecution.

Mr. Sleigh replied that he had no answer to make on that point.

The learned COMMISSIONER (addressing the prisoner) said, the justice of the case would be met by fining him 20s.; and in the propriety of that judgment he was fortified by the opinion of the worthy alderman (Phillips) who sat by his side.

Now without at all entering upon the knotty point whether the prisoner might have been found guilty of manslaughter or not, or even considering whether the jury were warranted in their verdict, it is plain that the judge in this case, in the first place offered a gratuitous insult to the jury upon the smallest possible amount of provocation, not from them, but from the prosecuting counsel; and, in the next place, that instead of the judge offensively pitching the case at the jury without comment or explanation of the law, he was bound by his duty to inform their minds, not only by what dropped from him in his rencontre with the counsel, but by such a statement both of fact and law as is usual on such occasions. We presume that the act alleged against the prisoner would be clearly criminal if it could be shown that he had fired at a bird, although he knew a train was coming, and might reasonably have supposed that his doing so would involve risk to the persons in it; and this, as a question of fact, was wholly for the jury. But from the first the judge desired to stop inquiry, and ridiculed the notion of the interference of the jury. It is by no means unlikely that his conduct had an effect with the jurors the very opposite of what he intended; although we are bound to say, that in our opinion the verdict is one which commends itself to all reasonable men. We can hardly say as much, however, for the judgment, although the judge was "fortified by the opinion of the worthy alderman who sat by his side."

The Times of Tuesday last contains another account, in which one of our minor criminal judges takes a fling at "a British jury," and such is the heading of the paragraph in question. The report, however, does not enter into any details, except that a jury at Portsmouth acquitted a prisoner against clear and strong evidence, and after a "lucid" summing up of the recorder; and thereupon the report proceeds:—

"The learned Recorder, in discharging the jury, said that he should have done so with much greater satisfaction had their verdict in the last case (the case referred to) been a different one. There was another case, the learned gentleman said, for stealing lead from the dockyard, which had been postponed until the next sessions, but had that case come before him he certainly should have found it necessary to swear in a fresh jury."

We do not intend to be so unfair as to consider this case as at all identical with that at the Old Bailey. A judge has a right, no doubt, to express dissatisfaction with the conduct or the verdict of the jury, although he has no mission to prevent them from exercising their proper functions or to insult them while they are properly discharging them. We append some account of this second case, only because it turns up so close in point of time to the other, and is certainly an illustration of the growing tendency of our lower judiciary to affect the province of both judge and jury, and to forget the respect which is owing to juries, who discharge their onerous duties without fee or reward, and who are, after all—to use phrases which may be heard any day at the Old Bailey—the bulwark of our constitution and the Palladium of our liberties.

Many more injurious and terrible crimes than that for which Vincent Collucci was convicted at the Central Criminal Court on Wednesday last have, even within the last few months, been committed in this country; but few that have ever been brought under the public notice have called forth greater indignation and disgust at the conduct of the prisoner than in his case; meanness, duplicity, unmanliness, ingratitude, and some other of the lowest and basest qualities of human nature existed, without one relieving virtue, in the character of this scoundrel; and it would have been a disgrace to English law if it was so far divorced from public sentiment as to have allowed him to get free upon such evidence as was tendered at the trial. Under these circumstances, Mr. Keane, the counsel for Collucci, undertook, in defending him, a very onerous and puzzling task. It is no wonder, then, that he pertinaciously urged a great number of legal objections of a technical character, which were at once overruled. Apart from his chances on these grounds, it was clear enough that he could make nothing upon what lawyers are in the habit of calling the merits of the case. Nevertheless, he did deliver himself of what the reporter characterizes as "a most able address to the jury on behalf of the defendant." He introduced his speech by stating that it would certainly be a "subject of regret if any person charged with a criminal offence was not permitted to lay his own answer to the charge before the jury who were called upon to decide his guilt or innocence." Mr. Keane then informed the jury that he wished them "distinctly to understand that the defence he should attempt to set up was the prisoner's own defence;" that the prisoner "positively insisted upon it being made, and that he alone was responsible for it." Now, this proceeding on the part of counsel, raises a very interesting and important question which we shall take an early opportunity of discussing in the manner in which it deserves; but, meanwhile, so far as Mr. Keane is concerned, there can hardly be any question that he ought to have been more cautious in charging upon the prisoner the entire responsibility of his speech. Indeed, in the reports of it which have appeared in the morning journals, it is not easy to draw the line between the professed assertions of the prisoner and the suggestions of counsel. Notwithstanding the extraordinary exordium of Mr. Keane, the defence of the prisoner was simply that he did not give the prosecutrix any parcel on the 3rd of August, as alleged by her, and that no bargain was ever made between him and the prosecutrix for the delivery of the letters to her; and he declared that the money was given him, not upon the condition that he should restore the prosecutrix's letters, but as a compensation to him for her refusal to marry him. All the remainder of counsel's speech, as it appears to us, is of the ordinary character, except the latter part, in which he argues upon the supposition of the truth of the prisoner's statement. It was scarcely fair, therefore, for the advocate to attempt to divest himself of the entire responsibility of his defence. But suppose it were otherwise, the question remains whether it is the duty of counsel to make themselves the mouth-piece for the statements of the prisoner, which under any circumstances, are only received by a stretch of tolerance on the part of the judge, and which ought never to influence the minds of judge or jury, except so far as they suggest the probability of a state of circumstances inconsistent with the prisoner's guilt. It is the common practice of criminal courts for counsel to suggest all these probabilities, without calling in aid any alleged assertions of the prisoner. At all events, to our minds it does not appear to be either a dignified or useful course for any counsel to present a defence which he himself in the plainest terms, repudiates, and from any imputation of the folly of which he manifests a somewhat too eager desire to be saved.

STATUTE LAW REVISION.

The general repealing Act of the last session (24 & 25 Vict. c. 101) may be regarded as an earnest of the work now in progress for the systematic revision of the statute law.

We have already more than once explained that the series of experiments in statute law reform which had been going on for years had led to the conclusion that the first object to be aimed at was the publication of a complete expurgated edition. It is unnecessary to dwell on the benefits which such an edition would confer on the public, and particularly on the practitioners and administrators of the law. Its direct utility is obviously great; and it would, besides, be a point for a safe and comprehensive code on LIFE.—

Expurgation would be very incon- forfeiture or to extra-limited to the omission of such enactments, every purpose.
expressly and specifically repealed in the ordinary course of legislation. To be satisfactory, expurgation must go much further than this; all such enactments as have in any way ceased to be in force must be discovered and eliminated.

The scrutiny of the Statute Book, as far as it has gone, seems to have shown that such enactments as have ceased to be in force, without having been expressly and specifically repealed, may be classed under six heads. The division is stated and illustrated in a note prefixed to the Statute Law Revision Bill (No. 2) introduced by the Lord Chancellor at the end of last session. The six classes comprise such enactments as are—

1. Expired.—That is, enactments which having been originally limited to endure only for a specified time, have not been either made permanent or kept in force by continuance:

2. Spent.—That is, enactments exhausted or spent in operation by the complete accomplishment of the purpose for which they were passed, at the moment of their first taking effect, or on the happening of some specified event, or on the doing of some act authorised or required; as for instance, the "Statutum de Justiciariis assignatis; quod vocatur Rageman," 4 Edw. 1, which provides for justices going throughout the land to inquire, hear, and determine all the complaints and suits for trespass committed within twenty-five years then past, before the Feast of St. Michael in the fourth year of King Edward:

3. Repealed in general terms.—For instance, by the repeal (5 Eliz. c. 4. s. 2), of "as much of all the statutes heretofore made, and every branch of them, as touch or concern the hiring, keeping, departing, working, wages, or order, of servants, workmen, artificers, apprentices, and labourers, or any of them:"

4. Virtually repealed.—Where an earlier enactment is inconsistent with, or is rendered nugatory by, a later one; as for instance, 20 Hen. 3, Stat. Merton, c. 7, relating to the refusal of heirs to marry at the request of their lords, is virtually repealed by 12 Car. 2, c. 24, s. 1, taking away tenure by knight service, and the fruits and consequents thereof:

5. Superseded.—Where a later enactment effects the same purposes as an earlier one, by repetition of its terms or otherwise; as for instance, the provision of 20 Hen. 3, Stat. Merton, c. 8, "writs of novel disseisin shall not pass the first voyage of our sovereign lord the King that now is into Gascoigne," is superseded by the provision of 3 Edw. 1, Stat. Westm. 1, c. 39, "that a writ of novel disseisin, of partition which is called nuper obiit, have their limitation since the first voyage of King Henry, father to the King that now is, into Gascoigne:"

6. Obsolete.—(i.) Where the state of things contemplated by the enactment has long ceased to exist; as for instance in the case of 13 Edw. 1, Stat. Westm. 2, c. 43, which prohibits Hospitallers and Templars bringing any man into plea before the keepers of their privileges for matters cognizable in the King's Court;

(ii.) Where the enactment is of such a nature as to be no longer capable of being put in force, regard being had to the alteration of political or social circumstances; as for instance, 4 Edw. 3, c. 12, providing "that a cry shall be made that none be so hardy to sell wines but at a reasonable price . . . and that assay shall be made of such wines two times every year . . . and all the wines that shall be found corrupt shall be poured out, and the vessels broken. . . ."

Now, except as to the first two of these classes (namely, the expired and the spent) it would be perhaps scarcely justifiable for any expurgators, on their own authority and responsibility, to strike out and omit from the new edition such enactments as have in these various ways ceased to be in force. But an express declaration or enactment by the Legislature itself that enactments of these various classes are not in force would solve all difficulty of this kind. And it is such a declaration or ment that is embodied in the general repealing Act, Revision Act, 1861,) to which we cannot not name and address. Any error or a Journal should be. lateral advantage derived from this should not be overlooked. Such is not only of immediate service for the edition in direct connection with which it is prepared, but it has also a permanent usefulness. It not only stamps the particular edition in aid of which it is passed, with the authority of the Legislature, as far as in the nature of things that can possibly be done, but it also saves all revisors or expurgators who may come afterwards from the labour of going again over the ground which has been once effectually cleared. It concludes absolutely and for ever all question as to the enactments with which it deals being in force or not.

* As to the use of the term spent, see 1 Blackst. Comm. 44., 2nd Report of the late Statute Law Commissioners, p. 7, and Warren v. Windle, 3 East, 206.

We shall make some observations at another time on the extent and particular nature of the Act which has been passed, the first, probably, of a long series.

The Courts, Appointments, Promotions, Vacancies, &c.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN.)

Oct. 21.—In re Osborne.—The bankrupt petitioned the Court in forma pauperis. Adjudication was made. He was now brought up from prison to receive his discharge. The gaoler applied for the payment of his fee for so bringing him up. The bankrupt submitted that under the 98th section of the new law he was entitled, as petitioning in forma pauperis, to be excused payment of the fee.

The COMMISSIONER said he could not consider that debtors were to be excused payment of these fees. If they were, gaolers would refuse to incur the cost of bringing them to the court.

The gaoler said that under the Bankruptcy Consolidation Act, the fee was 10s. 6d.; in insolvent cases the fee was 3s. He was willing to accept 3s., the case being one that but for the new bankruptcy law must have gone to the Insolvent Court.

The COMMISSIONER thought the officer took a right view of the case, and that 3s. might properly be understood to be the usual fee in all similar cases.

The fee having been paid, the bankrupt applied for his discharge.

The COMMISSIONER said, notice of the application not having appeared in the Gazette, he must decline to hear it.

The bankrupt then asked that he might be excused the advertisement expenses.

The COMMISSIONER.—No. The salary of the messenger of the court has been reduced to £500 a-year. It is impossible that he can pay these charges out of his own pocket. No fee to the messenger need be paid, but the cost of the advertisement must be paid.

Mr. Pennell (official assignee).—I had four petitions on Saturday. The four estates will not produce £4.

Correspondence.

STATUTE LAW REVISION.

In a note on the Statute Law Revision Act, 1861 (see Solicitors' Journal Statutes, p. 88), objection is taken to the repeal of the first part of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, s. 3.

If any one will examine the enactments mentioned in the note, with the addition of s. 101 (the interpretation clause) of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, we think he must come to the conclusion that the objection is in both its branches unfounded; that the first part of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, s. 3 is virtually repealed by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57; and that the suggested practical difficulty under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18 can never arise.

As to the first branch of the objection: we conceive it is plain that the first part of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, s. 3, is overridden by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57. The first enactment provides, in effect, that in the case of a vacancy in the office of returning officer for a borough, the sheriff of the county shall appoint a deputy to perform the duties. The second enactment provides, in effect, that in all cases whatever, whenever there shall be, either from temporary vacancy or from some other cause, no person duly qualified to perform the duties of returning officer, the sheriff of the county shall in all respects perform the duties of and incidental to the office of returning officer. There seems no ground for contending that the second enactment is narrower in its application than the first, though it must be admitted that both enactments are obscurely framed.

But, independently of the operation of the second enactment as thus generally overriding the first, the case as to the supposed practical difficulty, which forms the second branch of the objection, will be found to stand as follows:—

(1.) Under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, where there is no town clerk or similar officer the provisions of that Act relative to the town clerk extend to the returning officer of the borough or his nominee or deputy.

(2.) By the same Act, the returning officer is defined to be any person to whom by virtue of his office under any law, custom, or statute the execution of a writ for the election of a member of Parliament doth or shall belong.

(3.) By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57, the sheriff of the county is in terms charged with the execution of a writ for the election of a member of Parliament for the borough, where there is no person legally qualified and competent as returning officer to execute the same.

(4.) It follows, that the sheriff of the county stands in the like position as the town clerk, or ordinary returning officer, for the purposes of the annual revision of the borough list of voters, and for all the other purposes of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18.

It may be added that, notwithstanding the generality of its terms, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, s. 3, would appear to have had no application to many of the new parliamentary boroughs created by the Reform Act; for by that Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 11) express provision is made for the nomination by the sheriff of the county of a new returning officer in case of the death or incapacity by sickness or otherwise of the returning officer of any of such boroughs (and see as to Birkenhead, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 112, s. 10). In this way, again, as to this large and important class of boroughs, the supposed practical difficulty is clearly obviated.

FRANCIS S. REILLY.

Lincoln's Inn, Oct. 17, 1861.

ARTHUR JOHN WOOD.

TOUTING, PROFESSIONAL AND OTHERWISE.

One of our country clients, for whom we have been very many years concerned as London agents, a short time ago received, from the Suffolk solicitor of thirty years' standing, a letter and card similar to those which appeared in your number of the 12th inst. In forwarding the documents to us, our client, after making a few remarks on such an unprofessional way of getting business, adds that he is "not to be caught by such angling."

We enclose, for insertion in your paper, if you think proper to give it space, a circular which a town client of ours a few days ago received from a "non-professional touter." In sending you the document we merely wish to observe that the estate for which so much is offered to be done for so very small a fee as one guinea is not by any means an inconsiderable one.

A. B. & C.

P.S.—Can you form any idea as to how it can be necessary for the Suffolk solicitor, who boasts "of thirty years' standing" in the profession, to have recourse to the toutting system?

The following is a copy of the circular referred to in our correspondents' letter:—

— Street, London, E.C. Oct. 2, 1861.

Gentlemen,—In consequence of the death of Mr. —, and the necessity of administering to his estate, and passing the requisite accounts at Somerset House, I beg to offer my services for that purpose, as well as for transferring all stocks from the deceased's name to the legatees.

My fee is £1 : 1 : 0.

It is scarcely necessary for me to mention that should you employ a solicitor to transact the business referred to you will probably incur a heavy bill of costs—quite unnecessarily.

I add at foot the names of my referees, and shall be happy to supply you with any information you may require free of charge.—I am, your obedient servant,

To the executors of the late —.

Referees: Rev. A. — B. —; and Rev. Dr. E. —.

RAILWAY LIABILITIES.

I put some household goods on the C. line of rail, which line transferred them to the S. D. line, which latter line transferred them to the N. D. line. When delivered by the N. D. line they were much damaged. The C. line say that the damage was not done by them, and the other lines refuse to answer my letter respecting it. Will any of your numerous readers tell me which line to sue?

J. T. S.

COMMON LAW CHAMBERS.

I am desirous of being informed why all the summonses need be returnable at the same time. Could not twenty be granted for 11 and twenty for each successive hour till counsel attend, and then, allowing an hour exclusively for them, twenty for each succeeding hour till 3? The judge seldom arrives before 11.30, and then takes the adjourned summonses. If the whole twenty appointed for 11 were not brought before him (rather unlikely) he would have enough to employ him till 12, and the same might be said up to 3 o'clock.

AN ATTORNEY'S CLERK.

REG. v. COLLUCCI.

This trial having excited some interest not only in the public mind, but also in the legal world, I beg to draw your readers' attention to one point arising in it. I observe that the prisoner's counsel impressed on the jury that the defence he set up was the prisoner's own; that he positively insisted on its being made; and that he alone was responsible for it. (I am here quoting from the Times report.) He went on to say that where a prisoner insisted upon a particular course being taken, it was no part of the duty of an advocate to interfere with that desire. He, therefore, should merely state the answer the prisoner himself would have made to the charge. Now it occurs to me, as it evidently did to the Lord Chief Baron, whether the inevitable inference from this is not that the counsel himself thought the defence a very injudicious one—and even further than that, I think he conveyed that impression to the jury. I think if I had been on the jury, I should have said to myself "the prisoner's counsel himself actually admits the defence he puts forward is none at all, and therefore I shall find him guilty." Now, did the counsel—a very able one, no doubt—properly discharge his duty? Does it not look a little like an attempt to prevent his being taken for a fool, to say (as he really does) that he would have made a better defence if he could? Why could he not have made the defence insisted upon without letting it be seen that he considered it futile? Was he paid for doing what may have decided the case against his client? LEOATIS.

POWER OF ATTORNEY.—FOREIGN COUNTRY.

In answer to the letter of your correspondent "A Law Clerk," in your number of last week, I would observe that a power of attorney given by a person in this country to be acted upon in a foreign state or colony must be verified by a notarial attestation of the document.

The attesting witness should make a declaration before a notary as to the execution of the power of attorney, and such notary will thereupon give his certificate. Forms of the declaration and certificate are given at pages 754, 755, "Hughes' Pleadings in Conveyancing," vol. 3.

Neither the city seal nor an ordinary attestation are of themselves sufficient.

The declaration may be dispensed with if the chief magistrate of a place attest the power, but his signature must be verified by a notarial attestation. W. S.

In reply to the inquiry of "A Law Clerk," I beg to state that in order to prove the due execution of a power of attorney to be acted upon in the colonies, it is necessary that a declaration should be made by the attesting witness.

If this is done before the lord mayor, the city seal is requisite, certifying the declaration, or if made before a notary public his seal is requisite. But where there are colonial commissioners (as there are here for New South Wales and Victoria,) the power can be executed before them and no declaration is requisite. And of course neither the city nor notarial seal is required.

It is hardly necessary to say that the usual mode of execution alone renders a power "a valid legal instrument," but ninety-nine persons out of a hundred require proof that it is really executed by the person by whom it purports to be executed.

P. J. GORDON,

Commissioner for New South Wales.

18. Old Broad-street.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ACT.

What is the interpretation to be put upon sects. 73 and 74 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. Does it mean that the judgment recovered must exceed £50; or that so long as the sum of £50 was sought to be recovered by the action or suit brought, it does not matter whether judgment goes for a less sum.

INQUIRER.

ON FRAUDULENT TRADE MARKS.

The following Paper was read by JOHN MORRIS, Esq., at the recent meeting of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, Worcester:—

The Trade Marks Bill, which passed the House of Lords in the last session of parliament, was withdrawn by the President of the Board of Trade when it came into committee in the Commons, with notice that it would be re-introduced "the first thing next session, and referred to a select committee."

The object of this paper is to indicate some of the points to which attention will have to be directed in dealing with any bill to be hereafter introduced in lieu of that so recently withdrawn.

The late bill dealt with two very distinct offences—the first relating to fraudulent trade marks; the second to false labelling. At first sight the two may appear to be, if not identical, at all events intimately connected, but upon closer examination the principles applicable to each will be found to be widely different.

Trade marks refer wholly to ownership, or to that property which arises from manufactures. False labelling includes many cases in which no question of trade mark or peculiar ownership is involved; as, for instance, the false marking of goods as to quantity or length. For reasons which I shall afterwards explain I would limit the offence of false labelling to cases in which there is a false indication as to quantity, length, or the name of the manufacturer or owner.

Trade marks are not confined to the name of the manufacturer or owner, but extend, as we shall presently see, to the use of signs and marks of every conceivable kind, as to the right to use which there may be, and often are, disputed questions.

There can rarely be any dispute as to the right to use the name of the manufacturer or owner, where it is the name of a living person actually engaged in the production of the article; and, therefore, in such cases, I would put the name under the same protection as the quantity and length, because so far as the fraudulent use of the name is concerned (which will include most of the flagrant offences in this class of cases) you thereby get rid of many of the difficulties which arise as to trade marks.

The distinction between cases of false labelling and of trade marks is most important: the former is an offence against the public, and may, therefore, come under the head criminal law, while the latter partakes of the nature of a civil wrong; the former can be dealt with at once by legislation, but before the latter can be made the ground-work of criminal proceedings you must, by registration or otherwise, provide for settling preliminarily the two essential questions, what is a trade mark? and who, in any given case, is entitled to its exclusive use?

Whether it will be wise to deal with both these subjects of false labelling and trade marks by one Bill may be open to question.

A trade mark is a species of private property, and there certainly seems no more reason why that should be protected by the criminal law than copyright, patents, or designs.

On the other hand, no one doubts the propriety of checking the false marking of goods as to lengths or quantity, or as to the name of the manufacturer or owner.

I will now proceed to examine in detail some of the provisions of the late bill; and first, as to false labelling:—Section 6 applied to cases where there should be "any false indication, statement, or description of the quantity, quality, measure, substance, or material of such chattel or article or any part thereof, or of the manner or place in or at which, or of the person by whom, such chattel or article was made, manufactured, produced, or was, or is, dealt in."

The words "quality," "substance," "material," "manner or place," are (thus applied) all objectionable. They are not required to meet any admitted mischief, while they will give rise to all sorts of disputed questions, like the one now often raised—what is paper? Can carpets, known as

"Brussels" be sold under that designation when it is notorious they are not made at Brussels? What are "superfine," "firsts," "seconds," and all such terms applied to quality? Now, the mischief complained of is not that the public are misled by the use of any such terms as these, because as to them purchasers can and should exercise their own judgment, the real cause of complaint is, that the public are misled by misrepresentations as to quantity, length, and the name of the manufacturer or owner, as to which no skill or care on the part of a purchaser can protect him.

But even in those cases of false labelling to which I have said the criminal law might be properly applied, there is a clear distinction which should always be borne in mind between the case of the maker of goods so falsely marked and the vender—the latter may innocently sell a reel of cotton marked 100 yards and containing only fifty; but the manufacturer cannot innocently make and mark it. It is impossible that the dealer can test the lengths and quantities of a large mass of articles dealt in, such as cotton, ribbons, lace, &c. Such articles are necessarily sold to the public in precisely the same state in which they leave the manufacturer's hands. Some protection, therefore, should be extended to the innocent vender of falsely-labelled goods. This might be done by requiring proof of knowledge and intent to defraud, while in the case of the maker (the source of the mischief) less stringent provisions as to proof might be required.

A marked distinction is made by our law between the manufacturer and the dealer in the case of gold and silver wares having forged or counterfeited marks; such marks are well known, and if in any case the dealer ought to be held responsible for what he sells, it should be in that case, —yet, while the maker is liable to transportation, the dealer escapes with a fine, and even that he can get off from by giving up the name of the manufacturer. (See 7 & 8 Vict. c. 22. ss. 3, 4.)

In order to protect the innocent vender from vexatious charges under any Act to be passed, some provisions should also be made for a preliminary notice before commencing proceedings, where the selling or exposing for sale complained of shall take place at the shop or warehouse of the alleged offender; the same being his usual known and established place of business. This will not, of course, prevent immediate proceedings in the case of those who have no settled place of business, and who would use any protection of this kind as a means of escaping altogether from the operation of the law; while, on the other hand, if some protection, such as is here suggested, be not thrown around the innocent vender, traders will be liable to be dragged before magistrates by evil-disposed persons, and it need scarcely be observed that the right to an acquittal is not all the protection which is required. If a new class of cases like this is to be made subject to the criminal law, protection must be taken against its being abused, or the Act will become a nuisance instead of a benefit. Any protection of the kind suggested should provide for vendors being at liberty, on receiving the preliminary notice, to give up the name of the manufacturer or person from whom they purchased; and if the prosecutor should after this proceed against the vender it should be at the risk of costs, if not also of a penalty in case he failed. This will protect innocent vendors, and at the same time facilitate the reaching of the real offenders—the manufacturers of the falsely labelled goods.

These remarks apply to false labelling. I now come to the trade marks portion of the late Bill.

By admitting that the fraudulent use of the name of the manufacturer or owner may be punished criminally, quite apart from any question of trade mark, much difficulty which would otherwise arise under this head is got rid of. The objections to this part of the late Bill cannot be better stated than in the words of a petition against the Bill from wholesale houses in Manchester, which alleged as follows:—

"That the said Bill defines a trade mark as including 'any name, word, letter, mark, device, figure, sign, seal, stamp, label, or other thing lawfully used by any person to denote any chattel; and makes the sale, or exposure for sale, of any chattel or article, together with any counterfeited trade mark, or any fraudulent addition to or alteration of a trade mark, or with any imitation of a trade mark so resembling such trade mark as to be likely to deceive; or with any trade mark, whether the same be a genuine trade mark or not, which shall have been applied without lawful authority or excuse, the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused,' a misdemeanour, and render the guilty party liable to imprisonment for 'two years, with or without hard labour, or by fine or both, as the Court shall award.'

"That your petitioners deal in goods which are so variously marked that it is utterly impossible to ascertain, in most cases, whether any trade mark, or alleged trade mark, is interfered with, or even whether the mark is intended as a trade mark or not; and yet, at the instance of interested or malicious persons, your petitioners might be subject to criminal proceedings, not only before the person claiming the trade mark has publicly established his right to use it, but, contrary to the principles of English law, with the proof of the non-infringement thrown upon the accused.

"That, in the opinion of your petitioners, no proceedings ought to be taken under this Bill, until the person claiming an exclusive right to use any trade mark has publicly established and notified that right; and that the persons against whom criminal proceedings ought to be directed are those who are guilty of the overt act of fraudulently counterfeiting such mark, or falsely marking or labelling any article, and not the vendors of such articles, who may have purchased them in the ordinary course of business."

Even if the criminal law should be applied to trade marks generally, still the whole principle on which that part of the late bill was founded must be reconsidered in order to frame provisions which, while correcting the admitted mischief, shall not vex and harass trade.

The difficulties of registration I admit; and have always seen, from the nature of the "marks," their number and complexity, it would be impossible, even with the aid of photography, to enable traders to be kept informed by means of an index of the registered marks, which would extend in number to thousands; but the difficulties in that direction would be lessened by requiring a preliminary notice before making a party liable to criminal proceedings. This idea of a preliminary notice, not before commencing proceedings, but before a party shall be subject to be charged at all, was suggested by the present Attorney-General, on the occasion of a deputation to the President of the Board of Trade on the subject of the late Bill. Such preliminary notice should contain a reference to the serial number in the register, and if the right to register be disputed, it would, of course, be open for any party receiving the notice to take steps to question such right, as is now done in the case of copy-right, &c.

This, and perhaps nothing but this, would afford protection against unfounded and malicious prosecutions in the case of trade marks.

It may be urged that any preliminary notice is inconsistent with a criminal offence. In answer I may draw attention to the fact that in Prussia, where there is no over sensitivity about imprisonment, the vending of a forged trade mark is for the first offence punishable by fine only, and it is only in case of repetition that it is made liable to imprisonment. See Mr. Ryland's paper on "Trade Marks," p. 232, of the Transactions of the Social Science Association, 1859.

In France trade marks are, by a recent law, protected by registration; and the exclusive enjoyment of a mark thus established is limited to fifteen years, but it is renewable.

What is entitled to the protection of our law as a trade mark is a delicate and difficult question in disputed cases—so delicate and difficult that the Court of Chancery rarely ever grants an injunction until the legal right to the trade mark has been established by an action or issue at law.

As the law at present stands long and exclusive use is an essential condition to the establishment of a trade mark.

What construction would be put on the words, in the late Bill, "lawfully used," taken in connection with the words which followed in the interpretation clause, it is impossible to say. Taken literally, several persons at the same time may lawfully use any given mark, whilst none of them is entitled to the exclusive use of it.

It may be said that no one would venture to take criminal proceedings in case of disputed right.

I am not so sure of this. It is easy to deter traders from dealing in particular goods merely on the threat of civil proceedings for an infringement of a patent. Still more will this be the case if the alleged offence be made a criminal one, against which no indemnity, as in a patent case, can protect them. A preliminary notice in such cases would (without registration or some other means of settling disputed rights) operate as a snare rather than a protection—it would legalise the threat of criminal proceedings which, from the small interest they may have in any particular case, would deter parties from dealing in the goods in question, entirely apart from the question of right; so that the practical effect of the notice of threatened proceedings would, in such cases, be to put it in the power of any particular manufacturer to get a monopoly to which he may not be legally entitled. Wholesale houses, dealing in thousands of different kinds of goods, will not run risks of civil, much less of criminal, proceedings, and into the merits of disputed questions of legal right they have neither time nor inclination to enter.

It has been said that magistrates will not grant summonses against houses of high standing unless previously satisfied that there is prima facie a good case. To this doctrine I take entire exception. Houses, however high their standing, ought to be exposed to the equal operation of the law, and the remark, if it has any value at all, is a strong argument against this part of the late Bill, whereas if proper protection were inserted in the Bill against vexatious proceedings it would make the law all the more potent against the real offenders.

It has been said, again, that any one is exposed to be charged with stealing, say a pocket-handkerchief, and it is argued that therefore traders should not complain of being liable to be charged even falsely with the offence in question; but there is no analogy between the two cases. A pocket-handkerchief is tangible property and easily identified, whereas a trade mark is a claim rather than a right, and should itself be legally established before it is used for the purposes of prosecution.

First establish the right to a trade mark, and then the suggested analogy may apply, but not before.

Having said thus much on the subject of applying the criminal law to trade mark cases generally, and the difficulties which arose thereon under the late Bill, I now suggest whether such cases ought not to be left to the civil courts.

In the discussion on Mr. Ryland's paper before referred to, Mr. Thomas Webster, the well-known patent lawyer, said that "the true remedy for the frauds complained of was to give a copyright in trade marks." He advised mercantile men to unite in obtaining an Act for this purpose rather than any criminal enactment." (See p. 270 of the Social Science Transactions, 1869).

The following is an extract from an opinion of Mr. Alfred Wills, of the Midland Circuit, on this part of the late Bill:—

"After all, however, the best corrective would be to turn the clause creating the offence of selling, &c., an article with a counterfeited stamp into one giving a penal action, such as is given in the case of patented articles by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 83, s. 77, because then the party charged is a competent witness for himself, and in a case bordering so closely as this must often do either upon a mere civil infringement of right or upon a mere accident even the question of intention is all important. I remember very well a case tried at Warwick under that section, in which had it been framed upon the penal basis of clause 3 of the bill in question, two respectable men in a good way of business might have had a most narrow escape, if they would not have been convicted; but where their own evidence satisfied the Court, and every one who heard them, that what was complained of had been done most innocently."

He afterwards wrote further thereon as follows:—

"When I mentioned the case tried at Warwick, in the remarks I wrote two days ago, I forgot to mention one of the most instructive parts of the case, which was, that the plaintiffs in that action had employed a firm in London to order from the defendants the goods stamped in the very way which they thought would bring them within the Act of Parliament, and having, as they thought, caught them in a trap, they then sued them for penalties; and it turned out that the defendants were actually ignorant of the very existence of the patent of which they were charged with counterfeiting the designation."

If it still be thought that the criminal law shall be applied to check and punish flagrant offences, then I suggest that the first offence as to trade marks might be made liable to a penal action, and a repetition of it the subject of criminal punishment. This would assimilate our law to that of Prussia. In the penal action any disputed question of right could be tried and settled before any question of criminal liability could be raised.

In conclusion I would suggest—

1st. That false labelling as to quantity, length, or name of manufacturer or owner be punished criminally in the case of the maker, and that the vendor be also criminally responsible if he sells or exposes for sale, knowing of the false labelling and with intent to defraud.

2nd. That the fraudulent use of trade marks, not coming under what I have defined as false labelling, shall be made liable to a penal action, and that if it be subject to the criminal law at all, then that for the first offence it be made liable to a penal action, and for any repetition thereof, after judgment shall be recorded against the defendant in the penal action, it shall be subject to criminal punishment.

3rd. That proper provisions be made for conventions with foreign countries upon this subject.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ACT.

The following important circular has been issued by the committee of the Manchester Association for the Protection of Trade in reference to the new Bankruptcy Act:—

To the Members of the Manchester Association for the Protection of Trade.

Gentlemen,—The new Bankruptcy Act having come into operation, we beg to call the attention of the members of this association and of the mercantile public generally to one or two points of very serious import arising out of the changes introduced into the administration of the law of debtor and creditor.

By the new Act the relative positions of the creditors' assignee and the official assignee are completely changed; and, before accepting the office of assignee, persons ought to make themselves acquainted with the responsibilities they will incur.

The clauses referring to the duties and responsibilities of the creditors' assignee, and which provide that every three months his accounts shall be verified upon oath, and submitted to the audit of the official assignee; shall find security if a majority of the creditors and the Court require it; shall be liable to dismissal by a majority in value of the creditors; and may at any time be called upon by one-fourth in value of the creditors to show cause why he should not be dismissed—will operate as a serious impediment in the way of any mercantile man undertaking the office, and therefore will have a tendency to throw the management of the estate into the hands of the bankrupt's friends.

The changes introduced by what are known as the "Deed Clauses" are most important, and demand the earnest attention of all persons interested in the settlement of insolvent estates.

These clauses stand in the act as sects. 192 to 199 both inclusive, and they were specially intended, as was said, for the benefit and advantage of the commercial classes, but we fear that in practice they will prove not only no boon, but a positive injury.

The object of the 192nd section is to bind a minority of creditors to an arrangement which has been accepted by "a majority in number representing three-fourths in value of the creditors." The importance of making deeds so binding is self-evident, because it is so notorious that scarcely a case arises without one or more creditors standing out with a view to obtain a preference.

The following are the conditions which must be fulfilled before any deed can be made so binding:—

1. A majority in number representing three-fourths in value of the creditors must assent to the deed.
2. Any trustees appointed must execute the deed.
3. Execution by the debtor must be attested by a solicitor.
4. Deed must be registered within twenty-eight days.
5. On so doing, an affidavit by the debtor, or some person able to depose thereto, or a certificate by the trustees that the required majority have, in writing, assented to or approved of such deed or instrument, and also stating the value of the debtor's property and creditors comprised in such deed, must be left with the deed.

6. The deed must be stamped (as required by sect. 195) with an ad valorem duty of 5s. per cent on the sworn or certified value of the estate and effects, in addition to the ordinary stamp duty.

7. Immediately on the execution of the deed by the debtor, possession of all the property comprised therein, of which the debtor can give or order possession, shall be given to the trustees.

As the result of a considerable experience we would say that in many, if not in most, cases it is practically impossible to obtain the consent of "a majority in number representing three-fourths in value of the creditors" above £10 within the twenty-eight days given for registration.

That in the case of large estates, no trustee, and certainly no solicitor, will—at the risk of not being repaid—advance the stamp duty, which, in addition to the former duty, is to be impressed on the deed before registration, and which may reach £200.

That the debtor cannot be relied on to make an affidavit, as required, of his creditors and estate, because in many cases an insolvent is afterwards advised that he has done wrong in executing the deed.

And that there will be great and perhaps insuperable difficulty in a trustee obtaining in the twenty-eight days all the information to enable him to certify "the amount in value of the property and creditors of the debtor comprised in such deed." In cases of estates comprising considerable assets abroad it is clearly impossible to do this.

Again, how is a trustee conscientiously to certify to the assent of the requisite number and value of creditors to the deed? Is he personally to obtain their signatures, or is he to take for granted that a number of signatures shown to him are the genuine signatures of the creditors?

It does not appear whether, if any error is made in such certificate or in the calculation on which it is based, it will vitiate the registration; but if it will, then an unintentional error may upset everything; and if it will not, then a false certificate may be given in a fraudulent case, and the creditors will be bound thereby.

But the most important objection is to the condition that—"Immediately on the execution thereof (the deed) by the debtor, possession of all the property comprised therein, of which the debtor can give or order possession, shall be given to the trustees." Now, the essence of an arrangement, in case of composition, generally is, that it is considered for the benefit of all parties that the debtor shall remain in possession of his property and carry on his trade, but that the creditors shall have power to take possession on default of payment of an instalment, or other circumstances making it expedient to do so.

No such arrangement will, under the new statute, be binding on any creditor who shall not execute the deed, because such a deed would not comply with the seventh condition of sect. 102.

Possession by the trustees would frustrate the whole arrangement; and therefore, we presume, in nearly all cases of composition, there will be the same opportunity as heretofore of an unscrupulous creditor obtaining a preference over the others, or throwing the estate into the Gazette.

We have before incidentally noticed the stamps on deeds, and the commercial community, who have been such special objects of the Lord Chancellor's care, should understand that after having made bad debts their dividends are to be lessened by a stamp duty (in addition to the 35s. formerly impressed) of 5s. per cent. on the value of the property to which they must resort for their dividends; the maximum amount of duty being £200. This stamp is double the present stamp on mortgages.

Deeds of assignment are now placed in a peculiar position.

Sect. 194 requires that every deed (of course, whether it be a deed under sect. 192 or otherwise) executed by a debtor for the benefit of creditors, shall be registered within twenty-eight days from its execution by the debtor, "and in default thereof it shall not be received as evidence."

Sect. 198 provides that a certificate of the registration of such deed shall be a protection to the debtor against any process of common law, unless by "leave of the Court;" and that it "shall be available to the debtor for all purposes as a protection in bankruptcy." Now, as a protection in bankruptcy is absolute, the creditor could not avail himself of the "leave of the Court" to proceed, even if obtained.

Sect. 199 provides that, pending the time allowed for registration, proceedings in bankruptcy, if commenced, shall be stayed, "and if the deed be duly registered the petition shall be dismissed."

The combined effect of these clauses will be that in future no deed of assignment can be relied upon as an act of bankruptcy, because if not registered it cannot be received as evidence, under sect. 194; and if registered it is a bar to proceedings in bankruptcy under sect. 199, and is a protection at common law under sect. 198.

It seems to us that this will open the door to great frauds, perpetrated under the protection of an Act of Parliament, and against which the creditors will have no remedy.

A fraudulent assignment to a man of straw will, if registered

(and there is nothing to prevent registration), act practically as an absolute protection against all further inquiry; and glaring exposures, like those which have taken place in recent bankruptcies, will probably in future be avoided by the judicious selection of a friendly trustee, who will make all things smooth and comfortable. As the law stood previously, an assignment could have been upset, because it was an act of bankruptcy; but now, although it may still continue an act of bankruptcy, in a technical sense, it is one which is incapable of proof, or which itself defeats the issue of a fiat.

We have thus pointed out the bearing of the Act on the ordinary mode of settlements by deed, which, in a large majority of cases, are either by deeds of composition or deeds of assignment; and we have shown that the former are excluded from the benefits of the Act though not from the taxation clause, and that the latter are rendered dangerous instruments.

These defects, amongst others, were pointed out during the discussions in Parliament, but the clamour was for "the bill, the whole bill, and nothing but the bill," and although the House of Lords, after a very patient consideration, amended or struck out most of the objectionable clauses, they were nearly all restored subsequently, and now form part of the law of the land.—We are gentlemen, yours respectfully,

PHILIP GILLIBRAND, Chairman.

CHAS. WATSON.

FRANCIS TAYLOR.

WM. BUTTERFIELD.

ROBERT M. SHIPMAN.

Manchester, October 19th, 1861.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. URQUHART, OF MANCHESTER.

On Friday the 18th instant, a large number of the members of the legal profession assembled at the Queen's Hotel, Manchester, to present a testimonial to Mr. Urquhart, the late deputy-registrar to the Manchester Court of Record, and author of several works upon the practice and costs of the Salford Hundred Court of Record during his deputy-registrarship of that Court; he being about to take up his residence in the metropolis as a partner in a legal metropolitan firm. The testimonial consisted of a silver salver, claret jug, and two goblets, value 100 guineas, subscribed by the bar and attorneys of Manchester and Salford. The claret jug bore Mr. Urquhart's initials, and upon the salver there was the following inscription:—"This salver, with a claret jug and goblets, was presented to John Urquhart, Esq., on his retirement from the office of deputy-registrar of the Manchester Court of Record, by the bar and attorneys of Manchester. 28th September, 1861."

Mr. R. B. B. Cobbett presided, and Mr. Austin, deputy town clerk, occupied the vice chair.

After the usual loyal toasts had been given and duly honoured, Mr. Higgin, barrister, rose to make the presentation. He said he considered it was a compliment to himself to be appointed to make the presentation, and he embraced the opportunity of presenting the testimonial with great personal satisfaction to himself. It was some years since Mr. Urquhart first came amongst them to take the management of the Salford Court of Record. They would all remember the ability which he brought to bear upon the proceedings of that court, and he was quite sure that he spoke the sentiments of both branches of the profession when he said that they were all indebted to Mr. Urquhart for his energetic and persevering conduct in bringing that court into the position which it now occupied. When Mr. Urquhart came to take the management of the Manchester Court of Record, it was not too much to say that he found it in an utter state of confusion, and by his personal exertions he converted that which had been a nuisance into a boon to the community of Manchester. He considered both branches of the profession were much indebted to Mr. Urquhart for his urbanity on all occasions; and expressing a hope that he might succeed in the new position into which he was about to enter, he begged to present to him the testimonial on behalf of both branches of the profession.—Mr. Urquhart, who spoke with emotion of the many friendships he had made in Manchester, returned thanks in suitable terms, and said that in leaving Manchester, it was a source of pleasure to know that the gentleman who succeeded him in the office of deputy-registrar to the Manchester Court of Record (Mr. Mountain) was equal to the position, and would give satisfaction to all.

Other toasts were afterwards proposed and responded to, and an agreeable evening was spent.

Law Students' Journal.

LAW LECTURES AT THE INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY, 1861-62.

Three courses of lectures will be delivered in the hall of this society during the months of November, December, January, and February next. For particulars respecting the times of meeting and the nature of the lectures we refer our readers to the society's advertisement in our present number. The first lecture will be given by Mr. Thomas Henry Haddan, on Equity, Friday, Nov. 1.

MIDDLE TEMPLE LIBRARY.—The new library of this society will be open for public use next Michaelmas Term. A ceremonial of inauguration to commemorate the event will take place, under the auspices of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. It is intended to celebrate the occasion by a banquet to his Royal Highness, to which all the members of the society will be invited. The inauguration will take place on Thursday, the 31st inst. We understand that the Guard of Honour to be furnished by the Inns of Court Corps to receive his Royal Highness on the occasion will be formed of those members of the Middle Temple who should have put down their names for the purpose at the orderly room, Inns of Court Rifle Volunteers, by 12 o'clock on the 25th inst. If sufficient names should not have been sent in the deficiency will be supplied from members of the corps of the other inns. The Guard of Honour are invited by the Masters of the Bench to the déjeuner given on the occasion, and are not required to appear otherwise than in uniform. The tickets of admission for members to the banquet will be ready for distribution on Tuesday, the 29th inst. Members intending to be present must signify their intention not later than this day [Saturday], when the list closes.

CRYSTAL PALACE SCHOOL OF ART, SCIENCE, AND LITERATURE.—The establishment of Classes and Lectures, which should in a proper manner utilize, for educational purposes, the vast and unequalled resources of the Crystal Palace, is now no longer a matter of conjecture, but a tested fact. The school was commenced last year, and the result at the close of the first term has been highly satisfactory. The regulations and announcement, for the new term, which commences on the 1st of November next and continues till July 31st, 1862, have just been issued. Classes for water colour painting, figure drawing and modelling have been established. English, French, German, Italian, Latin, history, physical geography, botany, physiology, and chemistry will also be taught; as well also the pianoforte, singing, part-singing, and dancing.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

COLLIER—On Oct. 23, at Elm-Lodge, Putney, the wife of John F. Collier, Esq., Barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

MANT—On Oct. 12, at 5, Great James-street, Bedford-row, the wife of George F. Mant, Esq., Solicitor, of a son.

SEGAR—On Oct. 19, the wife of Wm. Fras. Segar, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-law, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

CAVE—MARTIN—On Oct. 19, William Henry Cave, Esq., Solicitor, of Newbury, Berks, to Elizabeth Lucy, daughter of the late Alderman Martin, of the same place.

CHAPPELL—ELLIS—On Oct. 22, Thomas P. Chappell, Esq., of George-street, Hanover-square, to Marian Ellis, widow of the late William Ellis, Esq., Barrister-at-law, Middle Temple.

WATTS—WEBB—On Oct. 23, John Onslow Watts, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-law, to Caroline Mary, daughter of Major Vere Webb, of Bath.

DEATHS.

BARBER—On Oct. 18, at 37, Half Moon-street, Piccadilly, suddenly, Ann Howard, widow of the late Charles Henry Barber, Esq., Q.C., aged 67.

CARR—On Oct. 18, in the 48th year of his age, George Sweet Carr, Esq., Barrister-at-law.

NORTON—On Oct. 18, at Lowestoft, Edmund Norton, Esq., Solicitor, aged 63.

WILLIAMS—On Oct. 21, at 31, Alfred-place, Bedford-square, aged 71, Frances, widow of Wm. Williams, Esq., Solicitor.

Court Papers.

Chancery Sittings.—MICHAELMAS TERM, 1861.

LORD CHANCELLOR.

At Westminster.

Satur., Nov. 2 { App. mtngs., ptns., and appeals.

At Lincoln's Inn.

Monday, Nov. 4 }
Tuesday 5 } Appeals.
Wednesday .. 6 }

Thursday .. 7.. App. mtngs. & apps.

Friday 8..

Saturday 9..

Monday 11.. Appeals.

Tuesday 12..

Wednesday .. 13..

Thursday .. 14.. App. mtngs. & apps.

Friday 15..

Saturday 16.. Appeals.

Monday 18..

Tuesday 19..

Wednesday .. 20..

Thursday .. 21.. App. mtngs. & apps.

Friday 22.. Appeals.

Saturday .. 23.. Ptns. & appeals.

Monday 25.. App. mtngs. & apps.

MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

At Westminster.

Satur., Nov. 2.. Motions.

At Chancery-lane.

Monday, Nov. 4 }
Tuesday 5 } General paper.
Wednesday .. 6 }

Thursday .. 7.. Motions.

Friday 8.. General paper.

Saturday .. 9 { Ptns., sht. caus., adj. sums., and general paper.

Monday 11..

Tuesday 12.. General paper.

Wednesday .. 13..

Thursday .. 14.. Motions.

Friday 15.. General paper.

Saturday .. 16 { Ptns., sht. caus., adj. sums., and general paper.

Monday 18..

Tuesday 19.. General paper.

Wednesday .. 20..

Thursday .. 21.. Motions.

Friday 22.. General paper.

Saturday .. 23 { Ptns., sht. caus., adj. sums., and general paper.

Monday 25.. Motions.

N.B.—Unopposed petitions must be presented and copies left with the Secretary, on or before the Thursday preceding the Saturday on which it is intended they should be heard; and any causes intended to be heard as short causes must be so marked at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard.

LORDS JUSTICES.

At Westminster.

Satur., Nov. 2.. Appeal motions.

At Lincoln's Inn.

Monday, Nov. 4 }
Tuesday 5 } Appeals.
Wednesday .. 6 }

Thursday .. 7.. App. mtngs. & apps.

Friday 8.. Ptns. in lunacy & bankruptcy, appeal petitions, & apps.

Saturday .. 9.. Appeals.

Monday 11..

Tuesday 12.. App. from the City.

Wednesday .. 13.. Ptn. of Lancaster & appeals.

Thursday .. 14.. App. mtngs. & apps.

Friday 15.. Ptns. in lunacy & bankruptcy, appeal petitions, & apps.

Saturday .. 16.. Appeals.

Monday 18..

Tuesday 19.. Appeals.

Wednesday .. 20..

Thursday .. 21.. App. mtngs. & apps.

Friday 22.. Ptns. in lunacy & bankruptcy, appeal petitions, & apps.

Saturday .. 23.. Appeals.

Monday 25.. App. mtngs. & apps.

NOTICE.—The days (if any) on which the Lords Justices shall be engaged in the Full Court, or at the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, are excepted.

V. C. Sir R. T. KINDERSLEY.

At Westminster.

Satur., Nov. 2.. Motions.

At Lincoln's Inn.

Monday, Nov. 4 }
Tuesday 5 } General paper.
Wednesday .. 6 }

Thursday .. 7.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 8.. Petitions.

Saturday .. 9 { Sht. causes, adj. sums., & gen. pap.

Monday 11..

Tuesday 12.. General paper.

Wednesday .. 13..

Thursday .. 14.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 16.. Petitions.

Saturday .. 16 { Sht. causes, adj. sums., & gen. pap.

Monday 18..

Tuesday 19.. General paper.

Wednesday .. 20..

Thursday .. 21.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 22.. Petitions.

Saturday .. 23 { Sht. causes, adj. sums., & gen. pap.

Monday 25.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

N.B.—Any causes intended to be heard as short causes must be so marked, at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard.

V. C. Sir JOHN STUART.

At Westminster.

Satur., Nov. 2.. Motions.

At Lincoln's Inn.

Monday, Nov. 4 }
Tuesday 5 } General paper.
Wednesday .. 6 }

Thursday .. 7.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 8.. Ptns. & gen. pap.

Saturday .. 9 { Short causes and general paper.

Monday 11..

Tuesday 12.. General paper.

Wednesday .. 13..

Thursday .. 14.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 15.. Ptns. & gen. pap.

Saturday .. 16 { Short causes and general paper.

Monday 18..

Tuesday 19.. General paper.

Wednesday .. 20..

Thursday .. 21.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 22.. Ptns. & gen. pap.

Saturday .. 23 { Short causes and general paper.

Monday 25.. Motions.

N.B.—Any causes intended to be heard as short causes must be so marked, at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard.

V. C. Sir W. P. WOOD.

At Westminster.

Satur., Nov. 2.. Motions.

At Lincoln's Inn.

Monday, Nov. 4 }
Tuesday 5 } General paper.
Wednesday .. 6 }

Thursday .. 7.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 8.. General paper.

Saturday .. 9 { Ptns., sht. causes, & general paper.

Monday 11..

Tuesday 12.. General paper.

Wednesday .. 13..

Thursday .. 14.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 15.. General paper.

Saturday .. 16 { Ptns., sht. causes, & general paper.

Monday 18..

Tuesday 19.. General paper.

Wednesday .. 20..

Thursday .. 21.. Mtns. & gen. pap.

Friday 22.. General paper.

Saturday .. 23 { Ptns., sht. causes, & general paper.

Monday 25.. Motions.

N.B.—Any causes intended to be heard as short causes must be so marked, at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard.

Queen's Bench.

Sittings at Nisi Prius, in Middlesex and London, before the Right Honourable Sir ALEXANDER EDMUND COCKBURN, Bart., Lord Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, in and after Michaelmas Term, 1861.

IN TERM.

Middlesex.	London.
1st Sitting....Monday....Nov. 4	1st Sitting....Tuesday....Nov. 12
2nd Sitting....Thursday....Nov. 14	2nd Sitting....Monday....Nov. 18
3rd Sitting....Wednesday....Nov. 20

For undefended causes only.

AFTER TERM.

Middlesex.	London.
Tuesday.....Nov. 26	Monday.....Dec. 9

The Court will sit at ten o'clock every day.

The causes in the list for each of the above sitting days in term, if not disposed of on those days, will be tried by adjournment on the days following each of such sitting days.

Common Pleas.

Sittings at Nisi Prius, in Middlesex and London, before the Right Honourable Sir WILLIAM EBLE, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, in and after Michaelmas Term, 1861.

IN TERM.

Middlesex.	London.
Tuesday.....Nov. 5	Tuesday.....Nov. 12
Thursday.....Nov. 14	Monday.....Nov. 18

AFTER TERM.

Middlesex.	London.
Tuesday.....Nov. 26	Monday.....Dec. 9

The Court will sit during and after term at ten o'clock.

The causes in the list for each of the above sitting days in term, if not disposed of on those days, will be tried by adjournment on the days following each of such sitting days.

Exchequer of Pleas.

Sittings at Nisi Prius, in Middlesex and London, before the Right Honourable Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK, Knt., Lord Chief Baron of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, in and after Michaelmas Term, 1861.

IN TERM.

Middlesex.	London.
1st Sitting....Monday....Nov. 4	1st Sitting....Tuesday....Nov. 12
2nd Sitting....Thursday....Nov. 14	2nd Sitting....Monday....Nov. 18
3rd Sitting....Wednesday....Nov. 20

AFTER TERM.

Middlesex.	London.
Tuesday.....Nov. 6	Monday.....Dec. 9

The Court will sit in and after term at ten o'clock.

The Court will sit in Middlesex at Nisi Prius, in term, by adjournment from day to day, until the causes entered for the respective Middlesex sittings are disposed of.

SITTINGS IN BANCO.—MICHAELMAS TERM, 1861.

Saturday, Nov. 3	Motions and peremptory paper.
Monday, Nov. 4	Errors, peremptory paper, and mins.
Saturday, Nov. 9	Criminal apps. Lord Mayor sworn.
Monday, Nov. 11	Special paper.
Tuesday, Nov. 13	Sheriffs nominated.
Wednesday, Nov. 13
Monday, Nov. 18	Special paper.
Wednesday, Nov. 20

London Gazettes.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

TUESDAY, Oct. 22, 1861.

WRIGHT, N. C. & ALFRED FEREADAY, Attorneys and Solicitors, 10, Bloomsbury-square, Middlesex (Wright & Fereaday). Oct. 1. By mutual consent.

FRIDAY, Oct. 25, 1861.

DEAN, JAMES WILLIAM, & THOMAS DEAN, 23, Bloomsbury-square, Middlesex, Attorneys, Solicitors, and Conveyancers (Dean & Sons). Aug. 31. By mutual consent.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

TUESDAY, Oct. 22, 1861.

UNLIMITED IN CHANCERY.

BRITISH EXCHEQUER LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY (REGISTERED). Vice-Chancellor Wood, on Monday, Nov. 11 at 2, will proceed to settle the list of contributories of this Company. Creditors to meet on Monday, Nov. 11 at 1.30 for the purpose of appointing creditors' representatives.

FRIDAY, Oct. 25, 1861.

UNLIMITED IN CHANCERY.

ENGLISH AND IRISH CHURCH AND UNIVERSITY ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—Petition for winding-up presented Sept. 10, will be heard before V. C. Wood, on Nov. 9. Sols. Gibbs & Tucker, 17, Clement's-lane, London.

LIMITED IN BANKRUPTCY.

DISTRICT SAVINGS BANK (LIMITED).—On Oct. 10, Herbert Harris Carman, 36, Basinghall-street, London, was appointed official liquidator.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Oct. 22, 1861.

BADGER, ISAAC, Dudley, Worcester, Esq. Nov. 21. Executor, T. Badger, The Hill, Dudley.
DABBS, JAMES, Kingston Cottage, Kingston, Southampton, Gent. Nov. 20. Sol. C. H. Binastend, Portsmouth.
DENT, THOMAS WILKINSON, 14, Leinster-terrace, Hyde-park, Middlesex, Captain in her Majesty's Forces, India. Dec. 21. Booty & Butt, 1, Raymond buildings, Gray's-inn, London.
GRIFFITH, RICHARD, 22, Bedford-street, North, Liverpool; and Senior Partner in the Firm of Griffith, Sons, & Palethorp, Liverpool, Brokers. Dec. 25. Sol. J. L. Bromfield, 23, Newgate street, Chester.
HART, JOHN GEORGE, Stowmarket, Suffolk, Gent. Dec. 17. Sols. Jocelyn & Son, Ipswich.
HASELDINE, WILLIAM, 10, Bell-yard, Gracechurch-street, London, Oilman. Dec. 2. Sol. T. Price, 24, Abchurch-lane, London.
OAKES, ANN, Bridgnorth, Salop, Spinster. Dec. 1. Sols. Potts, Gordon, & Nicholls, Bridgnorth, and J. Broughall, Shrewsbury.

FRIDAY, Oct. 25, 1861.

BRACHER, WILLIAM, Wincanton, Somerset, Cheese Dealer and Farmer. Dec. 23. Sol. E. Y. Cooper, Wincanton.
BRYDEN, WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Mayfield, Sussex, Doctor of Medicine and Surgeon. Dec. 31. Sol. W. Sprott, Mayfield.
BULGER, MARY ANNE, Granby-hill, Clifton, Bristol, Spinster. Dec. 1. Sol. F. Schultz, 4, Dyer's-buildings, Holborn, E.C.
CORFIELD, WILLIAM, Little Stretton, Salop, Farmer. Nov. 16. Sol. S. H. Kough, Shrewsbury.
GROVE, SOPHIA CATHERINE, Duke-street, Portland-place, Middlesex, Spinster. Dec. 21. Sols. Boys and Tweedie, 6, Ely-place, Holborn, Middlesex.
HUDSON, WILLIAM HECTOR, Lightcliffe, Halifax, Solicitor. Jan. 6. Sol. Rawson, George, & Wade, Kirkgate, Bradford.
JOHNSON, JOHN, Aspull, Lancashire, Coal Minor and Coal Merchant. Jan. 14. Sol. R. Leigh, Wigan.
JOHNSTON, ANDREW, Carlisle. Nov. 5. Sol. J. C. Wannop, Carlisle.
LEAKE, FREDERICK, 22, Golden-square, Westminster, and also of 3, Alexander-square, Brompton, Middlesex, Architect and Builder. Dec. 16. Sols. Taylor & Hoare, 28, Great James street, Bedford-row.
MARTIN, JOHN HOLMAN, Enfield Lock, Middlesex, Beer Retailer. Dec. 28. Sols. Jessopp and Siddall, Waltham Abbey, Essex.
MENDES, WILLIAM FISHER, Island of Barbadoes, Deputy Commissary General to her Majesty's Forces. Jan. 1. Sols. Boys & Tweedie, 6 Ely-place, Holborn.
MILNER, ELIZABETH, Wade-lane, Leeds, Widow. Dec. 6. Sols. Butler & J. E. Smith, 4, Park-row, Leeds.
MOORHOUSE, EDWIN, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancashire, Reed Manufacturer. Dec. 26. Sols. J. H. Dearden, 34, Cooper-street, Manchester.
OLDFIELD, ANN, Horton, Bradford, Widow. Dec. 16. Sols. Rawson, George, & Wade, Kirkgate, Bradford.
READ, THOMAS, 9, Portland-place, Leamington Priors, Warwickshire, formerly of Bedford-street, Leamington Priors. Dec. 18. Sols. James & Curtis, 23, Ely-place, London.
SILLA, CATHERINE, Fishery, Maidenhead, Berks, Widow. Nov. 30. Sols. C. & J. Allen & Son, 17, Carlisle-street, Soho-square.
WADDINGTON, JOSEPH, Grosvenor House, Upper Marine-terrace, and 14, Cecil-square, Margate, Kent, Surgeon. Jan. 20. Sols. Brooke, Mertens, & Hughes, Margate, Kent.
WARD, JAMES, Ollerton, Nottingham, Farmer. Dec. 9. Sols. Woodcock, Mansfield, Notts.

Deeds registered pursuant to Bankruptcy Act, 1861.

TUESDAY, Oct. 22, 1861.

JOHN DICKINSON, Alnwick, Northumberland, Tailor and Innkeeper. Oct. 14. Composition. Reg. Oct. 18.

FRIDAY, Oct. 25, 1861.

BAILEY, HENRY JOHN, Coventry, Professor of Music. Oct. 21. Assignment. Reg. Oct. 25.
GRIEVES, JAMES, 17, Gracechurch-street, London, Merchant. Oct. 12. Composition. Reg. Oct. 22.
PAXMAN, WILLIAM, THOMAS WOODGATE, and ANTHONY BENNETT ROBINSON, Dyers and Finishers, Althorp House, Church-street, Battersea, Surrey, and 10, Staining-lane, London (Paxman, Woodgate, and Company). Oct. 14. Assignment. Reg. Oct. 23.
VACCHAN, WILLIAM DAVID, Liverpool, Soap Boiler. Oct. 21. Assignment. Reg. Oct. 24.
WEST, WILLIAM, Weston-super-Mare, Somersetshire, Plumber and Glazier. Oct. 16. Assignment. Reg. Oct. 22.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors.

TUESDAY, Oct. 22, 1861.

DURANT, JOHN POPE, of Ventnor, Isle of Wight, Watchmaker. Sept. 26. Sol. J. W. Matthews, Plymouth.
HUNT, JAMES, Sheffield, Plumber and Glazier. Sept. 24. Sol. B. Wake, Sheffield.
LAWRENCE, WILLIAM, Much Hadham, Herts, Builder. Oct. 15. Sol. J. M. Richardson, Much Hadham, Herts.
WELSFORD, ARTHUR, Upper Paul-street, Exeter, Printer. Oct. 1. Sol. W. J. Sparkes, Crediton, Devon.
WILSON, CHARLES ROBINSON, 1, Skinner-street, Snow-hill, London, Boot and Shoe Manufacturer. Sept. 26. Sol. W. J. Scott, 4, Skinner-street, Snow-hill, London.

FRIDAY, Oct. 25, 1861.

HASLER, JOHN, Paul's-wharf, Thames-street, London, Lighterman. Oct. 4. Sol. J. Hooker, Jun., 30, Bartlett's-buildings, London.
SWINOCK, ARGENTUS, 99, Adde-street, London, Shirt-front and Stock Manufacturer. Oct. 1. Sols. Wild & Barber, 104, Ironmonger-lane, London.
WEBB, JAMES, Stockport, Cheshire, Draper. Oct. 2. Sol. W. Smith, Stockport.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, OCT. 23, 1861.

ATKINS, JAMES, 29, Archer-street, Kensington-park, Notting-hill, Middlesex, Butcher. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. T. Wells, 47, Moorgate-street, London.

AUSTIN, RICHARD BARNES, Berrington-house, Tenbury, Worcestershire, Gent. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Wilson: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. Hodgson & Allen, 13, Waterloo-street, Birmingham, or T. Palm, Banbury.

BALDWIN, GEORGE, Chesterton, Cambridgeshire, Farmer. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 2 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. W. B. Farrant, Bond-court, Walbrook, London, or Whitehead & French, Cambridge.

BARWICK, EDWARD, 9, Union-court, Old Broad-street, London, Lithographer and General Printer. Pet. Oct. 18 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell.

BOOTH, WILLIAM, late of Fordham, Cambridgeshire, but now of Worthington, Suffolk, Farmer. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 4, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. C. Richardson, 15, Old Jewry-chambers, London.

CARROLL, CLEMENTINA, 34, The College, Bromley, Kent, Widow. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. G. T. Davies, 43, Mincing-lane, London.

CRIBB, WILLIAM, a Prisoner in the Queen's Prison, and lately carrying on business at 41, Moorgate-street, London. Pet. Oct. 15 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 2 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson.

DICKY, EDWARD JAMES STEPHEN, late of Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, previously thereto of 19, Golden-square, Middlesex, and now of 373, Strand, formerly a Director of a Joint Stock Company. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Lawrance, Plews, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry chambers, London.

DUMMLES, ALBERT, 2, Grove Hill-terrace, the Grove, Camberwell, Surrey. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Linklaters & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London.

EVANS, JOSEPH, 15, Ridgway-place, Wimbledon, Surrey, and Myrtle Villa, Bedford-road, Clapham, Surrey, Builder. Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 2 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. S. A. Kirch, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.

GOODHEIM, SAMUEL, Manchester, Cloth Cap Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hernaman. Sols. Slater & Myers, Fountain-street, Manchester.

HALL, SAMUEL WILLIAM, Grove, East Dulwich, Surrey, Gent. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Surr & Gribble, 12, Abchurch-lane, London.

HAWTHORN, JOHN, Burdlem, Stafford, Builder. Pet. Oct. 19. Registrar, Wilson: first meeting, Nov. 2, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. J. Smith, Waterloo-street, Birmingham.

HENDRY, WILLIAM THOMAS, 71, Cannon-street, West, London, Ironmonger, and Commission Agent. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 1, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. B. Rodman, 18, Cannon-street, London.

HOWELL, JOHN WILSON, Tottenham, Middlesex, Builder. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 1, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Shaen & Roscoe, 8, Bedford-row, London.

IVER, JOHN, Water Eaton, Bletchley, Bucks, Farmer and Cattle Dealer. Pet. Oct. 19. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 2, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Messrs. Field, 40, Ely-place, Holborn.

JENES, LUCISA, Lewisham-hill, Kent, Widow. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Wells, Moorgate-street.

KNIGHT, WILLIAM, 10, Baker-street, Walworth-road, Camberwell, and late of 7, Bishopgate-buildings, Bishopgate-street, London, Hair Dresser. Pet. Oct. 18 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 2, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld.

LEA, JOHN, formerly of Sewardstone, and now of 4, Essex-street, Forest Gate, Essex. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 2 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Linklater & Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London.

LEIGH, HENRY JONES, 78, Leather-lane, Holborn, Middlesex, Draper. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Solc, Turner, & Turner, 68, Aldermanbury, London.

MATTHEWS, MILLS, Navigation-street, Birmingham, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Wilson: first meeting, Nov. 2, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. East & Parry, Ann-street, Birmingham.

MILLER, JOHN, 56½, Golden-lane, Barbican, Middlesex, Baker. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Harcourt, 2, Kings Arms-yard, Coleman-street.

MORECRAFT, EDWIN, 31, Burlington-arcade, Piccadilly, Middlesex, Picture Dealer. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. W. Philp, 26, Bucklersbury, London.

OSBORN, WILLIAM HENRY, late of 40, Broad-street-buildings, London, Accountant and Commission Agent. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 2 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.

PAUL, JOSEPH, Sexley Farm, Upper Clatford, Hants, Farmer. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 2 at 12; Star Hotel, Andover. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Paterson & Sons, 7, Bouverie-street, London; or W. H. Mackey, Southampton.

PELL, JONATHAN, Cefn-Gwyn, near Aberystwith, Llanbarlarnfawn, Cardigan, Mining Agent. Pet. Oct. 18. Nov. 1 at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sol. P. Vaughan, Lampeter, Cardigan; or Clark, Fussell, & Pritchard, Clare-street, Bristol.

SMITH, JOSEPH, 33, Lombard-street, London, Tailor and Draper. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Brown & Godwin, 21, Finsbury-place.

SMITHIES, CHARLES, 4, Warwick-place, Leeds, Commercial Agent. Pet. Oct. 19. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sol. B. C. Pullan, Leeds.

SOFTLEY, JOHN TEASDALE, 2 Camden-row, Camden-town, Middlesex, afterwards of 1, Somerset-terrace, South-fields, Wandsworth, and now of High-street, Wandsworth, Surrey, Plumber, Glazier and Becceller. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. R. H. Munday, 43, Barton-crescent, London.

SOWERBY, JOSEPH, & CHARLES THOMAS TATTON, 273, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, Middlesex, Drapers (Sowerby, Tatton, & Co.). Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 2 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Ashurst, Son, & Morris, 6, Old Jewry, London.

STEVENS, JOHN, 1, Castle-terrace, New Hampstead-road, Kentish Town, and 3, Lonsdale-road, Bayswater, Middlesex, Builder and Contractor. Pet. Oct. 19 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 2 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld.

STONEHOUSE, RICHARD CARA, Darlington, Darham, Corn Factor and Agent, and Corn Miller. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Gibson: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 11:30; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sol. H. Stony, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

SUMPTON, JOSEPH, Uxbridge-road, Ealing, Middlesex, Corn Chandler and Seedsman. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 1 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. C. J. Mander, 9, Lincoln's-inn, London.

TOMLINSON, JOHN, and JOHN SHARPLES, Granby-row, Manchester, Joiners and Builders (Tomlinson & Sharples). Pet. Oct. 12. Registrar, Simons: Nov. 6, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. E. Storer, Fountain-street, Manchester.

URIE, ROBERT, Manchester, Joiner and Packing Case Maker. Pet. Sept. 20. Com. Jemmett: Nov. 7 and 28 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hernaman. Sol. W. L. Welsh, Manchester.

WATSON, RICHARD, Belle Vue Tavern, Windmill-hill, Gravesend, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sols. Harrison & Lewis, Old Jewry, London.

WILMHURST, GEORGE, Birmingham, Surgeon and Apothecary. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Wilson: first meeting, Nov. 1, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. East and Parry, 45, Ann-street, Birmingham.

WILLIAMS, JOHN, formerly of Swansea, Glamorgan, Printer, Bookseller, and Stationer, late of Paris, France, and now of 21, King-street, Bloomsbury, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 1, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. T. Keene, 71, Lower Thames-street.

WILSON, JOHN, 19, Edgeware-road, Middlesex, Refreshment and Coffee-house keeper. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 1, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. J. T. Treherne, 17, Gresham-street, London.

WOOD, GEORGE, Monkwearmouth, Sunderland, and East Boldon, Timber Merchant. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Gibson: first meeting, Nov. 5, at 12:30; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sol. Ralph Somers, Sunderland.

FRIDAY, OCT. 25, 1861.

BARNES, JOSEPH WALTON, Ouseburn, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Fire Brick Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Gibson: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 11; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. T. W. Stewart, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; Sham & Crossman, 3, Kings-road, Bedford-row, London, W.C.

BENNETT, THOMAS, formerly of 22, Ann-street, Birmingham, and 1 Victoria street, Holborn, Middlesex, and now of 14, Albert-street, Surrey Gardens, Surrey, and 11, Poultry London, Sewing Machinist. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.

BICKNELL, JOSEPH, 49, Moorgate-street, and 147, Fenchurch-street, London, Merchant. Pet. Oct. 22 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.

BIRD, ROBERT, Marsh-street, Ashford, Kent, Plumber, Painter, and Glazier. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sols. Nichols & Clark, Cook's-court, Lincoln's-inn.

BOLT, GEORGE, 1, Clarendon-street, Paddington, Middlesex, Tailor. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. W. C. Hall, 49A, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

BOWEN, SAMUEL, West Bromwich, Staffordshire, Glass Dealer. Pet. Oct. 12. First meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. James & Knight, and E. Sargant, Birmingham.

BRAHAM, HENRY JAMES, 17, Thavies-inn, Holborn, Middlesex, and 4 Chatham, Commission Agent. Pet. Oct. 22 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell.

BROWN, THOMAS, Ekestone, Derbyshire, Contractor and Higglie. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Ingle: Nov. 6 at 11; County Court, Belper, Derbyshire. Off. Ass. Ingle. Sol. J. Shaw, Derby.

BURROWS, WILLIAM, jun., Westow-street, Upper Norwood, Surrey, Furniture Dealer and Mattress Maker. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Marshall, Hatton-garden.

CLARK, JOHN, 41, Princess-street, Stamford-street, Lambeth, Surrey, Carman and Contractor. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. F. Norton, 10, Clifford's inn, London.

CLARK, WILLIAM OBADIAH, 1, Gate-street, Upper North-street, Poplar, Middlesex, Baker and Corn Dealer. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Miller: Nov. 7 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. J. T. Eames, 10, Lombard-street, London.

CLARKE, WILLIAM HENRY, 3, Vernon-place, Bloomsbury-square, Middlesex, Engineer and Contractor for Army Field Kitchen Cooking Apparatus and Appurtenances, and Accountant. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.

CLARKE, JOHN, Norfolk-square, Glossop, Derbyshire, Tailor and Draper. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sol. E. Storer, Fountain-street, Manchester.

CHAUNCEY, REGINALD, 24, Sussex-street, Pimlico, Middlesex, a Retired Officer of the Honourable East India Company's Service. Pet. Oct. 21 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.

CRAB, JOHN ACQUATUS, Trevor-terrace, Knightsbridge, Portman-place, London, and Tonbridge, Kent, Watchmaker, Perfumer, Stationer, and

- Dealer in Fancy Goods. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.
- CURTEIS, EDWARD, Bloxworth, Dorsetshire, Coal and Coke Merchant. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Carew: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 1; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sols. J. H. Terrell, Exeter, or G. Symonds, Dorchester.
- DAUBENT, ROBERT CLAYTON, 10, Upper Fitzroy-street, Fitzroy-square, Middlesex, late an Officer in the Mercantile Marine Service. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. W. J. Hutchinson, 6, Vernon-street, Pentonville.
- DONE, EDWIN, Callender-street, Manchester, Heasian Dealer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sols. Atkinson & Hertford, Manchester.
- DEFAUR, ANTONINE, a Pauper, formerly an Attorney and Solicitor at 3, Bedford-row, Holborn, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson.
- EDWARDS, JOHN, 33, Upper North-place, Gray's-inn-road, Middlesex, Tailor. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. J. Rae, 9, Minding-lane, London.
- FARRAR, CHARLES, 17, Moor-terrace, Park-road, Old Kent-road, Surrey, Manufacturing Chemist. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.
- FOSTER, CHARLES THOMAS, Northumberland Arms Public-house, Fashion-street, Spitalfields, Middlesex, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 7, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell.
- FRANKS, THOMAS, 9, Oak-village, Kentish-town, Middlesex, Baker. Pet. Oct. 18 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham.
- FOSTER, HENRY, 26, Albion-place, Hanley, Burslem, and Tunstall, Stoke-upon-Trent, Staffordshire, Insurance Agent. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Challinor: Nov. 6 at 10; County Court, Lamb-street, Hanley. Off. Ass. Challinor. Sol. R. W. Litchfield, Newcastle-under-Lyme.
- GILLER, JAMES, 23, Little Marylebone-street, Marylebone, Middlesex, Painter. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. J. Wyatt, 11, King's-road, Bedford-row, London.
- GILES, JOHN, Ringleston, near Hollingbourne, Kent, Licensed Victualler and Farmer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Langford & Marsden, 39, Friday-street, Cheapside, London.
- GODFREY, GEORGE, 24, Brompton-terrace, Brompton, Middlesex, Grocer and Tea Dealer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. H. E. Voles, 16, Gresham-street, London.
- GRAGG, ROBERT ARTHUR SABSFIELD, Woodburn House, Woodburn-park, Bucks, Schoolmaster. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. S. Smith, jun., 6, Barnard's-inn, London.
- GREEN, SAMUEL, 7, Wilton-terrace, Park-road, Dalston, Middlesex, late a Clerk in the Inland Revenue Office. Pet. Oct. 19. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. J. Leete, 35, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.
- HALL, GEORGE, 16, Barker-street, Longton, Stoke-upon-Trent, Staffordshire, Tailor. Pet. Oct. 15. Registrar, Keary: Nov. 5 at 10; County Court, Stoke-upon-Trent. Off. Ass. Keary. Sol. R. N. Litchfield, Newcastle-under-Lyme.
- HARRIS, BARRETT, 46, Porter-street, Kingston-upon-Hull, Cabinet Maker. Pet. Oct. 23. Kingston-upon-Hull. Off. Ass. Carrick. Sol. F. F. Ayre, Kingston-upon-Hull.
- HAMMESLEY, GEORGE, 32, Gloucester-street, Clerkenwell, Grocer, Cheesemonger, and General Dealer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. N. C. Gold, 2, Whitefriars-street, London.
- HEARNE, ALGERNON JOHN, 13, Nicholl-square, Falcon-square, London, Printer. Pet. Oct. 23 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.
- HOGAN, ROGER, 48, Upper Marylebone-street, Marylebone, Middlesex, Taylor and Lodging-house Keeper. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. S. Tripp, 2, Danes-inn, Strand.
- HORWITZ, BENNHARD, 67, Newgate-street, London, Importer of Foreign Goods. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 6, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. J. S. Salaman, 29, St. Swithin's-lane, London.
- HUTSON, GEORGE, 34, King-street, Regent-street, Middlesex, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 7, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. B. Brooke, 1, New-inn, Strand.
- JENKINSON, JOHN, 3, Wellington-row, Bethnal Green, Shoemaker. Pet. Oct. 23 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.
- JERRAM, JOHN, Nottingham, Honier's Assistant. Pet. Oct. 23. First meeting, Nov. 5 at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sol. J. Ashwell, Middle pavement, Nottingham.
- JONES, WILLIAM, 41, Gloucester-street, Commercial Road East, Middlesex, Carpenter and Builder, 2, Prospect-place, Mile-end-road, Fancy Stationer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 5, at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Linklaters and Hackwood, 7, Walbrook, London.
- JONES, WILLIAM CARDEN, Queen's Prison. Pet. Oct. 21 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham.
- KNOTT, JAMES, Atlas Glass Works, Emerson-street, Bankside, Surrey, Glass Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. H. Waller, 2, Duke-street, Adelphi.
- LAWTON, JOHN, 40A, Mount-street, Middlesex, Foreign Agent. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. J. Jones, 15, South-square, Gray's-inn.
- LEE, JOSEPH, Billiter-square, London, News Agent and Bookseller. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson.
- LEVI, BARNIT, & GEORGE LEVI, 57, Great George-street, Liverpool, Watchmakers (B. Levi & Son). Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Lee: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Morgan. Sols. Dodge & Wynne, 7, Union-court, Castle-street, Liverpool.
- MASKY, JAMES, Weston-super-Mare, Somerset, Builder. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Orme: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sols. Clifton & Benson, Broad-street, Bristol.
- McCAUGHRIS, GEORGE, 18, Trafalgar-terrace, Mortimer-road, De Beauvoir-square, Kingsland, Middlesex, Commercial Traveller. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Stocken, 61, Cornhill.
- MILES, CHARLES, Frome Selwood, Somerset, Innkeeper. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Orme: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 12; Bristol. Off. Ass. Miller. Sols. S. Wittey, Devizes, or Abbott, Lucas, & Leonard, Bristol.
- NEWMAN, WILLIAM, 9, Dyer's-buildings, Holborn, London, Attorney-at-Law. Pet. Oct. 23 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell.
- NICKLIN, THOMAS, Newcastle-street, Burslem, Staffordshire, Pianoforte and Cabinet Maker, and Upholsterer. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Challinor: Nov. 6 at 11; County Court, Hanley. Off. Ass. Challinor. Sol. D. S. Sutton, Burslem.
- PARRY, OWEN, 2, Walbrook, London, Mining Agent. Pet. Oct. 22 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.
- PLASTER, ROBERT, Bampton, Oxfordshire, Builder. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Harrison & Lewis, 6, Old Jewry, London.
- POTTER, THOMAS GREVILLE, 11, Oxford-street, Middlesex, and 6, Granby-street, Hampstead-road, Dealer in Lamps. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Dubois, 39, Moorgate-street.
- PRITCHARD, WILLIAM, High-street, Acton, Middlesex, Carpenter, Joiner, and Undertaker. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. J. J. Holt, Quality-court, Chancery-lane, London.
- QUARREY, WILLIAM, Ashton-under-Lyne, Bookseller. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Nov. 5 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hernaman. Sols. Brooks, Marshall, & Brooks, Manchester, and Ashton-under-Lyne.
- RADCLIFFE, JOSEPH, Liverpool, Ale and Porter Merchant. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Lee: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Morgan. Sols. Woodburn & Pemberton, Royal Bank-buildings, Liverpool.
- RENDER, RICHARD, Willington, Durham, Draper. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Gibson: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 12.30; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sol. H. Story, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
- RICHARDS, MARTHA AUGUSTA ARTHUR, 13, Chester-street, Belgrave-square, Middlesex, Spinster. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. H. Braddon, 5, Dane's-inn, Strand.
- RICHARDS, JOHN RICHARD, 20, West-street, Bermondsey, Surrey, Grocer and Pork Butcher, and late of 36, King-street, Margate, Kent. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Buchanan, 13, Basinghall-street.
- ROSE, JAMES REGENT, Buccleugh-road West, Dulwich, Surrey, Commission Agent. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. J. Appleyard, 10, Symond's-inn, London.
- HOWBOTHAM, SAMUEL, late 324, Queen's-road, Chelsea, Middlesex, Soap Botler and Physician. Pet. Oct. 22 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 4, at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld.
- SAWYER, JOSEPH, 152, High Holborn, Middlesex, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 22 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 5, at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell.
- SALMON, HENRY, 67, Haymarket, Middlesex, late Tobacconist and Billiard Table Proprietor. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 5, at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. H. M. Sidney, Circus-place, Finsbury.
- SCHOFIELD, JOHN, Nottingham, Bootmaker. Pet. Oct. 22. First meeting, Nov. 5, at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sol. J. Coope, Fletcher-gate, Nottingham.
- SANISTER, JOSEPH, Manchester, Baker and Confectioner. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Nov. 5, at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sol. W. H. Partington, Manchester.
- SNOW, WILLIAM GEORGE, 2, Ponona-place, Staines-road, Hounslow, Middlesex, Carrier's Clerk. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 6 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. H. D. Rushbury, 32, Coleman-street, London.
- STEVENSON, JOHN, & ROBERT STEVENSON, Walsden, Lancaster, Cotton Manufacturers (John & Robert Stevenson). Pet. Oct. 19. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hernaman. Sols. Richardson & Hinnell, Manchester and Bolton.
- TART, ROBERT, Skipton, Yorkshire, Clog Maker. Pet. Oct. 22. Nov. 5 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sols. Terry & Watson, Bradford; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds.
- THORN, THOMAS, 7, Highfield-terrace, Gloucester-place, Kentish-town, Middlesex, Clerk to an Attorney. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. G. F. Mant, 5, Great James-street, Bedford-row, London.
- TWISCLIFF, CHARLES, Tamworth, Draper. Pet. Oct. 24. First meeting, Nov. 7 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. Powell & Son, Birmingham; or W. Knight, Birmingham.
- WARDLEWORTH, ABRAHAM, Crumpsall, Manchester, Dyer. Pet. Oct. 27. First meeting, Dec. 20 at 12; County Court, Manchester. Off. Ass. Kay.
- WARHURST, GEORGE, Leigh, Lancashire, Ironmonger and Factor. Pet. Oct. 14. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hernaman. Sol. J. Miller, Nicholas-street, Bristol.
- WALKER, WILLIAM, 62, Marsh-street, Hanley, Staffordshire, Beerhouse Keeper, and Grocer and Provision Dealer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Challinor: Oct. 6 at 10; County Court Office, Lamb-street, Hanley. Off. Ass. Challinor. Sol. E. Tennant, Hanley.
- WEBBER, RICHARD, King's Head-street, Harwich, Essex, Baker. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 5, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. W. W. Duffield, 71, King William-street, London, and Chelmsford, Essex.
- WELCH, JAMES, 260, City Road, Middlesex, and 28, St. Mary-at-hill, Eastcheap, London, Builder and contractor. Pet. Oct. 21 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld.
- WELTON, HAZEL, Ditchingham, Norfolk, Journeyman Machinist. Pet.

Oct. 22. Registrar, Fiske: first meeting, Nov. 5, at 11; County Court, Beccles, Suffolk. Off. Ass. Fisher. Sol. A. Kent. Beccles.
WESTBROOK, EDWARD, Hanley, Staffordshire, Grocer and Tea Dealer. Pet. Oct. 23. First meeting, Nov. 9, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. R. W. Litchfield, Newcastle-under-Lyme, or James and Knight, Birmingham.
WHITLEY, CHARLES, Manchester, Engineer and Tool Maker. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Nov. 4 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. D. Boote, Brown-street, Manchester.
WILLIAMSON, JOSEPH, Chilvers Coton, Warwickshire, Manager of Iron-works, formerly of Hazel-grove, Cheshire, Ironfounder. Pet. Oct. 24. First meeting, Nov. 7 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Dewes & Norton, Nuneaton; or W. H. Reece, Birmingham.
YOUNG, JOHN MARSHAL, Manchester, Merchant. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sols. Higson & Robinson, Cross-street, Manchester.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Oct. 22, 1861.

GEORGE HILLIER Trowbridge, Wilts, Marine Store Dealer. Nov. 4, at 11; Bristol.—WILLIAM WHITE, 18, Wolsey-terrace, Kentish Town, St. Pancras, Middlesex, Builder. Nov. 1, at 12; Basinghall-street.—OSCAR FITZALLAN OWENS, 7, Sussex-terrace, Westbourne-grove, Paddington, Middlesex, Bookseller and Stationer. Nov. 2, at 12; Basinghall-street.
JAMES WINTER, Rosslyn-terrace, Hampstead-road, Middlesex, Surgeon and Apothecary. Nov. 15, at 11. 30; Basinghall-street.—FREDERICK CAPLIN, 125, Drury-lane, Middlesex, Hosiery and Haberdasher. Nov. 15, at 11; Basinghall-street.—JOSEPH TREVEATHAN, 7, Oak-lane, Church-row, Limehouse, Middlesex, now 32, Lombard-street, London, Cooper and Packing Case Manufacturer. Nov. 14, at 12; Basinghall-street.—FRANCIS TAYLOR, Cradley Heath, Rowley Regis, Stafford, Grocer and Provision Dealer. Nov. 15, at 11; Birmingham.—WILLIAM FRANCIS LAWRENCE, West Bromwich, Stafford, Draper. Nov. 22, at 11; Birmingham.—GEORGE MOORHOUSE, THOMAS MOORHOUSE, WILLIAM MOORHOUSE, & ROBERT MOORHOUSE, Barley and Byerden Mills, near Burnley, Lancaster, Cotton Manufacturers. (George Moorhouse and Co.) Joint and separate estate. Nov. 20, at 12; Manchester.—ROBERT FREELAND, Manchester, and JOHN FREELAND, Kirkintilloch, Dumbarton, Scotland, trading at Manchester, Merchants. (Robert Freeland & Bros. Nov. 19, at 12; Manchester.—JOHN HEATH BARBER and WILLIAM HENRY ELLIS, Liverpool, Iron Merchants. (J. H. Barber and Co.) Nov. 12, at 11; Liverpool.

FRIDAY, Oct. 25, 1861.

SIMONS, EDWARD, 115, Newgate-street, London, and of 36, Bull-street, Birmingham, Lamp Dealer and Italian Warehouseman. Nov. 6 at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—GREGORY, EDWARD HENRY, & LESLEY ALEXANDER GREGORY, 32, Great Saint Helens, London, African Merchants and Shipping Brokers (Gregory Brothers). Nov. 6 at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—DULLENS, HUGO, 27, Fore-street, Cripplegate, London, General Merchant (Dulless, Grogan, & Company). Nov. 7 at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—SMITH, JOHN, Bradford, Stuff Manufacturer. Nov. 14 at 11; Leeds.—UNDERWOOD, CHARLES, 1, James-street, Covent Garden, 174, Drury Lane, and 44, Long Acre, Middlesex, Grocer. Nov. 21 at 12; Basinghall-street.—TOWNSON, THOMAS, Leamington Priors, Warwick, Chemist & Druggist, Sauce & Pickle Manufacturer. Nov. 20 at 11; Birmingham.—DAY, JOHN, JUN., Coventry, and of 1, Noble-street, London, Ribbon and Trimming Manufacturer. Nov. 18 at 11; Birmingham.—BROWN, WILLIAM, Cannock, Miller. Nov. 20 at 11; Birmingham.—CARRUTHERS, ROBERT, & GEORGE CARRUTHERS, Liverpool. Nov. 21 at 11; Liverpool.

BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT, LOAN and DISCOUNT COMPANY (Limited).

17, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.

Capital, £200,000, in 20,000 shares of £10 each. £3 per share paid.

CHAIRMAN.

METCALF HOPGOOD, Esq., Bishopsgate-street.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. PATTESON & COBOLD, 3, Bedford-row.

MANAGER.

CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Esq., 17, New Bridge-street.

INVESTMENTS.—The present rate of interest on money deposited with the Company for fixed periods, or subject to an agreed notice of withdrawal, is 5 per cent.

LOANS.—Advances are made, in sums from £50 to £1,000, upon approved personal and other security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over any period not exceeding 10 years.

Applications for the new issue of Shares may be made to the Secretary, of whom Prospectuses, the last Annual Report, and every information can be obtained.

JOSEPH K. JACKSON, Secretary.

LIFE POLICIES as SECURITIES.—The policies granted by the LIFE ASSOCIATION of SCOTLAND (founded 1838), under their new scheme (Class B.) of unconditional assurance on life, are wholly free from the restrictions attaching to policies on the ordinary system of other offices, and are specially adapted for securities in connexion with debts, family provisions, leases on lives, and the purchase of reversions. No restriction is imposed as to occupation or residence, and no extra premium can ever be payable.

A medical officer in attendance daily, at half-past 12 o'clock.

ON 5TH DECEMBER

The Scheme will be closed for the current year. Entrants to the Profit Class will be entitled to a FULL YEAR'S BONUS more than later Entrants.

THOS. FRASER, Resident Secretary.

No. 20, King William-street, E.C.

LONDON INVESTMENT COMPANY.—Forty £10 Shares for Sale, £2 paid. May be had a bargain. Interest at the rate of 10 per cent. received the last three years.

Apply by letter, N. & B., 59, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn.

BY ORDER OF THE EXECUTORS OF THE LATE REV. K. J. SMITH.

A VALUABLE ANNUITY of £168, payable quarterly, well secured on freehold estates in Monmouthshire. Also, two old and valuable POLICIES OF ASSURANCE for £1,200 and £600 with large bonuses in the West of England Insurance Office, and dated respectively the 6th of May, 1829, and the 17th of May, 1837, on the life of a gentleman now in his seventh-eighth year, will be SOLD by AUCTION, in One Lot, by Messrs. WARLTERS & LOVEJOY, at GARRAWAY'S COFFEE-HOUSE, Change-alley, Cornhill, on WEDNESDAY, the 6th of NOVEMBER, 1861, at TWELVE o'clock.

Particulars may be had of the following solicitors:—Messrs. SMITH & WEBBS, 11, Austin Friars; Messrs. WHITTINGTON & SON, Dean-street, Finsbury-square; and Messrs. H. R. HILL & SON, Throgmorton-street; at Garraways; and of the Auctioneers, Messrs. WARLTERS & LOVEJOY, Chancery-lane, London.

Country and Town Residences Landed Estates, Investments, Hunting Seats, Fishing and Shooting Quarters, Manors, &c.

BROOKS & BEAL'S Register of the above published on the first of each month, forwarded per post, or may be had on application at their offices, 209, Piccadilly, W. Particulars for insertion should be forwarded not later than the 28th of each month. £80,000 to be let on mortgage in various sums.

ESTATE PLANS, &c.

T. PETTIT & CO.,

LITHOGRAPHERS & GENERAL PRINTERS

FIFTH-STREET, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON.

BEG to inform Solicitors, in London and the Provinces, that they are prepared to execute every description of Parliamentary, Law, and General Printing and Lithography, with care and despatch, including

MAPS, PLANS OF ESTATES, RAILWAY PLAN WORK, BOOKS OF REFERENCE FOR DEPOSIT, MINUTES OF EVIDENCE, BRIEFS, &c.

A large staff of competent workmen employed to execute all orders with celerity.

YATES & ALEXANDER,

6, HORSESHOE COURT, LUDGATE HILL, E.C.

Printers of the Solicitors' Journal and Weekly Reporter.

Possessing a large and efficient staff of men thoroughly accustomed to all kinds of LAW PRINTING, are enabled to offer to the Profession the advantages of the greatest accuracy and despatch in the printing of Bills, Answers, Claims, &c.

OFFICES—6, HORSESHOE COURT, LUDGATE HILL.

(Entrance between No. 32, the State Fire Office, and No. 33, Benson's, Silver-arch.)

TYLER AND COMPANY,

(Late GOODCHAP, TYLER, & Co.)

ACCOUNTANTS,

13, GRESHAM STREET, E.C.

During a practice of twenty years, T. & Co. have had great experience in winding up Joint Stock Companies in Chancery; the investigation of intricate and disputed accounts; the liquidation of estates under deeds of inspection, assignment, and composition; and the audit of the accounts of public companies.

The management of estates under the New Bankruptcy Act undertaken. Terms moderate.

JOHN GOSNELL & CO., PERFUMERS TO THE QUEEN, beg to recommend the following Fashionable and Superior Articles for the TOILET to the especial notice of all purchasers of Choice PERFUMERY.

John Gosnell & Co.'s JOCKEY CLUB PERFUME, in universal request as the most admired perfume for the handkerchief, price 2s. 6d.

John Gosnell & Co.'s LA NOBLESSE PERFUME—a most delicate perfume of exquisite fragrance.

John Gosnell & Co.'s GARIBALDI BOUQUET—a most choice and fashionable perfume.

John Gosnell & Co.'s RUSSIAN LEATHER PERFUME—a very fashionable and agreeable perfume.

John Gosnell & Co.'s BALL-ROOM COMPANION or FOUNTAIN PERFUMES. Elegant Novelties, in the form of Portable Handkerchief Perfumes in a neat case, which emits on pressure a lot of most refreshing perfume. Price 1s. and 1s. 6d. each.

John Gosnell & Co.'s LA NOBLESSE POMADE—elegantly perfumed, and highly recommended for beautifying and promoting the growth of the Hair.

John Gosnell & Co.'s GOLDEN OIL—Mouline—Macassar Oil—Rears' Grease, &c., for the Hair.

John Gosnell & Co.'s CHERRY TOOTH PASTE is greatly superior to any Tooth Powder, gives the Teeth a pearl-like whiteness, protects the enamel from decay, and imparts a pleasing fragrance to the breath.

John Gosnell & Co.'s AMBROSIAL SHAVING CREAM, 1s. and 1s. 6d. in pots; also, in compressible tubes, for the convenience of persons travelling, price 1s.

Manufactory, 12, Three King-court, Lombard-street, London.

VIRGIN VINEGAR for PICKLING, warranted made from Malt only, and perfectly pure. Families supplied.

SARSON & SON, near the Gate, City-road. Carriers call daily.

We cannot notice any communication unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

* Any error or delay occurring in the transmission of this Journal should be immediately communicated to the Publisher.

THE SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 2, 1861.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Michaelmas Term opens to day, when the new Lord Chancellor holds his first levee, which will, no doubt, be well attended both by judges and counsel; and he need not be in any great hurry to get early to Westminster Hall, so far as the business of his court is concerned. For some reason or other the long vacation seems to have produced an unusually small amount of business, except applications for injunctions to V. C. Wood, the vacation judge, of which there were a large number. Whether the present low state of the cause list is owing to the paucity of arrears at the rising of the Court in August last, or to the actual falling off of business, we are unable to say. The former cause, however, is sufficient to account for the fact to some extent. We subjoin a statement, shewing the number of causes set down for hearing at the sitting of the Court twelve months ago, and to-day.

Causes before the Court, Michaelmas Term:—

	1860	1861
Appeals	26	23
Master of the Rolls	89	62
Vice-Chancellor Kindersley	53	38
Vice-Chancellor Stuart	95	64
Vice-Chancellor Wood	159	124
	422	311

The common law courts seem to be somewhat better off. In the Queen's Bench there are 12 enlarged rules, and 27 demurrers, special cases, and county court appeals for argument, besides 26 cases on the new trial paper, which, altogether, is more than there was in the same court for Michaelmas Term last year. In the Court of Exchequer there are 15 cases of error or appeals for argument, and 12 demurrers and special cases. This is an improvement on last year. The paper of the Court of Common Pleas also presents a fair show of work for the new Term; and, upon the whole, the courts at Westminster appear to be in a more prosperous condition than those at Lincoln's-inn.

Our contemporary, the Law Times, in days of yore used to contain some amusing articles, intended for the special benefit of those who wanted to become "advocates," and still more recently, has been trying to teach unfortunate law-students whose manners have been neglected, the importance of polite enunciation, and the misfortune of speaking through their nose; together with much more of such like instruction, which, no doubt, will be duly appreciated by the majority of these young gentlemen. The same schoolmaster is now abroad amongst those unhappy writing clerks who fain would scramble over the barrier which an examination throws up between them and the dignity of the shorter robe. Last week this accomplished instructor of the ignorant in our profession addresses these aspirants for professional rank, in language calculated to make a deep impression, if not upon their minds, certainly upon the minds of all who know something more of the Latin grammar from which he quotes than the scraps of Latin which it contains. After informing his readers that it is for the interest of the community that the duties of solicitors should be performed by "well-educated gentlemen, fitted for good society, and giving to the world the pledge of honour, for which social position is the best security," this "well-educated gentleman" and ambitious instructor in all the graces of delivery and arts of composition thus betrays his own want of acquaintance with one of the first and plainest rules of the grammar, not only of the language about which he talks so glibly, but of every other in the civilized world:—"A writing clerk," he says, "who should qualify himself for the profession by acquiring all this, who should educate himself in the 'ingenuas artes,' which the Latin grammar tells us 'emollit mores,' and who had held the social status assigned to a solicitor, would be welcomed into the profession as cordially as if he had been crammed at college." Now, although after this specimen of editorial instruction we are rather shy of giving our friends, the writing clerks, any advice about the approaching examination, we can hardly help advising such of them as have not yet learned the Latin grammar, when they do so, to occupy themselves more with the rules that are there laid down than with those bits of Latin which are given by way of examples, and which a certain class of men who know nothing of the grammar itself are very fond of quoting. Legal maxims in the Latin tongue are much more safe, because they seldom require to be taken to pieces in a conversational kind of way; but any one who has got a few of those other aphorisms in his head and nothing else of the language, is sure to be trying to apply them, and then it is very possible that, even with print before his eyes, he may be unable to see that in attempting to shew his knowledge he only betrays a degree of ignorance which those who know him best would hardly suspect to be possible.

Since the new Bankruptcy Act came into operation, it will be seen that we have devoted an unusually large portion of our space to reports of cases interesting to the profession, on account of the points of practice which they decide; and it is our intention to do so until the law under the new Bankruptcy Act shall have become pretty well settled. Up to the present time, the greater part of the business in Basinghall-street, has consisted of the winding-up of old matters to which the Act of 1849, still applies. Those clauses of the Act which are repealed by the recent Act are still in force "as to any proceeding pending, or any right that has arisen or may arise . . . in respect of any transaction, matter, or thing done or existing prior to, or at the commencement of" the Act of 1861, under any provisions of law formerly existing. As the new business increases, however, abundance of points, touching both the law and the procedure of the new court, will turn up, and it shall be our care to report the decisions, not only of the several London commissioners, but of the Court of Appeal. The latter will be carefully reported in the Weekly Reporter, and will also receive notice in these pages.

The last number of the Law Magazine contains an article upon martial law in Australia, and therein discusses a very interesting question—as to the power not only of governors of colonies, but of the Queen herself, to enforce martial law amongst her subjects, whether at home or abroad. The question has been raised by the disturbances which have taken place at the gold fields in Australia, and the writer mentions several instances in which a colonial governor has proclaimed martial law. Some of the conclusions at which he arrives, and which are given below, are rather startling. They are as follows:—

1. The Queen of England has no power or authority to exercise martial law either in Great Britain or in the colonies.
2. Within the limits of the Queen's dominions the army and all persons belonging thereto, and under military authority, are to be governed by the Mutiny Acts and the Articles of War.

3. This military law is distinct from, and therefore not to be confounded with, what is called martial law, which is illegal.

4. When the Queen's troops are in the field in a foreign country and flagrante bello, they are to be governed by the royal prerogative.

5. These rules do not extend to civil persons not amenable to military authority.

6. The Queen cannot impart to a colonial governor powers which she does not possess, and she has not done so.

7. The governor of a colony is not the general representative of the Queen, and can only exercise the powers lawfully delegated to him by the Queen's commission.

8. Hence:—the exercise of martial law by the governor of a colony is illegal, and would even be so if such power were included in his commission. Not being so included, its exercise amounts to a double usurpation.

The force of flunkeyism could no further go than it did in the Times of Thursday last, in its leader upon the visit of the Prince of Wales to the Middle Temple, as the following extract will abundantly show:—

"That he has long been a student of law in a better sense than that implied by eating dinners in any Inn of Court is known and appreciated by the people of this country. He is probably more intimately acquainted with the history of our legal system, and has a better appreciation of the strange medley produced by feudalism, civil law, and modern jurisprudence, than the majority of the students who will emerge from pleaders' and conveyancers' chambers to cheer him."

Now everyone knows that no care or expense has been spared in the education of the Prince of Wales, and assuming that he is possessed of average abilities, the probability is that he is as well educated as most young men of his age; but the statement that he is probably more intimately acquainted with English Law in its history and actual condition than the majority of law students, is so gross an absurdity that it is to be accounted for only as a piece of mendacious flattery. The Prince of Wales, however, has now arrived at an age when he might, with advantage to himself, commence, under proper tuition, the study of our system of English jurisprudence, not for the purpose of qualifying himself for the discharge of the professional duties for which, on Thursday, he was supposed to be already fit; but that it becomes one who is so likely, at some future day, to be the ruler of this country, to have some acquaintance with its laws, and with their history and operation. With such toadies, however, as the writer in the Times for his advisers it is not likely that his Royal Highness will think it necessary to acquire much more information on the subject than he may have acquired in the nursery.

A circular has been issued from the Office of the Registrar of Attorneys and Solicitors: it states that the Forms of Declaration and Duplicate, under the 23 & 24 Vic. c. 127 may be had on application at the office; and the members of the profession are requested to be particular in filling them up, either by themselves, their partners, or their London agents; to send them to the office on as early a day as possible; and to attend to the following

REGULATIONS:

1. Every declaration and duplicate must be delivered at the office six days before a certificate can be granted.

2. No certificate will be delivered out till Wednesday, November 20th.

3. In the first six days, commencing on November 20th, certificates will be delivered only to such London agents as shall in due time previously have sent in the declaration of themselves and their country clients, accompanied by a list thereof arranged in alphabetical order, and written on foolscap paper bookwise.

4. These six days to be appropriated among the LONDON AGENTS, in the following order:—The letters refer to the initial of the AGENT's surname, or that of the senior partner in the case of a firm.

Those commencing with—

A or B	Nov. 20
C, D, E, or F	" 21
G, H, I, or J	" 22
K, L, M, N, O, or P	" 23
Q, R, or S	" 25
T, U, V, W, X, Y, or Z	" 26

5. On every day subsequent to November 26th, the certificates will be delivered to the rest of the profession.

6. The fee of 5s., for issuing each certificate, is to be paid on delivery of the same.

Mr. Bagshawe, Q.C., for many years past of the Chancery Bar, and who did a large business as a junior counsel, has been appointed Judge of the County Court of Cardiganshire. Circuit number 31. The appointment is a very good one, and highly creditable to the County Court Bench, since Mr. Bagshawe has been long known as an able and accomplished lawyer.

THE LAW OF BLOCKADE—ITS ORIGIN, NATURE, AND INCIDENTS. NO. I.

The law of blockade is a corollary to the more general international laws that relate to belligerent rights. As soon as a state of war was considered capable of being regulated by certain rules, and subject to them, the law of blockade could not fail to be soon developed. Belligerents could not, of course, have desired to interfere with the ordinary privileges of the subjects of those nations with whom they continued at peace; nor would these have succumbed to every demand that could be put forward by belligerents upon plausible grounds. The line should be drawn somewhere; and the principle of the restraints imposed upon neutrals is, that the restriction in all such cases is indispensable to render the operations of the belligerents effective or operative in their full natural force. Such being the origin and foundation of belligerent rights against neutrals, it should be carefully remembered; for the same necessity which originally introduced restraints upon neutral commerce continues to be the guiding rule for determining all doubtful cases in their relations to the belligerent branch of the international code. It cannot be necessary formally to prove that a blockade by a belligerent would be futile, if neutrals were allowed to maintain a communication with the place blockaded. As it is impossible for the besieging force to know what articles the besieged most require, the international law that we are now discussing forbids traffic of every kind, and all intercourse with the inhabitants of the place invested; (Bynkershoek Quest. Jur. Pub. Lib. 1, cap. 2). It is only the class of articles termed contraband of war that a belligerent can seize upon the high seas; but the law of blockade applies alike to articles of every description. This law, it thus appears, was necessarily coeval with the first rise of a belligerent code. Indeed, it is implied in it; and the actual records of contests between civilised states prove that it has been always considered to be of the highest importance.

Many writers deny that international law is entitled to the rank of a positive code, inasmuch as, if one nation violates the rights of another, there is no superior who may decide between them. Thus, Mr. Austin, in his celebrated work,* considers that an international rule is merely a law set by opinion and enforced by moral sanctions only. We do not propose formally to refute this proposition, which is contradicted by innumerable decisions in courts of Admiralty. It is also opposed to the theory of the balance of power, or rather denies that such a balance was ever contemplated by statesmen. But the foundation of this erroneous statement is to be found in the fact that international law more nearly corresponds with natural law than municipal codes do; that it is more directly derived from natural and moral principles; and that whenever precedent is silent, first principles and analogy are usually invoked to solve the difficulty. But municipal law is generally so copious in its positive provisions that there is not much room left for arguments founded upon theoretical or moral considerations. Although international law has thus, in all its branches, the nature rather of a deductive and rational science than that of a positive code, nevertheless, it is as strictly enforced as if all its rules were settled by treaty. International law is usually divided into two branches—natural or necessary law, and positive or instituted law. Other writers consider custom to be the sole foundation of the international code. For our part, we consider it to be entirely deducible from first principles, and that if the reason of a certain international rule be not apparent upon first consideration, it is because we do not always readily take into account all the circumstances which led to its establishment. Nations are properly described by Vattel as so many free persons in a state of nature. The natural rules of justice and veracity are equally as applicable to nations as to individuals. But as the municipal code does not enforce imperfect rights, so neither does international law enforce the observance of similar obligations. The portion of natural law that is enforced by the international code is found to be defined not so much by the importance of the precepts as by custom. There is thus no practical difference between the writers who rest the obligation of international law on natural morality, and those who derive it solely from usage. Whatever may be said of the origin of an international law, it has no place in international jurisprudence, until it has been sanctioned by custom evidenced by decided cases or by express treaty. The origin of an international rule, however, is important as regards its interpretation and the classes of persons to whom it is to be considered as applicable. Thus, belligerent rights, such as the law of blockade, which have never been questioned, would, doubtless, be more strictly enforced by courts of Admiralty than those which have been the growth of modern customs. Prior to the Paris Congress of 1856, Mahometans were not considered to be bound by the customary law of nations. But Lord Stowell held, in The Hurtime Hane, 3 Rob. 324, that they were bound by the natural branch of the international code, and, as a consequence, were liable to the usual penalties for having committed a breach of blockade.

* "The Province of Jurisprudence Determined, p. 206."

A blockade may be defined to be the forcible prevention by a belligerent of all commercial intercourse on the part of neutrals with the enemy; and the law of blockade is that branch of the international code which regulates the conditions to which a blockade should conform, and which also prescribes the jurisdiction and procedure appropriate to the investigation of breaches, and the penalties attached to the same. "There are two sorts of blockade," says Lord Stowell, "one by the simple fact only, the other by a notification accompanied with the fact;" The Neptunus, 1 Rob. 171. As to the former, when the actual blockade ceases, the virtual blockade is likewise at an end; but in cases of the second class, as the blockade is proclaimed by a public notification, so likewise it should be put an end to in a similarly public manner. This is reasonable enough. Nihil est enim magis conveniens naturali equitati quam unum-quodque ligamen eo dissolvi quo ligatum est. But a blockade," says Bynkershoek, "is virtually relaxed si segnius ora observata sint." A blockade of the second class, it thus appears, may be put an end to by a cessation or long interruption of the blockade. The intermission of the belligerent's vigilance, however, must be of some long duration to warrant a presumption that the blockade is relinquished in cases in which it has been notified by proclamation. It is important to bear in mind that a blockade may take place by the simple fact only. This international rule generally precludes any demurrer founded upon the allegation of an alleged insufficiency of power on the part of the person proclaiming or making the blockade, because the supreme authority in the belligerent state may adopt a blockade, just as if it had been originally authorised by it: Omnis rati habitio retrotrahitur et mandato priori æquiparatur. The object of a blockade being to cut off all commercial communication with the blockaded port, an act of egress is, ceteris paribus, as culpable as an act of ingress. A ship coming out of a blockaded port is, in the first instance, liable to seizure; the onus of proving the innocence of intention on the part of the party who has primâ facie so committed a breach of blockade resting upon him (Bynk. Q. J. Pub. tit. 1, c. 4; The Frederiche Molke, 1 Rob. Rep. 72; The Neptunus, 1 Rob. Rep. 144; The Vrouw Judith, 1 Rob. Rep. 126). A breach of this law is also very severely punished. Vattel, however, is hardly warranted in stating,* as he does, that the offending party may be treated as an enemy. The jurisdiction and remedies available for the punishment of breaches of blockade will form the subject of a separate article. We will only here observe, in respect to this point, that the violation of blockade by the master affects, as a general rule, the ship only, and not the cargo, unless a direct knowledge of the intended breach be proved to have existed on the part of the owner (The Mercurius, 1 Rob. 80). Although the law of blockade is severe, nevertheless the usual immunity of the cargo is a temptation to owners to introduce their goods into the blockaded port, which is likely to give a price for them considerably beyond the ordinary rate and the value of the risk.

"On the question of a blockade," says Lord Stowell, in The Betsy, 1 Rob. 92, "three things must be proved. 1st, the existence of an actual blockade; 2nd, the knowledge of the party; and 3rd, some act of violation." As regards the last point, the time of shipment is material. After the commencement of a blockade a neutral is not allowed to purchase anything in the blockaded port; but he may retire with a cargo if it be already laden.

The United States Government have been always remarkable for their persevering efforts to disengage neutral commerce from the thralldom in which it has been held by the settled belligerent code. That Government, however, did not subscribe the Paris manifesto of 1856, the fourth clause of which provides that blockades, to be legal, must be effective. The States are, therefore, only bound by the common law rule of nations as to questions relating to the effectiveness of a blockade. But with regard to the time of shipment, it appears from a letter published in the Times of the 28th October, by the solicitors for the ship Hiawatha, upon the Admiralty case relating to which we shall presently offer a few comments, that the Government of the United States have waived all right to found any belligerent claim in respect of the time of shipment. The substance of the ordinance in question is given in the letter mentioned in the form of an extract from a letter written by Lord Lyons, our minister at Washington, to Mr. Moore, the British consul at Richmond. The rule is thus stated to be, that "Neutral vessels will be allowed fifteen days to leave port after the actual commencement of the blockade, whether such vessels are with or without cargoes, and whether the cargoes were shipped before or after the commencement of the blockade." The owners of the ship Hiawatha had been cautioned by Mr. Moore that the ship could legally depart only in ballast. The master, being dissatisfied with this announcement, addressed himself to Lord Lyons, from whom Mr. Moore received the foregoing notification. The owners then tried to run the blockade with a cargo; but the ship was seized and libelled as prize in the Admiralty Court. The owners have set up six grounds of defence. These are as follows:—A denial of notice of the blockade; a denial of the existence of a state of war adequate to support the claim of the captor; a denial of the existence of a State of blockade; a denial that states of the Union are enemies within the meaning of that term as understood in international jurisprudence; and a denial of the power of the president to declare war or proclaim a blockade without the consent of Congress. These grounds of defence may be ranged under three general heads—a general demurrer; a traverse of the fact of blockade; and a traverse of the allegation of notice.

Two very unusual questions are raised in these pleas—first, the power of the President to proclaim a blockade, even assuming that the state of facts would warrant such an intervention by the executive head of the United States; second, the existence of a proper state of facts whereon to found a blockade. Although the Times of the 24th of October, in a leading article upon the case of The Hiawatha, appears to consider the negative of these positions as tenable, we confess that we are of a very different opinion. It is an adventurous plea that implicitly denies that the United States have, or ever had, a competent executive. As Congress is not always in session, unless the President is the person who is to superintend the execution of the laws of the United States, we shall look in vain for a permanent representative of the sovereignty of the States. Furthermore, the President is bound, by his oath of office to "preserve, protect, and defend the constitution." Incidental to this is, doubtless, the right of proclaiming a blockade upon a fitting occasion. At all events, Congress may adopt and so ratify the act of the President. As to the second constitutional objection—that the Southern States are not enemies in the sense in which the term is juristically understood, as they are not recognised as belligerents by the United States, we consider that British subjects are estopped from controverting that fact since our own Government have by a public notification admitted the contrary. If the owners of The Hiawatha allege that they have aided rebels and not belligerents; such a plea, if held valid, would doubtless overthrow the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court; but the second branch of the dilemma would not be very profitable to them, inasmuch as by aiding rebels they were guilty of a still greater offence than a violation of an international rule, which is certainly not punishable capitally. We consider that the defence made by the owners of The Hiawatha, so far as it is based upon loopholes in the constitution of the United States, is visionary, and that the apparent encouragement given to such defences by our great cotemporary is not unlikely to have a mischievous effect. But such of the questions raised in the defence mentioned as are founded upon the common law of nations as declared by the decisions of admiralty courts, offer a more interesting and important field for investigation. It will be the object of the subsequent papers which we shall give on the law of blockade to elucidate this branch of the international code by reference to decided cases, and to show what constitutes an effective blockade; what is a breach thereof; and what are the jurisdiction and remedies appropriate to the punishment of such breaches.

The Courts, Appointments, Promotions, Vacancies, &c.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Mr. Commissioner HOLROYD.)

Oct. 26.—In re Denny.—This bankrupt, having petitioned under the new Act, against himself, had obtained an adjudication. He subsequently filed his statement of debts and liabilities, pursuant to the 93rd section of the Act, and the fourth rule, and he now applied for his discharge from custody.

The application was opposed on behalf of a detaining creditor. It appeared that on the 15th of June last the bankrupt filed his petition in the Insolvent Debtor's Court, pursuant to the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110; and on the 24th of June an order was made vesting his property in the provisional assignee; and a question was raised whether the Court would, by discharging the bankrupt, adopt the proceedings in this court.

The COMMISSIONER asked the bankrupt why he did not file his schedule in the Insolvent Debtor's Court.

The bankrupt said the petition to that Court was filed without his authority, and he had not sufficient means to continue the proceedings.

The COMMISSIONER said he would speak to Mr. Commissioner Evans before coming to any decision.

Oct. 29.—His Honour said he had spoken to Commissioner Evans, and he agreed with him in opinion that the bankrupt had no locus standi in this court until the petition in the other court was in some way disposed of. He referred particularly to the 24th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, providing for the setting and winding-up of all petitions, matters, and things presented to or depending in the said court.

The application was accordingly refused.

Oct. 28.—In a case from Hereford, which came before his Honour to-day, he decided that upon the true construction of the 88th and 89th sections of the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, it was not competent for this Court, in a case where the debts are below £300, and where the debtor resides or carries on business beyond 20 miles from the General Post Office, to direct that the petition be prosecuted in this court.

In re J. Owen Clarke.—In this case it appeared that the bankrupt had failed to comply with the 93rd section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and the fourth Order, which requires a bankrupt to file a list of his creditors within three days of adjudication. It was asked that the accounts should be filed nunc pro tunc.

His Honour said he could not allow this, as it might be made a precedent. The petition was dismissed.

(Before Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN.)

Oct. 28.—Re a trader debtor summons.—Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN held in this case that in a trader debtor summons where the debt and costs in the action are paid, but before the petition in bankruptcy is presented, the Court has no power to award costs unless the application for costs be made upon the return of the summons.

The particulars of demand, and a writ of summons were served on or about the same day. The summons in bankruptcy was served on the 18th instant, and was returnable on the 24th instant. The defendant paid the debt and costs in the action on the day the summons was returnable, but refused to pay the costs consequent upon the proceedings in bankruptcy.

The plaintiff applied to the Court for the costs of these proceedings.

Mr. Bannister (solicitor), for the summoning creditor, asked for the costs of the proceedings in bankruptcy under the 85th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849. The defendant did not take any notice of the proceedings in bankruptcy, and, consequently, committed a contempt of court. The Court had power to award costs under the 85th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, and the 213th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. He cited Webb v. Hewitt, 6 Exch. 105.

Mr. Ferrin (solicitor), for the defendant, contended that the application for costs was made too late. If the plaintiff was entitled to costs at all, he should have applied for them on the return of the summons. He also submitted that the Court had no power to award costs, there being no creditor before the Court, and the costs in the action were taxed without any reference to the bankruptcy costs.

Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN decided that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of the bankruptcy proceedings, and held that he was too late in his application. If the plaintiff were entitled to costs at all, he should have applied for them on the day that the summons was returnable, and he might then have given costs under the 213 section of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134.

Application refused.

Oct. 31.—In re —.—In this case the debtor petitioned in forma pauperis.

The attention of the Court was called to the 26th section of the New Bankruptcy Act, with a view to the debtor being excused payment of the gaoler's fees for bringing him to this court, and also advertisement charges incidental to bankruptcy. The section sets forth that, "All moneys and Government securities which shall, at the commencement of this Act, stand in the Bank of England to the credit of the account of the Commissioners of the Court for the relief of Insolvent Debtors in England shall be carried to the account of the Accountant in Bankruptcy;" and "shall be applicable as at present, or in such manner as the Lord Chancellor shall by order direct, towards defraying the salaries of the clerks and other persons hereby transferred from the Insolvent Court to the Court of Bankruptcy, and towards defraying the expenses of, and incidental to, the discharge of pauper prisoners hereinafter provided," &c.

The fund referred to in the Bank of England is of small amount.

His HONOUR said that no order had yet been made by the Lord Chancellor pursuant to the above section. The gaoler's fee and the fees out of the messenger's pocket must be paid.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

(Before the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.)

Oct. 31.—In re William Squires.—In this case, which was heard and adjudicated upon at Lancaster some months since, an application was made for the appointment of an assignee.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER asked what power he had to make any appointment.

It was stated that the application could only be made to this Court, upon the ground that it was a matter pending on the 1st of October, when the new Bankruptcy Act came into force.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER stated that his view of "pending business," which alone this Court had been directed by the Lord Chancellor to dispose of, did not include cases which had been finally adjudicated before the 12th of October. If that were not so the 250 cases which had been disposed of by the Court during the period of its existence might be regarded as pending business, and as applications respecting property might be made after any lapse of years, this Court would live for ever.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Henry Ridgard Bagshawe, Esq., Q.C., to be judge of the county court of Cardiganshire, Circuit No. 31, in the place of John Johnes, Esq., recorder of Carmarthen, who has resigned the office.

Recent Decisions.

COMMON LAW.

REAL ACTION UNDER COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, 1860—DOWER, PLEAS IN.

Woodward v. Dodds, C. P., 9 W. R. 870.

This case is noticeable as being the first real action which has occurred, or, at least, been reported, since the changes introduced in that class of actions by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860. The previous Common Law Procedure Acts did not expressly refer in any of their clauses to real actions; while, on the other hand, by far the larger portion of their provisions were expressly confined to personal actions. The Court of Common Pleas, however, held (in Marshall v. Bishop of Exeter, 6 C. B. N. S. 716), that two of the clauses of the Act of 1859 (ss. 81, 22, which regulate the practice as to pleading double) did apply to real actions; but the main features which used to distinguish these from personal actions, such as the commencement by original instead of by writ of summons, were admitted to remain as before; and this being inconvenient, as causing an unnecessary deviation with regard to the actions of dower and quare impedit, from the ordinary course of common law proceedings, clauses were introduced into the Procedure Act of 1860, which were intended to obliterate any distinction between real and personal actions, either as regards the writ by which they are commenced or the manner in which they are carried on. The sections on this head of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, are the 26th and 27th, which, in substance, provide that whenever the proper remedy is an "action of dower" or "quare impedit," an action may be commenced in the Common Pleas by an ordinary writ of summons, on which is to be endorsed a notice that the plaintiff intends to declare in dower or quare impedit, as the case may be; and that the subsequent proceedings (including costs) on such writ shall be subject to the same rules and practice, as nearly as may be, as the proceedings in personal actions.

The present case is a useful reading upon these provisions, and shows that it was not thereby intended to change in any respect the law of real actions as distinct from the manner of using the remedy; for it is one of the ancient pleas (given by 13 Ed. 1) to an action of dower—that is to say, an action brought by the widow (usually as against the heir or devisee) to recover her thirds of the lands and tenements of which her late husband was seised in fee or in tail, at some time during the coverture, and of which her issue might have been heir—that the plaintiff eloped from her husband and lived in adultery with another person (see Hetherington v. Graham, 6 Bing. 135); and a plea to this effect was accordingly relied on in the present case; but the plaintiff sought to reply to it by alleging that she had been forced to leave her husband by reason of cruelty such as would entitle her to a judicial separation in the new Divorce Court; and if this replication had been held valid it would have overturned the ancient law of dower. But the Court said that the whole question still turned upon the construction of the Statute of Westminster the second, which allowed the plea; and that under it, though a wife is not barred of her dower merely by leaving her husband (as she may do if cruelly treated), she cannot both leave him and commit adultery without the penalty of the statute attaching; and they therefore gave judgment on the demurrer for the defendant. It may be useful here to recapitulate the most usual pleas in this action, as it is (from this case) clear that they are still available. These are—1, the plea of adultery; 2, the plea, that the plaintiff and her supposed husband were never joined in lawful matrimony; and 3, the plea, that from the death of the husband, the defendant has always been, and still is, ready to render the widow the lands and tenements in question.

EFFECT OF DECREE NISI FOR DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE—INTERPLEADER ISSUE.

Shingler v. Holt, Ex., 9 W. R. 871.

This case raises but does not decide a point as to the status of a woman whose marriage has been dissolved, as it exists between the date of the decree nisi and the decree absolute for such dissolution. An interpleader issue had been ordered to try whether certain goods seized in execution were, on the day of seizure, the goods of the execution debtor or of another claimant. The goods in question had been seized in the house of the execution debtor; but were claimed by a female who lived in the same house, and whose title was established, subject to the question, whether, as she was still a married woman, (though a decree nisi for the dissolution of her marriage had been obtained), the goods in question did not rather belong to her husband. The case was decided on the principle that it is not competent for an execution creditor to set up a jus tertii to defeat the claimant's title, if against the execution creditor such title is good; but the Court refused to entertain the question of status pending the decree for dissolution becoming absolute—observing that the proper manner of obtaining relief on any ground arising from the husband's possible interest in the goods, would have been by an application to the judge, by whom the issue was directed, to compel the husband to become a party to the issue.

LAW OF LIGHTS—RIGHT ACQUIRED UNDER 2 & 3 WILL. 4, C. 71—ALTERATION OF WINDOWS.

Hutchinson v. Copestake, Exch. C., 9 W. R. 896.

Out of this case, the special facts of which could scarcely be made intelligible without the aid of plans, a useful general principle may be deduced with regard to the right to the "access or use of light to and for any building;" the uninterrupted enjoyment of which for twenty years constitutes, under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71 an absolute and indefeasible right to it. For the judgment shows that an action for obstructing such light is not maintainable, if the plaintiff by his own act confuses the indicia of the light in question and of the extent of its enjoyment. The plaintiff, having a house with certain windows therein, more than twenty years before the obstruction complained of, pulled it down and rebuilt it with other windows; which, though the same in number and general position, did not occupy precisely the same sites as the previous ones. The defendants afterwards erected a building which partially obstructed the due access of light to the plaintiff's house so rebuilt; but the Court of Common Pleas decided that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff had acquired no right to light under the Prescription Act; and the Court of Exchequer Chamber unanimously confirmed the judgment. The judgment of this last Court proceeded chiefly on the authority of the case of Renshaw v. Bean, 18 Q. B. 112, which established that an alteration in a window will destroy the right to light therefrom previously acquired, unless the new window is substantially the same as the old one; while in the present instance it was otherwise.

Correspondence.

STATUTE LAW REVISION.

From the letter in your last week's impression, signed "Francis S. Reilly and Arthur John Wood," I presume that those gentlemen prepared the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101, and though they cannot, of course, remove the responsibility of that Act from their employers, yet, in consequence of such avowal, they render themselves liable to be reproached for any slip which may have been committed therein.

Now, with all due deference to the compilers of that statute, I am still of opinion that it would have been better to have left the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, s. 3, alone; and to establish this I conceive it to be only necessary to show that its repeal may occasion a doubt even as to what the law now is.

As to the first branch of my objection (to adopt Messrs. Reilly and Wood's own analysis of my note) the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, may be altogether left out of the question, as it does not in any way refer to the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, s. 3, and as this last enactment is treated by the subsequent statute, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57, as being then in full force and operation.

"But" (say Messrs. Reilly and Wood) "it is plain that the first part of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, s. 3, is over-riden by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57, for the first enactment provides in effect that in the case of a vacancy in the office of a returning officer for a borough the sheriff of the county shall appoint a deputy to perform the duties; while the second enactment provides in effect that in all cases whatever, whenever there shall be, either from temporary vacancy or from some other cause, no person legally qualified to perform the duties of returning officer, the sheriff of the county shall in all respects perform the duties of and incidental to the office of returning officer."

Now, in my opinion, the effect of these two enactments is not here fairly stated, but should rather have been as follows:—

The first part of the first enactment (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, s. 3) provides "in effect" that if there shall happen to be any vacancy in the office of returning officer for a borough during the time when certain acts with regard either to the execution of an election writ or to the registration of voters, are required by law to be done, the sheriff may appoint a person to perform such acts. And the second enactment (17 & 18 Vict. c. 57) "in effect" provides in reference to the duties of the returning officer with regard to the election writ that where there is no returning officer qualified to perform any of such duties, they shall be performed by the sheriff. Now, if the above is an accurate account of these two enactments (and I invite your readers to examine for themselves whether it be so or not) it is clear that the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57, has nothing whatever to do with the registration duties of the returning officer as the substitute in certain cases for the town clerk. Indeed (as appears from the preamble to that Act itself) it was passed to remedy a difficulty occasioned by a change in the direction of the election writ by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 68, and no mention whatever is made in it of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, which contained the then as now existing law with regard to registration of voters. Moreover, Messrs. Reilly and Wood themselves say that "by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57, the sheriff of the county is in terms charged with the execution of a writ for the election of a member of Parliament for the borough" where there is "no returning officer to execute the same." Not a word here about his being by this Act charged with the duties of the returning officer as the substitute of the town clerk in registration matters.

But if this be so, then what becomes of the second branch of my objection—viz., that the repeal of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 101, s. 3, might possibly occasion a practical difficulty? Suppose there happened in the month of July, when the town clerk has different registration matters to attend to, to be a vacancy from death or otherwise in the office of the relieving officer of some borough, where (as for example, at Taunton) he is the person to attend to such matters, there being no town clerk or other officer executing such duties as usually devolves on the town clerk. The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57, as I have already shown, refers only to the substitution of the sheriff for the relieving officer with regard to the election writ, and therefore now that Messrs. Reilly and Wood have repealed the provision for this contingency which was previously in force, what is to be done?

One word more and I will conclude this defence of the validity—or, at all events, the reasonableness, of my objection. I am content to rest it by an appeal to the candour of those gentlemen. At the time they repealed section 3 did they or did they not notice the difference between it and the subsequent provision in 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57—or rather had they the Registration Act in their minds? Were they not (as perhaps was natural) satisfied by observing that two of the sections of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 101, were temporary only, while the 3rd was referred to, and in part re-enacted, without being repealed by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 57? If they committed this error the only advice I would venture to give them in consequence, is to weigh still more deeply than, I doubt not, they already do, the extreme difficulty and delicacy of their task, more especially when they deal with the enactments of our own times.

The Temple, Oct. 29, 1861.

JAMES STEPHEN.

ANDERSON v. ELSWORTH.

I have perused your report and opinion on this case as contained in the Solicitors' Journal of the 19th instant,* and take leave to state that when I took the instructions for the conveyance from Mrs. Marston I fully explained to her the difference between a deed and a will, after which she gave me instructions to prepare the deed in order to make a final settlement of her affairs, and to put Mrs. Elsworth into the immediate possession as absolute owner of the property. I then fully explained to her that a deed so prepared would leave her solely dependant upon Mrs. Elsworth for her future maintenance; in answer to which she expressed her full reliance upon Mrs. Elsworth for her future support. When she afterwards came to my office to execute the deed I again cautioned her, before she executed it, that she was thereby parting with all her interest absolutely to Mrs. Elsworth, without any provision for her future maintenance; and that if she signed the same she could not afterwards revoke the deed. She appeared vexed at my repetition of such cautions, and informed me that she had come expressly to execute the conveyance of the property to Mrs. Elsworth; that she did not wish to have any power to revoke the deed in any manner, as she wished Mrs. Elsworth to become owner of the property immediately; and several times inquired if I had made it perfectly safe to her, and stated herself satisfied that Mrs. Elsworth would provide for her during her life. I explained all this in my instructions for preparing the affidavits to Mr. Bacon, and on the hearing, when Mr. Malins stated that I had allowed Mrs. Marston to leave my office a penniless pauper without caution, I then explained to him that what he was stating to the Court was contrary to the truth, as I had acted quite the reverse. I also offered myself as a witness to Mr. Bacon, to explain and contradict such misstatements, which he declined to act upon.

Under these circumstances I feel myself professionally injured, and am apprehensive that the Vice-Chancellor, for want of a more perfect explanation, and under a misconception of the real facts, determined this case as he did, when, in fact judgment ought to have been given for the defendants.

Knaresborough, Oct. 26, 1861.

P. TAYLOR.

RAILWAY LIABILITIES.

In reply to the inquiry of "J. T. S." I think it is only necessary to refer him to the following quotation from "The Law of Carriers of Goods and Passengers":—"Where railway companies hold themselves out as carriers, and receive goods to be carried to places beyond the limits of their own line, and even beyond the realm, they are responsible for a loss of, or injury to the goods, although the same may not have happened on their own line of railway;" and the reports of Muechamp v. Lancaster and Preston Junction Railway Company, 8 M. & W. 421; and Watson v. Ambergate, Nottingham, and Boston Railway Company, 15 Jur. 448.

AN ARTICLED CLERK.

The law is now well settled, that where a railway company receives goods for carriage beyond the limits of its own line, and the goods are forwarded by other companies to their destination, the contract to carry is with the first company, and the other companies are their agents only to complete the contract. It follows, in the case put by "J. T. S." in your last number, p. 819, the remedy must be pursued against the C. company, although in fact the damage may have happened on S. D. or N. D. line. The cases which establish this are Crouch v. The Great Western Railway Company, 26 L. J. N. S. Ex. 418; s. c. in Ex. Ch. 6 W. R. 391; Collins v. Bristol and Exeter Railway Company, in House of Lords, 29 L. J. N. S. Ex. 41; Cozon v. Great Western Railway Company, 29 L. J. N. S. Ex. 865. Before suing C. company it will be necessary to examine the terms of the contract note, which is usually signed by the consignor of goods, and see that it contains no special condition limiting the company's liability to their own line of railway. If there be such a condition it is difficult to see what remedy the consignor has. The first company would be relieved by their special contract; and with the other companies the cases show there is no contract. This was the state of things in Cozon v. Great Western Railway Company, which called forth the following remark from Bramwell, B., in his judgment in that case:—"It is certainly a very inconvenient thing that persons should be met with such a defence as this, if they have a good cause of action at all; and it might not be unwise to provide, by an Act of Parliament, that where a right of action exists under similar circumstances, either of the railway companies might be sued, leaving the companies afterwards to adjust the matter among themselves."

* See ante, p. 810.

In Mytton v. The Midland Railway Company, 28 L. J. N. S. Ex. 385, it was suggested by Martin, B., that the railway company which first receives the goods might be looked upon as contracting as principals for the carriage on its own line, and beyond its limits as agents for undisclosed principals, so as to give the consignor a right of action against the company on whose line the damage happens; but the Court repudiated that view on the ground of there being but one contract, which could not be split up into several. As companies have the power, by the introduction of a special condition into the contract note, of defeating claims for compensation when the damage does not occur on their line, the law on this head cannot be regarded as on a very satisfactory footing; and until some such legislative enactment is made as suggested by Bramwell, B., cases will probably arise in which the principles which now govern the courts may work injuriously. B.

Your correspondent "J. T. S." does not mention any express contract on the part of the C. line of rail limiting its liability to damage occurring on its own line. Had there been such express contract, on the authority of Fowles v. The Great Western Railway Company, 22 L. J. Exch. 76, the C. line would have been exempt from any damage proved to have been sustained beyond its limits. Otherwise, as decided in Muchamp v. The Lancaster and Preston Railway Company, 8 M. & W. 421, and many other cases, the C. line are liable up to the door of the address to which the goods are destined. See "Addison on Wrongs," p. 320. A. J. D.

COMMON LAW JUDGES' CHAMBERS.

Can nothing be done to improve these bear-gardens? They must be as unpleasant to the judges as to the counsel, pleaders, attorneys, and their clerks. Why cannot the Masters hear all the applications for time to plead? I can bear witness that at present the system is insufferable. I would consent to almost anything sooner than go. Do pray cleanse this Augean stable, or try, at all events. The author of "Pickwick" exposed it years ago, and I should like to know what improvement there has been since. I witnessed last week something very like a personal combat between two learned counsel alike anxious to get before the judge. A COMMON LAW CLERK.

The time occupied in attending summonses at chambers has long been a grievance. Why should not the Masters of the common law courts have a similar power to hear and adjudge as is given to the registrars in bankruptcy by the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, sect. 52 and seq. J.

TRANSMISSION OF BANK NOTES BY POST.

The recent frauds committed by servants of the Post Office have suggested to me the expediency of some scheme for rendering the transmission of Bank of England notes secure from loss through the dishonesty of officials; this might easily be effected if Bank of England notes were allowed to be crossed in the same manner as cheques with the name of the banker of the payee. The adoption of this plan would also be of great service in other transactions in which payments by money are required, and especially to solicitors, who often are under the necessity of carrying about with them large sums to complete purchases or for other purposes, and who in all such cases incur at present considerable risk from the accidents of loss or robbery. The plan I have indicated, would, I think, have the beneficial effect of providing a means of security from loss, and of diminishing what has been proved to be a fertile source of fraud; and I consequently venture to submit it to the consideration of your readers. J. C. T. S.

Review.

The Game Laws of the United Kingdom, comprising the whole of the Law on the Subject; with Introduction, Cases, Notes, and Index. By JAMES PATERSON, Esq., M.A., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. London: Shaw & Sons. 1861

This work is, as it professes to be, a complete, as it is also a very interesting, work on the game laws of the United Kingdom. It is thus more extended in its applicability than the recently-published "Handy-book" of Mr. Oke, which treats only of the game laws of England. The introduction to the present work contains a lively disquisition upon the philosophy, as well as upon the policy, of the game laws. Mr. Paterson is an advocate of the plenary rights of property, and dissents from the report sought to be adopted by Mr. Bright, in 1845-6, when the question of the game laws was referred to a select committee of the House of Commons. The policy of the game laws, we think, commends itself to every one who will take the pains of distinguishing between the principle of those laws, and the numerous clumsy expedients by which they have been sought to be declared. A general consolidation of the Game Acts is the obvious remedy for the defects of the present state of this branch of law.

Mr. Paterson considers that the term "game" has received a statutory definition in the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 2; so that only "hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, heath or moor game, black game and bustards," are comprised in the word game. Mr. Oke* is of the same opinion. It appears to us, however, doubtful, whether the section of the Act mentioned is intended to give a complete and exclusive definition of the word. The 13th section of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, "The Night Poaching Act," contains a similar definition of the term game. That statute enacts, that the word game "shall be deemed to include" the species of birds that we have mentioned; but it does not exclude any others which may have been recognised as such either at common law or by statute. There is room, therefore, to contend, that, as regards civil actions, pigeons, deer, and rabbits, are likewise comprised in the term game, since they have been recognised as such by statute. The law of game being interwoven with the law of trespass, of which, indeed, apart from fiscal considerations, it constitutes a mere variety, Mr. Paterson has given (pp. 44-64) a very accurate, and even interesting, account of the law of trespass, both generally and in respect to the game laws; nor do we think that twenty pages of his work could be more appropriately applied. Mr. Oke is not, we think, sufficiently copious on the law of trespass. It is obvious that a sportsman should be informed not only as to what is game and what is not, but also as to the degree of restraint which he must impose upon himself and his canine attendant. Mr. Paterson shows that a dog may occasionally enter a close without rendering his master a trespasser; although his master could not do so with equal impunity. These, and other like pertinent bits of information which are interspersed throughout the work, we consider very useful in respect of the class for whom the work is especially intended.

The treatise before us gives an account of the game laws applicable to Ireland and Scotland, as well as of those applicable to England. Mr. Oke does not allude to the game laws of those countries, except once (p. 13), where he mentions their respective seasons of sporting. This is a great defect in his book, which is otherwise so comprehensive. The sportsman, therefore, who is possessed only of Mr. Oke's handy-book, will, if he intends proceeding into either of the sister kingdoms, require to be provided likewise with the still more complete treatise of Mr. Paterson. This suggestion is the more important as regards Scotland, lest the sportsman should find himself involved in a suit arising out of the Act "anent hunting and hawking," in reference perhaps to a deed of tailzie with irritant and resolute clauses, the irritant portion of which he might be disposed to consider vastly to preponderate. Mr. Paterson gives the series of enactments in respect of game applicable to Scotland from the year 1621 down to the present time. He traces the Irish corresponding series, which commences as far back as the Act 13 Ric. 2, c. 130 (the Irish Qualification Act). The statutory law of game is, in substance, nearly the same for the United Kingdom. There are, however, points of difference sufficiently numerous between the respective game codes of the three kingdoms to involve an unwary sportsman in litigation. It appears that a property qualification is still necessary to entitle a person to pursue game either in Ireland or in Scotland. The period of close time, also, is not the same in the three kingdoms. The 6th section of the Irish Act, 27 Geo 3, c. 35 (the Irish Game Act), does not define game in the same terms as are used in the English Act, 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 2; while the 3rd section of the Scotch Act, 13 Geo. 3, c. 54, comprises snipes within the definition of the term game, and so far differs from the corresponding English and Irish Acts. The common law of Scotland, as regards the rights of landlord and tenant, is different from the corresponding branch of English law, and the law of trespass is different in each of the three kingdoms. It is to be regretted that Mr. Oke did not mention in his book that there were many other points of difference between the game codes of the three kingdoms than as regards the seasons, which alone he noticed. We now see that this omission is important, as it is apt to mislead the sportsman with the notion that the United Kingdom has, as it ought to have, a common game code, except as to the periods of the sporting seasons.

* "Handy-book of the Game and Fishery Laws," p. 14.

Mr. Paterson's treatise indicates a great familiarity with its subject on the part of the author. Its diction and style are very good, and if its tone is somewhat more lively than is usually to be observed in a legal treatise, we may set down this exuberance of animation to the exciting nature of the subject, which he appears to have pursued with the zest of a sportsman. Perhaps, he also desired to accommodate his work to the lively tastes of those for whom he has written. This treatise is, on the whole, a very creditable performance, and, while eminently adapted to suit the requirements of the sportsman, is, also, likely to be found equally useful to the practitioner. Its main defect is to one of method. It proceeds upon a basis of statutory fact, whereas its parts should be arranged in their natural, rather than in their logical, sequence. This is a great advantage possessed by Mr. Oke's Handy-book. The remarks which we offered upon this latter work (ante p. 738), shows that the game laws may be readily digested into a set treatise possessing a due collocation of its parts, and constructed with a sufficient regard to all the unities of a legal treatise. The work before us, on the other hand, after giving an introduction, which is speculative merely, and has more of a political than of a juristic character, gives a bold collection of statutes, with notes. These statutes are arranged in the order of their importance, and not according to their dates. If a preference is to be made of one injudicious method over another, the order or arrangement observed by Mr. Paterson is to be deemed better than if he ranged the statutes according to their priority of date. The method adopted by him, however, is apt to invert the rule which the practitioner should observe in order to ascertain the legal definition of a disputed term. This is, as a general rule, to be learned by reference to prior enactments on the same subject. An arrangement of the game statutes, therefore, according to their dates, is not without its advantage, which is to some extent lost by the method pursued in the treatise before us. This shows that an author should seldom attempt to construct his treatise upon a statutory basis, unless there be some leading consolidation statute, which renders such a proceeding safe. A piece-meal commentary upon statutes is apt to leave some of them unnoticed. This, we fear, is the case as regards the present treatise. Mr. Oke gives a voluminous list of statutes, to which he refers in his Handy-book. But Mr. Paterson treats only of twenty-two statutes altogether, five of which relate to Scotland and six to Ireland. Mr. Oke, indeed, has treated of the fishery laws, as well as of those relating to game. Nevertheless, we fear that Mr. Paterson's list does not exhaust the series of statutes relating to game. We do not think, however, that our author has omitted any point of game law of importance. He ought not to have omitted a survey of the fishery laws, which are so intimately connected with the laws relating to game, especially as the duties of an author on the fishery laws have been greatly facilitated by the recent Salmon Fishery Consolidation Act, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 109. Although the method of giving the game statutes with notes, as adopted in the treatise before us, is inferior to that of a work, the parts of which would be found arranged in a regular order, such as obtains in Mr. Oke's Handy-book, nevertheless, the very good index, which Mr. Paterson's work possesses, tends, so far as the requirements of the practitioner are concerned, to neutralise any defect in point of method. The treatise before us contains a still greater number of cases than are to be found in Mr. Oke's Handy-book. This superiority of Mr. Paterson's work, however, may be referable to the fact that his treatise is intended to describe the game code of the whole United Kingdom.

The Criminal Law Consolidation Statutes of 24 & 25 Vict. caps. 94 to 100, edited with notes, critical and explanatory. By JAMES EDWARD DAVIS, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-law. London: Butterworth.

The six Criminal Law Consolidation Statutes of the last session, received the Royal assent on the 1st of August, and came into operation on the 1st of this month. The consolidation of the statutory laws, with which these Acts deal—namely, those relating to offences against the person; larceny and similar offences; malicious injuries to property; forgery; coin-ing; and accessories, although far from complete, embraces nearly the whole of the statute law upon those subjects, and a considerable portion of the criminal law of this country. It would, therefore, be unreasonable to expect that Mr. Davis's edition of these statutes, published within three months from the publication of the Acts themselves, and the production of his unassisted labour, should contain the same amount of information and practical utility as might be expected to be found in a work prepared and matured at leisure. In the edition before us the public are provided with the Acts themselves, in a convenient form, with an index; and by means of reference to the corresponding clauses of those statutes upon which the work of consolidation has proceeded, the professional man is furnished with a clue by means of which he may ascertain what the law in any analogous case was up to the passing of these Acts. The Acts are printed in the order in which they received the Royal assent, and an attempt has been made to distinguish by brackets those provisions which are introduced for the first time. It would, however, it is conceived, be unsafe for a practitioner to assume that the only alterations in the law made by these Acts are such as are made by the provisions marked as described; for in many instances, where no brackets occur, the subjoined note informs the reader that the section is nearly verbatim, or that it is framed upon one or more statutes; and, obviously under such circumstances new words must occur, the operation of which upon the construction of the clause it must be extremely difficult to foretell. These distinguishing marks, however, though they may not be placed with perfect accuracy, materially contribute to the value of the book. The book also contains a table of offences and an introduction. Of the explanatory notes, except so far as they contain references to other analogous Acts as above noticed, we cannot speak with satisfaction. No method appears to have been pursued in the manner in which the matter contained in them is introduced. Sometimes cases in illustration of the text of the section are inserted; and sometimes, though there is an equal necessity for the insertion of such illustrations, and equal facility for supplying them, the editor, either from indolence or caprice, entirely omits them. It is unreasonable, perhaps, to expect to find, in a work published as this is, a history of the multifarious laws digested by the Acts, or a complete compilation from reports and text-books, of the leading decisions with reference to analogous legislation, or a description of the evidence and procedure in relation to the offences provided against; but though full information upon these points might not have been expected, it is only reasonable to suppose that such a work as the present will systematically point out those channels wherein such information may be readily obtained. To have furnished references to such sources of information would have been an easy task, and would have added greatly to the practical utility of the book. It is a task, however, which Mr. Davis has not undertaken. With the exception, therefore, of the words on the title-page, "with notes critical and explanatory," the book neither contains any express promise that the task undertaken by its editor shall be performed in any particular manner, nor statement that it has been prepared for any definite purpose and no one who may be disappointed by its contents can complain that more has been promised by its editor than has been performed. In the introduction it is stated that the Acts are merely new editions of "Peel's Acts," introduced for the purpose not of consolidating the criminal law, but mainly to get rid of the perplexities in which the punishment for the offences dealt with, was involved before these Acts became law; and to assimilate the law of England and Ireland. In this part of the book the editor, in drawing attention to the great difficulties in the way of the consolidation of the statute law, remarks upon the "disheartening spectacle" exhibited by the repealing Act of the session. It repeals, either wholly or in part, no less than 106 statutes; but the work of destruction is necessarily so incomplete, that the mangled remains of a very considerable portion of the Acts must still continue to encumber the statute book, and add to the complications of consolidation. Indeed, judging from the example furnished by these Acts, the complete consolidation of the criminal law is a very remote possibility, and the consolidation of the whole statute law utterly hopeless.

JUSTICE AND ITS MISCARRIAGES.

At the recent meeting of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association at Worcester, the following paper on this subject was read by JOHN TURNER, Esq. :—

At the meeting of the Society at Newcastle, in October last year, I ventured to submit for your consideration a few facts illustrative of the miscarriages of justice under our present judicial systems, and the necessity which existed, and still exists, for appointing a minister of justice. In doing so I briefly alluded to the distrust of suitors arising from the want of uniformity in judicial decisions; to the evils of a system which permits the laws which regulate the rights of parties to vary, and be in conflict, according to the court in which the matter in dispute may chance to be heard; to the endless changes in the law, which render it impossible for mankind to regulate their dealings by any known principle or standard; to the imperfect nature of remedial statute laws passed, and constantly passing, through the efforts of over zealous and unskilful law reformers; and to the injury sustained by the public and the profession consequent thereon; to the evils arising from judicial appointments being given as the reward of political servitude, instead of eminent professional ability and spotless integrity of life and conduct; to the injustice evinced to the public interest and to the profession of attorneys and solicitors by the appointment of barristers as taxing masters in the superior courts; and by the appointment of barristers as solicitors to the public departments of the State; and also to the claim which the colonists in our colonial dependencies had upon the Sovereign and the Government to the enjoyment and protection of the laws of England in common with every British subject.

I omitted, however, to notice another evil, not of unfrequent occurrence, which arises when courts of justice assume to themselves the functions of legislators, and by judicial decision either unsettle or overturn existing law which has been recognised by a long series of decisions; or when, with more boldness, they satirise from the judgment seat the legislative acts of the country, and under professed inability to understand an Act of Parliament, or by professing to understand its provisions in a sense different from the real meaning, they decide contrary to the intention of the Legislature and practically annul the statute law of the land. Instances of this kind are probably within the memory of most of my hearers; and as it has been my endeavour to avoid reflecting upon any particular court, I abstain from more pointed reference to such decisions. It would, however, be a false delicacy on my part if, in resuming the consideration of the necessity for the appointment of a minister of justice, I were to abstain from noticing instances of miscarriage of justice in our colonies, to be found in reported cases which are open to every professional reader, the more especially as such cases affect the interest of members of the profession as attorneys. In referring to such cases I wish it to be distinctly understood that I impute no misconduct to colonial judges, and I presume that they acted and decided according to the best of their ability, but subject to those failings of erring humanity adverted to by Lord Brougham in his Lordship's judgment in Cattle's Case (2 House of Lords Cases, 667).

There are two classes of reported cases to which I desire to draw attention, the one relating to the power exercised by colonial governors to suspend or remove judges, and the other to the power of colonial courts to suspend and disbar barristers and attorneys, the functions of barrister and attorney being in some colonies united. The exercise of this last-mentioned power is often arbitrary and productive of individual suffering and wrong, and tends to pervert the course of justice. Some of these cases appear to have originated in ill-feeling between a particular practitioner and the judge, the result of local disputes, newspaper reports, or political feelings.

In Re Downie and Arrundell (3 Moore's P. C. Ca. 414) two advocates were suspended by two orders of the Court at British Guiana for having, as counsel, been concerned in and advised the service of a petition upon the judge which had been presented to her Majesty, praying her Majesty to stay proceedings in an action brought by the judge in his own court against a newspaper proprietor for alleged libel, and that he might be interdicted from presiding at the trial or from proceeding in any manner directly or indirectly with the action. The alleged libel consisted in an allegation that the judge had been guilty of delays in postponing the sittings of the Roll Court, and keeping that court shut at his pleasure to the injury and prejudice of her Majesty's subjects in the colony. These orders of disbarment were, upon an appeal to the Queen in council, reversed.

In the case of the Representatives of the Islands of Grenada and Sanderson (6 Moore's P. C. Ca. 38), the judge fined two magistrates for taking depositions in the third instead of the first person. It appears from the report of this case that several charges were made against the chief justice, which were in substance as follows:—

First. Exhibiting habitually on the bench a harsh and offensive demeanour towards the bar, the magistracy, and the grand juries, and addressing them in intemperate and violent language, and using expressions unbecoming his dignity as a judge.

Second. Denying the co-ordinate and co-equal jurisdiction of the puisne judges as established by statute, and taking constant occasion to assume a superior and independent authority.

Third. Refusing to carry the statute law into effect, for which he was suspended, and only restored upon his undertaking to enforce it.

Fourth. Disbarring a barrister, without notice given to him, or any opportunity afforded him of justifying or defending himself.

Fifth. Ordering another barrister to be committed for one month to gaol for two high contempts—viz., first, for moving to have the previous order of disbarment rescinded, notice of which had been given to the chief justice; and, secondly, for insisting upon his right, as a barrister, to be heard when desired by the chief justice to sit down and keep silence, notwithstanding that the other judge of the court, who had a co-ordinate jurisdiction, objected to such order being made.

Sixth. Procuring from the governor of the island the suspension of Mr. Justice Wells, for rescinding the above-mentioned order of disbarment, a suspension which was revoked by her Majesty under the advice of the law officers of the Crown in England.

Seventh. Making, without the knowledge or concurrence of the puisne judges, two rules of court, by which the puisne judges were forbidden to transact any business at chambers, rules which were rescinded by order of her Majesty under the advice of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Eighth. Sentencing, summarily and without trial, one, Andrew Lambie, a witness for the defence on the trial of an indictment, to a month's imprisonment in gaol and a fine of £10 for alleged prevarication and falsehood, which fine was directed, by order of her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, to be repaid to him, and the remaining portion of the term of imprisonment remitted.

Ninth. At an adjourned session of the court, illegally and without trial, issuing a writ of attachment against John Ross McCombie, and imprisoning him for three months, and imposing a fine of £100 for animadverting in a newspaper upon the committal of Andrew Lambie, an imprisonment which was likewise in great part suffered before it could be remitted by the governor, though the fine was, by his order, never demanded.

Tenth. Ordering, at the April sessions of the Court in 1839, one Daniel McLean, a prisoner on his trial for an assault, out of court during the examination of the witnesses for the defence, and confining him in one of the upper rooms of the same building, whereby he was precluded from questioning the witnesses either by himself or his counsel, and was otherwise prevented from assisting his counsel in his defence.

Eleventh. Fining two magistrates, in opposition to the opinion of the puisne judges sitting with him, for having taken depositions in the third person instead of the first person.

The chief justice also presented a memorial, objecting to the matter being investigated.

Both memorials having been referred to the Privy Council, their lordships made the following report to her Majesty:—

"The Lords of the Committee, in obedience to your Majesty's order of reference, have taken the said petition into consideration, and having heard counsel on both sides, do this day agree humbly to report to your Majesty as their opinion, that in the course of the fourteen years during which the Chief Justice has held his office, several instances of intemperate, and in some cases of illegal, conduct appear to their lordships to have been established against him; but having regard to the length of time which has elapsed since all such acts, except one, have been committed without any allegation of misconduct on his part in the meantime, and considering that the last of such acts—viz., fining of two magistrates in the year 1844—appears to their lordships, though erroneous and improper to have been committed in the execution of what the chief justice thought his duty, the Lords of this Committee do not think that sitting judicially their lordships can say the chief justice ought to be removed."

In Montague v. The Lieutenant-Governor of Van Diemen's Land (6 Moore's P. C. Ca. 489), it appeared that the judge was deeply embarrassed, and that the local court over which he presided was the only court in which actions against him could be brought, and that an action brought against him in such court was decided not to be maintainable, and that no judgment could be obtained so long as he remained judge, so that the creditor was without remedy according to law as administered in the colony.

In Smith v. The Justices of Sierra Leone (3 Moore's P. C. Ca. 361) an attorney and advocate practising in the courts of the colony of Sierra Leone was fined, imprisoned, disbarred, and struck off the rolls for asserting, when applying for a new trial, that the judge had misdirected the jury, and declining to answer a question put to him as to the particular words used; and upon the Privy Council reversing the orders the Court again, upon his return to practice, made an order to disbar him upon another ground, which order was also reversed by the Privy Council upon appeal. (See 7 Moore's P. C. Ca. 174.)

In Graham v. Lafitte (3 Moore's P. C. Ca. 382) the Governor of St. Lucia illegally suspended a judge, and appointed another in his stead; and all the acts done by the Court, so illegally constituted, were void, and the consequences were most disastrous to the public. The Lords of the Privy Council, upon the facts being drawn to their attention, to prevent the hardship upon the suitors, made orders declaring valid the proceedings and judicial acts of the Court while so improperly constituted.

In Coette v. The Queen (8 Moore's P. C. Ca. 484) the Governor and Executive Council at Port Natal, by an order suspended from his office the recorder of the district of Natal for alleged misconduct in having permitted an affidavit to be reformed instead of rejecting it altogether, or treating it as a contempt of court. This order was rescinded by the Privy Council, who advised the Crown that the salary attached to the office should be paid to the recorder as if no order of suspension had been made.

As the remedy in these cases relating to barristers and attorneys is, by the indulgence of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council acting under statutory powers, to allow an appeal to the Queen in council, or by a reference from the colonial office to that tribunal to entertain a petition, and the costs of such a form of proceeding is very heavy, and attended with great delay, the appointment of a minister of justice appears necessary to whom an application could be made direct for relief, and the authority of such an officer is also required to mitigate the consequences of illegal removals of colonial judges.

In addition to these reported authorities my attention has been directed to the case of a judge in one of our principle colonies, who had been an ironmonger by trade in this country, and was adjudged a bankrupt. He had, however, political interest, and became a barrister, and was appointed a colonial judge. His decisions proved to be very unsatisfactory to the colonists over whom he was sent to preside, and they thought that the best remedy for the evils he caused was to petition the Home Government for his removal, which they did, and so far succeeded that two additional judges were appointed, whose ability in the discharge of their duties and courteous demeanour removed further ground for complaint. Had there been a minister of justice responsible to the country for all judicial appointments, both at home and abroad, or if the benchers of the various inns of court had any voice in such appointments, it is not likely that a person who had been a bankrupt trader, unless possessing high legal attainments, would have been made a judge, and the complaints of the colonists would have been unnecessary.

The time allowed by the rules of this society for reading papers will not permit me to refer to other cases, nor is it desirable that I should do so, as it might create opposition instead of support to the creation of such an office as I have indicated.

At the meeting of the society last year, the question was asked whether a minister of justice, if appointed, should be a cabinet minister, and whether he should go out of office upon a change of administration, and what would be the extent of his authority. I think that such an office, if created should be filled by a cabinet minister possessing high legal attainments, and that he should go out of office on a change of administration.

There are serious objections to be considered before such an officer can be constituted.

Admitting that there are many grave evils under our present systems, it has been doubted whether the appointment of a minister of justice is the proper remedy. The very name is foreign to our country, and forcibly reminds us of the despotism of foreign courts and the assumed sovereign right which is said to exist in some foreign states under which the ordinary laws of the country may be suspended. A minister of justice in this country giving sanction to such a doctrine would be a fearful evil, and it is sufficient to say, that no such power is sought to be conferred, and in this land of freedom would never be tolerated. The office which I suggest, by whatever name it may be called, is one which should be filled by a cabinet minister having in the House of Lords equal judicial authority with the Lord Chancellor and taking rank after him, and by virtue of his office he should be a Deputy Speaker in the House of Lords. He should superintend the preparation of all laws affecting the administration of justice or the rights of property. He should investigate complaints of injustice from and superintend the administration of justice in the colonies, and on his recommendation the Crown should have authority to remove any judge for incompetency or judicial misconduct. He should be responsible for all legal appointments, and all officers in courts of justice and all consular agents should be appointed with his approbation, and such appointments should be declared to be a public trust, to be exercised solely for the benefit of the country, and not by way of patronage. The responsibility of appointing judges of the superior courts should still remain with the Crown upon the recommendation of the cabinet ministers. It should also be the duty of such an officer to watch and find a remedy for every application of the law involving dangerously erroneous principles.

To prevent political favoritism, I think that no direct power of appointment should be placed in the hands of a minister of justice, and that colonial judgeships should be made from persons approved of by the benchers of the inns of court.

It may be contended that all the duties which I have indicated as necessary to be performed by a minister of justice are already adequately provided for, and that the Lord Chancellor, the Attorney-General, and the Secretary of State for the Home Department, are the persons to perform such duties. If this be so I have already shown that many of their most important duties are neglected, and although it may be true that these three state officers to some extent perform the duties of a minister of justice, yet the division of labour is either so apportioned as to cause the neglect of such duties, or that they are so onerous as to render them impossible of performance without further assistance. The Lord Chancellor is supposed to be responsible for all legal appointments both at home and in the colonies, but I will venture to say from the high character of the judges who have held the office of Lord Chancellor, that they cannot be held responsible for colonial appointments; and I shall be greatly surprised to find that any of the judges whose decisions I have referred to received their appointment on the recommendation of the Lord Chancellor for the time being. It is impossible for any Lord Chancellor now to perform those varied duties which might, without public inconvenience, have been and probably were performed in the reign of William III., and which at that period comprised all the duties necessary from a minister of justice. The total change in the population and circumstances of the country have so far increased the duties as to render a reconsideration of the best means of securing their adequate performance necessary, and, according to the best consideration I have been able to give to the subject, I think that a state department of justice should be formed, and that a minister of justice should be appointed.

THE REGISTRATION OF TRADE MARKS.

The following paper by ARTHUR RYLAND, Esq., Solicitor, Birmingham, was also read at the recent meeting of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association at Worcester:—

The piracy of trade marks, which was taken up by the Government during the last session, as one of the subjects on which Parliament ought to legislate, but which the Government failed in their efforts to deal with, will, if the intentions expressed by them at the close of the session are to be relied upon, form the subject of inquiry before a Committee of the House of Commons during the coming session.

It therefore appears to me to be a proper subject for discussion at this meeting, as the knowledge and practical experience of the members of our Society may enable them to make some valuable suggestions upon it.

Although much disappointment was felt by the Chambers of Commerce, who brought the subject before the Board of Trade two years ago, at the neglect of the Government in allowing its Trade Marks Bill to die out from want of care, I think they may find more than a compensation in the improvement of the measure which will result from the increased opportunities thus afforded for further consideration.

I would remind you that the Bill declared that the following offences should be misdemeanors, namely—the forging or imitating a trade mark, or the applying any such mark to any chattel or article with intent to defraud; the selling or exposing for sale any chattel or article bearing a forged or false trade mark with intent to defraud, the making or selling, or exposing for sale, any chattel or article, or the cover, bottle, reel, &c., containing it, with a false indication of its quantity, quality, measure, substance, or material; the forging, imitating, or falsely applying the names and marks of artists to any picture, engraving, sculpture, &c., or other work of art. And it was proposed to be enacted that no proceeding under that Act should affect any remedy which aggrieved persons may be entitled to at law or in equity.

These provisions are declaratory of the common law. It appears to me that the case of the Queen v. Closs, 27 L. J. M. C. 54, leaves no room for doubt that the offences described in the Bill are, without the aid of any statute, indictable. In that case Lord Chief Justice Cockburn is reported to have said—"We have carefully examined the authorities; and the result is that we think that if a person, in the course of his trade, openly and publicly carried on, put a false mark or token on an article so as to pass it off as a genuine one, when in fact it is only a spurious one, and the article is sold and the money is obtained by means of that false mark or token, that will be a cheat at common law: as for instance, if a man sold a gun with the mark of a particular manufacturer upon it, so as to make it appear to be the genuine production of the manufacturer, that would be a false mark or token, and the party would be guilty of a cheat, and therefore liable to punishment if the indictment were fairly framed to meet his case."

There are many reasons, nevertheless, why it is desirable to have a declaratory statute on the subject, and the Government and Parliament have recognised the necessity for such legislation; but unless it is clear and precise in its terms, and unless it provides the proper machinery for its easy administration, it would, in my opinion, be better to remain as we are a little longer. I am persuaded, however, that such a statute may, without much difficulty, be framed, provided those who prepare it will possess themselves of what has been done in this respect in other countries, and of what has been done here in matters analogous to trade marks, and will also make themselves thoroughly conversant with the difficulties with which the manufacturers have now to contend.

I do not propose in this paper to go into any critical examination of the Bill of last session, but to confine myself chiefly to the question, whether a Bill having for its object the punishment of the piracy of trade marks as a misdemeanour can be complete without providing for a registration of marks.

We must first understand in what sense the term trade mark is to be used.

By a trade mark I do not understand a manufacturer's name, nor his label describing the quality of his wares, but a device used to indicate the person by whom, or the works where, the article bearing it was made or sold. What a crest or coat of arms is to a gentleman the trade mark is to the manufacturer.

The Bill of last session erred in not making this distinction. I do not mean in subjecting the fraudulent use of a name or label to the same punishment as the piracy of a mark that all such offences ought to be equally punished; but the error was in including them under the term trade mark.

The Bill declares that the expression trade mark shall extend to and include any name, letter, mark, device, figure, sign, seal, stamp, label, or other thing lawfully used by any person to denote any chattel to be of the manufacture, workmanship, production, or merchandise of such person.

This definition appears to me to make complicated and difficult what would otherwise be simple and easy; and it would also work great injustice and inconvenience.

Would it not be much simpler to apply the penalties of the Act to the fraudulent marking of goods offered for sale with the name or the trade mark of another, and declare that the so marking the wrapper, case, or other thing containing or holding goods, shall, for the purposes of the Act, be deemed to be a marking of the goods? I here suggest the description of the offence. I do not offer it as a complete definition; for, of course, provision must be made in it for fraudulent imitation of a name or mark, and for excluding the use of single letters as marks.

No description or definition of the name of another can be needed, nor need it be described what is meant by fraudulent marking. No manufacturer can need to have it explained that if he has the authority of another person to mark goods with his name, to do so is not fraudulent.

The only term requiring a definition is trade mark and this must be so defined as not to include the other terms name and label; and the definition I would suggest for such a Bill as I contemplate would be, that the term trade mark shall, for the purposes of the Act, be deemed to be a device used to indicate the person by whom, or the works at which, the article bearing such mark was made or sold.

It may be objected that this definition would exclude all terms merely descriptive of the article as "glacé thread," "Persian thread," "medicated balm," "solid-headed pins," &c. I reply, that I think it just and wise to exclude all such names. It appears to me unfair and contrary to public policy to allow to any one house the exclusive right to an adjective. In Prussia such a monopoly is forbidden. I would propose not to include them amongst those trade marks, the piracy of which is to be indictable as a misdemeanour. The present remedies by injunction, and action for damages will remain untouched, and parties who have established their right to the exclusive use of such words must remain content with those remedies.

Then arises the question, have we, in thus affording additional protection to the public and to the manufacturers, being the owners or users of trade marks, sufficiently provided against exposing other manufacturers to the danger of unwittingly incurring the penalties of the new statute?

We must not lay traps for the unwary. To render persons liable to punishment by imprisonment for offences hitherto classed amongst injuries, for which it was deemed, although erroneously, that the only remedies were by a suit in chancery or an action at law, is a change demanding the utmost caution. The statute by which it shall be effected ought to provide every means for giving publicity to the change, and for warning the trading community against the offence to be punished.

These observations do not apply to the piracy of another's name—because no one could do that innocently. The mere fact is evidence of fraud. Not so with a mark. A manufacturer desiring to use a trade mark may adopt a device which is already in use by another, without knowing that it is so. It may be said, that as he does this ignorantly, it would not be fraudulent, and consequently not punishable under the Act. True! But he may be indicted: the fact of his using another's mark would induce the grand jury to find a true bill. He might have the annoyance of having to prove before a jury the absence of fraud—not always an easy thing for the most innocent to do.

Larger to innocent manufacturers may be avoided by providing in the statute for a Registration of Marks, and by excluding from the operation of the Bill the piracy of all marks not registered.

The registry would be open to inspection to all on payment of a moderate fee; and with this means of knowledge no excuse would remain for those who incurred the pains and penalties attached to the piracy of trade marks.

In addition to this advantage a registry would be valuable to the owners of marks in the increased certainty, and the decreased cost, in proving their title to their respective marks—and this would be no small advantage. The statute would of course declare that the registrar's certificate should be conclusive evidence of the title of the registered party, and this might be extended to the proceedings in the civil courts.

Without a registry a person has, in every case in which he complains of a piracy of his trade mark, to prove, often by several witnesses, that he has exclusively used the mark for a long period; and however frequently he may have to maintain his title to his trade mark, the same kind of evidence must be produced. With a registry, all that he would have to do in this respect would be to produce a certificate of the registrar. Of course he would have to prove his title previously to registering his mark, but this would be once for all.

In making provision for a registry we may be much assisted by a reference to the registry of designs—the work there done is analogous to what would have to be done in a registry of trade marks. I would propose to have the work done under the management of the same chief officer. It would not be difficult to increase the staff so as to do the additional work—the fees would well pay for such an arrangement.

The mode of proceeding in Prussia affords valuable hints to us. There the person desiring to register applies to a public officer, delivering to him three copies of the mark. This officer, known as the Trades or Manufactory Justice, gives public notice of the application, so that all persons objecting to the use of the mark by the claimant may be heard against the claim. It is the duty of the justice to hear and decide on those objections, and also to compare the mark claimed with those already on the register; and if he find that it is distinct from the marks already registered, and it does not infringe upon the rights of any of the opponents, and is in accordance with the requisitions of the ordinance, he allows the claim and enters it on the roll. This roll is open to search without charge. Each mark is connected with a particular trade, and cannot be transferred except to the proprietors of that trade; if the trade is discontinued then the right to the mark ceases.

In the establishment of a registry it would be necessary to require the applicant to send to the registrar two copies of the proposed mark in a given form; together with his name or the name of his firm, his place of business, and the descriptive name of the manufacture or goods on which he proposes to use his mark; and that the registrar should, on receiving such application, first ascertain whether the mark claimed is already on the registry for that manufacture, and if it be, to return the claim, and if it be free from such an objection, then the registrar should give notice in the London Gazette, and some paper published at or near the claimant's place of business, stating the particulars of the claim, and within what time notices of objection are to be sent in. On the expiration of that time, if there be no notice of objection, the claim would be enrolled, and a certificate attached to one of the copies of the mark sent to the claimant. If any notices of objection were received, then a copy of the claim, and one of the copies of the mark with the objection, might be sent to the county court within whose jurisdiction the claimant's business is carried on.

It should be the duty of the county court judge to hear and decide upon the claim and the objections, and remit the papers, with a certificate of his judgment, to the registrar; and the claim should either be allowed and enrolled, or refused, according to that judgment. I do not think it necessary to provide for any appeal; but this may easily be done if desired; and if a new court be created for patent causes, the appeals might be heard by that court.

A scale of fees and charges must be settled by the Board of Trade or the Treasury, and each claimant must send with his papers the proper amount. The payment of the costs incurred in the county court must be decided by that court on hearing each case.

The Treasury settles the scale of fees under the Copyright of Designs Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 100, s. 18), and in order to show that such modification of the fees first settled, necessarily rather speculative, as experience may shew to be necessary will be made. I may mention that recently some of the fees for registering designs were reduced, on the representation of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce that they were unnecessarily high. The superintendence of such departments would appear more properly to belong to the Board of Trade; but this is a matter of secondary importance.

Objections to claims must be founded upon the objector's superior title to the mark claimed; and he must be required to state in his notice, in addition to his name and place of business, how long he has used the mark claimed, and in connection with what goods he has so used it.

The proceedings in the county courts could be governed by a few simple regulations, requiring the bailiff to give notice to the claimant and objectors of the day of hearing; and subjecting the proceedings to such of the rules of practice in those courts as may be applicable.

The forms of claim, objections, advertisements, registry, certificates of registrar, and of county court, would of course be prescribed in the Act, and the working of the system would be an easy and inexpensive matter.

I mention the form of advertisements as a matter to be provided in the Act. Much expense would be saved by adopting a schedule form with headings, similar to those adopted in the parliamentary and burgess rolls. I am surprised that this has not occurred to those who are responsible for the conduct of the business of the bankruptcy and insolvency courts. How much more easy would it be to read down a schedule of names and dates than to weed them out of the unnecessary and oft repeated jargon of their advertisements, and the amount of money saved would be very great.

In the Gazette and other papers the registrar would have his schedule of claim somewhat in this form:—

Claimant.	Where business carried on.	Manufacture or goods to which mark to be applied.	Mark.	Day before which notice is to be sent.
Elkington & Mason	Birmingham	Gold and silver and plated goods and medals	A Crown
Smith & Wright	Birmingham	Metal and ornamental buttons	A Butterfly
William Aston	Birmingham	Metal buttons	A Lion
Millward & Son	Redditch	Needles	A Globe
Dain, Watts, & Manton	Birmingham	Buttons	A Swan
British Iron Company	Corngreaves, Haleson	Iron bars	A Lion
Philip Williams & Sons	Wednesbury	Iron bars	A Mitre

I have gone into this detail because I know that some have objected to the scheme of a registry from the apprehension of difficulties which would arise from the number of notices to be given and the entries to be made.

It is mere clerks work. If the notices be required to be sent by post, and the fees remitted by post office orders, how simple and easy would be the operations. The registrar would require only two books and two indexes, one for registering claims in the same form as the advertisement, with the addition of columns for writing the names of objectors, when and to what county court sent, what judgment given, and when certificates thereof received, and a reference to the number of the registry or roll on which claim entered, when allowed. The other book would be the registry for enrolling the claims allowed, answering to the first four columns of the advertisement. An index of manufactures and marks would be necessary, but I think not of names. A person searching the index would desire to know what marks would be used in connection with certain trades; his object being to learn what marks in his manufacture are registered, so that, in selecting a mark for himself, he may avoid any already registered. And in the searches to be made by the registrar, the mark or the manufacture would be the only thing to be ascertained.

Provision must be made as to the transfer of marks. They should pass with the trades with which they are connected.

and the right to each mark cease when its trade ceases to be carried on; and the proprietor must be required, on each devolution of ownership, to send particulars, to be under the penalty of losing the exclusive right to the mark.

In France the ownership of the mark continues for fifteen years, but may be renewed at the end of each period for another of the like duration.

The plan of registration may be objected to from its novelty, which in some minds always raises doubts and fears, and much good results from this wise dislike of change; but it must be borne in mind that it is proposed as a protection against the inconveniences of a change decided upon. And we have experience to guide us. Such a registration exists in France, Russia, Belgium, and Prussia; and in our country we have a somewhat analogous registration, under the copyright of Designs Act. This is carried on with satisfaction and success; and I cannot understand that greater difficulty would exist in the registry of trade marks—indeed, I do not believe there would be nearly so much to be done in this case as in the former. The objectors to a registration must, I think, have expected that it would necessarily include the names of manufactures. This would, indeed, render a registry too unwieldy to be attempted: such a plan would be as impracticable as it would be useless.

Some objection may be entertained by houses which are now in the undisputed enjoyment of trade marks from an apprehension that they might lose those marks by unscrupulous persons obtaining a title to them by getting a registry certificate of the same. Such attempts could scarcely be successful, and the improbability of success would operate to prevent them; but the owners of recognised marks may themselves prevent such dangers by immediately registering their marks; and if they take the trouble to understand the effect of its provisions they must be amongst the first to seek the protection of the statute; not so much to prevent a robbery of their mark, as to have a simpler and less costly means of supporting their title in legal proceedings and a more efficacious check against piracy.

The establishment of a registry of trade marks was urged upon the attention of the Board of Trade more than two years ago by the principal chambers of commerce; and subsequently the Birmingham chamber, on the request of that Board, submitted an outline of clauses for this purpose; and the then Board decided that the plan should not be adopted. What objections prevailed to its rejection we do not know.

Since that time the Sheffield Chamber of Commerce has prepared a Bill which included registration as a part of its scheme. Mr. Roebuck, the member for Sheffield, gave notice of amendments upon the Government Bill, embodying the provisions of the Sheffield Bill in reference to registration and convention with foreign countries.

I have not in this paper noticed the provisions of the Bill relating to sales by false indications of quantity or material, or the counterfeiting of an artist's name or mark on any work of art. These objects are properly within the purview of the Bill. The sale of goods by false tokens is the general title, including all the objects proposed to be provided by the Bill.

The systematic frauds of this class both in this and other countries are so extensive that it is necessary that some strong check should be provided; and I believe that when it is understood that the practice will be regarded no longer as a venial offence, but as a crime punishable with imprisonment, it will be deemed too dangerous or too disgraceful to be used.

THE OPENING OF THE MIDDLE TEMPLE LIBRARY.

The New Library of the Middle Temple was opened on Thursday last with great pomp and ceremony by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. During the early part of this week the usually silent courts of the Middle Temple were quite alive with the hum of preparation for the ceremonial which was to take place on the occasion. How briefs found their way through the confusion to their rightful owners it is difficult to say; and but that Term was so near at hand, one might have thought that all business was at a standstill. The benchers spared neither trouble nor expense to do proper honour to the occasion, and to accommodate all who had claims to be present. The demand for tickets was much greater than was anticipated, for members of the society came up from all parts of the country, and as the hall, spacious as are its proportions, would not contain a third of the expected company, the whole area of Fountain-court had been included in a handsome pavilion, which accommodated nearly 500 guests. In the small garden round the fountain arcades of evergreens and other floral decorations were raised, and when illuminated in the evening by the lime light, had a very beautiful appearance. New arrangements had been made, too, for lighting the interior of the hall, which showed off its fine oak ceiling and panelling to the greatest advantage.

The first stone of the new building was laid by Sir Fortunatus Dwarria, in 1858. It is in the collegiate style of the 15th century, built from the design of Mr. Abraham, the architect. The lower portion is occupied by chambers. The cost of the building is stated to be under £14,000. The library, which is a room of handsome proportions, 96 feet long, 42 feet wide, and 70 feet high, occupies the upper portion, and is approached by a winding staircase in an octagonal tower at the side. The roof, which is not unlike that of Westminster Hall, except that it is two-centred, is of American pitch pine—the first time this wood has been used for the purpose in this country. The floor is of Portland stone, in panels, with Portland cement in the centre compartments. There is a stained glass window at each end; the oriel at the south is illuminated with the arms of the Royal Princes, from the time of Richard Cœur de Lion down to the present Prince of Wales; and the window at the north, which is one of the finest specimens of stained glass in the country, represents the shields of all who have been Benchers during the time of its erection. There are five windows at each side, which cast a dim studious light through silvered glass. Over the door is hung the portrait of the founder of the old library, Robert Ashley. Altogether, it is really a noble room, and even those who are most disposed to criticise the exterior, when they get inside cannot but admit that it is a credit to the Inn.

About half-past one o'clock the guard of honour of eighty rank and file of the Inns of Court Volunteer Corps appointed to receive the Prince, took up their position in the Vestibule. Punctually at two o'clock his Royal Highness arrived. The Treasurer, Mr. Anderson, Q.C., and the Attorney-General, Sir W. Atherton, Q.C., were awaiting him in the vestibule, and conducted him to the new Parliament Chamber, where the Benchers had already assembled, the guard of honour presenting arms and the band playing "God save the Queen." In attendance on his Royal Highness were Major-General Bruce and Major Teesdale, C.B. Here the Benchers were first presented in due form; and afterwards two representatives of the barristers, and two representatives of the students, together with the architect of the Library, had also the honour of being presented. A Parliament was then formed of the Masters of the Bench present. The proceedings here were very short. The Master Treasurer moved, and the Lord Chancellor seconded, first, "that his Royal Highness be admitted a member of the Middle Temple," and next, "that his Royal Highness be called to the degree of the outer bar, and that the oath, on publication of the call, be dispensed with." Both motions were carried unanimously, and the Prince was invested with the bar gown and subscribed the call-book. The next motion, also by the Treasurer, and seconded by the Lord Chancellor, was "that his Royal Highness be invited to the Bench." This motion was also agreed to, and the Prince assumed the Bencher's gown, and took his seat as a Master of the Bench, at the right hand of the Treasurer. The new Master next moved, "that the parliament do adjourn, and proceed to open the Library." This concluded the ceremony in the Parliament Chamber, and a procession was then formed to the library, the Prince of Wales and the Treasurer leading the way. Arrived in the library, the Prince took his station on the dais in the bay window, and the Treasurer read the following address:—

"May it please your Royal Highness,—We, the Treasurer and Masters of the Bench, barristers, and other members of the Society of the Middle Temple, gladly avail ourselves of this opportunity to express our warmest thanks for the honour which has been conferred on this Society by your Royal Highness having graciously consented to become one of our members, and to preside at the opening of the new Library.

"This ceremony cannot fail to interest all who duly appreciate the importance of the study of juridical science, and the diffusion of a knowledge of the laws which govern alike all ranks and orders of society, and who deem that the maintenance of its learning, no less than the preservation of its independence, is essential to the efficient administration of justice, and to the protection of the liberty of the subject.

"The Library in which we are assembled, built for the purpose of providing the members of this Inn with improved opportunities of study, may be regarded as an earnest that the Masters of the Bench take a deep interest in the exertions of the student, and are anxious to encourage a spirit of generous rivalry for the honours which have been set apart as rewards of merit.

"It is not, we trust, presumptuous to hope that, among those who may pursue their studies in this room, many will be found not unworthy successors of those great lawyers and statesmen, to whose names, enrolled in the books of our Society, and many of which grace these walls, we refer with legitimate pride.

"We recognise in the honour which your Royal Highness has this day conferred upon us a manifestation of that respect for the law for which your Royal House has always been distinguished, and never more so than during the happy reign of her Most Gracious Majesty—a reign specially marked by the many important improvements in our laws—and we feel assured that the enrolment of your Royal Highness as one of our body will animate us all with fresh zeal ever to uphold the dignity of the profession, and to maintain the high character of our ancient society:—

To which his Royal Highness read the following reply in a clear, firm tone, which, notwithstanding the crowded state of the room, was audible nearly all over it:—

"Gentlemen,—I thank you cordially for this address, and for the gratifying terms in which you refer to my presence here to-day.

"I have gladly accepted your invitation, and esteem it a high privilege to be enrolled on your list of bachelors, and permitted to inaugurate the opening of this beautiful library, so worthy of your ancient and renowned Society.

"Although but very imperfectly acquainted with the noble science to the study of which this edifice is more specially devoted, I am deeply sensible of its vast interest and importance, and I value, as they deserve, the learning and integrity for which the Bench and Bar of this country are so justly celebrated.

"Your Inn has contributed many to the long array of illustrious names which adorn our legal annals; and, while heartily congratulating you on the completion of this great work, I venture to express a fervent hope that the students within its walls may largely profit by the advantages so wisely and liberally provided for them, and may successfully emulate the fame of their eminent predecessors."

The Prince then signified his pleasure to the Treasurer that the library be opened, and the Treasurer then said, "By command of His Royal Highness this library is declared to be opened." This concluded the two ceremonials, which together did not last more than half-an-hour, and the procession then left the library in the same order, and went to the Temple Church, where there was a special service which had been drawn up by the Master, Dr. Robinson.

At 4 o'clock some 750 guests sat down to what was modestly called a déjeuner, but which was in fact a sumptuous banquet. In the hall there was not room for more than 350, including the guests on the dais; the rest were accommodated in the pavillion hard by. The Treasurer was in the chair, having the Prince on his right, and the Duke of Cambridge on his left hand. In addition to the other guests whose names are given, Lord Brougham joined the company at dinner. The gallery over the screen was filled with ladies. As previously arranged, there were no speeches. The Treasurer gave in rapid succession, "The Queen," "The Prince Consort," "The Prince of Wales," "The Duke of Cambridge, and the rest of the Royal Family," all of which were duly honoured.

The Prince of Wales then rose and said,—Gentlemen, I wish all prosperity to the profession, and I beg leave to give you "Domus."

The speech and toast were received with great enthusiasm. Shortly afterwards the Prince left the hall, accompanied by the other visitors, loudly cheered, as upon entering. Next to his Royal Highness, Colonel Brewster, the Commander of the Inns of Court Volunteers, sat, and to judge from the warmth of his reception, appeared to be the most popular man present, an advantage which he probably owes to the excellent state of efficiency to which he has brought that fine corps.

The day was brought to a close by an evening conversazione, for which the Prince did not remain. He left immediately after the déjeuner, after expressing to the Master his high gratification at the events of the day.

The general arrangements for the accommodation and marshalling of the guests were excellent, and did great credit to all concerned in carrying them out, and though there must have been at one time nearly a thousand people collected together, the complete success of the day was not marred by the slightest confusion, nor, as far as could be known, by a single disappointment.

Law Students' Journal.

MICHAELMAS TERM EXAMINATION.

Persons applying to be admitted attorneys, are required to attend on Wednesday, the 13th, and Thursday, the 14th Nov. next, at half-past nine in the forenoon, at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, in order to be examined. The examination will commence at ten o'clock precisely, and close at four o'clock each day.

Articles of clerkship and assignment, with answers to the questions as to due service, according to the regulations approved by the judges, must be left with the secretary on or before Friday the 8th Nov.

Where articles have not expired, but will expire during term, or in the vacation following such term, the candidate may be examined conditionally; but the articles must be left within the first seven days of term, and answers up to that time. If part of the term has been served with a barrister, special pleader, or London agent, answers to the questions must be obtained from them, as to the time served with each respectively.

On the first day of examination, papers will be delivered to each candidate, containing questions to be answered in writing, classed under the several heads of—1. Preliminary. 2. Common and statute law, and practice of the courts. 3. Conveyancing.

On the second day, further papers will be delivered to each candidate, containing questions to be answered in—4. Equity, and practice of the courts. 5. Bankruptcy, and practice of the courts. 6. Criminal law, and proceedings before justices of the peace.

Each candidate is required to answer all the preliminary questions (No. 1); and also to answer in three of the other heads of inquiry, viz.:—common law, conveyancing, and equity. The examiners will continue the practice of proposing questions in bankruptcy and in criminal law and proceedings before justices of the peace, in order that candidates who have given their attention to these subjects may have the advantage of answering such questions, and having the correctness of their answers in those departments taken into consideration in summing up the merit of their general examination.

LAW LECTURES AT THE INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY, 1861-62.

MR. FREEMAN OLIVER HAYNES, on Conveyancing, Monday, November 4.

MR. WILLIAM MURRAY, on Common Law and Mercantile Law, Friday, November 8.

The annual exhibition of chrysanthemums in the Inner Temple gardens commenced this week. The show this year is most magnificent. Three sides of the garden are occupied by the flowers, the best specimens being ranged on the north side of the garden, and placed under canvass. Mr. Broome, the society's gardener, has this year succeeded in infusing a slight lavender scent into these flowers. Those of our readers who delight in floriculture should take an early opportunity of viewing the splendid collection of flowers now offered for their inspection by the Benchers of the Inner Temple.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths.

BIRTHS.

BALL—On Oct. 30, at Pershore, the wife of Edwin Ball, Esq. of a daughter.

DEMPSTER—On Oct. 28, at Morden House, Greenwich, the wife of R. Frederic Dempster, Esq., Solicitor, of a son.

MERRIFIELD—On Oct. 22, at Brighton, the wife of a Frederic Merrifield, Esq., Barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

STAPYLTON—On Oct. 27, at 30, Gloucester-square, Hyde-park, the wife of Martin B. Stapylton, Esq., Barrister-at-law, of a daughter, who survived her birth only a few hours.

MARRIAGES.

BALSTON—OLIVER—On Oct. 24, Thomas Balston, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-law, to Ellen Frances, daughter of the Rev. W. M. Oliver, rector of Bovinger, Essex.

ENGLEHEART—WILCOXON—On Oct. 22, Edward Curteis, son of Nathaniel Brown Engleheart, Esq., of Doctor's-commons, to Emilie, daughter of Robert Wilcoxon, Esq., of Monument-yard.

HARVEY—RUSSELL—On Oct. 29. John Harvey, Esq., of Caw House, county Londonderry, Ireland, to Emily, daughter of the late Sir William Oldnall Russell, Chief Justice of Bengal.

HASKINS—HULME—On Oct. 24, John Haskins, Esq., of Hadlow House, Mayfield, Sussex, and Elm-grove, Ventnor, Isle of Wight, to Josephine, daughter of the late John Walter Hulme, Esq., Chief Justice of Hongkong.

SMITH—TRINDER—On Oct. 29, Richard Fryer Smith, Esq., of Cheadle, Staffordshire, to Louisa Sarah, daughter of the late W. H. Trinder, Esq., of John-street, Bedford-row.

TRISTRAM—BURGH—On Oct. 26, at Dublin, Thomas Hutchinson Tristram, Esq., D.C.L., Advocate, Doctor's-commons, to Flora, daughter of the late very Rev. Thomas John de Burgh, Dean of Cloyne.

WATTS—WEBB—On Oct. 23, John Onslow Watts, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-law, to Caroline Mary, daughter of Major Vere Webb, of Bath.

DEATHS.

BURTON—On Oct. 21, William Warwick Burton, Esq., of 14, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

CHAPMAN—On Oct. 21, at Weston-super-Mare, Lucy, daughter of Ralph Chapman, Esq., Solicitor, aged 13 years.

CHEFFINS—On Oct. 23, Charles Frederick Cheffins, Esq., of 11, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, aged 54.

FRY—On Oct. 14, George Fry, Esq., of 18, Great Portland-street, London, aged 51, son of the late — Fry, Esq., of the Registry-office, Chancery-lane.

GLENNIE—On Oct. 20, John Irving Glennie, Esq., of Doctor's-commons, aged 65.

NUTT—On Oct. 28, at Canterbury, John Nutt, Esq., aged 69, for many years Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace for the city and borough.

PARKER—On Oct. 30, aged 58, Caroline, the wife of Thomas Parker, Esq., of 40, Bedford-row.

PRIDHAM—On Oct. 24, at Plymouth, Henry, son of George Pridham, Esq., aged 27.

SKENE—On Sept. 23, on board the P. & O. steamship Simla on his homeward voyage from Ceylon, James Francis Skene, Esq., advocate, son of George Skene, Esq., Professor of Law in the University of Glasgow, in his 29th year.

Court Papers.

Court of Probate AND

Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes.

SITTINGS IN AND AFTER MICHAELMAS TERM, 1861.

Probate Causes without Juries—Wednesday, November 6th, Thursday, 7th, Friday, 8th, Saturday, 9th.

Full Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes—Wednesday, November 13.

Divorce Causes without Juries—Thursday, November 14, Friday 15, Saturday 16, Wednesday 20, Thursday 21, Friday 22, Saturday 23.

Probate Causes with Juries—Wednesday, November 27, Thursday 28, Friday 29, Saturday 30.

Divorce Causes with Juries will be taken after the Probate Causes with Juries have been heard, and until the 24th December, with the exception of Mondays and Tuesdays.

The Judge will sit in chambers at 11 o'clock, and in court to hear motions at 12 o'clock, on Tuesday, November 5th, and each succeeding Tuesday during the sittings of the Court.

Papers for motions are to be left with the clerk of the papers before two o'clock on Thursdays.

General Orders in Bankruptcy.

It is ordered as follows, that is to say,—

A fee of £1 shall be paid on every petition for adjudication of bankruptcy when presented to the London Court of Bankruptcy or to a county court by debtors who are not traders, and whose debts do not exceed £300, and who do not petition in forma pauperis.

The above fee to be received and taken by means of a stamp having the word "Bankruptcy" impressed or affixed thereon as provided by the Act.

WESTBURY, C.
JOHN S. M. FONSELANQUE, Commissioner,
EDWARD HOLROYD, Commissioner.

14th October, 1861.

London Gazettes.

Windings-up of Joint Stock Companies.

FRIDAY, NOV. 1, 1861.

UNLIMITED IN CHANCERY.

STATE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.—Petition for winding up, presented Oct. 24, will be heard before V.C. Wood, on Nov. 9. Gibbs & Tucker, 17, Clement's-lane, London, Solicitors for petitioner.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

TUESDAY, Oct. 29, 1861.

GREEN, FRANK HENRY, & AUGUSTUS JONES, Attorneys and Solicitors, 1 Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex. Oct. 11, by mutual consent.

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. cap. 35.

Last Day of Claim.

TUESDAY, Oct. 29, 1861.

ALLDIS, JOHN, 2 and 3, Eastcheap, London, and off/Jamaica Level, Rotherhithe, Surrey, Eating-house Keeper. Dec. 31. Sol. C. E. Freeman, 11, Bucklersbury, London, E.C.

BRADNEY, Rev. JOHN HOPKINS, Leigh House, Bradford, Wilts, Clerk. Nov. 30. Sols. Bockett's Son, & Barton, 60, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

BRAY, HENRY, East Isley, Berks, Jockey. Nov. 30. Sol. W. Hulbert, East Isley, Berks.

CLARK, JOHN, Sankey Bridges, Lancashire, Merchant. Dec. 1. Sols. Marsh & Barratt, Warrington.

DICKINSON, WILLIAM, 2, Wellington-place, Limehouse, Middlesex, Master Mariner. Jan. 1. Sol. W. Stocken, 61, Cornhill, London.

GODFREY, WILLIAM PARKER, Old Brentford, Middlesex, Grocer and Cheese-monger. Within one month from Oct. 22. Sol. A. Rhodes, 2, Church-court, Clement's-lane, London.

GRIFFITH, RICHARD, 22, Bedford-street North, Liverpool, and senior partner in the firm of Messrs. Griffith, Sons, & Palethorpe, Brokers, Liverpool. Dec. 25. Sol. J. L. Bromfield, 23, Newgate-street, Chester.

HALE, SAMUEL WILLIAM, Bilston, Staffordshire, Wine and Spirit Merchant. Dec. 2. Sol. C. G. Brown, Bilston.

HURRY, ROGER, Turves, Whittlesey, Isle of Ely, Farmer. Dec. 1. Sol. G. M. Smith, Whittlesey.

KENT, WILLIAM, 7, Walcot-terrace, Bath, Gent. Dec. 31. Sols. Stone-Chamberlayne, & King, 13, Queen-square, Bath.

LEE, JOHN BARTON, Lower Stonnall, Staffordshire, Gent. Dec. 16. Sol. C. Bridges, 17, Temple-street, Birmingham.

MAITLAND, LUCIA, Greenheys, Manchester, Widow. Dec. 2. Sols. Kershaw & Bullock, 29, Kennedy-street, Manchester.

MANLEY, JAMES, 1, Walcot Parade, Bath. Dec. 31. Sols. Stone, Chamberlayne, & King, 13, Queen-square, Bath.

MARTIN, REVEREND JOHN, Bunbury, Cheshire, Clerk. Dec. 24. Sol. J. Broadhurst, Hospital-street, Nantwich.

NORMAN, GEORGE, Bath, Esq. Dec. 31. Sols. Stone, Chamberlayne, & King, 13, Queen-square, Bath.

OLIVER, JOHN, Mickley, Kirkby Malzeard, Yorks. Nov. 16. Sol. J. Calvert, Masham, Yorkshire.

PARRY, WILLIAM, formerly of Kempsey, and late of London-road, Worcester, Gent. Nov. 30. Sol. J. Stallard, 6, Foregate-street, Worcester.

SEATH, JOHN, North Yarmouth, Norfolk, Mariner in the Merchant Service. Nov. 30. Sols. Emmet & Son, 14, Bloomsbury-square, Middlesex.

WEBB, HENRY, Ronswood, Saint Martin, Worcester, Merchant and Chemical Manure Manufacturer. Nov. 30. Sol. J. Stallard, 6, Foregate-street, Worcester.

WHITE, WILLIAM, Sen., Spaxton, Somersetshire, Yeoman. Dec. 2. Sol. W. Brice, Bridgewater, Somersetshire.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, Flookersbrook, Cheshire, Tanner. Dec. 10. Sol. G. Tibbits, St. John-street, Chester.

Deeds registered pursuant to Bankruptcy Act, 1861.

TUESDAY, Oct. 22, 1861.

DOBBS, JOHN, Liverpool, Corn Broker. Oct. 18. Composition. Reg. Oct. 25.

FAWCETT, JOHN, 17, Sydney-place, Commercial-road, East, Middlesex. Carpet and Furniture Dealer. Oct. 18. Composition. Reg. Oct. 28.

MELLING, JAMES, Crescent, Birmingham, Bath Proprietor. Oct. 18. Composition. Reg. Oct. 28.

OWEN, THOMAS, Welchpool, Montgomery, Grocer. Oct. 17. Assignment. Reg. Oct. 28.

SIMPSON, FRANCIS, High-street, Newington, Surrey, China and Glass Dealer. Oct. 17. Arrangement and inspectorship. Reg. Oct. 25.

TAYLOR, ROBERT, and JABER TAYLOR, Manchester, Wholesale Stationers. Oct. 21. Composition. Reg. Oct. 26.

Assignments for Benefit of Creditors.

TUESDAY, Oct. 29, 1861.

CASPLE, WILLIAM, Somers-road, Southsea, Southampton, Baker and Grocer. Oct. 10. Sols. H. & R. W. Ford, 170, Queen-street, Portsea.

DERHAM, RICHARD JONES, 46, Redcliff-street, Bristol, Cooper. Oct. 2. Sols. King & Plummer, 5, Exchange-buildings East, Bristol.

JEFFRIES, WILLIAM, Jacob-street, Bristol, Smith. Oct. 10. Sols. King & Plummer, 5, Exchange-buildings East, Bristol.

RICE, JOSEPH, Peel Causeway, Bowdon, near Manchester, Contractor and Brickmaker. Oct. 3. Sol. D. Boote, 52, Brown street, Manchester.

RYDILL, GEORGE, Dewsbury, Yorkshire, Auctioneer and Commission Agent. Oct. 4. Sols. Scolefield & Oldroyd, Dewsbury.

Bankrupts.

TUESDAY, Oct. 29, 1861.

ABRAHAM, JOHN, Dunstable, Bedfordshire, Straw Hat Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Haultit: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sols. Crossley & Burn, 24, Lombard-street, London.

ASTLES, FREDERICK WILLIAM, Smethwick, Staffordshire, Schoolmaster and Agent. Pet. Oct. 14. Dec. 5 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. James & Knight, Birmingham.

AUSTIN, JOSEPH, Kippay, Yorkshire, Maltster. Pet. Oct. 26. First meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sol. Coleman, Pontefract; or J. Blackburn, Leeds.

BACON, ROBERT, late of Blackmore, Essex, Publican, Plumber, and Glazier. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Higgins; first meeting, Nov. 8 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. Hand, 22, Coleman-street.

BEALK, JOHN SAMUEL, 27, Priddington-green, Middlesex, Surgeon and Apothecary. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Miller; first meeting, Nov. 11 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Clarke, 2, Stanley-place, Paddington-green, London.

BELL, THOMAS, York, Chemist and Druggist. Pet. Oct. 25. First meeting, Nov. 8 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Richardson & Cobb York; or Bond & Barwick, Leeds.

- BILLINGTON, FREDERICK, Commercial Dining Rooms, 73, Cheapside London. Pet. Oct. 29 (in form of pauperis). Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.
- BURGESS, WILLIAM, 24, Sussex-street, Plinico, Middlesex, House Agent and Furniture Dealer. Pet. Oct. 24. In form of pauperis. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld.
- COLWELL, EDWIN ALFRED, formerly of 110, Stamford-street, Blackfriars, Surrey, then of 6, Peter-street, Islington, and now of 14, High Holborn, Middlesex, Wholesale Milliner. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 7 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Phibus, 20, Coleman-street.
- COPPLESTONE, MATTHEWS, late of King's-road, Brighton, then of 1, Cheyne-walk, Chelsea, Middlesex, but now of 8, The Terrace, Barnes, Surrey, Wine Merchant. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. Kisch, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.
- DEAKINS, FRANCIS HENRY, Feathers Hotel, Ledbury, Herefordshire, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 14. Dec. 5 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. East & Parry, 45, Ann-street, Birmingham.
- DELAMERE, NICHOLAS HERBERT, Liverpool, Commission Agent and Ship Owner. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Lee: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sol. Pemberton, 13, Cable-street, Liverpool.
- DENNY, ARTHUR SILBERT, 36, Dean-street, Oxford-street, Soho, Middlesex, Engineer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson.
- DICKINSON, ISAAC, Bennington, near Stevenage, Hertford, Baker. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 12, at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Harrison and Lewis, Old Jewry, London.
- DICKINSON, WATSON JAMES, 1 Friar-street, Blackfriars-road, Surrey, Coffee-house Keeper, and Clerk to a Builder. Pet. Oct. 22. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 12, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson.
- DIXON, GEORGE, HENKELL Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Coal, Coke, Chemical and Iron Merchant, and Commission Agent (Dixon & Co.). Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Gibson: first meeting, Nov. 9, at 1; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. Cram & Legg, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
- FOSTER, JOSEPH, 2, King's-college-road, Saint John's wood, Hampstead, Middlesex, Commercial Traveller. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Medcalf, 9, Tokenhouse-yard, Lothbury.
- FROUD, STEPHEN, otherwise called John Edward Froud, Landsdowne-road North, Notting-hill, Middlesex, Builder. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. H. H. Poole, 58, Bartholomew-close, London.
- FYFFE, JANE, & WILLIAM THOMAS FYFFE, Deptford, Kent, Lightermen. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. W. Sandom, Deptford, Kent.
- HARDMAN, MARIA, Patricroft, Lancashire, Tailor and Woollen Draper. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 11; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. D. Boote, Brown-street, Manchester.
- HARDSON, GEORGE HENRY DE STRANDESS NEVILLE PLANTAGENET, 22, Kensington-gardens-square, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 25. Informa pauperis. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell.
- HAWTHORN, JOHN, Burslem, Staffordshire, Builder. Pet. Oct. 19. First meeting, Nov. 9 at 2; Burslem. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. E. C. Lees, Burslem, or J. Smith, Birmingham.
- HEADLAND, THOMAS, 91, Bermondsey New-road, Surrey, Leather Seller. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. R. G. Chipperfield, 3, Trinity-street, Southwark, Surrey.
- HOBSON, RICHARD, Marlbro-road, St. John's wood, Middlesex, formerly Secretary to an Insurance Office. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson.
- HOLLINHEAD, ENOCH, 4, Leckwith-road, Canton, Llandaff, Glamorgan, Fancy Potter. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Langley: first meeting, Nov. 22 at 10; Cardiff. Off. Ass. Langley. Sol. F. J. Wilcocks, Arcade-chambers, Cardiff.
- HOWITT, WILLIAM, 1, Ravenscourt-cottages, West End, Hammermith, Middlesex, Carpenter and Builder. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. W. H. Dashwood, 43, James-grove, Peckham; and 3, Falcon-court, Fleet-street, London.
- HULSTON, SARAH, 237, Gooch-street, Birmingham, Pocket Book Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 26. First meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sol. R. H. Foster, Birmingham.
- HUNTER, JOHN, 9, Wolsey-terrace, Kentish-town, Middlesex, Gent. Pet. Oct. 29 (in form of pauperis). Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 23 at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell.
- HUNTER, THOMAS, 7, Baring-street, New North-road, Hoxton, Linen and Woollen Draper. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 8, at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Treherne and Wolfstan, Gresham-street, London.
- ISLIP, THOMAS, late of Rowell, Northampton, Carpenter and Builder, then of Edmonton, Middlesex, and afterwards and now of 78, Regent-street, Litchurch, Derby, Journeyman Carpenter. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 11, at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. J. J. Rae, 18, Warwick-court, Gray's Inn, London.
- JOLLEY, JOHN, Whitechapel, Liverpool, Clothier. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Brougham: first meeting, Nov. 11, at 12; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Bird. Sols. Halse and Deane, Liverpool; and Sale, Worthington, Shipman and Seldon, Manchester.
- JONES, EDWARD, 12, Birkett-street, Richmond-row, Liverpool, Slater and Plasterer. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Hime: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 12; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Hime.
- KINZETT, HENRY, 142, St. John-street-road, Clerkenwell, Middlesex, Artificial Florist. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. Lewis & Son, 7, Wilmingon-square, London.
- LEMAN, ALFRED, formerly of Highfield-street, Liverpool, Ale and Stout Store Keeper, Poplar, Middlesex, Commercial Traveller. Pet. Oct. 25. (in form of pauperis.) Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.
- MEACH, JOHN BUSH, Morford-street, Bath, Carpenter and Builder. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Orme: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 11; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acreman. Sols. Slack & Simmons, Bath, or to Abbot, Lucas, & Leonard, Bristol.
- MUNDAY, JAMES, 7, York-street, King-cross-street, Halifax, Excavators and Contractors. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Rankin: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 10; Halifax. Off. Ass. Rankin. Sols. Norris & Foster, Halifax.
- NEWTON, AUGUSTUS, 58, Curzon-street, Mayfair, Middlesex, Esq. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sols. Harrison & Lewis, 6, Old Jewry, London.
- OUTHWAITE, ELIJAH, Leeds, Journeyman Plumber and Glazier. Pet. Oct. 24. First meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sol. H. B. Harle, Leeds.
- OUTHWAITE, JOHN, Goole, Yorkshire, Journeyman Joiner and Model Maker. Pet. Oct. 28. First meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sol. H. B. Harle, Leeds.
- OUTHWAITE, SAMUEL, Middlesborough, Yorkshire, Butcher. Pet. Oct. 26. First meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. W. Myers, Darlington; or Bond & Berwick, Leeds.
- OWEN, DAVID WILLIAM, 77, Highfield-street, Liverpool, Beer Retailer and Clerk to a Broker. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Hime: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 12; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Hime.
- PENTECOST, ISAAC, 7, Lewisham-street, Great Queen-street, Westminster, Middlesex, Beershop Keeper and General Dealer. Pet. Oct. 22 (in form of pauperis). Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.
- PERKINS, JOH, 8, Angel-court, Skinner-street, London, Journeyman Printer. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. H. J. Preston, 10, Austin-friars.
- PLINLEY, WILLIAM, Cape Nursery, Shepherd's Bush, Middlesex, Market Gardener. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. R. Jones, 3, New Inn, Strand.
- PRENTIS, JOHN WOOD, 307, Sherlock-street, Birmingham, Grocer and Provision Merchant. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Wilson: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 11.30; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. Beale & Marigold, Waterloo-street, Birmingham.
- PRESCOTT, THOMAS WILLIAM TOTTINGHAM, 37, Bryanstone-street, Portman-square, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 19. Registrar, Orme: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 12; Bristol. Off. Ass. Milar. Sols. F. L. Syms, 7, Farnval's-inn, London; or A. Henderson, Bristol.
- QUINN, THOMAS, 85, Scotland-road, Liverpool, Draper. Pet. Oct. 19. Registrar, Lee: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Turner. Sols. Sole, Turner, & Turner, 69, Aldermanbury, London, or to Dodge & Wynne, 7, Union-court, Castle-street, Liverpool.
- RAVEN, SAMUEL, 32, Douglas road, Islington, Middlesex, Solicitor. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. T. N. Jenkins, 31, Nicholas-lane, London.
- RIDER, THOMAS GEORGE, 1, Albion-place, Camberwell New-road, Surrey, Leather Merchant. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfeld. Sol. L. Hand, 22, Coleman-street, London.
- ROUTLEDGE, CHRISTOPHER, Lower Sydenham, Kent, Brick Maker. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 23 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. H. B. Silvester, 18, Great Dover-street, Newington, Surrey.
- SIMONDS, HENRY PARISH, 6, Charles-place, Hertford-road, Kingland, Middlesex, Gold Beater. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Abraham: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Beard, 10, Basinghall-street.
- SMITH, EDWARD BARNES, Woodcote, Epsom, Surrey, Horse Dealer. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Gibbs & Tucker, 17, Clements-lane, London.
- SMITH, GEORGE HEDCOMBE, North Perrot near Crewkerne, Somersetshire, Twine and Web Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Carew: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 1; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sols. Dommot and Canning, Chard; or J. E. H. W. Clarke, Exeter.
- SMITH, WILLIAM TAYLOR, and WADE HAMPTON SMITH, Sedgley, Staffordshire, Mine Drainers. Pet. Oct. 14. Nov. 29 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. Hayes & Wright, Oldbury; or Hodgson & Allen, Birmingham.
- SPRINGMANN, CHARLES, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Ship Broker and Merchant. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Gibson: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 11; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. Daglish & Stewart, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
- STANGER, SAMUEL, 137, Church-street, Bethnal-green, Middlesex, Grocer and Tea Dealer. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. J. A. Jackson, 10, Bridgewater-square, Barbican.
- SWALLOW, RICHARD, 7, Strait, Saint Martin, Lincoln, Beerhouse Keeper, Furniture Dealer, and Paper Hanger. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Uppeby: Nov. 8 at 12; Lincoln. Off. Ass. Uppeby. Sols. Brown & Sons, Lincoln.
- TAYLOR, THOMAS, Blackwell Mills, Darlington, Durham, Miller, Contractor, and Provision Dealer. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Gibson: first meeting, Nov. 9, at 12; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sol. H. Storey, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
- TINGEL, JOSEPH CHILD, Thame, Oxfordshire, Brewer. Pet. Oct. 26. Corn. Goulburn: Nov. 9 at 11, and Dec. 9 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Harrison & Lewis, 6, Old Jewry, London.
- TODD, JOSEPH, Exmouth, Devonshire, Gent. Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Carew: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 12; Exeter. Off. Ass. Hirtzel. Sols. H. C. Adams, Exmouth, or Turner & Hirtzel, Exeter.
- VICKERS, JOHN, 2, Aubrey-road, Notting-hill, Middlesex, Commission Agent. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. J. R. Chidley, 26, Old Jewry, London.
- WALKER, WILLIAM, Walsall, Staffordshire, Harness Maker and Covered Furniture Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 25. First meeting, Nov. 11 at 12; George Hotel, Walsall. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sol. W. H. Duignan, Walsall.
- WILDS, JOHN, commonly known as JOHN TWIVY, Carlton, near South, Yorkshire, Dealer in Flax and Potatoes. Pet. Oct. 25. First meeting, Nov. 8 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sol. H. B. Harle, Leeds.
- WORTHINGTON, HENRY, & WILLIAM GILLIBRAND, Guide, Lower Darwen, near Blackburn, Lancashire, Cotton Manufacturers (Worthington & Co.). Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 8 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sols. Sale, Worthington, Shipman, & Seddon, Booth-street, Manchester.

FRIDAY, NOV. 1, 1861.

ALLWOOD, THOMAS, Nottingham, and late of Stanton-in-the-Wolds, Nottingham, Farmer. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sols. Cowley & Everall, Nottingham.

APPLEYARD, WILLIAM, Broad-street, Sheffield-park, Sheffield, Fishmonger. Pet. Oct. 25. First meeting, Nov. 14 at 12; Sheffield. Off. Ass. Wake and Rodgers.

ASHBEE, ROBERT, 25, Oxford-road, Islington, Middlesex, and 10, Poultry, London, Metal Merchant and Commission Agent. Pet. Oct. 31 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 23 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.

BARKER, HENRY JOHN, Lane's Hotel, St. Alban's-place, Haymarket, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 14 at 11, Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Lewis & Lewis, 10, Ely-place, Holborn, London.

BARKER, JOHN, Horsforth, Cloth Manufacturer. Pet. Oct. 31. First meeting, Nov. 14 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sol. B. Carias, Leeds.

BATES, HENRY, Holtahill-lane, Walsall, Coal Dealer. Pet. Oct. 29. First meeting, Nov. 12 at 12; Walsall. Off. Ass. Clarke. Sol. W. H. Dugnan, Walsall.

BELSON, ROBERT HOWES, Rose-corner, King-street, Norwich, Plumber, Glazier, and Painter. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Sole, Turner and Turner, 68, Aldermanbury, London; J. G. Atkinson, Norwich.

BERRILL, PETER, Moor-place, Kennington-road, Surrey, Surgeon. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 23 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sol. F. George, Nine-lane, London.

BERTHAM, ALEXANDER, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Cheese and Bacon Factor. Pet. Oct. 23. Registrar, Gibson: first meeting, Nov. 13, at 12 30; Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Off. Ass. Baker. Sols. Potts & Scarisbrick, Sunderland.

BORHAM, WILLIAM HENRY, 19, Cambridge-terrace, Edgware-road Middlesex, Surgeon. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting Nov. 16, at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfield. Sol. G. H. Thistlewood, Symond's-inn, Chancery-lane, London.

CARTWRIGHT, GEORGE, Wolverhampton, Stafford, Butcher. Pet. Oct. 29. First meeting, Nov. 13, at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Whitmore. Sols. James & Knight, 36, Bennett's-Hill, Birmingham.

CLARKE, JOSEPH, Oswestry, Fruiterer and Fish Dealer. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Croxon: first meeting, Nov. 14, at 12; Oswestry. Off. Ass. Croxon. Sol. W. I. Bull, Oswestry.

CLEGG, RACHAEL, 25, High-street, Freetown, and 1, Greenhalgh row, Freetown, Bury, Lancaster, Grocer, Tea Dealer, and Shopkeeper, and Beer-seller. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Grundy: first meeting, Nov. 20 at 11; Bury. Off. Ass. Grundy. Sol. Watson, Bury, Lancashire.

CHAPMAN, WILLIAM HENRY, Garway-road, Westbourne-grove, Middlesex, Livery Stable Keeper. Pet. Nov. 1. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 16, at 11 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sols. Lawrence, Elwes, & Boyer, 14, Old Jewry-chambers, London.

COLE, JAMES, 2, Wier-fields, St. Leonard's, Devonshire, and 57, High-street, Exeter, Hosiery, Haberdasher, and Stay Maker. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Daw: first meeting, Nov. 15 at 11; Exeter. Off. Ass. Daw. Sol. T. Flood, 14, Castle-street, Exeter.

COLLEY, ROBERT LATMAN, Barnaleys, Yorkshire, Provision Dealer. Pet. Oct. 29. First meeting, Nov. 13 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sols. Newman & Son, or Bond & Barwick, Leeds.

CROSBY, ELIZA, Hazel's Cottage, near Prescott, Lancaster. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Ansell: first meeting, Nov. 13 at 11; St. Helens. Off. Ass. R. Anderson.

COX, GEORGE, 5, Barbican, London, Optician. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 12 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Digby & Sharp, 1, Circus-place, Finsbury.

DEAN, JAMES, 102, Foregate-street, Chester, Furniture Broker, and Dealer in Glass, China, and Earthenware. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Wason: first meeting, Nov. 9 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Wason. Sol. J. Cartwright.

DICKENS, ROBERT, Yarwell, Northampton, Wheelwright. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 23 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Wright & Bonner, 15, London-street, Fenchurch-street, London.

FISHER, JAMES & JAMES MCLEAN, Reigate, Surrey, Builders. Pet. Sept. 16. Com. Holroyd: Nov. 12 at 2, and Dec. 10 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. H. H. Pool, 58, Bartholomew-close, London.

FOLET, EDWARD, 10, Clifton-crescent, Asylum-road, Old Kent-road, Surrey, Builder. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 13 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell.

FREARSON, EMMA, 16, Brewer-street, Somers Town, Middlesex, Draper and Haberdasher. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 20 at 13; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. B. May, Russell-square.

GALLAGHER, JOHN HUTCHINSON, Hazel's-cottage, Prescott, Slater and Plasterer. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Ansell: first meeting, Nov. 13 at 11; Saint Helen's. Off. Ass. Ansell. Sol. R. Anderson, 6, King-street, Liverpool.

GOODERD, JOHN FREDERICK, 223, Piccadilly, Middlesex, Eating-house Keeper. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 2; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. H. Pook, 27, Basinghall-street, or E. Lewis, Great Marlborough-street.

GOSLING, HENRY, 29, New Compton-street, Soho, Middlesex, Painter, Writer, and Decorator. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 19 at twelve; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. B. Peverley, 19, Coleman-street.

GOULDER, HENRY, JUN., Kimberley, Nottinghamshire, Bricklayer and Builder. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Nov. 14 at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sols. Cowley & Everall, Nottingham.

HARDAKER JONATHAN, Leeds, Woollen Cloth Manufacturer and Commission Agent for the sale of Woollen Cloth. Pet. Oct. 28. First meeting, Nov. 12 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sol. T. Simpson, Leeds.

HARRINGTON, WILLIAM, 123, Westgate-street, Gloucester, Wine & Spirit Merchant. Pet. Oct. 17. Registrar, Orme: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 12; Bristol. Off. Ass. Acraman. Sols. J. Scott, 4, Skinner-street, Snow-hill, London, or Abbott, Lucas, & Leonard, Albion-chambers, Bristol.

HARRIS, THORPHILUS, 12, Gloucester-street, Queen's-square, Bloomsbury, Middlesex, Law Clerk. Pet. Oct. 29 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Miller: Nov. 22 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.

HART, NEWSON, Cranford, Suffolk, Farmer. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 3 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sols. Mosely, Taylor, & Mosely, 9, Old Jewry-chambers, London; or to H. K. Mosely, Framlingham, Suffolk.

HEATHCOTE, ROBERT, 31, Bell-yard, Temple bar, Middlesex, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 20 at 11 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell.

HOPWELL, EDWARD, 62, Coleman-street, London, Mercantile Agent. Pet. Oct. 29 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 10 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.

HOWICK, JOHN, 27, Weymouth-terrace, Hackney-road, Middlesex, Builder and Contractor. Pet. Oct. 25 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfield. Sol. H. E. Mansey, 7, Old Jewry, London.

HUTTON, JOHN ARTHUR, formerly of Great Chart Mills, near Ashford, Kent, Miller, then of Ashford, Kent, then of 1, Devonshire-place, Edgware-road, and then and now of 3, Westbourne-grove-terrace, Westbourne-grove, Bayswater, Middlesex, Clerk in her Majesty's War Office. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sols. Nichols and Clark, 9, Cook's-court, Lincoln's-inn.

JONES, JOHN MARSHALL, 10, Missionary-place, Waiworth, Surrey, Commission Agent. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Miller: Nov. 19 at 3; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. J. Hall, 1A, Basinghall-street, London.

KENTISH, THOMAS, 163, Grange-road, Bermondsey, Surrey, Bread and Biscuit Baker. Pet. Oct. 29 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 3 at 12 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell.

KING, GEORGE, Holly-street, Sheffield, Beerhouse Keeper and Dealer in Tobacco, and Table Knife Cutler. Pet. Oct. 25. First meeting, Nov. 14 at 12; Sheffield. Off. Ass. Wake & Rodgers.

LAMB, JOHN, Nottingham, General Clothier and Salesman. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sol. S. Maples, Nottingham.

LAMPRELL, WILLIAM ALLISTON, 914, Long-lane, London, Carpenter and Builder. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 23 at 10 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.

LAW, WILLIAM ALEXANDER, 13, Mercer's-terrace, Stepney, Middlesex, and late of White Post-lane, Hackney, Commercial Traveller. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 22 at 11 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.

LAYCOCK, JOHN, JUN., Kirkstall-road, Leeds, Cloth Fuller. Pet. Oct. 31. First meeting, Nov. 14 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Terry & Watson, Bradford, or to Bond & Barwick, Leeds.

LEVINSON, BENJAMIN, 22, Church-street, Spitalfields, late of 174, Sidney-street, Commercial-road East, Middlesex, Wholesale and Retail Clothier and Tailor. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sol. Abbott, 1, St. Mark's-street, Great Prescott-street, London.

LINZA, CHARLES, Dog and Partridge, Hollington, Staffordshire, Licensed Victualler, Grocer, and Provision Dealer. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Daniel: first meeting, Nov. 11 at 11; Cheadle. Off. Ass. Daniel. Sol. Tennant, Hanley?

LOCKS, WILLIAM, Horton Old Town, Middlesex, Timber Merchant. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Abrahall: Nov. 12 at 11 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sols. Wright & Venn, 2, Paper buildings, Temple.

LONG, JOHN ATKINS, Wakefield, Schoolmaster. Pet. Oct. 31. First meeting, Nov. 14 at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Young. Sols. Bond & Barwick, Leeds.

MANSFIELD, RALPH, Manchester, Lithographer. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Nov. 13 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Fraser. Sol. Heywood, Dickinson-street, Manchester.

MARKE, PHILIP, Amblescote, Oldswinford, Staffordshire, Schoolmaster. Pet. Oct. 29. First meeting, Nov. 13 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sols. James & Knight, Birmingham.

MARSHALL, JOHN, 12, Crescent, Minories, London, Glass and China Dealer. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. H. Pook, 27, Basinghall-street, London.

MEREDITH, EDWARD WILLIAM, 17, Mulberry-street, Hulme. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Hulton: first meeting, Nov. 13 at 10; Salford. Off. Ass. Hulton. Sol. J. E. Dawson, Bridge-street, Manchester.

MONKS, WILLIAM, 18, Pensonby-place, Vauxhall-road, Westminster, Journeyman Carpenter. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar (in form pauperis), Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 10; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan.

MONDAY, ABRAHAM & WILLIAM JOHN NICHOLLS, 224, Milk-street, London, Trimming Manufacturers. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 1; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. T. Beard, 10, Basinghall-street.

MURDER, FRANCIS MONTIEN, Midhurst, Sussex, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 2 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards. Sol. G. White, 8, Dances'-inn, Strand, London, and Guildford, Surrey.

MOODY, CHARLES, 58, Goswell-road, Clerkenwell, Middlesex, Fork Butcher, Poulterer, and Cheesemonger. Pet. Oct. 26. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 19 at 11 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. Hill, Bury-court, St. Mary Axe.

MOORE, CONSTANTINE, 26A, London-road, Surrey, Butcher. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Abrahall: Nov. 20, at 10 30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Bell. Sols. Lewis and Son, Wilmington-square.

NEEDHAM, JOHN, Potterhanworth, Lincoln, Licensed Victualler and Labourer. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Uppeby: first meeting, Nov. 11, at 12; Lincoln. Off. Ass. Uppeby. Sols. Brown and Son, Lincoln.

NEWSON, THOMAS, Longton, Stoke-upon-Trent, Stafford, Builder. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Keary: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 4; Stoke-upon-Trent. Off. Ass. Keary. Sol. R. W. Litchfield, Newcastle-under-Lyme.

NEWCOMBE, JOHN DEAN, 1, Clyde-square, Northumberland-terrace, Everton, Liverpool, Solicitor to an Insurance Company and a Clerk. Pet. Oct. 30. Registrar, Hime: first meeting, Nov. 13, at 3; Liverpool. Off. Ass. Hime. Sol. S. O. Husband, 9, James-street, Liverpool.

NICHOLSON, JOHN, formerly of Chester-le-street, Durham, Publican, Brewer. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Bramwell: first meeting, Nov. 13, at 10; Durham. Off. Ass. Bramwell. Sol. J. E. Marshall, Claypall, Durham.

NUTHEY, DAVID, Beverley, York, Land Surveyor, Civil Engineer, and Contractor. Pet. Oct. 31. First meeting, Nov. 14, at 11; Leeds. Off. Ass. Hope. Sol. B. Carless, Leeds.

PEARSON, WILLIAM, 107, Rochdale-road, Manchester, Baker and Flour Dealer. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sol. Hewitt, 20, Bond-street, Manchester.

PIDDING, WILLIAM, formerly of Putney, Surrey, Inventor and Patentee. Pet. Oct. 31 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 22 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.

PINNELL, JAMES, 18, Red Cross-square, London, Widow (Silversmith). Pet. Nov. 1. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 20 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Stopher, Coleman-street.

POWELL, WILLIAM THOMAS, Tenbury, Worcester, and of Knighton, Radnor, Draper. Pet. Oct. 10. Com. Sanders: Nov. 11 and Dec. 2 at 11; Birmingham. Off. Ass. Kinnear. Sol. C. Bridges, Birmingham.

RAULT, LEWIS, Calais-house, Great Warner-street, Clerkenwell, and 101, Leather-lane, Middlesex, and now of 128, Holborn-hill, Yeast Contractor and Wine Merchant. Pet. Oct. 24. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 15 at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson.

RIVETT, THOMAS, Stockport, Chester, Cotton Yarn Doublor. Pet. Oct. 21. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 15 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hernaman. Sols. Earle, Earle, Hopps, & Orford, Manchester.

ROBINSON, DAVID, Lincoln, Joiner and Builder, and Undertaker. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Uppeby: Nov. 14, at 10; Lincoln. Off. Ass. Uppeby. Sols. Brown & Son, Lincoln.

SCHOFIELD, JOSEPH, Oak, Hollins with Oldham, Lancaster, Farmer. Pet. Oct. 25. First meeting, Nov. 22, at 12; Oldham. Off. Ass. Summercales. Sol. W. Ashcroft, Oldham.

SHARP, JOHN, 45, Saint Phillip's-road, Sheffield, Toolfitter. Pet. Oct. 25. First meeting, Nov. 14, at 12; Sheffield. Off. Ass. Wake and Rodgers, Bank-street, Sheffield.

SKINNER, GEORGE PRICE, of Eaton-place, Peckham-rye, Surrey, and of Lordship-lane, East Dulwich, Brickmaker. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Higgins: Nov. 19 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. M. Abrahams, 17, Gresham-street.

SMITH, THOMAS, Spennymore, Durham, Joiner and Builder. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Trotter: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 10; Bishop Auckland. Off. Ass. Trotter. Sol. W. Brignal, Durham.

STOCKER, CHARLES HENRY, Pear Tree-cottage, Acton-green, Middlesex. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 15 at 11; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sols. Lewis and Lewis, Ely-place.

SUMMERS, THOMAS, Golden Lion Public-house, Goodman's-yard, Minorities, London, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Abrahall: first meeting, Nov. 15 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Johnson. Sol. Abbott, 1, St. Mark-street, Great Prescott-street.

TERRY, CHARLES, 6, Elliott's-row, Lower-road, Islington, Middlesex, Grocer and Cheesemonger. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 12; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Graham. Sol. Wells, 47, Moorgate-street, London.

THOMAS, LEOPOLD POLLARD, St. George's-terrace, Kilburn, Middlesex, Gent. Pet. Oct. 31 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Hazlitt: first meeting, Nov. 14 at 11.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Stansfield.

TURTEL, JOHN GABRIEL, Poole, Dorsetshire, Shoe Maker. Pet. Oct. 29. Registrar, Winslow: first meeting, Nov. 23 at 12.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Flux & Angles, 9, Mincing-lane, London, or to H. W. Dickenson Poole, Dorsetshire.

URTON, GEORGE, Ruby-place, Copeland-street, Greenheys, Manchester, Plumber, Glazier, and Gas Fitter. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Wilde: first meeting, Nov. 14 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pott. Sols. Cobbett & Wheeler, Brown-street, Manchester.

WADE, ROBERT, Church, Lancashire, Joiner and Builder. Pet. Oct. 28. Registrar, Simons: Nov. 11 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Pennell. Sols. Sale, Worthington, Shipman, & Seddon, Booth-street, Manchester.

WALLWORTH, THOMAS, 32, Bradford-street, Manchester, Flour Dealer. Pet. Oct. 24. First meeting, Dec. 20 at 12. Off. Ass. Kay.

WHITE, MARK, King's Head Public House, 17, Leather-lane, Middlesex, Licensed Victualler. Pet. Oct. 31. Registrar, Higgins: first meeting, Nov. 19, at 2.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Cannan. Sol. W. R. Buchanan, 13, Basinghall-street.

WILDS, ROBERT, Ruyton-of-the-Eleven-Towns, Salop, Tailor. Pet. Oct. 16. Registrar, Croxon: first meeting, Nov. 14 at 11; Oswestry. Off. Ass. Croxon. Sol. C. Chandler, Shrewsbury.

WILD, WILLIAM, & JAMES BOWKER, Bury, Cotton Manufacturers (Wild & Bowker). Pet. Oct. 25. Registrar, Simons: first meeting, Nov. 12 at 12; Manchester. Off. Ass. Hernaman. Sols. Slater & Myers, Fountain-street, Manchester.

WILLISON, WILLIAM, Stamford, Lincolnshire, Printer. Pet. Oct. 18. Registrar, Waterfield: first meeting, Nov. 14 at 11; Nottingham. Off. Ass. Harris. Sols. W. French, Stamford, or J. T. Brewster, Nottingham.

WILLIAMSON, BENJAMIN, 8, Providence-street, Waiworth, Surrey, General Dealer. Pet. Oct. 31 (in form pauperis). Registrar, Miller: first meeting, Nov. 22 at 1.30; Basinghall-street. Off. Ass. Edwards.

MEETINGS FOR PROOF OF DEBTS.

TUESDAY, Oct. 29, 1861.

ROBERT HICKS, 47, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, Middlesex, and 13, Limes-villas, Lewisham, Kent, House and Estate Agent and Surveyor. Nov. 27 at 2; Basinghall-street.—JAMES MASON, Ware, Hertford, Mailster. Nov. 27 at 2.30; Basinghall-street.—RAYMOND D'ARCY NEWTON, 2, Warwick-square, London, Advertising Agent and Dealer in Newspapers. Nov. 8 at 12; Basinghall-street.—RICHARD GEORGE PAPPS, 32, Barbican, London, Builder. Nov. 21 at 1; Basinghall-street.—MARK FELTHAM, West Winch, Norfolk, Miller. Nov. 20 at 12; Basinghall-street.—GRINDER ANTHON MARTIN AAR, 19, Colchester-street, London, Shipbroker. Nov. 20 at 1.30; Basinghall-street.—GEORGE BARNETT, 21, Felix-terrace, Liverpool-road, Islington, Middlesex, Butcher. Nov. 20 at 12.30; Basinghall-street.—JOHN EVERETT, late of Rainham, and now of Green Hill-grove, Little Ilford, Essex, Carpenter. Nov. 20 at 1; Basinghall-street.—JOHN AXEL TALEN, 4, Whitley-villas, Caledonian-road, Islington, Middlesex.—Nov. 20 at 11.30; Basinghall-street.—JOHN LIVERSIDGE, 61a, Tabernacle-walk, St. Leonard, Shoreditch, and 8, Devon-villas, Buckingham-road, De-beauvoir Town, Middlesex, Wheelwright. Nov. 20 at 11; Basinghall-street.—MATTHEW HUTCHINSON, 48, Mark-lane, London, and of the Paragon, Blackheath, Kent, Hemp and Flax Dealer. Nov. 20 at 2; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM WHITEN, Meriden, Warwick, Grocer and Draper. Nov. 29 at 11; Birmingham. RICHARD BAKER, Ipsley, Warwick, Needle Dealer. Nov. 29 at 11; Birmingham.—HENRY RAWSON, Manchester, Stationer and Printer. Nov. 19 at 12; Manchester.—WILLIAM BROWN TAYLOR, Norwich, Tobacconist and Tea Dealer. Nov. 8 at 1; Basinghall-street.—WILLIAM HENRY ROWE, 7 Gloucester-place, Regents-park, Middlesex, Builder. Nov. 20 at 11.30; Basinghall-street.

ESTATE PLANS, &c.

T. PETTIT & CO.,

LITHOGRAPHERS & GENERAL PRINTERS,
FRITH-STREET, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON,

BEG to inform Solicitors, in London and the Provinces, that they are prepared to execute every description of Parliamentary, Law, and General Printing and Lithography, with care and despatch, including

MAPS, PLANS OF ESTATES, RAILWAY PLAN WORK, BOOKS OF REFERENCE FOR DEPOSIT, MINUTES OF EVIDENCE, BRIEFS, &c.

A large staff of competent workmen employed to execute all orders with celerity.

TYLER AND COMPANY,

(Late GOODCHAP, TYLER, & Co.)

ACCOUNTANTS,

13, GRESHAM STREET, E.C.

During a practice of twenty years, T. & Co. have had great experience in winding up Joint Stock Companies in Chancery; the investigation of intricate and disputed accounts; the liquidation of estates under deeds of inspection, assignment, and composition; and the audit of the accounts of public companies.

The management of estates under the New Bankruptcy Act undertaken. Terms moderate.

TO REGISTRARS OF COUNTY COURTS.

SOLICITORS, and ACCOUNTANTS.—The Advertiser who has for twelve years filled the office of Clerk to the Registrar of a County Court, and the greater part of that time with the sole management of the County business and accounts, is desirous of obtaining a situation. Satisfactory references will be given.

Address, R. O. Post Office, Rugby.

JOHN GOSNELL & CO., PERFUMERS TO THE QUEEN, beg to recommend the following Fashionable and Superior Articles for the TOILET to the especial notice of all purchasers of Choice PERFUMERY.

John Gosnell & Co.'s JOCKEY CLUB PERFUME, in universal request as the most admired perfume for the handkerchief, price 2s. 6d.

John Gosnell & Co.'s LA NOBLESSE PERFUME—a most delicate perfume of exquisite fragrance.

John Gosnell & Co.'s GARIBALDI BOUQUET—a most choice and fashionable perfume.

John Gosnell & Co.'s RUSSIAN LEATHER PERFUME—a very fashionable and agreeable perfume.

John Gosnell & Co.'s BALL-ROOM COMPANION or FOUNTAIN PERFUMES. Elegant Novelties, in the form of Portable Handkerchief Perfumes, in a neat case, which emits on pressure a jet of most refreshing perfume. Price 1s. and 1s. 6d. each.

John Gosnell & Co.'s LA NOBLESSE POMADE—elegantly perfumed, and highly recommended for beautifying and promoting the growth of the Hair.

John Gosnell & Co.'s GOLDEN OIL—Melline—Macassar Oil—Bears' Grease, &c., for the Hair.

John Gosnell & Co.'s CHERRY TOOTH PASTE is greatly superior to any Tooth Powder, gives the Teeth a pearl-like whiteness, protects the enamel from decay, and imparts a pleasing fragrance to the breath.

John Gosnell & Co.'s AMBROSIAL SHAVING CREAM, 1s. and 1s. 6d. in pots; also, in compressible tubes, for the convenience of persons travelling, price 1s.

Manufactory, 12, Three King-court, Lombard-street, London.

VIRGIN VINEGAR for PICKLING, warranted made from Malt only, and perfectly pure. Families supplied.

SARSON & SON, near the Gate, City-road. Carriers call daily.

SPANISH FLY—248, High Holborn, Alex. Ross's

Cantharides Oil is prepared from the Spanish Fly, which so moderately and regularly stimulates the skin as to make the hair and whiskers grow quickly. Sold at 3s. 6d., sent by return of post for 3d stamps. Microscopic inspection of the scalp gratis from 10 till 6.

ALEX. ROSS' HAIR DYE turns red or grey hair a beautiful light or dark colour. A. R. dyes ladies hair in one hour, gentlemen's in half that time, and whiskers in a few minutes. Ross' Toilet Magazine 1d., monthly; had of all booksellers, or for two stamps, 248, High Holborn, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—

Pimples, Boils, Carbuncles, Abscesses.—These maladies arise from some obstruction to the free circulation of the blood through the blood-vessels or capillaries; and the only rational mode of cure consists in removing the local impediment, at the same time that any impurity engendered by the stoppage should be filtered from the blood. Holloway's Ointment applied to the part effects the first, his Pills accomplish the latter object. The inflamed skin derives softness, coolness, and ease from the application of this unguent, which gradually penetrates to the affected tissues, and soon restores the circulation and its channels to a healthy condition, and saves the sufferer from most serious diseases, which too frequently follow from carelessness, or injudicious medical treatment.

GENERAL INDEX.

ABOLITION OF FEUDAL CONVEYANCING, 153
 — OF OATHS, 51
 ACCOUNTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT, the, 292, 331, 337, 351, 366, 376, 382, 386, 728, 776, 798
 ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF DEEDS BY MARRIED WOMEN, 273
 ACTS PASSED (Session, 1860), 37
 — WHICH HAVE CEASED TO BE IN FORCE, Repeal of, 21
 ADMIRALTY COURT, the, 359, 456, 779
 — STATISTICS, 157
 ADMISSION OF MEMBERS OF SCOTTISH UNIVERSITIES TO THE MIDDLE TEMPLE, 110
 ADULTERATION OF FOOD, 291
 ADVOCACY IN FRANCE, 41
 AGENCY BUSINESS, 291
 ALLNUTT'S "PRACTICE OF WILLS AND ADMINISTRATIONS," 32
 ALL SOULS' COLLEGE, OXFORD, Case of, 181, 351
 ALLOWANCE TO PROSECUTORS AND WITNESSES, 129, 285, 296, 376, 398, 410, 491, 669, 684
 ANDERSON SLAVE CASE, the, 156, 251
 ANDERSON v. ELSWORTH, Case of, 834
 ANOTHER VACATION GRIEVANCE, 759
 APPEAL, Our Courts of, 432
 APPELLATE JURISDICTION OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS, 73
 APPLICATION FOR SILK GOWNS, 626
 APPOINTMENT OF EXAMINERS, 213
 APPOINTMENTS, ELECTIONS, VACANCIES, RESIGNATIONS, &c., 5, 9, 26, 41, 47, 67, 110, 122, 130, 141, 145, 205, 213, 220, 231, 235, 258, 280, 284, 295, 320, 337, 351, 358, 376, 394, 408, 436, 439, 461, 470, 490, 508, 527, 570, 602, 617, 629, 647, 667, 682, 705, 714, 725, 773, 796, 808, 830, 833
 ARCHBOLD'S "BANKRUPTCY," 789
 ARREST AND IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT, 85
 — Protection from, 3
 ARTICLED CLERKS, Examination of. See EXAMINATIONS; LEGAL EDUCATION.
 — Hints to, 285, 345, 441, 476, 514
 ASSIGNMENTS. See LONDON GAZETTES.
 ASSIZES, the, 403
 Home Circuit: 320, 337, 357, 376, 394, 646, 667, 682
 Midland: 320, 337, 357, 646, 667, 682
 Norfolk: 337, 629, 646, 682
 Northern: 129, 144, 295, 320, 337, 357, 376, 629, 682, 693, 705
 Oxford: 337, 357, 394, 408, 629, 682, 693
 Western: 337, 357, 376, 394, 408, 682, 705
 North Wales: 408, 693
 South Wales: 357, 394, 647, 682
 ASHBURTON TREATY, THE, AND THE CANADA EXTRADITION CASE, 324
 ATTESTATION TO WILLS, 654, 694, 717, 737, 751, 763
 ATTORNEYS, Admission of, 16, 36, 97, 209, 228, 386, 442, 532, 790
 — Uncertificated, 399
 ATTORNEYS AND SOLICITORS ACT, 1860, the, 49, 301, 474, 511, 538
 — (IRELAND) BILL, 572, 626
 AUSTIN'S "PROVINCE OF JURISPRUDENCE DETERMINED," 458

BAIL COURT, Proceedings in, 570
 BANK OF ENGLAND AND IRISH PROBATES, 380
 — NOTES BY POST, Transmission of, 835
 BANKRUPTS.—See LONDON GAZETTES.
 BANKRUPTCY APPOINTMENTS, 750
 — BILL, The, 226, 271, 280, 281, 295, 296, 324, 342, 371, 377, 396, 421, 425, 449, 465, 470, 483, 496, 501, 511, 531, 542, 553, 557, 567, 570, 583, 587, 588, 607, 617, 643, 647, 648, 667, 683, 684, 788, 793, 805, 809, 820
 — COURT OF, Proceedings in, 508, 808, 819, 832
 — EXPENSES IN, 113
 — LAW IN ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND, 207, 224
 — STATISTICS, 105, 189, 550, 607, 655, 780
 BAR, The, Calls to, 31, 48, 235, 508, 557
 — ETIQUETTE, 90, 153
 — PROMOTION, 385, 545
 BARBARISM AND CIVILIZATION, 663
 BARBER'S CASE, 371
 BARTLEY v. HODGES, Case of, 679
 BARRY'S "STATUTORY JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY," 264
 BELLIGERENT RIGHTS OVER PRIVATE PROPERTY AT SEA, 76
 BELL AND CAVE'S "STONE'S PRACTICE OF PETTY SESSIONS," 620
 BILLS IN PARLIAMENT. See PARLIAMENT.
 BIRKENHEAD STREET RAILWAY, the, 164
 BIRMINGHAM LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY, Meeting of, 265
 BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS. See LONDON GAZETTES.
 BORGHESE CASE, the, 21
 BROOK v. BROOK, Case of, 311, 391
 BROOME'S "COMMENTARIES ON COMMON LAW," 238
 BURTHENS AFFECTING MERCHANT SHIPPING, 62
 BUSINESS IN THE COURTS, Michaelmas Term (1860), 41, 81
 Hilary, 173, 174. Easter, 426
 Trinity, 521, 583. Michaelmas (1861), 829
 BURKITT, Mr. EDWARD, Testimonial to, 461
 BUTT, Mr. G. M., Death of, 34
 BUTTERWORTH, Mr. H., Death of, 17
 CALLS TO THE BAR, 31, 48, 235, 251, 508, 557
 CAMPBELL, Lord, Death of, 597
 CANADA EXTRADITION CASE, The, 179, 205, 208, 220, 227, 314, 324
 CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, Substitute for, 187
 CAUSE OF THE INOPERATIVE CHARACTER OF THE WEST INDIA INCUMBERED ESTATES ACT, 403
 CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT, Proceedings in, 67, 87, 130, 181, 202, 320, 420, 490
 CHADWICK'S "EXAMPLES OF ADMINISTRATION BONDS FOR THE PROBATE COURT," 476
 CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE, Resolutions by, on the Bankruptcy Bill, 607
 CHANCERY:—
 Business in, 626
 Creditors under Estates in.—See LONDON GAZETTES
 Conveyancing Counsel to the Court of, 580
 Delay in, 342
 Evidence in, 251, 431

CHANCERY (continued)—

Judge's Chambers, 8, 195, 233, 262, 284Lunatic's Bill, 320Prisoners, Liberation of, 2Proceedings, 24, 87, 201, 219, 258, 294, 336, 357, 375, 490, 556, 601, 629, 666, 682Suits, 124, 245

CHANCERY, RECENT DECISIONS IN—

ADMINISTRATION—Executor's right to indemnity in respect of testator's leaseholds (Bunting v. Marriott, 2 W. R. 264; Smith v. Smith, 2 W. R. 406), 378.

See also PRACTICE.

ANNUITY—Interest on arrears (Booth v. Coulton, 2 W. R. 330), 322.APPORTIONMENT—Tenant for life and remainderman; railway debentures (In re Roger's Trust, 2 W. R. 64), 182.APPRENTICE—Jurisdiction; demurrer; obligation of precedents (Webb v. England, 2 W. R. 184), 202.BANKRUPT—Assignment of stock in trade (The Oriental Bank v. Coleman, 2 W. R. 432), 394.— Order and disposition (North v. Gurney, 2 W. R. 678), 572.BILL OF SALE—Equitable assignment of future chattels (Holroyd v. Marshall, 2 W. R. 303), 332.

CHARGE OF DEBTS—See WILL.

COPYHOLD—Severance of demesne lands (In re The London and South Western Railway [Exeter Extension] Act, 1856; Ex parte Lord Henley and Another, 2 W. R. 350), 340.DEBTOR AND CREDITOR—Right to policy of assurance after payment of debt (Courtenay v. Wright, 2 W. R. 153), 162.DOCUMENTS—Agent; inspection (Draper v. The Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Co., 2 W. R. 215), 281.DOWER ACT—Gavelkind (Farley v. Bonham, 2 W. R. 299), 282.EXECUTORS—Legacy to (Algermann v. Ford, 2 W. R. 512), 456.

See also VENDOR AND PURCHASER; WILL; ADMINISTRATION.

EQUITABLE MORTGAGE—See TRUST.

FINES AND RECOVERIES ACT—Entry on court roll of a disentailing deed of copyhold (Honeywood v. Foster, 2 W. R. 855), 736.FRAUDS, STATUTE OF—Declaration of trust of lands (Smith v. Matthews, 2 W. R. 644), 604.HUSBAND AND WIFE—Liability of wife's separate estate debts (Johnson v. Gallagher, 2 W. R. 506), 471, 509.INSOLVENCY—Right of single creditor as plaintiff (Davies v. Snell, 2 W. R. 209), 220.JOINT STOCK COMPANY—Acts ultra vires; Amalgamation; Ratification (Re The Era Assurance Co.; William's Case, 2 W. R. 67), 88.JUDGMENT—Priority of incumbrances on land in Middlesex and generally (Benham v. Keane, 2 W. R. 765), 680—650.

JURISDICTION—See APPRENTICE; PLEADING.

LAW OF PROPERTY AMENDMENT ACTS, 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35; 23 & 24 VICT. c. 38—See ADMINISTRATION.LIMITATIONS, STATUTE OF, 3 & 4 WILL 4, c. 27, s. 42; 3 & 4 WILL, 4, c. 42, s. 3—Right of mortgagee to recover 20 years arrears of interest (Lewis v. Duncombe, 2 W. R. 446; Round v. Bell, 2 W. R. 846), 727.LUNACY—Solicitors' Act; Costs (Re Cumming; Ex parte Turner, 2 W. R. 213), 236.MERGER—Equitable merger (Brandon v. Brandon, 2 W. R. 825), 705.MORTGAGE—Equitable mortgage—Priority of charges (Cooke v. Wilton, 2 W. R. 220), 236.— Rights of assignees for value of voluntary mortgage given under duress (Parker v. Clarke, 2 W. R. 877), 787.— Tacking mortgages on foreclosure and on redemption; alleged difference in rule as to (Selby v. Pomfret, 2 W. R. 398), 359.

— See also LIMITATIONS; SHIP; TRUST.

MORTMAIN—9 Geo. 2, c. 36; proceeds of land (Marsh v. The Attorney-General, 2 W. R. 179; Alexander v. Brame, 2 W. R. 719), 604.PARTITION—Form of decree (Clarke v. Clayton, 2 Giff. 333; Orger v. Sparke, 2 W. R. 180), 181.

CHANCERY, RECENT DECISIONS IN (continued)—

PLEADING—Practice; interrogatories (Marsh v. Keith, 2 W. R. 115), 130.— Jurisdiction in colonial matters (Hendrick v. Wood, 2 W. R. 588), 558.

See also RAILWAY COMPANY.

POLICY OF ASSURANCE—Effect of death by own hand on (Horn v. The Anglo-Australian Assurance Co., 2 W. R. 359), 359.

See also DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

POWER—Restriction of general power of appointment to objects contemplated by settlement (Peover v. Hassall, 2 W. R. 399; Eland v. Baker, 2 W. R. 444), 408.PRACTICE—Administration suits (Penney v. Francis, 2 W. R. 8), 48.— Authority of chief clerk in chambers (Re the Agricultural Cattle Insurance Co., 2 W. R. 682), 589.— Costs out of estate recovered; 23 & 24 VICT. c. 127, s. 28 (Bonser v. Bradshaw, 2 W. R. 229), 282.— Evidence; answer of a company (Wade v. The East India Co., 2 W. R. 251), 236.— Motion for receiver before hearing (Pare v. Clegg, 2 W. R. 216), 238.— Revivor; special case (Wilson v. Whately, 2 W. R. 52), 183.

See also DOCUMENTS; PLEADING.

RAILWAY COMPANY—Parties (Hare v. The London and North-western Railway Company, 2 W. R. 33), 67.SETTLEMENT—Invalid marriage; operation of testamentary appointment as a will (Jones v. Southall, 2 W. R. 546), 492.— Rectification (Thompson v. Whitmore, 2 W. R. 297; Elwes v. Elwes, 2 W. R. 307 and 820), 321, 715.

See also POWER; UNDUE INFLUENCE.

SHIP—Mortgage; duty of mortgagee in possession; sale by mortgagee (Marriott v. The Anchor Reversionary Co., 2 W. R. 89), 110.SOLICITOR—Solicitor and client; right of lien on papers (Waller v. Holmes, 2 W. R. 32), 42.— (Raulinson v. Moss, 2 W. R. 733), 618.— Webster v. Le Hunt, 2 W. R. 804), 669.— Acting as trustee; partnership of solicitors; costs (Clack v. Carlon, 2 W. R. 568), 524.

See also TAXATION; TRUST; TRUSTEE ACTS; VOLUNTARY DEED.

TAXATION OF SOLICITOR'S BILL MORE THAN TWELVE MONTHS AFTER DELIVERY—(Re Nicholson, 2 W. R. 441), 492.TENANT FOR LIFE AND REMAINDERMAN—Special occupancy (Reynolds v. Wright, 2 W. R. 211), 220.

See also APPORTIONMENT.

TRUST—Equitable mortgage postponed to undisclosed prior trust (Stackhouse v. The Countess of Jersey, 2 W. R. 453), 422.— Rights of cestuique trust on fraud by one who is trustee under two trusts (Case v. James, 2 W. R. 771), 649.— Solicitor, trustee, costs (Pollard v. Doyle, 2 W. R. 28), 67.TRUSTEE ACTS—Displacement of solicitor trustee against his will (2 W. R. 647), 588.UNDUE INFLUENCE—Parent and child, setting aside family settlement (Jenner v. Jenner, 2 W. R. 109), 130.VENDOR AND PURCHASER—Devise subject to payment of debts; implied power of sale by executors (Hodkinson v. Quinn, 2 W. R. 197), 259.VOLUNTARY DEED—Setting aside at instance of volunteers; duty of solicitor (Anderson v. Elsworth, 2 W. R. 888), 810.WILL—Charge of legacies on real estate by implication (Field v. Peckett, 2 W. R. 526), 525.— Implied gift to executor (Juler v. Juler, 2 W. R. 61), 145.— Implied power of sale by executors; charge of debts; Direction to pay debts (Cook v. Dawson, 2 W. R. 305), 298, 322.— Period of survivorship in gifts by will (Thompson v. Thompson, 2 W. R. 728), 618.

See also MORTMAIN.

CHAPMAN, Mr. T., Death of, 527.CHARITABLE FUNDS, 288.— USES, 376, 378, 451.CHARRIE, M. of Bordeaux, Death of, 10.CHRYSANTHEMUMS, the, in the Middle Temple, 842.

CIRCUITS, the, 56, 78, 228, 267, 607
 CITY OF LONDON SCHOLARSHIPS, the, 536
 CODIFICATION, 591
 COMMISSIONERS TO ADMINISTER OATHS, 131, 184, 424
 COMMON COUNCIL, Resolution of, as to Law Expenses, 26
 —, Resolution to appoint Deputy Judge to Sheriff's Court, 808
 COMMON LAW JUDGES' CHAMBERS, the, 8, 49, 380, 820, 835
 — JUDGES. Judgments by, 526
 — MASTERS, 8, 28, 49
 — OFFICERS, Vacation. Taxation of Costs, 764
 COMMON LAW, RECENT DECISIONS IN:—
 ACTIONS—Law as to proper parties to (Agacio v. Forbes, 2 W. R. 503), 511
 ARBITRATION—Fixing fee in the award, effect of (Parkinson v. Smyth, 2 W. R. 340), 379
 — Statement of special case when compulsory (Raguly v. Markwick 2 W. R. 537), 526
 See also PRACTICE.
 ASSAULT—Jurisdiction of magistrates; summary conviction for an aggravated assault; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 1 (In re Thompson, 2 W. R. 203), 221
 See also CRIMINAL CASES RESERVED.
 ASSIGNMENT OF JUDGMENT—Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, s. 5; effect of payment by surety or co-debtor (Batchellor v. Lawrence, 2 W. R. 373), 437
 ATTORNEY—Affidavit of increase; costs of witnesses (Cross v. Durell, 8 W. R. 630), 27
 — Articled clerk; admittance after term; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 12 (Re —, M.A., an articled clerk, 2 W. R. 639), 619
 — Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 14; practitioners in counties palatine (Ex parte Watson; Ex parte Abbott, 2 W. R. 13), 48
 ATTORNEY AND CLIENT—Maintenance (Earle v. Hopwood, 2 W. R. 272), 283
 — Signed bill; agreement to receive fixed sum for services (Philleu v. Hayle, 2 W. R. 611), 3
 See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.
 BANKER—Rule as to forwarding cheques (Hare v. Henty, 2 W. R. 738), 706
 BANKRUPT—Law of arrest; detainers; conflict of opinion between the Court of Chancery and the Queen's Bench (Ockford v. Freston, Chapman v. Freston, 2 W. R. 315; Bateman v. Same, 2 W. R. 311, 321), 340
 BILL OF SALE—Requirements of description of attesting witness; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (Dryden v. Hope, 2 W. R. 18), 49
 — Registration; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (Marples v. Hartley, 2 W. R. 334), 325
 CARRIERS—Costs in actions against (Tatton v. The Great Western Railway Company, 8 W. R. 606), 5
 CONTEMPT OF COURT—Privilege of witnesses; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 57 (In re Fernandez, 2 W. R. 559), 559
 CONTRACT—Guarantee of past and future debts (Westhead v. Sproson, 2 W. R. 695), 670
 — Parties to action; consideration must move from the plaintiff (Tweedle v. Atkinson, 2 W. R. 781), 706
 — Sale of a horse; law of master and servant; when the former liable on the contract of the latter (Brady v. Tod, 2 W. R. 483), 493
 COPYRIGHT—Dramatising a novel (Reade v. Conquest 2 W. R. 434), 456
 COSTS—Common Law Procedure Act, 1860, s. 34; how far retrospective; costs in frivolous actions (Wright v. Hale, 2 W. R. 157), 203
 — Frivolous actions; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 25, s. 2; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 34 (Saunders v. Kirwan, 2 W. R. 706), 685
 — Slander;—damages under 40s. (Evans v. Rees, 2 W. R. 73), 131
 — Taxation; Costs not recoverable if allowed for as part of the damages at the trial (Barker v. Clough, 2 W. R. 618), 520
 See also COUNTY COURT; CARRIER; JUSTICES; DAMAGES; PRACTICE.
 COUNTY COURT—Jurisdiction; costs under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4 (Avis v. Orchard, 2 W. R. 106; Warman v. Hellan, 2 W. R. 108), 145
 — Concurrent jurisdiction of superior courts; 2 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128 (Adams v. The Great Western Railway Company, 2 W. R. 254), 237

COMMON LAW, RECENT DECISIONS IN (continued)—
 CRIMINAL CASES RESERVED—Abduction of girls from the possession of their parents; 2 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 20 (Reg. v. Timmins, 2 W. R. 36), 68
 — Assault; evidence of malice, when required (Reg. v. Sparrow, 2 W. R. 58), 111
 — Coining; law of evidence; collateral facts when admissible (Reg. v. Weeks, 2 W. R. 553), 559
 — Embezzlement, when not within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 27 (Reg. v. May, 2 W. R. 256), 261
 — Embezzlement, what constitutes an (Reg. v. Guelder, 2 W. R. 38), 68
 — False pretences: evidence must be confined to the points in issue; collateral facts (Reg. v. Holt, 2 W. R. 61), 111
 — Larceny: appropriation of found goods, when it amounts to larceny (Reg. v. Moore, 2 W. R. 276), 299
 — Larceny; law as to embezzlement by commercial traveller (Reg. v. Bremley, 2 W. R. 555), 560
 — Naval stores; form of case stated under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78 (Reg. v. Sleep, 2 W. R. 709), 685
 CRIMINAL PLEADING—Several pleas, when allowed (Reg. v. Charlesworth, 2 W. R. 805), 727
 DAMAGES—Misrepresentation by agent as to extent of his authority; what may be recovered as damages (Pow v. Davies, 2 W. R. 611), 589 — Measure of; costs of county court appeal (Gee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 2 W. R. 103), 131
 See also TORT; TROVER.
 DONATIO MORTIS CAUSA—Nature of (Witt v. Amis, 2 W. R. 691), 630
 DOWER—Real action under Common Law Procedure Act, 1860; pleas in dower (Woodward v. Dodds, 2 W. R. 870), 833
 ESTATE AND HOUSE AGENT—Liability of, for negligence (Heys v. Tindall, 2 W. R. 655), 619
 EVIDENCE—Effect of admissions (Haller v. Worman, 2 W. R. 348; Tupper v. Foulkes, ib., 349), 423 — Privilege of witness not to criminate himself Reg. v. Boyes, 2 W. R. 690), 631
 EXECUTOR—Respective rights of personal representatives and judgment creditors (The Wolverhampton and Staffordshire Railway Co. v. Marston, 2 W. R. 790), 716
 FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, s. 17—What constitutes acceptance and receipt of goods Cusack v. Robinson, 2 W. R. 735), 623 — Sale of goods, 22 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 17; what is a sufficient memorandum, Bailey v. Sweeting, 2 W. R. 273), 299 — Work and labour; contract Lee v. Griffin, 2 W. R. 702), 670 GIFT OF CHATTEL INTER VIVOS—Constructive delivery Winter v. Winter, 2 W. R. 747), 706
 HABEAS CORPUS—Fugitive slave case, (Ex parte Anderson, 2 W. R. 255), 237
 — Parent and child; right to custody (Ex parte Barford, 2 W. R. 99), 130
 HIGHWAY—Indictment for non-repair; 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, ss. 94, 95 (Ex parte Bennett, 2 W. R. 54), 88
 HUSBAND AND WIFE—Order of protection not retrospective in its effect (The Midland Railway Co., appellants, v. Pye, respondents, 2 W. R. 658), 612
 INNKEEPER—As to liability of (Morgan v. Ravey, 2 W. R. 376), 437
 INSOLVENCY—Inaccuracy in schedule, when not mentioned (Romilia v. Halahan, 2 W. R. 737), 624
 INSURANCE—Life assurance; Death by accident (Trew v. The Railway Passenger's Assurance Company, 2 W. R. 671), 631
 — Meaning of the term "accident" in a policy (Sinclair v. Maritime Passenger's Assurance Company, 2 W. R. 342), 325
 JURISDICTION—See ASSAULT; COUNTY COURT
 JUSTICES—Liability of; allegation of malice (Somerville v. Mirchouse, 2 W. R. 53), 88
 — Quarter sessions; costs of appeal; 8 & 2 Will. 3, c. 30 (Reg. v. Recorder of Leeds, 2 W. R. 270), 282
 — Quarter sessions; adjournment of a part-heard appeal (Reg. v. The Guardians of the Cambridge Union, 2 W. R. 599), 574

COMMON LAW, RECENT DECISIONS IN (continued)—

- LANDLORD AND TENANT—Liability of landlords who demise ruinous premises (Todd v. Flight, 2 W. R. 145), 183
- Tenant holding over; action for double rent (Swinfen v. Bacon, 2 W. R. 105), 143
- LIBEL—Newspaper articles (Paris v. Levy, 2 W. R. 74), 111
- LICENSED CHAPEL—Law as to; Right of entry (Bosanquet v. Heath, 2 W. R. 35), 67
- LIGHTS—Right acquired under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71; alteration of windows (Hutchinson v. Copestake, 2 W. R. 896), 833
- LORDS OF THE TREASURY—Liability to a writ to pay over money (Ex parte Warburton, 2 W. R. 599), 573
- LORD'S DAY—18 & 19 Vict. c. 118, s. 2, "Bona fide travellers" (Taylor v. Humphreys, 2 W. R. 705), 670
- MALICIOUS PROSECUTION—Law as to the action for (Fitzjohn v. Mackinder, 2 W. R. 477), 492
- Requisites of the summing up of the judge (Payne v. Reeves, 2 W. R. 693), 650
- MASTER AND SERVANT—Clerk; nature of hiring; notice of dismissal (Davies v. Marshall, 2 W. R. 520), 542
- Liability of master to servant; case of Priestley v. Fowler considered (Riley v. Barendale, 2 W. R. 347; Holmes v. Clark, 2 W. R. 419), 409
- When the former is liable for the trespass of the latter (Seymour v. Greenwood, 2 W. R. 548), 526
- 6 Geo. 4, c. 12; conspiracy (Walsby, appellant, v. Amley, respondent, 2 W. R. 271), 283
- 6 Geo. 3, c. 25; 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3 (Reg v. Youle, 2 W. R. 637), 603
- 4 Geo. 4, c. 34; to what employments it applies (Davies v. Berwick, 2 W. R. 334), 379
- See also CONTRACT
- MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—Attorney and client; retainer (Lewis v. Mayor and Corporation of Rochester, 2 W. R. 100), 130
- Status of mayor; 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 27 (Ex parte The Mayor of Birmingham, 2 W. R. 34), 49
- NEGLECT—Non-liability of public trustees for negligence of workmen (Holliday v. Vestry of Shoreditch, 2 W. R. 694), 650
- See also ESTATE AND HOUSE AGENT
- PLEADING—Effect of embarrassing plea (Welland Railway Co. v. Blake, 2 W. R. 386), 438
- POOR—Bastardy; limitation of time (Re Pickford, 2 W. R. 634), 605
- Removal of pauper lunatics (Strand Union, Respondent v. St. Giles in the Fields, Appellant, 2 W. R. 52), 88
- PRACTICE—Amendments at Nisi Prius; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 222 (St. Losky v. Green, 2 W. R. 119), 163
- Appeal from decision of judge at chambers (Warman v. Hallam, 2 W. R. 108), 145
- Arbitration; amendment; order of reference "on the usual terms" (Thompson v. Bowyer, 2 W. R. 35), 68
- Attachment of debt; conflict of claims between a judgment creditor and the assignees of a judgment debtor (Tilbury v. Brown, 2 W. R. 147), 183
- Effect of taking debtor in execution (Hartley v. Shemwell, 2 W. R. 520), 543
- Attachment; effect of a ca. sa. action against garnishee (Jorale v. Parker, 2 W. R. 347), 409
- Costs; security for; foreign plaintiff (Nylander v. Barnes, 2 W. R. 339), 380
- Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 18; British subject out of jurisdiction (Bates v. Bates, 2 W. R. 255), 261, 322
- Error in fact, and error in law (Carr v. Cooper, 2 W. R. 611), 589
- Execution debtor, discharge of, under 48 Geo. 3, c. 123 (Cook v. Beardsall, 2 W. R. 790), 716
- Inspection of documents, and of property; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 6; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, ss. 50, 58 (Daniel v. Bond, 2 W. R. 313; Bennett v. Griffiths, 2 W. R. 332), 360
- Interpleader issue; effect of decree nisi for dissolution of marriage (Shingler v. Holt, 2 W. R. 871), 833
- Interrogatories not allowed (Tupling v. Ward, 2 W. R. 482), 492

COMMON LAW, RECENT DECISIONS IN (continued)—

- Misjoinder of plaintiffs; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 12 (Bellingham v. Clarke, 2 W. R. 667), 631
- Notices must be in writing (Woodward v. North 8 W. R. 694), 27
- Renewing writ to save Statute of Limitations (Bey v. Owen, 2 W. R. 128), 163
- Venue in a local action; 31 Eliz. c. 5; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 22 (Greenhow v. Parker, 2 W. R. 578), 573
- PRINCIPAL AND AGENT—Liability of agent; money paid by mistake (Holland v. Russell, 2 W. R. 737), 694
- RATE—Church-rate; quakers; jurisdiction of justices (Backhouse, Appellant, v. Churchwardens of Bishopwearmouth, Respondents, 2 W. R. 162), 204
- TORT—Measure of damages; malice (Emblin v. Myers, 8 W. R. 665), 27
- TROVER—Measure of damages (Chinery v. Viall, 8 W. R. 629), 5
- TURNPIKE—Exemption from toll; 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 32; 4 & 5 Vict. c. 33, s. 1 (Horwood v. Powell, 2 W. R. 659), 619
- WAREHOUSEMAN—Rule as to measure damages; loss of bailment (Henderson v. The North-Eastern Railway Co., 2 W. R. 519), 511
- WILL—Devise upon a condition; construction of (Wright v. Wilkin, 2 W. R. 161), 204
- COMMON PLEAS, Court of, Proceedings in, 25, 66, 110, 144, 201, 219, 258, 470, 601, 629
- COMPULSORY DOMICIL, 199, 217, 256, 278, 293
- CONCENTRATION OF THE COURTS, 21, 281, 295, 313, 331, 456, 461, 465, 471, 542, 554, 588, 598, 602, 625, 706, 767
- CONSOLIDATION OF THE COURTS OF CHANCERY AND PROBATE, 506
- STATUTES, 538, 684
- CONSTITUTION AND PROCEDURE OF THE IRISH COURTS, 643
- CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE AMENDMENT BILL, The, 301, 351, 371, 471
- CONTRAST BETWEEN THE CHANCERY AND COMMON LAW COURTS IN IRELAND, 575
- CONVEYANCING COUNSEL TO THE COURT OF CHANCERY, 560
- Form of Habendum, 750, 763, 788
- Practical Questions in, 563
- COODE'S "LETTER TO LORD PALMERSTON ON THE STATUTE LAW," 686
- COOTE AND TRISTRAM'S "PROBATE COURT PRACTICE," 51
- CO-ORDINATE COURTS, Relative Authority of, 102
- COPYHOLD MORTGAGE, 146, 164
- PRACTICE, 263, 324
- CORPORAL PUNISHMENT IN GAOLS, 747
- CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN MR. COOKSON AND MR. HUDDLESTONE ON THE PRIVILEGE OF THE BAR, 61
- MR. RAYNER AND LORD CHELMSFORD ON THE BANKRUPTCY BILL, 519, 531
- CORRESPONDENCE—
- Anderson v. Elsworth, 834.
- Appointment of new Trustees to Chapels, 222, 263
- Attestation to Wills, 694, 717, 728, 737, 751, 763
- Attorneys and Solicitors Act (1860), 49, 301, 474, 511.
- Bank of England and Irish Probates, 380
- Notes by Post, 835
- Bankruptcy Appointments, 750
- Bill, 324, 342, 396, 511, 788, 820
- Bar Etiquette, 90
- Business in Chancery, 526
- Chancery Judges Chambers, 8, 262, 284
- Commissioners to Administer Oaths, 131, 184, 424
- Common Law Judges Chambers, 8, 49, 380, 626, 820, 834.
- Judgments by, 526
- Masters, 8, 28, 49
- Offices; Vacation; Taxation of Costs, 764
- Conveyancing Counsel to the Court of Chancery, 560
- Conveyancing; Form of Habendum, 750, 763, 788
- Copyhold Mortgage, 146, 164
- Practice, 263, 324
- Costs in superior Courts, 8
- out of the estate, 263
- Country Solicitors' Union, the, 342
- Devise of Real Estate, 682, 671
- Equity Judges, the, 342

CORRESPONDENCE (continued)—

Equity of Redemption; Elegit, 671
 — Proceedings under the old Practice of the Courts, 7
 Estate of Widows in Freehold, 738, 750
 Examiner's Office in Chancery, 438
 Exoneration of Devised Mortgaged Estates from the Mortgage Debt, 68, 184, 204
 Gift or Settlement of Personality, 775, 796
 Hilary Term Examination, 263
 Hints to the Profession, 89
 Insurance of Trade Buildings, 717, 728
 Investment of Trust Funds, 728, 737, 763, 774
 Irish Ante-Union Statutes, 632, 651, 671, 694
 Judgments, Law of, 90, 131
 Judgment Debt; Interest, 694, 717, 728
 Landlord and Tenant, 811
 Law Books, Price of, 737
 — Examinations, 341, 360, 396, 410, 424, 620, 717, 764
 — List, The, 381, 473, 493, 774
 — Students Debating Society, 438, 457, 473
 Legal Education, 380, 396, 424
 Limited Company; Right of a director who has not paid his calls to vote, 205
 Lodging-house Keepers; Non-liability for Loss of Lodger's Goods, 131, 183
 Lord Cranworth's Trustees, &c., Act, 27, 69, 164, 283, 301
 — St. Leonards' Constructive Notice Bill, 301
 Manor Courts, 8
 Mayor and Sheriff's Court Practice, 111
 Member of Parliament as High Sheriff, 284, 301
 Mortgage—Days for Payment of Interest, 686, 717
 Moses' Case, 300, 323
 Municipal Law, 28
 Negro Extradition Case, the, 205
 New Law Courts and Offices, 362
 New Probate Order, 632
 Parliamentary Drafting, 89
 Pluralism in the Law, 474
 Police Constables as Advocates, 362
 Poor Law Boards and Attorneys, 164
 Power of Attorney—Foreign Country, 811, 820
 Preliminary Examinations, 341
 Probate Court District Registrars, 671
 Professional Etiquette, 574
 — Remuneration, 146, 184, 323
 Promissory Note, 750, 764
 Promotion at the Bar, 363
 Protection from Arrest, 49
 Railway Liability, 819, 834
 Recent Decisions, 686
 Registry of Judgments, 410, 474
 Reg. v. Collucci, 820
 Remuneration of Attorneys—Criminal Prosecutions, 410
 Rent Charge, when it is in arrear and unpaid—Mode of demanding Payment, 205, 222
 Reversionary Legacies—Practice as to serving Notice of Assignment on Executors, 380
 Right of Road, 474
 Road Murder, the, 69
 Solicitors' Lien on Fund in Court, 28
 South Australian Conveyancing, 205
 Stamp Act—Proof of Cancellation, 8, 28
 Stamps on Affidavits, 574
 — Notes payable on Demand, 204
 Statute Law Revision, 819, 834
 Succession Duty, 811
 Tithe Rent Charge, 205, 222, 728, 737
 Touting, 819
 Usages of the Profession, 796
 Vice-Chancellor Wood and the Lord Chancellor, 146
 Watson, Baron, the late, 527
 What we may not do with our Own, 89

CORONERS' INQUESTS, Expenses of, 34
 COSTS ON APPEAL, 643
 — IN SUPERIOR COURTS, 8
 — OUT OF THE ESTATE, 263
 COULSON, Mr., Q.C., Death of, 61, 78
 COUNTY COURT PROCEDURE BILL, the, 538
 — STATISTICS, 65
 COUNTRY SOLICITORS' UNION, the, 342

COURT PAPERS—
 House of Lords and Privy Council, 78
 Equity Sittings, 18, 65, 167, 426, 515, 578, 824

COURT PAPERS (continued)—

Common Law Sittings, 18, 36, 56, 78, 167, 209, 228, 267, 443, 497, 825
 Probate and Divorce Court Sittings, 189, 445, 843

CRIMINAL CAUSES, Procedure in, 15
 — LAW CONSOLIDATION BILL, Mr. Coode's Letter on, 598, 686
 — PROCEEDINGS OATH RELIEF BILL, the, 471, 557, 571, 648
 — PROCEDURE, 43
 — PROSECUTIONS; Allowance to Witnesses, 121, 129, 174, 285, 291, 296, 376, 398, 410, 491, 669, 684
 — STATISTICS, 780

CRYSTAL PALACE, the, 138, 388, 824
 CURIOUS MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE, 372

CURRENT TOPICS—
 Abolition of Feudal Conveyancing, Mr. Hallard on, 153
 Accident to Lord Campbell, 2
 Accountant-General's Department, the, 292, 331, 351, 723
 Address of the Chairman of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association at Worcester, 805
 Address of the Right Hon. Joseph Napier on Law Reform, 735
 Adulteration of Food, 291
 Agency Business, 291
 Anderson's (Slave) Case, 251
 Another Vacation Grievance, 759
 Application for Silk Gowns, 626
 Appointment of Examiners of Articled Clerks, 213
 Appointment of the New Attorney- and Solicitor-General, 609
 Appointment of Mr. H. Thring as Parliamentary Draftsman, 141
 Assize Intelligence, 403
 Attorney and Solicitors' Act, Examinations under, 538
 Attorneys and Solicitors (Ireland) Bill, the, 626
 Bankruptcy Bill, the, 271, 371, 449, 465, 483, 501, 553, 567, 583, 679, 793, 805, 809
 — Advocacy Clause, the, 371
 — Amendments in the House of Lords, 483, 501
 — Non-traders and Dead Man's Clauses, 391
 — Eighty-sixth Clause, 449
 — Objections to, 449
 Bartley v. Hodges, Case of, 679
 Brook v. Brook, Case of, 311
 Burthens affecting Merchant Shipping, 62
 Business in the Courts:—Michaelmas Term, 1860, 41, 81, Hilary, 173, 174, Trinity, 521, 583, 661, 679, Michaelmas, 1861, 829
 Calls to the Bar, 251
 Cause of the Inoperative Character of the West India Incumbered Estates Act, 403
 Clerks of the Peace and their Deputies, 431
 Concentration of the Courts, 21, 331, 465, 554, 598, 625
 Constitution and Procedure of the Irish Courts, 643
 Corporal Punishment in Gaols, 747
 Correspondence between Mr. Cookson and Mr. Huddleston, Q.C., on the Worcester Case, 61
 Criminal Law Consolidation Bills, Mr. Coode's Letter on, 598
 Curious Miscarriage of Justice, 372
 Death of Lord Campbell, 527
 — Mr. Coulson, Q.C., 61
 — Sir H. Davidson, 81
 Defect in Lord St. Leonards' Law of Property (1860) Act, 311
 Distraining for Fine for Non attendance as a Juror, 584
 Distribution of the Government Minor Judicial Patronage, 450
 District Registries, Business in, 501
 — Fees in, 597
 — Memorial of Law Societies on, 609, 625
 Divorce Courts, Committee of the House of Lords on, 415
 Education of Solicitors, Mr. Bannatyne of Glasgow on, 1
 Edwin James, Mr., Case of, 142, 465, 643
 Etiquette of the Bar, 153
 Evidence in Chancery, 431
 Examination of Articled Clerks in Ireland, 174
 Expenses of Examiners of Witnesses in Chancery, 271
 Fees to Country Commissioners on taking Affidavits, 501
 Form of Declaration of Duplicate under (23 & 24 Vict. c. 127), 830

CURRENT TOPICS (continued)—

General Average, Resolution of the Glasgow Social Science Committee on, 1
 High Courts of Judicature in India, 661
 Important Decisions as to Costs on Appeal, 643
 ————— in the House of Lords, 679
 ————— on "Interest," 661
 ————— on Registration of Titles in Australia, 291
 Inauguration of the Hartley Institute at Southampton, 173
 Incorporated Law Society, Annual Report of, 759
 Increase of Provincial Law Societies, 122
 Inns of Court Rifle Corps, the, 2, 63, 213, 331, 484
 Inspection of Mines Act (23 & 24 Vict. c. 151) 101
 Intended Public Dinner to M. Berryer, 21
 Introduction of the West India Incumbered Estates Act to Jamaica, 331, 610
 Investment of Money, Order of Court as to, 241
 Judgments in the Probate and Divorce Courts, 173
 Jurisdiction of the Inns of Court over their own Members 626
 Law of Evidence, Proposed Change in, 711
 Law Times, the, on Polite Enunciation, 829
 Legal Education in Upper Canada, 610
 Liberation of Chancery Prisoners, 2
 Liverpool Law Society. Report of, 63
 Lord Brougham's Patent of Peerage, 662
 Martial Law in Australia, 829
 Marquis of Bute's Case, 537
 Massacre of the Innocents, the, 643
 Memorial to the Judge of the Divorce Court, 597, 609
 Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association—
 Annual Meeting at Newcastle, 101
 ———— at Worcester, 711, 723, 783
 Chairman's Address at, 805
 Proposals by, 311
 Military Knights of Windsor, case of, 680
 Military Opposition to "Habeas Corpus" in America, 583
 Mischievous Results of an Elective Judiciary in New York State, 62
 Mr. Commissioner Fane and the Bankruptcy Bill, 701
 Mr. Samuel Morley's Advocacy of the Bankruptcy Bill, 21, 41
 National Association for the Promotion of Social Science, Meetings of, 643, 691, 701, 735
 New Library of the Middle Temple, 141, 702
 New Chancery Orders, The, 63
 Novel Proposal Referring to the Solicitor to the Irish Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 101
 Opposition to Lord St. Leonards' Bill on Constructive Notice, 371
 Origin of the Aphorism, "No Slave can Breathe the Air of England," 174, 193
 Our Almanack, 141
 Palace of Justice, The, 21
 Parliamentary Proceedings, 311, 331, 371, 415, 431, 465, 483, 553, 567, 583, 626, 643, 661, 679
 Patent Law Amendment, 538
 Payment of County Coroners Act (23 & 24 Vict. c. 116) 153
 Pending Law Reforms, 251
 Petitions against the Income Tax, 501, 538
 Pleading Guilty, 662
 Post Office Savings Banks, 321
 Professorships of Civil and Common Law at Oxford, 483
 Proposal of Middlesex Magistrates as to Coroners' Salaries, 63
 Prorogation of Parliament, 2, 122
 Prosecution against the Authors of the "Essays and Reviews," 702
 Public Prosecutors in Leeds, 271, 431
 Qualification for Offices under the Bankruptcy Act, 806
 Question of Jurisdiction caused by Death of the Lord Chancellor, 327
 Refusal to Hear an Attorney's Clerk in the Bankrupt's Court, 771
 Registration of Judgments in Upper Canada, 610
 Remuneration of Witnesses, 121, 174, 291
 Repeal of Acts which have ceased to be in Force, 21
 Reports of Public Companies, 291
 Restoration of Public "Readings" by Benchers of the Middle Temple, 231
 Revising Barristers' Courts, Proceedings in, 783
 Right of a Bishop to Remove a Tombstone; the Ripon Case, 602

CURRENT TOPICS (continued)—

Right of Suitors to have the Decision of the Judge himself, 553
 Road Murder, the, 1
 Rochdale "Religious Belief" Case, the, 213
 Rumoured Appointment in the Bristol Bankruptcy Court, the, 747, 759
 Saturday Review, the, on Recorders, 450
 Shedden Case, the, 81
 Solicitors' Benevolent Association, the, 122, 783
 Statistics of the Probate and Divorce Court, 351
 Statute Law Revision Bill, the, 271
 Success of the Appeal in the Case of All Soul's College, 351
 Testimonials to the value of the Weekly Reporter, 679
 Times, the, on the Bar and Barristers, 415
 ——— on the Opening of the Middle Temple Library, 830
 Touting, 153, 371, 567, 794
 Transfer of Land in South Australia, 121
 ——— Public Stocks (24 Vict. c. 3) 415, 431
 Treatment of Debtors in Manchester Gaol, 194
 Turnbull Case, the, 231
 Uniformity of Practice in all the Courts, 193
 University Graduates as Solicitors, Increase of, 251
 Vincent Collucci, Conviction of, 817
 Wakefield Election Case, the, 567
 Wing v. Taylor, Case of, 450
 Wisbeach Murder Case, the, 662
 Written v. Oral Judgments, Lord Campbell on, 121, 141
 CUSTODY OF WILLS, 799
 DAYS "COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT," 303
 DAVIDSON, SIR HENRY, death of, 81
 DAVIES' "CRIMINAL LAW CONSOLIDATION STATUTES," 836
 DAYS FOR PAYMENT OF INTEREST ON MORTGAGES, 682
 DECISION OF THE JUDGE HIMSELF, right of the suitor to, 553
 DEED CLAUSES OF THE BANKRUPTCY BILL, 317
 DEFECT IN LORD ST. LEONARD'S LAW OF PROPERTY ACT (1860) Act, 311
 DEFECTS OF OUR JURY SYSTEM, 71
 DELAY IN CHANCERY, 342
 DEPOSIT FOR WILLS OF LIVING PERSONS, 227
 DESTRUCTION OF MR. F. T. BIRCHAM'S RESIDENCE BY FIRE, 426
 DEVISE OF REAL ESTATE, 632, 671
 DISTRICT REGISTRIES, 501, 597, 609, 611, 625
 DISQUALIFIED WITNESSES, 213, 281
 DIVORCE ACT STATISTICS, 157, 368, 713
 ——— COURT, proceedings in, 25, 47, 129, 201, 219, 235, 258, 337, 542, 556, 682
 DIXON'S "PERSONAL HISTORY OF LORD BACON," 146
 DOMICIL BILLS, the, 680
 ——— law of, 109, 127, 159, 179, 199, 217, 266, 278, 293, 319, 335, 356, 393, 405, 419, 434, 454, 468, 487
 ——— compulsory, 199, 217, 256, 278, 293
 ——— definition of, 127
 ——— different kinds of, 159
 ——— effect of, on foreign contracts, 406, 419, 434
 ——— evidence necessary to establish, 179, 217, 256
 ——— how effected by war, 488
 ——— of origin, 319, 335, 356, 393
 ——— residence in various countries, 435, 454, 468, 487
 ——— two equal, 405
 ——— what constitutes a, 160
 EBSWORTH'S "LAW OF INFANTS," 560
 ELECTIVE JUDICIARY, mischievous results of, 62
 EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN, 17
 ENDORSEMENT OF CHEQUES BY PROCURATION, 57, 118
 ENGLISH FUNDS, see LONDON GAZETTES ——— HISTORY, edited by Sir John Romilly, 210
 EQUITY JUDGES, the, 342
 ——— of redemption, elegit, 671
 ——— proceedings under the old practice of the courts, 7
 ERRORS IN LEGISLATION, as illustrated by Joint Stock Companies law, 240
 "ESSAYS AND REVIEWS," the, 527, 702
 ESTATE OF WIDOWS IN FREEHOLD, 738, 750
 ETIQUETTE OF THE BAR, 90, 158

- EXAMINATIONS, Law, 35, 54, 117, 166, 174, 209, 246, 263, 292, 315, 341, 361, 386, 392, 396, 410, 424, 478, 496, 515, 561, 576, 620, 696, 717, 842
 — address of the master, 247
 — candidates who passed, 54, 248, 496, 576
 — prizes at, 55, 248, 497, 577
 EXAMINATION QUESTIONS, Michaelmas, 35; Hilary, 246; Easter, 478; Trinity, 561
 EXAMINATION OF STUDENTS OF INNS OF COURT, 36, 117, 262, 549
 EXAMINERS OFFICE IN CHANCERY, 271, 438
 EXCHANGE OF HATS, Coats, &c., in Courts of law, 87
 EXCHEQUER, Court of, proceedings in, 4, 66, 129, 181, 201, 470, 524
 EXONERATION OF DEVISED MORTGAGED ESTATES FROM THE MORTGAGED DEBT, 68, 184, 204, 333
 EXPENSES IN BANKRUPTCY, 113
 EXPEDIENCY OF PERMITTING DEFENDANTS TO TESTIFY ON OATH IN CRIMINAL CASES, 363, 383
 EXTRADITION OF CRIMINALS, 607
 EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL CASES, 664
 — law of, proposed change in, 711
 — variation in, on civil and criminal trials, 215
 FEES TO COUNTRY COMMISSIONERS ON TAKING AFFIDAVITS, 501
 FINLANSON'S "COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, 1852, 1854, & 1860," 303
 FINE ARTS COPYRIGHT BILL, the, 491
 FIRE IN THE TEMPLE, 210
 FOREIGN ASCERTAINMENT BILL, the, 321, 521
 FOREIGN TRIBUNALS AND JURISPRUDENCE—
 America, 11, 493, 543
 Bombay, 186, 671
 Ceylon, 165
 France, 10, 31, 70, 112, 132, 185, 186, 264, 493, 520, 605, 632, 651, 673, 764, 775
 FORM OF DUPLICATE UNDER 23 & 24 VICT. c. 127, 830
 FRANCHILLONS "LECTURES ON ENGLISH LAW," 265
 FRASER'S "CONFLICT OF LAWS IN DIVORCE CASES," 205
 FRAUDULENT TRADE MARKS, 820
 FRENCH TRIBUNAL OF COMMERCE STATISTICS, 635
 GENERAL AVERAGE, 1
 GIFT OR SETTLEMENT BY PERSONALTY, 775, 796
 GLEN'S "TREATISE ON THE LAW OF HIGHWAYS," 134
 GOVERNMENT BILLS, 104
 — minor judicial patronage, distribution of, 450
 "HABEAS CORPUS," in Italy, 138
 HARRISON'S "PRACTICE OF THE SHERIFF'S COURT," 117
 HARROW SCHOOL, Legacy to, 57
 HASTY LEGISLATION, Evils of (America), 11
 HAYDN'S DICTIONARY OF DATES, 673
 HAYES AND JARMAN'S "CONCISE FORMS OF WILLS," 133
 HAZLITT AND ROCHE'S "BANKRUPTCY," 789
 HEIRS-AT-LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.—See LONDON GAZETTES
 HIGHWAY BILL, The, 648
 HILARY TERM EXAMINATION, 263
 HINTS TO ARTICLED CLERKS, 285, 345, 441, 476, 514
 — THE PROFESSION, 89
 HOUSE OF LORDS, Committee of, on the Divorce Court, 415
 — Decisions of, 96—679
 — Is it bound by its own decisions? 122
 — Statistics of, 167
 — RECENT DECISIONS IN—
 SHIP—Rights of masters against owners; master's contract abroad; charter party (Bridowe v. Whitmore, 2 W. R. 621), 714
 SUCCESSION DUTIES Act—16 & 17 Vict. c. 51 (Lord Braybrooke v. The Attorney-General, 2 W. R. 601), 785, 809
 HOUSE OF LORDS, RECENT DECISIONS IN (continued)—
 VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENT—Stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5 (Thompson v. Webster, 2 W. R. 641), 725, 748, 761
 WILL—Attestation of; signature of witness (Hindmarsh v. Charlton, 2 W. R. 521), 773
 HOUSEMAN'S "PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING," 561
 HUDDERSFIELD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE; Resolutions by, on the Bankruptcy Bill, 511
 HUNTER "ON THE LAW OF PROPERTY ACT," 78
 HUNTING WITH GREYHOUND, Decision as to, 57
 IMPROVEMENT IN LEGISLATION BY PRIVATE BILLS, Suggestion for, 149
 INCOME TAX, Petitions against, 501, 538
 INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY—
 Annual Meeting, 638
 Names, of Lecturers, 1833—1861, 307
 Reports, 759, 766, 776
 INDICTABLE OFFENCES BILL 491, 617, 668
 INDIA, High Courts of Judicature in, 661
 INDIAN JUSTICE, 155
 INFORMER, how far a Competent Witness, 284
 INNS OF COURT RIFLE CORPS, 2, 63, 213, 331, 484
 INSURANCE, 638
 — OF TRADE BUILDINGS, 717
 — COMPANIES, Winding-up of in Chancery, 189, 210
 INTEREST, Important Decision as to, 661
 INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL LAW, 11
 — COPYRIGHT, 328
 — EXHIBITION, the, 98
 INVESTMENT OF TRUST FUNDS, 286, 728, 737, 763, 774
 IRELAND—
 Accident to the Right Hon. A. Brewster, 187
 Administration of Criminal Justice, 381
 Address to Baron Greene, 303
 Anticipated Legislation of the Session, 187
 Death of Baron Greene, 411
 Inspection of Ships as to Seaworthiness, 112
 Irish Bench, the, 264
 Legal Appointments, 264, 284
 — Education, 91
 Maritime Law—Salvage, 264
 Miss Aylward's Case, 92
 New Judge, the, 264
 Privilege of the Bar, 382
 Profession, the and the Landed Estates Court, 2, 23, 302
 Quarter Sessions Intelligence, 187
 Real Property Law Amendments of the Session, 9, 30, 438
 Reformatory Schools, 187
 Report of the Incorporated Law Society, 112
 Social Science Congress, the, 474
 Talk of the Four Courts, 92, 223
 Thellwall v. Yelverton, Case of, 382
 IRISH ANTE-UNION STATUTES, 632, 651, 671, 694
 IS A JUDICIAL TRIBUNAL BOUND BY PRINCIPLES LAID DOWN BY ITSELF ON PREVIOUS OCCASIONS, 52
 JANUARY DIVIDENDS, the, 190
 JOINT STOCK COMPANIES FRAUDS, 811
 JUDICIAL STATISTICS, 675, 788
 JUDGMENT DEBT, Interest, 694, 717, 728
 JUDGMENTS, Law of (23 & 24 Vict. c. 38), 13, 44, 90, 113, 138, 143
 — IN PALATINE COURTS, 541
 — Registry of, 410, 474
 JURIDICAL SOCIETY.—See LAW SOCIETIES AND PAPERS READ.
 JURY SYSTEM, Defects of, 71
 JUSTICE AND ITS MISCARRIAGES, 93, 837
 KOSSUTH NOTE CASE, the, 568
 LAND DEBENTURES, Dr. Longfield's Scheme for the Issue of, 747
 LANDLORD AND TENANT, 811
 LANUEVILLE v. ANDERSON, Case of, 81
 LAW AMENDMENT SOCIETY. See LAW SOCIETIES AND PAPERS READ.
 LAW BOOKS, Price of, 737
 — EXAMINATIONS. See EXAMINATIONS.
 — LIST, the, 381, 411, 473, 493, 774
 — MAGAZINE AND REVIEW, the, 365, 476
 — OF JUDGMENTS, 13, 44, 90, 113, 131, 143
 — OF REAL PROPERTY IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA, 121, 176, 196

LODGING-HOUSE KEEPERS, non-liability of, for loss of lodger's goods, 131, 183

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSURANCE SOCIETY, report of, 460.

LONDON GAZETTES, 19, 38, 58, 79, 99, 119, 139, 151, 171, 190, 210, 229, 249, 268, 288, 309, 328, 349, 369, 388, 400, 412, 428, 446, 462, 480, 498, 517, 534, 550, 564, 580, 594, 608, 623, 640, 656, 676, 688, 698, 709, 719, 732, 743, 756, 768, 781, 791, 802, 814, 825, 843

LORD CAMPBELL, the late, 597

— CRANWORTH'S TRUSTEES AND MORTGAGEES ACT, 23, 27, 69, 83, 164, 283, 301

— KINGSDOWN'S WILLS OF PERSONALTY BILL, 455, 465, 490, 588, 602, 684

— ST. LEONARD'S BILL ON CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE, 301, 351, 371, 471

LUNACY REGULATION BILL, the, 376, 617, 669

LYNCH LAW IN TEXAS, 37

MACLACHLAN'S "LAW OF MERCHANT SHIPPING," 11

MAGISTRATES IN HOLY ORDERS, 532

MAHOMMEDAN PURCHASE DEED, a, 10

MAINE'S "ANCIENT LAW," 493

MALPRACTICE, cases of, 777

MANCHESTER, meetings at, on the Bankruptcy Bill, 425 822

MANOR COURTS, 8

MARITIME PUBLIC LAW, 554, 584

MARQUIS OF BUTE'S CASE, 316, 328, 537

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE, laws of, 352

MARRIAGE LAW (IRELAND) BILL, 557

MARRIAGE WITH A DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER, 244

MARTIAL LAW IN AUSTRALIA, 822

MAUDE AND POLLOCK'S "LAW OF MERCHANT SHIPPING," 116

MAYHEW'S "LAW OF MERGER," 396

MEDICAL ACT, The, 334

MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT AS HIGH SHERIFF, 284, 301

METROPOLITAN AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSOCIATION. See Law Societies and Papers read, &c.

MIDDLE TEMPLE LIBRARY, The 141, 702, 824, 841

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS, Proceedings at, 47, 87, 130, 162, 220, 258, 295, 337, 376, 408, 436, 470, 647

MIRE'S CASE—French Criminal Law, 633

MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE, 93, 372, 837

MISSIONARY BISHOPS, 327

MORGAN AND MACPHERSON "ON THE INDIAN PENAL CODE" (Act 45 of 1860), 242

MORTGAGE—Days for payment of interest, 686, 717

MORTGAGE ESTATES, Exoneration of (17 & 18 Vict. c. 113) 333

MOSE'S CASE, 274, 300, 323

MOSELEY ON "WHAT IS CONTRABAND OF WAR," 765

MUNICIPAL LAW, 28

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE PROMOTION OF SOCIAL SCIENCE. See Law Societies and Papers read, &c.

NEWCASTLE AND GATESHEAD LAW SOCIETY. See Law Societies.

NEW ENTRANCE TO THE TEMPLE, 790

— GENERAL ORDERS IN BANKRUPTCY, 738

— LAW COURTS AND OFFICES, 313, 362, 706

— TRIAL IN CRIMINAL CASES BILL, The, 509

— TRUSTEES TO CHAPELS, Appointment of, 222, 263

NISI PRIUS GLEANINGS, 312

OATHS, Abolition of, 51

OBITUARY:—

Butt, Mr. G. M., Q.C., 34

Butterworth, Mr. H., 17

Campbell, Lord, 597

Chapman, Mr. T., 527

Charrie, M., 10

Coulson, Mr. Walter, Q.C., 78

Davidson, Sir Henry, 81

Lewis, Mr. W. D., Q.C., 242

Owen, Mr. O., 285

Owen, Sir John, Bart., 343

Patteson, Sir John, Knt., 620

OBITUARY (continued)

Russell, Mr. James, Q.C., 188

Secker, Mr., 295

Vatimesnil, M., 34

Wire, Mr. Alderman, 26, 34

OKES "GAME AND FISHERY LAWS," 738

— "MAGISTERIAL FORMULIST," 620

— "— SYNOPSIS," 23

— "TURNPIKE ROADS," 134

OPENING BIDDINGS IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY, 306

— OF THE MIDDLE TEMPLE LIBRARY, 841

ORDERS OF COURT, 18, 327, 498, 606, 640, 655, 843

ORGANIZATION OF THE PROFESSION, 116

ORIGIN, NATURE, AND INCIDENTS OF THE LAW OF BLOCKADE, 830

OWEN, Mr. O., Death of, 285

— Sir John, Bart., Death of, 343

PAPERS READ AT MEETINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES—

On "Abolition of Oaths," by C. A. Smith, Esq., 51

On "Appellate Jurisdiction of the House of Lords," by James Anderson, Esq., Q.C., 73

On "Bankruptcy," by Mr. Sheriff Bell, 207, 224

On "Bankrupt Laws of Belgium," by Mr. Cor Vandermæren, 753

On "Belligerent Rights over Private Property at Sea," by W. J. Lamport, Esq., 76

On "Capital Punishment," by Edward Webster, Esq., 187

On "Codification," by W. Marshall, Esq., 591

On "Decisions in the House of Lords," by F. N. Devey, Esq., 26

On "Defects in our Jury System," by T. G. Gibson, Esq., 71

On "Errors in Legislation in Joint Stock Companies Law," by N. Lindley, Esq., 240

On "Expenses in Bankruptcy," by G. A. Esson, Esq., 113

On "Fraudulent Trade Marks," by J. Morris, Esq., 822

On "Improvements in Legislation by Private Bills," by A. Pulling, Esq., 142

On "Insurance," by Edward Zimmerman, Esq., 638

On "Is a Judicial Tribunal bound by the Principles laid down by itself?" by W. Marshall, Esq., 52

On "Joint Stock Companies Frauds," by D. C. Heron, Esq., 811

On "Justice and its Miscarriages," by John Turner, Esq., 93, 837

On "Law of Judgments," by G. J. Johnson, Esq., 13

On "Opening biddings in the Court of Chancery," by Mr. Sergeant Woolrych, 304

On "Organization of the Profession," The, by D. J. Miller, Esq., 116

On "Permission to Defendant to testify on Oath in Criminal Cases," by J. Pitt Taylor, Esq., 363, 383

On "Procedure in Criminal Causes," by J. Campbell Smith, Esq., 15

On "Procedure and Evidence on Criminal Trials," by Andrew Edgar, Esq., 343

On "Promotion at the Bar," by Edward Webster, Esq., 545

On "Registration of Trade Marks," by Arthur Ryland, Esq., 838

On "The Admiralty Court," by B. C. Lloyd, Esq., 779

On "The Ashburton Treaty and the Anderson Case," by the Hon. George Denman, M.P.,

On "The Taxation of Suitors," by S. M. Leake, Esq., 134

PAR NOBILE FRATRUM, 255

PARKINSON'S "HANDY-BOOK FOR THE COMMON LAW JUDGES CHAMBERS," 303

PARLIAMENT, HOUSES OF—

BILLS in, 287, 307, 326, 346, 365, 387, 426, 443, 461, 477, 496, 515, 533, 549, 563, 578, 593, 606, 622, 639, 655, 676, 767

PENDING MEASURES in—

Admiralty Court Jurisdiction Bill, 359

Bankruptcy Law Amendment Bill, 296

Charitable Uses Bill, 378

Courts of Justice Election Bill, 471, 603

Fine Arts Copyright Bill, 491

Foreign Ascertainment Bill, 321

Indictable Offences Bill, 491

Lunacy Regulation Bill, 437

Public Charities Bill, 421

Qualification for Offices Bill, 281

PARLIAMENT, HOUSES OF (continued)

- Recovery of Debts Bill, 339
- Stipendiary Magistrates Bill, 491
- Street Railway Company Bill, 307
- Trade Marks Bill, 358
- Volunteers Exemption from Toll Bill, 421
- Wills of British Subjects Abroad Bill, 456, 603, 630
- PROCEEDINGS in, 261, 280, 295, 320, 337, 358, 376, 421, 436, 455, 471, 491, 508, 542, 557, 570, 587, 602, 617, 629, 647, 667, 683, 693
- Accountant-General's Office, 337, 376
- Administration of Justice in Ireland, 647
- Admiralty Court Jurisdiction Bill, 456
- Allowance to Witnesses, 296, 376, 491, 669, 684
- Attorneys and Solicitors (Ireland) Bill, 572
- Bankruptcy Bill, 280, 281, 295, 296, 377, 421, 436, 470, 490, 542, 557, 570, 587, 588, 617, 647, 648, 667, 683, 684
- Barber's Case, 571
- Chancery Lunatics Bill, 320, 376, 617, 669
- Charitable Uses Bill, 376
- Concentration of the Courts, 281, 295, 456, 542, 588, 602
- Consolidation of the Statutes, 588, 684
- Constructive Notice Amendment Bill, 471
- Criminal Proceedings Oath Relief Bill, 471, 557, 571, 648
- Disqualified Witnesses, 281
- Encumbered Estates Act of Jamaica, 508
- Examination of Defendants in Criminal Cases, 647
- First Sitting of Lord Westbury, 602
- Forged Trade Marks Bill, 262, 280, 648
- Highways Bill, 648
- Indictable Offences Bill, 617, 668
- Law of Divorce, 358
- Lodgment of Appeals, 358
- Marriage Law (Ireland) Amendment Bill, 557
- New Trial in Criminal Cases Bill, 509
- Private Bills, 421
- Probate Court District Registrars, 371
- Public Charities, 377
- Schools, 557
- Recovery of Debts, 321, 470
- Salmon Fishery Bill, 629, 667
- Supply, 629
- Windsor suspended Canonries Bill, 683
- Wills of Personalty by British Subjects abroad Bill, 455, 490, 588, 602, 684
- PARLIAMENTARY DRAFTING, 89, 214
- PAPERS OF THE SESSION RELATING TO THE LAW AND LAWYERS, 702, 712, 724
- PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED—See LONDON GAZETTES
- PATENT LAW AMENDMENT, 538
- PATTERSON'S "GAME LAWS," 835
- PATTERSON, SIR JOHN, KNIGHT, Death of, 620
- PAYMENT OF COUNTY CORONERS, 153
- PEACHEY'S "LAW OF MARRIAGE," 77
- PENDING LAW REFORMS, 251
- PLEADING GUILTY, 662
- PLURALISM IN THE LAW, 474
- POLICE CONSTABLES AS ADVOCATES, 362
- COURTS, Proceedings in, 26, 202, 263, 280, 714
- POLITE ENUNCIATION, the "Law Times" on, 829
- POOR LAW BOARD AND ATTORNEYS, 164
- POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANKS, 521
- STATISTICS, 190
- POWELL'S "LAW OF INLAND CARRIERS," 717
- POWER OF ATTORNEY, Foreign Country, 811, 820
- PRACTICAL QUESTIONS IN CONVEYANCING, 563
- PRENTICE'S "MERCANTILE LAWS," 475
- PRICE OF LAW BOOKS, 737
- PRITCHARD'S "HANDY BOOK FOR EXECUTORS," 364
- PRIVATE BILLS, 421
- PRIVILEGE CLAIMED BY COUNSEL, 778
- PRIVY COUNCIL, proceedings before, 200
- PROBATE COURT:—
 - District registrars, 484, 571, 671, 798
 - Judgments in, 173
 - Proceedings in, 47, 200, 235, 280, 320
 - Report of the Incorporated Law Society on, 776
 - Statistics, 157
- PROBATE DUTY STATISTICS, 607
- ORDERS, New, 692

PROCEDURE IN CRIMINAL CASES, 15

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION. See Legal Education

— ETIQUETTE, 90, 153, 574— REMUNERATION, 146, 184— IN THE UNITED STATES, 323PROMISSORY NOTES, 750, 764PROMOTION AT THE BAR, 363, 385, 645PROPERTY AND INCOME TAX STATISTICS, 828PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT, 2, 122, 808PROTECTION FROM ARREST, 3, 42PROVINCIAL LAW SOCIETIES, increase of, 122

— LEGAL NEWS. See Legal News

PUBLIC CHARITIES BILL, 377, 421— COMPANIES, DIVIDENDS, REPORTS, &c., 287, 291, 307, 327, 347, 365, 387, 400, 411, 426, 443, 478, 496, 515, 549, 563, 593, 622, 639, 655, 676, 697, 718, 731, 743, 780, 791— PROSECUTORS, 155— SCHOOLS, 557QUEEN'S BENCH, Court of, proceedings in, 4, 25, 47, 66, 87, 129, 144, 234, 272, 320, 470, 490, 508, 556, 601, 616

QUESTIONS AT THE EXAMINATIONS. See Examinations

RAILWAY BILLS, 790— COMPANIES AS CARRIERS, Liability of, 794, 806, 819, 834— DEBENTURES, 78— DEPOSITS, 210RAMS "TREATISE ON FACTS," 651REAL PROPERTY, Present law of settlement of, 107RECENT DECISIONS, 686RECORDERS, The "Saturday Review" on, 450REFUSAL TO HEAR ATTORNEYS' CLERKS IN BANKRUPTCY, 768, 773REGISTRARSHIPS IN BANKRUPTCY, 342REGISTRATION OF TITLE, 799— TRADE MARKS, 839REGISTRY OF JUDGMENTS, 410, 474REG. v. COLLUCCI, 820RENT CHARGE, "When it is in arrear and unpaid," Mode of demanding payment," 204, 222REVERSIONARY LEGACIES, Serving executors with notice of assignment, 380

REVIEWS—

Alnutt's "Wills and Administrations," 32Archbold's "Bankruptcy," 789Austin's "Province of Jurisprudence Determined," 458Barry's "Statutory Jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery," 264Bell and Caves "Stone's Practice at Petty Sessions," 680Broom's "Commentaries on Common Law," 288Chadwick's "Examples of Administration Bonds for the Probate Court," 476"Contrast between the Chancery and Superior Courts of Common Law in Ireland," 575Coode's "Letter to Lord Palmerston on the Statute Law," 686Coote and Tristram's "Practice of the Probate Court," 2Day's "Common Law Procedure Act," 303Davies's "Criminal Law Consolidation Statutes," 836Dixon's "Personal History of Lord Bacon," 146Ebsworth's "Law of Infants," 560Finlason's "Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, 1854, and 1860," 303Francillon's "Lectures on English Law," 265Fraser's "Conflict of Laws in Cases of Divorce," 205Glen's "Law of Highways," 134Harrison's "Practice of the Sheriff's Court," 117Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates," 673Haye's and Jarman's "Concise forms of Wills," 133Hazlitt and Roche's "Bankruptcy Act," 789Hunter "On the Law of Property Act," 78Housman's "Precedents in Conveyancing," 561Kerr's "Action at Law," 475"Law List for 1861," 411"Law Magazine and Law Review," 265, 476Laurence's "Law of Principal and Surety," 364Leach's "Suggestions for Improving the mode of Registering Deeds in Ireland," 425Lewis's "Bankruptcy Manual," 739MacLachlan's "Law of Merchant Shipping," 11Maine's "Ancient Law," 493

REVIEWS (continued)—

- Maude and Pollock's "Law of Merchant Shipping," 116.
 Mayhew's "Law of Merger," 396
 Morgan and Macpherson "On the Indian Penal Code" (Act 15 of 1860), 342
 Moseley "On what is Contraband of War," 765
 Oke's "Magistrates Formulist," 620
 — "Magisterial Synopsis," 93
 — "Game and Fishery Laws," 738
 — "Turnpike Roads," 134
 Parkinson's "Handy Book for the Common Law Judges Chambers," 303
 Peachey's "Law of Marriage," 77
 Powell's "Law of Inland Carriers," 717
 Patterson's "Game Laws," 835
 Prentice's "Mercantile Laws," 475
 Pritchard's "Handy Book for Executors," 364
 Ram's "Treatise on Facts," 651
 Roscoe's "Digest of the Law of Evidence in Criminal Cases," 620
 Shelford's "Probate, Legacy, and Succession Duties," 476
 Smith's "Elementary view of the Proceedings in an Action at Law," 475
 Smith's "Manual of Equity Jurisprudence," 342
 "Social Science Almanack," 117
 Stoke's "Lien of Attorneys," 166
 Stephen's "Common Law Procedure Act, 1860," 50
 — and Pinder's "Principles of Pleading in Civil Actions," 92
 "Succession Duty Discount Tables," 527
 Sugden's "Treatise of Powers," 694
 Tissot's "Le Droit Penal étudié dans ses Principes dans les Usages et les lois des différents Peuples du Monde," 33
 Trower's "Debtor and Creditor," 284
 Twiss's "Law of Nations," 751
 Walter's "Statutes of Limitations," 77
 Wolstenholme & Vincent's "Jarman on Wills," 636
- RIGHT OF ROAD, 474
 ROAD MURDER. The, 1, 69
 ROSCOE'S "DIGEST OF THE LAW OF EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL CASES," 620
 RUSSELL, Mr. James, Q.C., Death of, 188
 — Will of, 368
- SALMON FISHERY COMMISSION, the, 404
 SATURDAY HALF HOLIDAY, 612
 SECKER, Mr. death of, 295
 SELLING BEER AT FAIRS AND RACES, 37
 SERVING EXECUTORS WITH NOTICE OF ASSIGNMENT OF REVERSIONARY LEGACIES, practice as to, 380
 SHEDDEN CASE, the, 65, 81
 SHELFORD'S "PROBATE, LEGACY, AND SUCCESSION DUTIES," 476
 SHERIFFS COURT, the, 87, 110, 111
 — undersheriffs, &c., for 1861, 347
 SIR JOHN TRELAWNEY'S AFFIRMATION BILL, 403
 SMITH'S "ELEMENTARY VIEW OF THE PROCEEDINGS IN AN ACTION AT LAW," 475
 SMITH'S MANUAL OF EQUITY JURISPRUDENCE, 342
 SOLICITORS, admission of.—See ATTORNEYS.
 — elected to the mayoralty, 26, 28
 — lien on fund in court, 28
 SOLICITOR GENERAL, the new, 629
 SOLICITORS BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION, the, 439, 800
 — Journal and The Profession, 2
 SOUTH AUSTRALIAN CONVEYANCING, 122, 176, 196, 205
 SPECIALTY AND SIMPLE CONTRACT, liabilities by, 215, 275, 354
 ST. GREGORY CHURCH, SUDBURY, case of, 415
 STAMP ACT, proof of cancellation, 8, 28
 STAMPS ON AFFIDAVITS, 574
 — foreign bills of exchange, 639

- STAMPS ON NOTES PAYABLE ON DEMAND, 204
 STATUTE LAW CONSOLIDATION, 673
 — Revision, 271, 502, 818, 819, 834
 STEPHENS "COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, 1860," 50
 STEPHEN AND PINDER'S "PLEADING IN CIVIL ACTIONS," 92
 STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATES, 574
 STOKES "LIEN OF ATTORNEYS," 166
 STRIKES, Law of, 252
 SUCCESSION DUTY, 801
 — discount tables, 527
 SUGDEN'S "TREATISE ON POWERS," 694
 SUITORS FUND AND SUITORS FEE FUND, Parliamentary return as to the state of, 366, 386
 SUITORS, Taxation of. See TAXATION.
 SUPERIOR COURTS, Costs in, 8
- TAXATION OF SUITORS AND LEGAL FINANCE, 134, 142, 174, 194, 231, 272, 372
 TEMPLE CHURCH, the, 801
 TESTIMONIALS TO SOLICITORS, 461, 563, 676
 THIRD CAUSE CELEBRE, the, 771
 TISSOT'S "LE DROIT PENAL ETUDIE DANS SES PRINCIPES DANS LES USAGES ET LES LOIS DES DIFFERENTS PEUPLES DU MONDE," 33
 TITHE RENT CHARGE, 204, 222, 728, 737
 TOUTING, 153, 371, 567, 794, 819
 TRADE MARKS, Law of, 486, 523, 540, 568, 613, 627, 645, 665
 — American Trial on, 543
 — Doctrines of Foreign Tribunals as to, 613
 — Injuries from Breach of Trust or Confidence, 665
 — Lord Campbell's Bill on, 326
 — Nature of Classification, 627
 — Nature of in Literature, not the Subject of Copyright, 645
 — Registration of, 839
 — Remedies against Piracy of, 523, 540
 — Rights and Remedies of Aliens, 569
 — Ryland, Mr. Arthur's Paper on, 820
 TRANSFER OF TITLE IN LAND, 735, 760, 784
 TROWER'S "LAW OF DEBTOR AND CREDITOR," 284
 TRUST FUNDS, Investment of, 286, 728, 737, 763, 774
 TRUSTEES AND MORTGAGEES, &c., ACT, 28, 27, 69, 83, 164, 283, 301
 TRUSTEES' RIGHT TO BE RECOUPED IN RESPECT OF A BREACH OF TRUST, 69, 90
 — Investment by. See TRUST FUNDS.
 TWENTY-NINTH CANON OF THE CHURCH, the, 189, 327, 374
 TWISS'S "LAW OF NATIONS," 751
- UNCERTIFICATED ATTORNEY'S 399
 UNIVERSITY INTELLIGENCE, 138, 266, 308, 443, 496
 UNQUALIFIED PRACTITIONERS, 777
 URQUART, MR. OF MANCHESTER, Testimonial to, 823
 USAGES OF THE PROFESSION, 776, 796, 799
- VALLANCE, MR. H. V., Testimonial to, 563
 VOLUNTARY ANSWERS TO BILLS IN CHANCERY, 254
 VOLUNTEER REVIEW AT CAMBRIDGE, 532
- WALTER'S "STATUTES OF LIMITATION," 77
 WATSON, BARON, the Late, 527
 WEST, MR. F., Testimonial to, 676
 WHAT WE MAY NOT DO WITH OUR OWN, 89
 WHO SHALL DECIDE WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE? 504
 WILLS, Attestations to, 654, 694, 717, 737, 751, 763
 — Registry of, 213
 — Statistics, 801
 WIRE, MR. ALDERMAN, DEATH OF, 26, 34
 WOLSTENHOLME AND VINCENT'S "JARMAN ON WILLS," 636
 WOOD, V.C., AND THE LORD CHANCELLOR, 121, 141, 146
- YELVERTON CASE, THE, 331

INDEX TO BANKRUPTS.

- Abbott, G. M., 249
 Abraham, J., 843
 Adams, W., 211
 Adams, F. W., 463
 Adams, W., 365
 Adlington, J. W., 413
 Agate, J., 132
 Alabaster, H., 814
 Alcock, J., 269
 Alder, P., 325
 Alford, C. E., 768
 Allan, J., 814
 Allanson, W., 211
 Allcock, J., Jun., 330
 Allen, J., 464
 Allwood, T., 845
 Alston, E., 744
 Ambler, J., 109
 Ames, G., 331
 Anderton, J., 318
 Andrew, W. P., 609
 Andrews, J. R., 191
 Andrews, J., 464
 Andrews, E. R., 381
 Andrews, J. G., 641
 Ansell, E., 38
 Appleyard, D., 677
 Appleyard, W., 845
 Argent, J., 480
 Armitage, J., 684
 Armstrong, A., 289
 Armstrong, C., 429
 Armstrong, W., 814
 Arnold, E., 20
 Arnold, W., 80
 Arnott, A., 677
 Asbury, W., 428
 Ashbee, R., 845
 Ashfield, C., 609
 Ashley, C. K., 413
 Ashwill, W. T., 657
 Astill, H., 677
 Astles, F. W., 814, 843
 Ashwin, M. H., 781
 Ashworth, H., 769
 Atkin, F., 565
 Atkins, J., 876
 Attwell, J., 269
 Awbert, A., 52
 Austin, H., 446
 Austin, R. B., 826
 Austin, J., 843
 Ayles, P. W., 132
 Bache, T., 688
 Bacon, T., 595
 Bacon, S., 768
 Bacon, R., 843
 Bailey, R., 413
 Bailey, C., 428
 Baker, W. W., 19
 Baker, J., 20
 Baker, R., 22
 Baldock, E. C., 688
 Baldry, G., 826
 Ball, C. G., 19
 Ballard, J. T., 464
 Ballard, W., 697
 Ballinger, W., 370
 Balls, J., 657
 Bannfield, J., 708
 Banks, R., 582
 Banks, C. W., 722
 Bannister, S., 657
 Bannister, T., 688
 Barber, T. C., 641
 Barker, A., 230
 Barker, H., 845
 Barker, J., 845
 Barnes, T., 191
 Barnes, J. W., 826
 Barnett, J., 692
 Barnsley, J., 330
 Barnsley, E., 349
 Barratt, T., 269
 Barratt, G. F., 446
 Barrie, R., 382
 Barstow, E., 756
 Bartlett, W. S., 464
 Bartle, J., 120
 Barton, T., 22
 Barton, T., 172
 Barton, G., 269
 Barwick, E., 826
 Bassett, D., 29
 Batchelar, W. H., 720
 Bateman, H., 289
 Bateman, B., 518
 Bates, P., 464
 Bates, H., 845
 Batley, R., 623
 Bayfield, R. J., 551
 Beale, J. S., 843
 Beard, R., 152
 Beardmore, H., 732
 Beck, S. H., 734
 Beech, T., 109
 Beghin, L., 463
 Behrends, J. B., 518
 Behrens, J. B., 365
 Bell, T., 370
 Bell, T., 710
 Bell, T., 813
 Belford, M. A., 769
 Bellingham, W. T., 330
 Belson, R. H., 845
 Benfield, T., 480
 Bennett, W., 249
 Bennett, J. H., 692
 Bennett, T. H., 692
 Bennett, T., 826
 Bent, J., Jun., 269
 Benton, J. W., 641
 Berrell, P., 845
 Berrett, W., 349
 Berry, J., 581
 Bertram, A., 845
 Besley, G., 152
 Beynon, L., 518
 Bickley, J., 269
 Bicknell, J., 826
 Bielefield, C. F., 595
 Biggs, H., 38
 Biggs, H., 230
 Billiet, V. P., 125
 Billington, C., 480
 Billington, F., 844
 Binks, W., 29
 Binney, R., 781
 Binney, J. W., 781
 Birch, T., 535
 Bird, J. W., 22
 Bird, R., 826
 Birrell, A. I., 80
 Black, A., 614
 Blackburn, W., 220
 Blackmore, W. H., 534
 Blagg, W., 464
 Blake, H., 431
 Blake, H., 428
 Blood, E., 370
 Blotfield, T. W., 32
 Blow, A., 768
 Blundell, W., 211
 Board, C. T., 121
 Boas, H., 269
 Boddington, C., 330
 Bolt, G., 826
 Bond, W., 803
 Boorman, R. K., 447
 Booth, E., 762
 Booth, J., Jun., 409
 Booty, W., 826
 Boreham, W. H., 565
 Borham, W. H., 843
 Bottling, E., 330
 Bottomley, B. G., 413
 Bouch, R. M., 20
 Boughiey, J. S., 290
 Bound, J., 152
 Bousfield, W. S., 677
 Bowditch, G., 120
 Bowen, W., 389
 Bowen, S., 826
 Bowker, J., 846
 Bowles, A., 211
 Bracegirdle, S., 389
 Braddon, W., 481
 Bradley, R., 722
 Braham, H. J., 826
 Brain, W., 463
 Braime, J., 611
 Breeze, E., 447
 Brent, W., 121
 Brew, W., 429
 Bridger, C., 120
 Bridger, J., 370
 Bristow, J., 429
 Brittain, C., 710
 Britton, M. W., 641
 Broadbridge, J., 109
 Brook, J., 22
 Brook, J., 220
 Brooking, F. L., Jun., 609
 Brooks, J., 140
 Brooks, A., 172
 Brooksbank, J., 269
 Broome, H. A., 170
 Brotherton, F., 330
 Brown, H., 211
 Brown, H., 210
 Brown, J. H., 581
 Brown, J. H., 595
 Brown, P., 641
 Brown, I., 641
 Brown, D., 692
 Brown, W., 781
 Brown, T., 826
 Browne, N., 49
 Browne, J., 349
 Browne, E. C., 551
 Browne, D., 595
 Browne, W., 595
 Browning, J., 59
 Bruster, W. M., 498
 Bruton, J., 841
 Bryant, W., 172
 Bryant, R., 518
 Bryce, A., 370
 Bryce, D., 677
 Buck, T., 191
 Bulford, J., 250
 Bullamore, R., 464
 Burger, E. A., 551
 Burgess, W., 844
 Burgin, T., 732
 Burgin, W., 732
 Burhouse, S., 814
 Burrell, R., 310
 Burrell, J., 310
 Burrows, G., 292
 Burrows, J., 429
 Burrows, W., Jun., 826
 Burton, A., 413
 Bushby, J., 815
 Butchart, D. W., 230
 Butcher, G., 310
 Butterfield, W., 722
 Butterfield, J., 722
 Butterworth, T. T., 551
 Buttery, C., 722
 Buxton, W., 269
 Buxton, J., 330
 Cail, B., 330
 Cairns, C., 262
 Calverley, J., 446
 Calvert, J. F., 262
 Calvert, D. D., 469
 Cameron, W., 744
 Canning, M., 230
 Cannon, S., 595
 Cannon, E. W., 744
 Carey, J., 330
 Cargill, C., 826
 Carlyle, J., 220
 Carman, B., 413
 Carryer, J. J., 585
 Carter, T. D., 429
 Carter, H., 498
 Carter, S., 657
 Carter, J., 744
 Carter, T., 756
 Case, R., 802
 Cartwright, G., 845
 Cash, W., 857
 Caudwell, J., 677
 Cave, G. W., 331
 Chace, G. H., 89
 Chamberlain, A., 688
 Chambers, G. T., 429
 Chambers, H. H., 518
 Chamney, W., 230
 Chant, G., 565
 Chapman, J., 229
 Chapman, J., 720
 Chapman, J., 531
 Chapman, W. H., 845
 Chauncy, R., 826
 Cheesman, C. T., 212
 Child, W. H., 803
 Chomel, J. A., 555
 Chown, H. C., 447
 Churchill, J., 565
 Churchill, H., 781
 Clapham, T., 269
 Clappison, J. W., 109
 Clark, T., 20
 Clark, J. J., 172
 Clark, W., Jun., 464
 Clark, S. E., 744
 Clark, J., 826
 Clark, W. O., 826
 Clarke, J., 551
 Clarke, B., 551
 Clarke, J. R., 551
 Clarke, F., 756
 Clarke, O., 815
 Clarke, W. H., 826
 Clarke, J., 826
 Clarke, J., 845
 Clavards, W., 20
 Clayton, W., 480
 Clayton, J. W., 480
 Clegg, E., 677
 Clegg, R., 845
 Clench, H., 370
 Clough, R. H., 120
 Clough, W., 802
 Clutterbuck, J. J., 40
 Clutterbuck, J. J., 212
 Coates, T., 699
 Cobb, J., 429
 Cockayne, C., 641
 Cockman, H., 677
 Coen, C. W., 80
 Cogman, F., 289
 Cogswell, E. H., 710
 Cohen, A., 518
 Cole, W., Jun., 29
 Cole, J., 845
 Coleman, C., 39
 Coley, J., 120
 Colley, T., 499
 Colley, R. L., 845
 Collier, C., 581
 Collier, J., 804
 Collins, R., 720
 Collis, J., 39
 Coltman, T., 20
 Colwell, E. A., 844
 Connell, R. W., 211
 Cook, J., 249
 Cook, E. F., 220
 Cook, J., 535
 Cooke, S., 481
 Cooke, L., 429
 Cooke, M., 429
 Coombs, S. H., 80
 Coombs, W. G., 756
 Cooper, J., 121
 Cooper, H., 595
 Cooper, T., 595
 Cooper, J., 744
 Cooper, J., 756
 Cooper, W., 815
 Copeland, E., 463
 Copestake, J., 330
 Copland, J. B., 413
 Copplestone, M., 844
 Corbett, T., 732
 Corke, H., 804
 Cottam, J. H., 191
 Counihan, J. J., 732
 Cousens, T. B., 140
 Coward, M., 80
 Cowderoy, J., 447
 Cowell, J., 220
 Cowell, J., 220
 Cowtan, R., 815
 Cowton, J., 413
 Cox, W., 152
 Cox, C. H., 211
 Cox, A., 481
 Cox, E., 581
 Cox, H. B., 744
 Cox, G., 845
 Crabb, W., 499
 Crabb, J. C., 499
 Crabb, J. A., 826
 Craft, W., 413
 Craven, J., 401
 Cressey, J., 641
 Cribb, W., 826
 Crofts, J., 80
 Cronshaw, W., 220
 Crook, J., 211
 Crossley, J., Jun., 535
 Crosthwaite, J., 781
 Croot, E., 581
 Crosby, E., 845
 Cudby, C. J., 32
 Culleton, T., 732
 Culverhouse, W. H., 403
 Currie, W. C., 269
 Curtis, E., 827
 Curtis, E., 269
 Curtis, W., 814
 Cusker, J., 281
 Dalley, J., 518
 Dallow, T., 230
 Dalton, W. J., 413
 Dalton, T. S., 595
 Dalton, H., 595
 Daniel, G. M. P., 19
 Daniel, W., 290
 Daniels, J., 565
 Darlington, T., 310
 Daubeny, R. C., 677
 Dauber, W. R., 447
 David, M. W., 269
 David, E., 781
 Davidson, J. R., 280
 Davis, W. P., 220
 Davis, W. H., 310
 Davis, J., 413
 Davis, G., 641
 Davis, I. N., 815
 Davies, S., 80
 Dawes, E., 319
 Dawson, E., 80
 Dawson, W., 429
 Day, J., Jun., 481
 Day, G., 710
 Deakins, F. H., 815, 844
 Dean, R. G., 429
 Dean, J., 845
 Defries, E., 641
 Deighton, S., 413
 Delamere, M. H., 844
 Demoor, F. C., 269
 Dempsey, J., 152
 Dennis, J., 624
 Denny, A. S., 844
 Denton, J., 220
 Denton, W., 290
 Denton, J., Jun., 269
 Dethier, L., 172
 Diamond, T. F., 551
 Dicey, E. J. S., 826
 Dickens, R., 845
 Dickinson, W. J., 844
 Dickinson, I., 844
 Digby, T., 463
 Dixon, G., 844
 Dobson, W., 815
 Dod, W. E., 815
 Dodd, G., 140
 Dodd, S., 230
 Doddington, F. T., 729
 Dodge, N. S., 152
 Done, E., 827
 Donlevy, H., 623
 Douglas, J., 595
 Doust, D. H., 464
 Downes, W., 461
 Drake, G., 413
 Drake, J., 756
 Dray, H., 212
 Drezmau, W., 815
 Drummond, R. H. W., 720
 Dudley, W., 464
 Dufaur, A., 827
 Duff, C., 722
 Duffield, J., 447
 Dugard, W., Jun., 825
 Dummer, A., 826
 Dunn, W., 269
 Dunkley, B. F., 310
 Dutton, H., 290
 Dutton, E., 290
 Dutton, J., 310
 Earnshaw, J., 688
 Earnshaw, G., 823
 East, W., 535
 Eaton, C., Jun., 22
 Eaton, J., 429
 Edbrooke, R., 756
 Edge, T., 172
 Edmeston, R., 551
 Edwards, J., 413
 Edwards, H., 814
 Edwards, J., 827
 Egerton, J., 677
 Eley, A. R., 310
 Elford, J. E., 710
 Elliott, W., 220

- Elliott, G., 498
Ellisdon, W. O., 802
Elison, T., 349
Elam, W., 692
Elston, G., 499
Ellyett, F., 480
Emington, J., 792
Engelbrethsen, F., 422
Epps, W. J., 710
Essex, J., 732
Euden, J., 814
Evans, J., 349
Evans, R., 401
Evans, G., 481
Evans, J., 826
Evennett, J., 813
Everett, J., 732
Fabian, W., 249
Faelli, V., 211
Fairbridge, W., 80
Fairbridge, W., Jun., 80
Fairhurst, E., 481
Farbon, W., 768
Farrall, R., 249
Farrar, J., 349
Farrar, C., 827
Fawcett, B., 191
Fawcner, W., 720
Fell, J., 330
Feltham, M., 733
Fenn, P., 249
Fennell, W. T., 152
Fenton, T. J., 39
Ferguson, J., 290
Ferris, T., 723
Fiddian, C., Jun., 249
Field, R., sen., 401
Fielding, J., 349
Fielding, A., 768
Finch, T. W., 310
Finlay, J., 813
Fisher, J., 686
Fisher, J., 843
Flitt, F. W., 699
Fitzpatrick, T., 422
Fleet, S., 624
Fleming, T., 370
Flood, T., 172
Flood, T., 230
Flower, E., 290
Foley, E., 843
Fontanella, E., 744
Forshaw, R., 518
Forsham, R., 499
Forster, J., 844
Foster, A., 120
Foster, W. G., 220
Foster, R., 318
Foster, W., 534
Foster, C. T., 527
Foster, H., 827
Fothergill, M., 39
Foulkes, H., 140
Foulkes, W. C., 249
Fowler, W., 310
Fowler, J., 412
Frankan, S., 781
Franks, T., 827
Fox, F. F., 699
Frearson, E., 845
Freeman, W., 413
Freeman, H., 463
Freestone, E. W., 92
French, J., 330
French, S. J. G., 349
French, J., 563
French, J., 825
Fridlington, J., 792
Frostick, W., Jun., 100
Froud, S., 844
Fuggle, J. L., 744
Furness, F., 29
Fyffe, J., 844
Fyffe, W. T., 844
Gabriel, B. W., 401
Gadsby, B., 451
Gallaher, J. H., 845
Gamon, D., 481
Gandy, G., 464
Garratt, J. W., 720
Garton, J., 696
Gates, H., 810
Gates, J. H., 401
Gates, J. H., 413
Gears, J., 623
Geddes, T., 582
Genders, J., 290
George, J., 140
Germain, T., 699
Gibb, W., 627
Gibbs, J., 172
Gibbs, C., 699
Gibson, W., 80
Gibson, W., 464
Gibson, J., 563
Gibson, N. W., 815
Gibbert, E. R., 462
Giles, J., 827
Giller, J., 827
Gillebrand, W., 844
Glass, G. M., sen., 613
Glazebrook, G., 637
Gluckstein, Major, 595
Goddard, J., 464
Godfrey, W. H., 39
Godfrey, G., 827
Goldschmidt, E., 209
Goldsmith, T., 792
Gomersall, J., 361
Goodchild, J., 815
Goodred, E. F., 845
Goodheim, S., 826
Goodwin, G., 641
Goodwin, J., 736
Gooseman, S., 490
Gormley, W., 815
Goslin, B. T., 191
Gossling, H., 845
Gough, J. B., 464
Goulder, H., Jun., 845
Goulding, W., 212
Gourlay, T., 677
Graham, J., 481
Grandonati, R. L., 152
Granger, G., 289
Granger, G., 720
Gray, J., 140
Gray, T., 172
Gray, T., 349
Gray, J., 736
Gray, J. R., 792
Greatorex, W., 769
Green, W., 290
Green, J. T., 370
Green, W., 623
Green, J., 641
Green, W., 769
Green, C., 815
Green, S., 827
Greenhalgh, S., 447
Greenwood, J., 518
Grenwood, H. B., 535
Greenwood, J., 622
Gregory, E. H., 720
Gregory, L. A., 720
Greg, R. A. S., 827
Griffin, W., 330
Griffin, E., 370
Griffin, G., 389
Griffin, G., 412
Griffin, M., 623
Griffith, J., 182
Griffiths, R., 230
Griffiths, J., 710
Griffiths, T., 815
Grimes, R. G., 249
Grimmett, G., 140
Groom, J., 249
Groom, G., 329
Grove, W., 172
Guillaume, G., 534
Gunnell, W., 319
Hadfield, W., 39
Hadley, G., 814
Hagenbuch, J. M., 269
Haigh, J., 699
Hainsworth, J., 370
Hainburgh, W. H., 447
Hall, J. P., 39
Hall, J., 120
Hall, J., 211
Hall, G. W., 851
Hall, R., 624
Hall, R., 641
Hall, S. W., 826
Hall, G., 827
Hall, H. J., 744
Hall, T., 786
Hamerton, J., 710
Hammersley, G., 827
Hannibal, A., 810
Hardaker, J., 845
Harden, C., 624
Harding, E., 818
Hardman, M., 844
Hargrave, R., 551
Hargreaves, W., 290
Harriste, G., 242
Harland, J., 172
Harland, J., 230
Harp, J., 230
Harrington, W., 845
Harris, W., Jun., 99
Harris, T., 140
Harris, T. L. M., 152
Harris, A., 499
Harris, R., 395
Harris, J. C., 609
Harris, C., 792
Harris, B., 827
Harris, T., 845
Harrison, S. C., 370
Harrison, J., 563
Harrison, R., 677
Harrison, W., 720
Harrison, T. R., 735
Harrison, G. H. De S. N. P., 844
Hart, W., 781
Hart, J., 781
Hart, N., 845
Hartley, G., 582
Hartley, R. H., 699
Hartman, E., 756
Harvey, S., 499
Hassall, J. M., 769
Hatfield, J., 152
Hawkes, J., 59
Hawkins, E., 290
Hawthorn, J., 826, 844
Hayday, J., 699
Hayes, M., 182
Hayes, M., Jun., 269
Haynes, P., 461
Hayne, W. R., 481
Hayward, J. R. S., 120
Headland, T., 844
Heale, W., Jun., 350
Heap, W., 595
Heard, E. J., 657
Heard, H. C., 769
Hearn, W. J., 581
Hearne, A. J., 857
Heath, C., 80
Heath, G., 581
Heathcote, R., 845
Heathorn, T. M., 382
Heck, J., 349
Hemming, W. T., 463
Hendry, W. T., 826
Henley, W., 781
Henshaw, C. C., 59
Henson, H. H., 732
Henson, J. R., 140
Hermann, B., 269
Hesketh, T. P., 814
Hetherington, J., 730
Hewitt, O., 172
Hicks, T. J., 39
Hicks, R., 814
Hickes, G., 464
Hickson, J., 499
Higgs, S., 582
Higham, T., 551
Hill, S., 464
Hill, J., 518
Hill, J., 551
Hill, W., 551
Hill, G., 677
Hillier, W., 191
Hillier, G., 634
Hills, J., 736
Hinchliffe, B., 92
Hindle, T., 149
Hinton, A., 80
Hird, T., 744
Hirst, J. B., 80
Hirst, W., 814
Hobson, G. H., 582
Hodges, J. D., 249
Hodgman, A. M. C., 172
Hodgson, J. L., 140
Hodgson, B., 211
Hodson, R., 844
Hogan, R., 827
Hogg, W., 290
Holden, A., 781
Holden, G., 781
Holden, R., 781
Holden, A., 781
Holden, E. E., 815
Hollin, D., 152
Hollinshead, E., 844
Hollingdale, H., 191
Hollingshead, E. P., 688
Holroyd, J., 565
Holroyd, J., 595
Holt, T., 582
Hood, C., 211
Hooke, R., 699
Hope, H. A., 710
Hopewell, E., 845
Hopkin, J., 710
Hopkins, S., 99
Hopkins, G. H., 733
Horbarth, T., 290
Hornby, J., 815
Horner, J. R., 370
Hornsey, G., 641
Horwell, S., 710
Horwitz, B., 827
Howard, T., 802
Howarth, T., 290
Howell, J. W., 826
Howick, J., 845
Howitt, W., 844
Howls, W., 595
Howson, T. B., 191
Hudson, T., 677
Hughes, A., 464
Hughes, A., 688
Hulbert, W. O., 802
Hulston, S., 844
Humphrey, C., 710
Humphrey, C., Jun., 710
Hunt, J., 269
Hunt, E., 330
Hunt, J. W., 389
Hunt, T. D., 389
Hunter, J., 844
Hunter, T., 844
Hutchins, W., 172
Hutchinson, M., 80
Hutson, G., 827
Hutt, J. B., 330
Hutton, J. A., 845
Ibbott, J., 641
Ibbott, J., 677
Ihlen, Nils, 429
Ingledew, J. F., 641
Ingram, E., 370
Ingram, T., 814
Ingram, J. G., 815
Ings, P., 140
Isaacs, I., 230
Isenberg, J., 413
Islip, T., 844
Ivons, J., 826
Iverson, A., 250
Jackson, J., 446
Jackson, G., 431
Jacobs, E., 250
James, W. C., 769
Jaquemot, J. M. F., 212
Jardine, F. N. C., 744
Jarvis, C. K., 401
Jauncey, A., 250
Jealous, G. J., 815
Jeffries, R., 769
Jenkins, C. T. N., 447
Jenkins, E., 814
Jenkins, J., 827
Jenks, L., 826
Jenner, C. W., 481
Jennings, J., 59
Jennings, W. O., 59
Jennings, A., 80
Jennings, W. T., 80
Jepson, W., 769
Jerram, R., 582
Jerram, J., 827
Jessop, J., 624
John, W., 310
Johnson, J. R. C., 39
Johnson, T. G., Jun., 342
Jolley, J., 844
Jones, B., 39
Jones, T., 212
Jones, D., 290
Jones, T. P., 310
Jones, J., 581
Jones, G., 609
Jones, M. A. P., 641
Jones, E. P., 689
Jones, H. W., 803
Jones, W., 827
Jones, W. C., 827
Jones, E., 844
Jones, J. M., 845
Joseph, J., 624
Joseph, N., 699
Jukes, J., Jun., 464
Judd, F., 803
Jury, G., 815
Jury, F., 815
Keightley, W., 732
Keith, E., 191
Kelland, G., Jun., 290
Kelly, H., 792
Kenrick, G. W., 172
Kent, G. H., 781
Kentish, T., 845
Kerman, C., 595
Kerr, W., 689
Ketley, J., 815
Kibby, T., 723
Kidd, H., 595
Kidd, A. D., 595
Kilner, W., 290
King, J., 401
King, J., 401
King, J., 446
King, G., 845
Kinsman, S., 609
Kinzett, H., 844
Kippax, J., 99
Kirby, R., 818
Kirk, W., 269
Kirkby, E., 389
Kirkpatrick, G. H., 464
Kirkus, R. W., 481
Kiss, L., 481
Kitt, E., 280
Kneath, T., 518
Knight, W., 826
Knighton, J., 446
Knights, H. R., 120
Khott, J., 827
Kretschmar, L. W., 722
Laidlaw, A. W., 329
Laidler, W., 895
Laing, R., 820
Lake, J., 446
Lamb, J., 845
Lambert, T., 563
Lamprell, W. A., 845
Langdale, S., 582
Large, J., 677
Large, W., 814
Larmuth, T. H., 212
Law, W. A., 845
Lawrence, W. F., 212
Laws, J., 624
Lawton, J., 827
Laurent, G., 59
Laurie, T. W., 19
Lavender, S. W., 310
Laversidge, J., 720
Laycock, J., Jun., 845
Lee, W. B., 792
Lee, J., 826
Leach, J., 59
Leaman, H. D., 499
Leaver, J. C., 815
Leavesley, T., 292
Leavesley, H., 792
Lee, G. K., 699
Lee, W., 19
Lee, J., 827
Lees, S., 744
Le Mare, J., 269
Leeks, T., 641
Leeming, S., 518
Leete, C. W., 733
Leger, St. Martin, 581
Legge, J., 624
Leigh, H. J., 826
Leman, A., 844
Lemere, J., 531
Lennard, E. W., 120
Lenox, H., 624
Levi, B., 827
Levi, G., 827
Levinson, B., 845
Lewthwaite, E., 250
Lewis, A. C., 463
Lewis, A. L., 499
Lever, G., 350
Levison, L., 173
Levitt, J., 447
Levitt, M. T., 447
Levy, J., 689
Lightfoot, E., 370
Lind, M., 720
Lines, C., 845
Liversidge, J., 720
Llewellyn, J., 20
Lloyd, W. T., 380
Lloyd, N. K., 624
Lock, J., 330
Lock, F., 360
Locks, W., 845
Lockwood, J., 815
Long, J. A., 845
Lord, T., 792
Lovegrove, J., 815
Lovegrove, J., 815
Lowell, C., 677
Lunham, T., 290
Lupton, W., 582
Lynn, J., 534
Lyon, S., 463
Lyon, E., 699
Lyon, J. D., 781
MacIntosh, J., 80
McCarthy, P., 535
McCaughie, G., 827
McCherry, W., 535
McKay, G. G., 463
McIntosh, W., 744
McLean, J., 845
McLennan, G. J., 92
McLeod, W., 100
McLoughlin, C., 595
McMillan, A., 269
McNamara, E. K., 815
McNeill, W., 535
Mack, R., 120
Macmillan, J., 565
Maillet, G. I., 782
Maitland, F., 769
Malkin, W., 637
Mander, H., 688
Manders, R., 792
Manley, J., 401
Manley, G. H., 565
Mann, H., 280
Mannion, J., 518
Mansfield, E., 120
Mansfield, R., 845
Mantua, J., 689
Markham, R. W., 212
Marks, J. M., 212
Marks, P., 845
Marriage, T., 250
Marriage, W., 250
Marriott, W. E. N., 803
Marsh, J. W., 635
Marshall, C., 428
Marshall, W. S., 535

- Marshall, J., 845
 Martin, H., 80
 Martin, J. W., 120
 Martin, J. M., 422
 Martin, J., 422
 Martin, W. G., 624
 Martin, J., 624
 Martin, W., 657
 Mason, J. G., 642
 Mason, J. C., 657
 Mason, J., 814
 Massey, J., 827
 Massey, J., 762
 Mather, C. B., 318
 Mathews, M., 826
 Maw, E., 657
 Mawer, D. K., 602
 Mayes, H. J., 762
 Measor, J., 382
 Meek, J. T., 786
 Mellon, W., 563
 Mellor, W., 582
 Mercer, W., 803
 Mercer, J. B., 844
 Mercer, F. W., 845
 Meredith, E. W., 845
 Miles, F., 180
 Miles, C., 827
 Milbence, J., 710
 Miller, N., 152
 Miller, J., 422
 Miller, P. T., 614
 Miller, J., 826
 Mills, J., 447
 Mills, J., 463
 Millward, W., 172
 Milne, G., 422
 Minshull, L., 533
 Mister, J. B., 350
 Mitchell, H. J., 80
 Mobbs, W., 843
 Monday, W., 280
 Monday, A., 845
 Monk, H., 642
 Moody, C., 710
 Moody, C., 845
 Moore, T., 382
 Moore, G., 850
 Moore, A., 463
 Moore, J., 441
 Moore, S. W., 595
 Moore, C., 845
 Moorhouse, G., 595
 Mordaunt, A., 382
 Morecraft, E., 826
 Morgan, J., 481
 Morgan, M., 422
 Morgan, J., 762
 Morrow, J. C., 120
 Morrow, R. T., 120
 Morton, G., 122
 Moss, W., 422
 Moss, T. J., 641
 Moss, J., 622
 Mossop, J., 624
 Mott, T., 464
 Mould, T., 441
 Mowat, J. A., 624
 Mundy, D., 726
 Munday, J., 844
 Murdoch, D., 102
 Murrell, T. R., 40
 Murrell, G. H., 100
 Myers, D., 413
 Napier, J., 12
 Napier, W., 20
 Neech, J., 464
 Needham, J. V., 561
 Needham, J., 845
 Nelson, E., 803
 Nelthorpe, J., 815
 Newcombe, J. D., 845
 Newman, W., 827
 Newsham, W., 857
 Newton, T., 845
 Newton, R. D'Arcy, 720
 Newton, A., 844
 Nicholl, J., 494
 Nichols, W. A., 818
 Nichols, W. J., 845
 Nicholson, J. M., 191
 Nicholson, C., 518
 Nicholson, E., 814
 Nicholson, J., 845
 Nicklin, T., 827
 Nicks, T. J., 699
 Niemann, E. J., 290
 Nixon, T., 32
 Nixon, J., 211
 Nixon, J., 810
 Nixon, A., 880
 Nixon, J., 781, 792
 Noble, J., 122
 Noltey, H., 380
 Norfor, H. J., 464
 Norman, G., 491
 Norman, G. B., 491
 Norris, H., 446
 Norris, W., Jun., 446
 North, T., 82
 North, J., 82
 North, R. F., 290
 Nutchley, D., 845
 Nutt, J., 792
 O'Neill, 422
 Oates, G. H., 481
 Oates, J., 565
 Oates, B., 565
 Ogden, G. H., 733
 Ormond, C., 422
 Ormond, F., 814
 Osborn, W. H., 826
 Oswin, J. S., 370
 Oswald, T. R., 744
 Oughterson, W., 290
 Outhwaite, E., 844
 Outhwaite, S., 844
 Ovenden, H. F., 624, 641
 Overbury, R., 818
 Owen, J., 292
 Owen, H., 290
 Owen, A. M., 842
 Owen, D. W., 844
 Owens, T., 551
 Owens, T., 454
 Owers, O. F., 720
 Oxley, R., 380
 Pace, H., 82
 Paddy, R., 310
 Paice, J. H., 803
 Paine, H., 172
 Paling, G. K., 121
 Palmer, J., 182
 Palmer, H. R., 191
 Palmer, S., 582
 Papps, R. G., 80
 Paris, J., 518
 Paris, W. H. T., 518
 Parker, G. E., 401
 Parkes, E., 262
 Parkes, J., 551
 Parkin, H., 565
 Parkin, E., sen., 595
 Parkin, J., 602
 Parkin, E., 602
 Parkinson, T., 463
 Parnham, W., 641
 Parria, H., 100
 Parry, G. J., 100
 Parry, W., 382
 Parry, O., 827
 Parson, G., 80
 Parsons, J. S., 720
 Parsons, W., 463
 Parsons, F. R., 518
 Partridge, J. C., 92
 Partridge, F. R., 814
 Partridge, W. S., 401
 Pascall, E., 518
 Passley, W., 622
 Patch, R., 720
 Patterson, J., 732
 Pattison, T. S., 100
 Paul, J., 826
 Payne, J., 370
 Peacock, R., 565
 Peacock, J., 525
 Pearce, J., 622
 Pearson, G., 481
 Pearson, W., 816
 Peeling, J. C., 40
 Peffain, G., 481
 Pell, J., 826
 Penn, B., 262
 Pennell, S. P., 382
 Penrose, G., 618
 Pentecost, I., 844
 Penton, G., 789
 Perkes, T., 595
 Perkin, J., 290
 Perkins, G., 365
 Perkins, J., 841
 Perrott, J., 481
 Perry, T. F., 627
 Peters, J., 792
 Peterson, T. P., 461
 Pettford, J. S., 602
 Pettit, C. R., 462
 Pezzali, G. S., 446
 Pezzali, D. S., 446
 Pheby, J., 422
 Phillips, S. S., 20
 Phillips, J., 40
 Phillips, E., 52
 Phillips, D., 310
 Phillips, M. G., 401
 Philipp, D., 230
 Pickering, J., 422
 Pickup, D., 762
 Pidding, W., 845
 Pike, R. G., 172
 Pilditch, D., 481
 Pilgrim, A., 677
 Pinchbeck, H., 192
 Pinkerton, G., 290
 Pinnell, J., 845
 Piper, J., 463
 Pitts, S., Jun., 140
 Piaster, R., 827
 Plataner, J., 582
 Platt, J., 762
 Plimley, W., 544
 Plummer, G., 121
 Poat, W. P., 422
 Ponteau, J. A., 100
 Ponton, T. P., 280
 Porter, J., 692
 Potter, T. G., 827
 Powell, W., 19
 Powell, C., 82
 Powell, R. W., 120
 Powell, C., 342
 Powell, P., 581
 Powell, W. T., 846
 Pratt, R., 492
 Prentis, J. W., 841
 Prescott, C., 720
 Prescott, T. W. T., 641
 Preston, P., 551
 Preston, J., 624
 Preston, J., 815
 Price, E., 565
 Prince, T., 786
 Pringle, T. W., 212
 Pritchard, J., 82
 Pritchard, W., 827
 Probert, W., 413
 Proctor, W., 677
 Pryde, G., 401
 Putnam, W. A., 447
 Pybus, T. W., 565
 Pyle, T., 602
 Pyle, R., 602
 Quarby, W., 827
 Quinn, T., 814
 Radcliffe, J., 230
 Radcliffe, J., 827
 Radloff, H. M., 744, 746
 Rae, E., 447
 Ramsay, D., 762
 Ranch, G. F., 803
 Randall, J., 720
 Randall, F., 12
 Randall, T. W., 431
 Randle, J., 310
 Raglan, T., 622
 Raphael, P., 401
 Rault, L., 846
 Raven, S., 844
 Rawson, H., 370
 Raynor, W., 602
 Read, W., 80
 Read, R., 230
 Read, R., 518
 Reader, J., 744
 Reed, W., 20
 Reed, T. S., 80
 Rees, T., 82
 Rees, W. N., 80
 Rees, J., 518
 Renault, S., 720
 Render, R., 827
 Retakon, T., 413
 Reynolds, J., 172
 Reynolds, T., 815
 Rhodes, B., 80
 Rhodes, G., 80
 Rhodes, W. H., 422
 Rhodes, J., 677
 Richards, W., 80
 Richards, D. R., 230
 Richards, S. W., 350
 Richards, M. A. A., 827
 Richards, J. R., 827
 Richardson, B., 80
 Richardson, J., 230
 Rider, W., 140
 Rider, T. G., 844
 Ridge, J. J., 732
 Rigby, E. B., 815
 Riley, J., 262
 Riley, W., 282
 Risley, J., 280
 Ritchie, G., 32
 Rivett, T., 845
 Roberts, J. S., 290
 Roberts, P., 446
 Roberts, W., 624
 Robertson, C., 230
 Robertson, J., 382
 Robinson, E., 32
 Robinson, G., 40
 Robinson, M., 121
 Robinson, B., 290
 Robinson, J., 446
 Robinson, C. F., 710
 Robinson, M. D., 733
 Robinson, W., 722
 Robinson, D., 846
 Robson, G., 140
 Roby, N., 810
 Roe, W., 120
 Roebuck, W. R., 647
 Rogers, J., 172
 Rogers, H. S., 212
 Rogers, J., 230
 Rogerson, J., 413
 Rollason, J. T., 212
 Rolfe, P., 413
 Ronald, W., 657
 Rooney, G. P., 351
 Roper, G., 382
 Rose, W., 290
 Rosenthal, S. J., 370
 Rosenthal, H. S., 370
 Ross, J. J., 602
 Ross, E., 641
 Ross, J. R., 827
 Rothwell, J., 565
 Routh, J., 212
 Routledge, C., 814
 Rowbotham, S., 827
 Rowe, W., 122
 Rowland, E., 191
 Royce, G., 422
 Roys, R., 582
 Rudgard, E. W., 741
 Ruffle, J. F., 422
 Rundall, F., 595
 Russell, G., 82
 Russell, F. J., 677
 Ryland, G. C., 20
 Sainsbury, G. B., 172
 Salmon, H., 827
 Salomonson, S., 382
 Salt, J. J., 10
 Sampson, W., 140
 Sanderson, T., 310
 Sanderson, F., 464
 Sandford, J., 733
 Saunders, H., 120
 Savage, T., 370
 Savile, J. Jun., 551
 Sawyer, J., 827
 Sayce, J. G. B., 290
 Sayle, A., 565
 Saywell, J. D., 515
 Schenck, J. J., 140
 Scherman, A., 350
 Schofield, J., 827, 846
 Scott, J. Jun., 120
 Scott, J., 250
 Scott, P., 382
 Scott, R., 422
 Scott, W. T., 422
 Scott, G., 657
 Scotthorn, T. K., 230
 Scotson, W., 382
 Scrivener, G., 710
 Seager, G. W., 602
 Sell, G., 744
 Sellers, J., 140
 Selman, J., 684
 Sendall, H., 19
 Sergeant, W., 535
 Sewell, L., 121
 Shackell, T., 726
 Sharp, J., 816
 Sharples, J., 756
 Sharples, J., 826
 Shattock, J., 732
 Sheard, S., 818
 Sheldrick, J. T., 744
 Shellard, J. E., 641
 Shepley, B., 464
 Sheppard, E. W., 20
 Sherratt, P., 80
 Sherratt, J., 677
 Sherren, E. R., 422
 Sherwood, T., 751
 Shipley, E. Jun., 100
 Shipley, J. G., 290
 Shipway, J., 684
 Short, S. S., 535
 Shoter, G., 565
 Shreeve, W. B., 641
 Shreeve, C., 641
 Siddall, J., 677
 Silverthorne, J., 815
 Silvester, B., 82
 Simister, J., 827
 Simmons, G., 781
 Simon, L., 422
 Simonds, H. P., 844
 Simons, E., 710, 720
 Simons, G., 684
 Simpson, W. D., 330
 Simpson, W., 382
 Sims, W. H., 12
 Sleyer, H., 684
 Skevington, E., 212
 Skevington, E., 40
 Skinner, J. F., 212
 Skinner, A., 262
 Skinner, C. R., 290
 Skinner, W., 413
 Skidner, H. J., 495
 Skidner, G. P., 846
 Slaton, H., 172
 Sleep, H., 736
 Smeeton, G., 647
 Smith, H., 12
 Smith, W. J., 82
 Smith, H., 80
 Smith, J., 122
 Smith, R., 262
 Smith, A., 230
 Smith, A., 310
 Smith, J. A. G., 310
 Smith, S., 310
 Smith, W., 320
 Smith, J. P., 422
 Smith, J., 618
 Smith, J. E., 535
 Smith, J., 551
 Smith, W. T., 595
 Smith, J., 657
 Smith, J. C., 720
 Smith, T., 744
 Smith, J., 756
 Smith, W. T., 815, 844
 Smith, W., 815, 844
 Smith, J., 826
 Smith, E. H., 844
 Smith, G. H., 844
 Smith, T., 846
 Smithies, C., 826
 Smithson, S. S., 641
 Snap, A. T., 535
 Snow, W. G., 527
 Snowdon, R., 401
 Soares, M. J., 722
 Soares, A., 736
 Softley, J. T., 826
 Solomon, J., 82
 Solomon, L., 641
 Somerville, M., 120
 Sotheran, J. Jun., 782
 Southard, C. M., 622
 Sowerby, J., 826
 Spark, H. E., 602
 Spark, A., 744
 Spark, E. H., 710
 Spencer, W., 722
 Spencer, B., 722
 Spilsbury, H., 815
 Spink, E., 733
 Springmann, C., 844
 Standing, A. P., 310
 Standing, C. P., 310
 Stanger, S., 814
 Stannard, J., 120
 Stanton, J., 250
 Stark, C., 140
 Stark, W., 140
 Starkey, R., 20
 States, C., 120
 Stead, C., 120
 Steadman, R., 815
 Stear, W. S., 720
 Stear, H. C., 815
 Steadman, J. B., 52
 Steven, R. C., 370
 Stevens, G., 382
 Stevens, J., 677
 Stevens, J., 826
 Stevenson, J., 827
 Stevenson, R., 827
 Steward, S. W. P., 382
 Stewart, R., 40
 Stewart, W. B., 401
 Stillman, W., 535
 Stinchcombe, T., 736
 Stocker, C. H., 846
 Stokes, G., 12
 Stone, W., 518
 Stonehouse, R. C., 826
 Strachan, J., 110
 Strachan, M. D., 100
 Stuart, J., 532
 Sturgis, O., 120
 Sugden, J., 124
 Summers, T., 846
 Sumpson, J., 826
 Surman, J., 20
 Sutcliffe, J., 370
 Swallow, H., 844
 Switt, T., 464
 Symons, T., 595
 Tait, R., 827
 Talcott, J. A., 720
 Tall, J., 762
 Tallis, L., 441
 Tallis, J., 463
 Tarrant, F. A., 623
 Tatton, C. T., 826
 Taylor, E., 120
 Taylor, J. T., 212
 Taylor, F., 481
 Taylor, T., 582
 Taylor, B., 710
 Taylor, W. B., 732
 Taylor, D. W., 744
 Taylor, J., 803
 Taylor, T., 815
 Taylor, T., 844
 Terbutt, E. S., 637
 Terry, D., 710
 Terry, W., 744

- Terry, C. 846
 Theodidi, W. 156
 Thickbroom, J. 733
 Thomas, E. 80
 Thomas, W. H. 389
 Thomas, W. 413
 Thomas, F. W. 535
 Thomas, W. 535
 Thomas, L. P. 846
 Thompson, J. 422
 Thompson, J. 515
 Thompson, G. 535
 Thomson, T. 481
 Thorn, W. 744
 Thorn, T. 827
 Thornley, J. 310
 Thorp, G. 733
 Tidmarsh, H. T. 350
 Tillett, F. 130
 Tilley, R. W. 310
 Tingle, J. C. 844
 Titchmarsh, J. 677
 Todd, J. 40
 Todd, G., Jun. 422
 Todd, J. 844
 Toney, J. 80
 Tomkins, T. G. 230
 Tomlinson, J. 826
 Tonks, J. 464
 Townson, T. 80
 Traish, W. H. 609
 Tranchard, S. 52
 Tree, J. 525
 Tremlett, F. 464
 Trevethan, J. 212
 Trevett, J. 481
 Trickett, G. 464
 Trood, E. 551
 Trood, E., Jun. 551
 Tucker, N. 535
 Tucker, T., Jun. 565
 Tuke, W. E. 803
 Tunbridge, W. 481
 Tunnicliff, C. 827
 Turmeau, C. 744
 Turner, E. 80
 Turner, J., Jun. 582
 Turner, J. 525
 Turner, G. 677
 Turtle, J. G. 846
 Tweedie, W. 32
 Tyler, J. J. 212
 Tyzack, T. 431
 Uglov, G. 290
 Ullmann, J. 814
 Upton, G. 846
 Urie, R. 826
 Vagg, S. 624
 Van Gelder, H. 535
 Vickers, J. 844
 Vinesberg, M. 230
 Vingoe, J. 250
 Voigt, A. W. 389
 Wade, J. 350
 Wade, S. W. H. 464
 Wade, R. 803
 Wade, R. 846
 Wadson, J. 551
 Wagstaff, J. 212
 Wagstaff, W. R. 250
 Wagstaff, T. 688
 Wakefield, C. 825
 Walker, H. 100
 Walker, G. E. 349
 Walker, C. 413
 Walker, J. S. 657
 Walker, W. 827
 Walker, W. 844
 Wall, G. 431
 Wallace, J. F. 609
 Wallis, H. S. 595
 Wallworth, T. 846
 Walter, J. J. 657
 Walton, W. P. 677
 Ward, R. C. 40
 Ward, G. W. 250
 Ward, W. 370
 Wardleworth, A. 827
 Warhurst, G. 827
 Warton, B. J. 481
 Watkins, D. 100
 Watson, H. 152
 Watson, C. 230
 Watson, W. 429
 Watson, R. 826
 Walters, W. 733
 Watts, T. 250
 Weatherill, H. 370
 Weatherley, F. 782
 Webb, S. 446
 Webb, W. J. 447
 Webb, C. 720
 Webber, B. J. 803
 Webber, R. 827
 Weil, E. 349
 Welch, J. 827
 Welling, W. 815
 Wells, J. 52
 Welton, H. 827
 Westbrook, E. 828
 West, C. 152
 West, W. 389
 Westbury, J. 330
 Weston, J. 447
 Weston, H. 815
 Wevill, E. 710
 Wheldon, D. 52
 Whelpley, W. W. 657
 Whitaker, J. B. 120
 Whitaker, W. 269
 White, J. 120
 White, R. 429
 White, J. 429
 White, W. 429
 White, W. 733
 White, M. 846
 Whitehead, J. 677
 Whitelock, P. 172
 Whiteside, W. 781
 Whitfield, H. 59
 Whitley, J. 782
 Whitley, C. 828
 Whittaker, J. S. 330
 Whittaker, J. 401
 Whittard, J. 732
 Whittam, W. 551
 Whittle, H. F. 525
 Wickens, A. 582
 Wigfall, R. 464
 Wigglesworth, T. 677
 Wild, J. C. B. 710
 Wild, W. 846
 Wilde, R. 846
 Wilds, J. 844
 Wilkes, S. 732
 Wilkins, F. 140
 Wilkins, T. 677
 Wilkinson, G. 140
 Wilkinson, G. 692
 Williams, T. 32
 Williams, G. L. 100
 Williams, E. 140
 Williams, W. N. 140
 Williams, J. 192
 Williams, W. H. 290
 Williams, A. E. 447
 Williams, A. 431
 Williams, J. 826
 Williamson, J. 828
 Williamson, B. 846
 Willins, W. 722
 Willison, W. 846
 Wills, T. 710
 Wills, B. W. 733
 Wilmhurst, G. 826
 Wilmott, S. 551
 Wilson, J. B. 40
 Wilson, R. 250
 Wilson, W. 250
 Wilson, A. 389
 Wilson, W. G. 518
 Wilson, J. 535
 Wilson, R. 641
 Wilson, T. 641
 Wilson, J. E. 657
 Wilson, G. 699
 Wilson, J. 699
 Wilson, J. 826
 Wilton, M. H. 80
 Windram, W. J. 697
 Winter, J. 140
 Windie, L. 230
 Wise, C. 310
 Wise, J. 677
 Wiseman, J. 172
 Wiseman, J. 121
 Wiseman, J. 710
 Withers, H. W. 80
 Witt, R. 40
 Wood, J. 120
 Wood, M. 152
 Wood, M. 192
 Wood, S. J. 330
 Wood, T. 401
 Wood, P. H. 422
 Wood, S. 422
 Wood, J., Sen. 565
 Wood, A. 581
 Wood, J., Sen. 581
 Wood, G. 826
 Woodford, J. 518
 Woodward, R. F. 250
 Woolford, G. 551
 Woodhall, A. 52
 Woodruff, G. 417
 Worman, E. W. 818
 Worrall, J. 722
 Worsley, R. 641
 Worthington, H. 844
 Wright, J. 677
 Wright, E. 782
 Wright, R. 815
 Wroe, T. 710
 Wynn, S. 447
 Yates, J. 657
 Youle, A. P. 687
 Young, F. 140
 Young, S. 250
 Young, C. F. 282
 Young, J. J. C. 447
 Young, J. M. 828
 Yrigoyti, F. 422
 Zanni, G. 525

8 + H. W. S.

